OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY FOR SCOTLAND,
WHITEHALL, December 15, 1892.

The Queen has been pleased to direct that Letters Patent be made and passed under the Seal appointed by the Treaty of Union to be kept and made use of in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, in the terms and to the effect following, viz. :—

VICTORIA R.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, to Our trusty and well-beloved David Brand, Esquire, Advocate, Sheriff of Ayrshire, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission; Our trusty and well-beloved Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart, Esquire, Member of Parliament for the Eastern Division of the County of Renfrew; Our trusty and well-beloved Angus Sutherland, Esquire, Member of Parliament for the County of Sutherland; Our trusty and well-beloved James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esquire of Quinish, Argyllshire; Our trusty and well-beloved George Gordon, Esquire, Land Valuer, Elgin; Our trusty and well-beloved John Malcolm M'Callum, Minister of the Parish of Muckairn, Argyllshire; Our trusty and well-beloved John Macleod, Esquire, Inverness; and Our trusty and well-beloved Henry Munro, Esquire, Inverness,—Greeting!

Whereas We have deemed it expedient that a Commission should forthwith issue to inquire whether any, and if any, what land in the Counties of Argyll, Inverness, Ross and Cromarty, Sutherland, Caithness, and Orkney and Shetland, now occupied for the purposes of a deer forest, grouse moor, or other sporting purposes, or for grazing, not in the occupation of crofters or other small tenants, is capable of being cultivated to profit or otherwise advantageously occupied by crofters or other small tenants:

Now know ye that We, reposing great trust and confidence in your knowledge, discretion, and ability, have nominated, constituted, and appointed, and do by these presents nominate, constitute, and appoint you, the said David Brand, Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart, Angus Sutherland, James Noel Muller Forsyth, George Gordon, John Malcolm M'Callum, John Macleod, and Henry Munro, to be Our Commissioners for the purposes of the said inquiry:

And for the better enabling you Our said Commissioners to make the said inquiry, We do by these presents authorise and empower you, or any three or more of you, to call before you, or any three or more of you, such persons as you may judge necessary, by whom you may be the better informed of the matters herein submitted for your consideration, and every matter connected therewith, and also to call for, have access to, and examine all such books, documents, papers, or records as you shall judge likely to afford you the fullest information on the subject of this Our Commission; and to inquire of and concerning the premises by all other lawful ways and means whatsoever:

And We do further by these presents authorise and empower you, or any three or more of you, to visit and personally inspect such places as you may deem expedient for the more effectual carrying out of the purposes aforesaid:

And Our further will and pleasure is that you, or any three or more of you, do with as little delay as possible report to Us under your hands and seals upon the matters referred to you as aforesaid, and that you may have power to certify to Us from time to time your several proceedings in respect of the matters aforesaid, if it may seem expedient to you so to do:

And We further will and command, and by these presents ordain, that this Our Commission shall continue in full force and virtue, and that you Our said Commissioners, or any three or more of you, may from time to time proceed in the execution thereof, and of every matter and thing therein contained, although the same be not continued from time to time by adjournment:

And for the purpose of aiding you in the execution of this Our Commission, We do hereby authorise and empower you to appoint a Secretary to this Our Commission:

And We ordain the said Letters Patent to be extended in the most ample form with all clauses needful, and to pass the Seal aforesaid, per saltum, without passing any other Seal or Register. For doing whereof this shall be to the Director of Our Chancery for writing the same, and to the Keeper of the said Seal for causing the same to be appended thereto a sufficient Warrant.

Given at Our Court at St James's, the 6th day of December 1892, in the fifty-sixth year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command,

(Signed) G. O. TREVELYAN.

REPORT.

TO THE

QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,—

Your Majesty's Commission, bearing date the sixth day of December 1892, directed us to inquire "whether any, and if any, what land in the counties "of Argyll, Inverness, Ross and Cromarty, Sutherland, Caithness, and Orkney and "Shetland, now occupied for the purposes of a deer forest, grouse moor, or other "sporting purposes, or for grazing, not in the occupation of crofters or other small "tenants, is capable of being cultivated to profit or otherwise advantageously occupied "by crofters or other small tenants." We have since endeavoured to discharge the duty committed to us by your Majesty's commands, and we have now the honour to submit the following Report :—

In the prosecution of the Inquiry, we held public sittings at convenient centres throughout the counties mentioned. These sittings were sixty-four in number, and were invariably preceded by public announcement that a sitting was about to be held, and inviting all those willing to give evidence to send in their names. Evidence or information was tendered either in written statements, or more frequently in the course of oral examination, or in both ways, by persons who voluntarily came forward, and to a large extent such evidence was directed to the indication and description of lands believed to be available within the meaning of the Royal Warrant; or, on the other hand, it was directed to show that such lands were not suitable for the objects of our Inquiry, or only to a less extent than had been represented. Further, these sittings were invariably preceded or followed—in most cases were followed—by personal inspection of all such lands in or near the district where the sitting was held, as we deemed it necessary or proper to examine. In many instances the sittings were prolonged, and for the most part deep interest was taken in the Inquiry by those concerned.

In the matter of inspection of land, we have to explain that at first such inspection was made by all, or nearly all, the Commissioners acting together. In course of time, however, it was found practicable and desirable to divide the Commission for the purpose of examining land into inspecting parties, and in this way the work requiring to be done was more speedily, and, we believe, as satisfactorily accomplished. It is hardly necessary to say that this mode of procedure involved continuous labour of a very arduous and exhausting kind on the part of one and all of the Commissioners, but this labour was undertaken and performed in the belief that not otherwise would we be in a position to present a reliable and satisfactory Report. It should be added that in a few districts no names were forthcoming of parties desirous to be examined, and there, accordingly, no sitting was held, but nevertheless careful inspection was made of all lands which we thought required consideration.

The persons who came forward for examination may be said to have belonged to one or other of the following classes :—

(1) Crofters appointed as delegates at public meetings of crofters to represent the united views of a township or townships, or other body of crofters;

(2) Crofters possessing information as to particular localities, who volunteered to give evidence;

(3) Crofters desirous of submitting their own individual statements;

(4) Cottars, or representatives of cottars, desirous to obtain holdings;

(5) Landowners appearing in person; and

(6) Factors, Managers, or Law Agents appearing for Landowners.

From these witnesses much information was derived bearing on the subject matter of the Inquiry, and both at the sittings and in the examination of lands, every aid was given by those interested, either as landowners or crofters, and in remote or inaccessible quarters special efforts were not infrequently made by them during the inspections to secure our comfort and facilitate the work of the Commission.

Public proceedings commenced in the Isle of Skye, Inverness-shire, our first sitting being held at Portree on 18th April 1893. From that time our inquiries were steadily carried on till the beginning of November in that year, and during this period large portions of Inverness-shire and Ross-shire, including some of the most extensive deer forests in those counties, and the whole of the counties of Sutherland and Caithness, in both of which also deer forests are to be found, were not only examined, but the lands thus inspected were afterwards duly considered at special meetings or conferences of the Commissioners. In 1894 proceedings commenced towards the end of March in the county of Argyll, and in the course of the summer the whole of the island territory from Barra Head to the Butt of Lewis was visited, next Shetland and Orkney, and on returning to the mainland we inspected the lands which had been left unvisited there.

Our last sitting was held at Ullapool on 10th September 1894. Since that date a portion of the county of Argyll, known as the district of Cowal, lying between Loch-fyne and Lochlong, not previously considered, was examined; and we believe we have seen all lands requiring inspection, and accordingly are in a position to present a Report based on investigation into the whole subject matter of the Inquiry.

The proceedings necessary in Harris and Lewis, on the mainland in Knoydart and Applecross, and in the Shetland and Orkney Islands were greatly facilitated and expedited by means of the steamer for which provision had been made by the Government. But for this arrangement much work which has been successfully accomplished must either have remained unperformed, or been performed in an unsatisfactory manner.

The lands inspected consisted of deer forests and grazing farms, which may be taken to include grouse moors, and the direct question arising in connection with these was, whether there were adequate grounds for arriving at the conclusion that certain portions of these lands might be cultivated to profit, or otherwise advantageously occupied by crofters or other small tenants, and, if so, should be scheduled in that view.

In dealing with deer forests we found ourselves able to schedule certain portions of land as suitable either for profitable cultivation or advantageous occupation. In like manner, in dealing with grazing farms, we examined certain areas of old arable land not under crop, and hill grazing of a kind adapted for crofter occupation, and such land, it may here be observed, in many quarters possessed a soil of higher quality and more fertile nature than is to be found in certain neighbouring lands occupied and possessed by crofters. But, while lands have been scheduled both in deer forests and grazing farms, we deem it our duty to add that we found large tracts of land presently under deer forests which were not suitable for the objects of our Inquiry.

The main reasons in respect of which we arrived at this conclusion were in the first place that these lands are to a great extent rocky and sterile, are for the most part at a considerable altitude above sea-level, and are too often remote and inaccessible; and in the second, that in many cases lands examined within deer forests were found, from the configuration of the surface and other circumstances, not suited for formation into crofters' holdings, or for what is often called the "lotting of crofts."

It is indeed true that there is to be found in the Appendix a considerable body of testimony to the effect that certain areas, now afforested, had at one time occupied dwellings upon them, but parts of the lands thus referred to were only used as summer sheilings and not permanently, and with regard to the remainder, though there was conclusive evidence of occupation, we do not believe that these lands could be profitably occupied as crofters' holdings now.

It is probable that those crofters in occupation of such lands, had to be satisfied with a more precarious subsistence than is to be met with generally now-a-days in the crofting counties, and though it may be that some individuals are now desirous of settling in these places, we are satisfied that this desire is not widespread, and in any case we are not prepared to make any recommendation as to any part of that area which has not been scheduled.

In arriving at this conclusion we had fully in view the suggestion that parts of these lands might be brought under sheep, but we do not see our way to any scheme for declaring such lands available for crofters' grazings with reasonable prospects of profit and advantage.

In the case of grazing farms our experience differed from that in the inspection of deer forests. In many of these farms we found large areas of old arable land not under crop, and hill grazings of a much more promising kind for occupation by crofters than we were able to find in the case of lands under deer. The scheduled area is therefore much larger in the latter instance than in the former.

On the material question of profit and loss, as to which opposing views were submitted, we are of opinion that the profit and loss account of a subsisting holding, with or without a Fair Rent, does not present a reliable standard of judgment; neither does the profit and loss account of an imaginary holding afford such a standard on the data which have been assumed. The question is not whether a patch of arable land can be cultivated to profit. The small holder does not live, and does not expect to live, by his arable land. For the means of livelihood from his holding he looks to sales from his stock of cattle and sheep, and in certain cases, such as in North and South Uist and in Shetland, from horses or ponies. But, as crofts are presently constituted, the holding is mainly of use to the crofter as a home, and he has to depend on money or wages otherwise earned from fishing or labour for the payment of his rent and the support of his family. The problem for consideration is, has the result of our inquiries been to enable us to schedule any lands, and if so, what lands, which, with a due combination of old arable, or land suitable for cultivation, along with pasture land or hill grazings held in common, may reasonably be deemed capable of rearing a profitable stock, or of profitable occupation by an industrious tenant possessed of the means requisite to equip and stock the holding, which stock could be summered on the grazing, and entirely wintered, or almost entirely wintered, on the produce of the holding? Our answer to the main question is that we have been able to schedule such lands, and to define and colour the same on Ordnance Survey maps; but we desire to add that the occupants of these lands must be selected with care, and that they must only be called on to pay a "Fair Rent" for the holding, using these words in the statutory sense. Such "Fair Rent" would, of course, include interest on any necessary outlay which had to be incurred.

In dealing with this question it is impossible for us to leave out of view the matter of stock prices and the quality of stock. A good stock almost always fetches a full price and even a high price, and, accordingly, we assume, as a condition of success, that for the most part moderately good prices rule for the stock sold.

In thus scheduling lands we had in view three separate and distinct kinds:—

(1) Land suitable for new holdings with corresponding pasture. Such land has been coloured yellow;

(2) Land which could be advantageously occupied as extensions of grazings by neighbouring crofters. Such land has been coloured pink; and

(3) In addition to the above two classes of land, we have defined by brown colouring such portions of deer forests and large sheep grazings as are considered suitable for occupation as moderately-sized holdings or farms, at rents exceeding the statutory limit of £30 yearly.

Coloured maps showing the lands thus scheduled are issued separately as an Appendix.

But in the case of all the lands scheduled, the boundaries proposed may be taken as subject to re-adjustment.

In dealing with grazing farms, where only part of a farm has been scheduled, care has been taken as far as possible to leave what, in the event of the scheduled lands being appropriated, would constitute a workable and profitable farm. In other cases whole farms have been scheduled, and coloured in one or more shades according to the circumstances of the particular case. In some of these schedulings both of parts of farms, and of whole farms, certain portions of land under crop have been included here and there. Lands under crop, we are well aware, do not come within the scope of our Inquiry. On the other hand, where we were of opinion that certain stretches of land ought to be scheduled, we held that we ought not to feel ourselves deterred by the presence of lesser areas of land under crop therein, from scheduling the lands we thought suitable.

The land scheduled yellow as available for new holdings in all cases includes large areas of old arable land formerly cultivated but presently under grass, or is land capable of being reclaimed, and surrounded or bordered by grazing lands adapted for cattle or sheep stock, or both.

Except as to certain lands in Caithness and Orkney, and possibly in one or two other quarters, we have not contemplated the formation of a croft from land wholly arable, and this for two reasons:—First, because in too many districts the soil and climate forbid the formation of such a holding with adequate prospects of success; and secondly, because crofters themselves entirely confined their evidence, unless in the counties just named, to a demand for holdings partly arable, but mainly pastoral. The holdings we have thus had in view are:—

(1) Self-sustaining holdings;

(2) Small holdings which afford a home, but would not occupy the crofters' whole time; and

(3) Fishermen's holdings.

We deal first with what may be called self-sustaining holdings. These are holdings with such an area and quality of soil—arable and pasture—and such a combination of these, as with a fair rent and moderately good prices for the stock sold may be deemed capable of affording an independent and sufficient means of living to the tenant, and occupy his whole time. As in some degree examples of the kind of holdings we have in view we may point to certain of the crofts in Sutherland, in Caithness, in Orkney, and in Argyll, but would observe that many of even these are not so large as we think ought to be formed as self-sustaining holdings.

Small holdings, to be regarded as homes, but which would not occupy the crofters' whole time, and new small holdings for cottars may be considered together.

While the evidence taken not only discloses a demand for self-supporting holdings, and a readiness and willingness to take them up, it is not to be left out of view that the kind of holding to which, for the most part, crofters are accustomed is one affording a home, but making it necessary for the crofter to supplement what he derives from his holding by labour or fishing, or by carrying on a trade or business. In various districts those who came forward to give evidence rather showed that they had not reached the idea of a self-sustaining holding, and craved our attention to the great demand for the smaller size of holdings, and to the extension of their present holdings, both as to arable and pasture.

Urgent representations were made by and on behalf of the class known as cottars, sometimes described as "landless cottars," and who often are younger sons, or sons-in-law or other relatives of crofters. Very many of these persons are deserving and intelligent, and owe their unfortunate position to adverse circumstances. Their ambition almost invariably was, in the statements made at the sittings, to get a croft such as their crofter neighbours presently possess. While the position of the crofter is one of difficulty, owing, in part at least, to the smallness of his holding, the position of the cottar is still more difficult, and any scheme that would result in affording cottars the opportunity of obtaining crofts such as presently exist would operate a substantial relief both to the cottars themselves and to the neighbouring crofters.

On the matter of size of holdings, there is much room for careful consideration. In some parts of the counties in question circumstances are favourable to the formation and carrying on of holdings of large area, but on the north-west coast in particular there are special circumstances adverse to such holdings, and not to be left out of sight. In consequence of the weak nature of the land and the severity of the weather, the ground must not be turned over during the winter season, as is the practice on the east coast. If this were done the effect would be that the land would get washed away. The tillage is therefore necessarily confined to the spring of the year. Moreover, the season for tillage is brief and late, and always precarious. Accordingly, if the crofter plants his potatoes and sows his corn too early, he runs the risk of losing all from wet or violent weather. If he does this too late, he incurs the risk of his crop not ripening. Therefore, he must have a holding, the size of which is compatible with its successful management in view of these conditions. His working strength at spring and harvest-time consists of himself, his wife, and those of his family at home able to assist him. Most of the cultivation is necessarily spade cultivation. Hired assistance is the exception, for it can only be afforded with difficulty, and it diminishes the chance of profit from his holding.

In this connection, also, regard must be had to the matter of manuring. The manure made on all crofts near the sea-shore is invariably supplemented by the use of sea-ware when it can be obtained, so that, if new holdings are formed on the north-west coast, the benefit to the crofters in being able to obtain an abundant supply of sea-ware should form an important consideration in deciding as to the situation and size of such new holdings. These observations would have less application to new holdings established as self-sustaining holdings, but in the formation of new holdings, especially on the north-west coast, not intended to be of that kind, it will be found necessary to have regard to the above considerations.

We are aware that certain observations are made on the matter of size of holdings in the Report of the Highlands and Islands Commission, 1883 (see page 101), including the extent of arable land deemed necessary for each holding, but we are of opinion that materials do not exist for enabling us to suggest practical measures on this important question, adapted to uniform or even general application, and that in the lotting of crofts and fishermen's holdings, special regard must be had to the circumstances of the localities where such lotting is carried out.

In referring to the north-west coast we have abstained from alluding to the Island of Lewis, as there the state of matters is such as to demand separate and special treatment.

Besides self-sustaining holdings, extension of existing holdings, and the formation of holdings of limited area for landless cottars or others, there remains another class to which our attention was directed at the sittings, namely, fishermen's holdings. We are clearly of opinion that much may be done to effect an improvement in the existing state of matters, as to holdings for fishermen throughout the counties in question, particularly on the west and north-west coast and in the Long Island. In considering lands situated in these quarters, we have had carefully in view the suitability of lands on the sea-shore for fishermen's holdings, and, where thought advisable, these lands have been coloured Yellow for such ; that is to say, for holdings consisting of a house site, a yard or garden, a potato patch, and space where possible for a cow's grazing. In localising and defining these areas it is scarcely necessary to say that we had in view the matter of harbour accommodation, either natural or artificial, though in most cases the former. It distinctly appears from the evidence laid before us that a desire exists in many quarters of the crofting sea-board for the formation of such holdings. Their establishment at various points on the lands scheduled need not present serious difficulty, as all the requisites would be found together, to wit, suitable land near a natural harbour, sea-ware for manuring purposes, adjacent grazing for a cow, and desirable applicants ready to take up such holdings. The formation of these would in our judgment be of immense advantage, especially on the north-west coast, to cottars. Many such persons, though honest and hard-working, occupy an untenable position both as to their dwellings and to their neighbours. Often they have no land at all, and when they have, their only title is that of squatter on the common grazing of the crofters, or on the holding of some crofter who is a relative, or who is too good-natured to oppose his intrusion. The male members of the cottar's family go to sea as hired hands on the east coast, and the female members as " gutters " or as outworkers. But fishermen's holdings of the kind we have in view would not only, we believe, be readily taken up by such cottars, but they are the very men to carry them on successfully, and moreover such holdings would in many cases not be beyond their capabilities and resources.

So much for land scheduled Yellow as available for new holdings.

Before leaving this part of our subject matter we deem it right to place on record the result of our observations as to the effect of the Crofters Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1886, (49 & 50 Vic., c. 29). Our inspections of land throughout the counties mentioned brought us into immediate proximity with many crofting townships, as well as with the individual holdings of many crofters, and accordingly we derived materials for judgment from a very large portion of the crofting area. Our opinion is that, speaking generally, the Act has had a beneficial effect, and particularly in the following directions. In the first place, the fixing of a Fair Rent has to a large extent removed from the minds of crofters the sense of hardship arising from the belief that they were made to pay rent on their own improvements, or otherwise made to pay at an excessive rate for soil of a poor quality. In the second place, the combination of a Fair Rent with Statutory Security of Tenure has not only taken away or allayed causes of discontent, but has imparted a new spirit to crofters and imbued them with fresh energy. The abiding sense produced that the permanent improvements which a crofter makes upon his holding will, if he complies with certain reasonable statutory conditions, accrue either to himself or to his family successor, will not be taxable by the landlord in the form of increased rent, and moreover will have a money value under a claim for Compensation on Renunciation of Tenancy or Removal from his holding, has led to vigorous efforts towards improvement by crofters in many quarters. For instance, we found that more attention is being paid to cultivation, to rotation of crops, to reclamation of outruns, to fencing, and to the formation or repair of township roads; but most conspicuous of all the effects perceptible, is that upon buildings, including both dwelling-houses and steadings. In a considerable number of localities we found new and improved houses and steadings erected by the crofters themselves since the passing of the Act. In the third place, while the Enlargement Sections of the Act have not proved so effectively operative as was intended or anticipated, we did not fail to observe, in the various cases of Enlargement of Holdings which came under our eye, that the enlargements granted had been, as far as they went, of great benefit to the holdings enlarged. And, in the fourth place, the percentage of arrears cancelled has terminated liabilities which could never have been met.

We pass next to the consideration of lands coloured pink for extensions of crofters' holdings, and more particularly of crofters' grazings. As matter of historical fact, large areas of grazing land in various districts, which were at former periods continuously grazed by the stock of crofters and other small tenants, or were occupied during the summer as sheilings, have been taken from these occupants to their serious loss. The rents they paid were stock rents, and when deprived of the means of breeding stock, whether of cattle or sheep, or when they had these means curtailed, difficulty and discontent frequently arose. Much evidence on this matter was laid before us, and accordingly we embraced every opportunity which occurred while making inspections, of looking in the first instance to the grazings presently held by crofters, together with the numbers possessing a right of pasturage over these; and in the next, to the reasonableness and practicability of declaring certain lands contiguous or near to crofters' grazings as available or suitable for extensions of their holdings, and duly scheduling the same. The result of our inquiries on this head has been entirely to satisfy our minds, not only that of the numerous applications made for extension of grazings many had much force, but that in a considerable number of instances there were lands of the kind available.

Such lands accordingly have been scheduled and coloured pink on the Ordnance Survey Sheets as available for extensions of holdings, and more particularly of grazings, to neighbouring crofters, or otherwise suitable for crofters' grazings. The particular crofters or townships of crofters who should share in such grazings will naturally fall to be afterwards determined. The main question here is one of advantageous occupation, and that occupation of such lands as grazings would be advantageous to the occupying tenants in a high degree we entertain no doubt whatever, provided the crofts are of sufficient size to winter the stock grazed on the common pasture. It is quite true that the scheduled grazings cannot be added to existing hill pastures or other common pastures without due consideration of the circumstances which attach to the holdings of the crofters proposed to be benefited, but the adjustment or re-adjustment of these need not present any serious difficulty.

In many cases where the addition of such grazings would bring together a larger number of stock than could be wintered on the township lands, this drawback could be overcome by further reclamation of outrun lands, or by greater skill and attention to the cultivation and management of soil already under rotation. In any case, the difficulties of wintering, and other difficulties attaching to such extensions, would be more than counterbalanced by the advantages derived from these.

The system of grazing presently pursued on crofters' hill pastures or commons varies in different localities. In many, especially in Skye, on parts of the West Coast, and in Sutherlandshire, there is a "souming," that is to say, the "carry" of the grazing is first determined, and then the number of cattle, sheep, or horses, which each crofter may graze thereupon is fixed either by reference to the wintering capacity of his arable land, or at so much per £ sterling of rent, or in view of both these means of judgment.

According to the old law of Scotland, a soum or sowm is grass for a cow, or for five, and in some cases more, sheep. Roum or rowm is an antique expression for a piece of land. In former times the right of pasturage possessed by the tenants of the tacksman was in the eye of the law (and where not on mere tolerance) a servitude of pasturage. It grew up in commons, and the promiscuous possession to which it led was controlled and curbed by the old action of "souming" and "rouming," whereby the servient subject was "soumed"; that is, the amount of stock it could carry determined, and then the proportion effeiring to each of the dominant tenements "roumed," i.e., fixed according to their respective capacity for winter foddering.*

These soumings were often adjusted in past times with much practical skill by persons having a minute knowledge of the ground, and where adhered to, resulted in the tenants obtaining all the benefit which the pasturage was fitted to yield, and each tenant getting up to, but no more than, the full measure of the right of grazing which attached to his holding. But much difficulty arose in getting crofter and other tenants to adhere to the "souming." As in larger areas of population, a township of crofters is a microcosm. The energetic, stock-gathering crofter soon came to have more than his due share and proportion of stock; the careless, unfortunate, indigent, or otherwise weak crofter to have less. This inequality in the possession and exercise of grazing rights may be said to exist at present more or less seriously throughout the common hill grazings in the crofting area on the mainland, in the outer islands, and throughout the scattalds of Shetland.

Writing in 1809, Dr Arthur Edmonston says (View of the Zetland Islands, Vol. I., pages 148 and 149):—

"The uncultivated ground, outside of the enclosure, is called the Scatthold, and is "used for general pasture, and to furnish turf for firing. Every tenant may rear as "many sheep, cattle, or horses, on the general scatthold attached to the town in which "his farm lies, as he can. There is no restriction on this head, whether he rent a large "or a small farm. If there be no moss on the scatthold contiguous to his farm, the "tenant must pay for the privilege to cut peat in some other common, and this payment "is called 'Hogalif.' It seldom exceeds 3s. per annum."

We found the same condition of matters to exist in Shetland now.

In Orkney the common pastures are of much smaller extent than we are accustomed to find on the mainland, and many townships or districts have no common pasture. On the other hand, the individual holdings are much larger, some of them ranging as high as 10, 20, and even upwards of 30 acres of arable land, with or without grazing outrun.

In those districts on the mainland where there is no souming, crofters have exercised in the past, and in many places continue to exercise, a right of unlimited grazing, with the consequence that the pasture is over-eaten, the quality and value of the stock reared become depreciated, and in hard or prolonged winter weather the death-rate rises to an alarming pitch. To meet the difficulties arising from this state of matters, the Crofters Common Grazings Regulation Act of 1891 (54 & 55 Vic. c. 41) was passed. That Act, which is permissive in its terms, has been adopted, we are glad to know, to a considerable extent, and where adopted has effected a substantial improvement; but to many grazings it has not been applied, and often for this reason, that the better-to-do and more influential among the crofters are hostile to it, as its application would lead at once to the reduction of their over-stocks. In Shetland it has been held in the Sheriff-Court that the Act does not apply to persons who share in crofters' grazings, but are not themselves crofters.

From all these considerations it is abundantly plain that mere extensions of grazings, unaccompanied by the presence and enforcement of rules efficiently directed to the regulation of the stock, and to the equitable maintenance of the grazing rights of each crofter interested, is not to be thought of. With a view to such regulation and maintenance we desire to recommend a large extension of the "club-farm" system. Under it crofters have no individual hill stocks, but only a joint ownership in the stock. Where this system prevails, the crofters, or townships of crofters, interested in a grazing, hold a common stock duly proportioned to the "carry" of the ground, with one central management for herding, breeding, clipping, selling, and dividing of profits, or where necessary, imposing assessments required for the undertaking, as for example, to pay wintering, shepherds' wages, and the general upkeep of buildings and fences. When this system is carried on honestly and properly, not only is the very most made of the ground, but the individual crofter is more certain of his or her return than otherwise, especially where, as in the case of a widow, an invalid, or an occasional absentee, grazing interests fail to receive due attention.

It is quite true that difference of opinion prevails among those qualified to judge as to the merits and demerits of this system; but, after carefully considering the whole matter and weighing the evidence adduced, we are of opinion that the club-farm system can easily be carried on with a large measure of success.

We deem it well here, in connection with the general question of common grazings, to point out that we found frequently in the course of our inquiries that crofters did not pay sufficient attention, and indeed often had not the means of paying sufficient attention, to the important matter of breeding, in the cases of cattle, sheep, and horses alike. In some quarters the landlords make provision for the matter of proper breeding among crofters' stocks, but in most instances the crofters in this respect have to attend to their own stocks. In many places little or no attention is paid to the quality of the sires, and hence grazings which, if used by properly bred stock, would yield animals capable of fetching a good price, are not infrequently to be found grazed by animals of an indifferent or inferior quality, much to the detriment of the crofters when they put their stock on the market in competition with stock to the breeding of which more attention has been paid.

We would venture to suggest as a means of speedily and efficiently bringing about an improvement in this respect, that some measures be taken under proper authority, and subject to all necessary regulations, to induce crofters to use bulls, stallions, and rams of improved quality, and to encourage them to pay more strict attention to this matter than they do at present.

In the third place, certain lands, both in deer forests and on grazing farms, duly examined by us, have been scheduled Brown for moderately-sized holdings at a rent somewhat above the statutory crofter limit of £30 yearly. There are many crofters of credit and reputation, who, if they had the opportunity, would be glad to obtain such farms. It ought to be added that such lands are not in our opinion adapted for ordinary crofters' holdings, but for grazing farms with a due proportion of land under crop, and they would vary considerably in extent according to the nature and quality of the ground.

In connection with the matter of grazing farms, we ascertained that for a considerable time past a process of aggregation of such farms altogether undesirable has been going on simultaneously in two different ways. On the one hand, separate and distinct farms of comparatively moderate size have been from time to time consolidated into single farms in the occupancy of one tenant. On the other hand, a farmer has too often found himself able to obtain possession as tenant of a considerable number of farms, sometimes adjacent, sometimes in different quarters. In like manner also numbers of farms belonging to particular proprietors have fallen into their hands as occupants.

While this aggregation of farms in the possession of one individual was admitted on the part of the proprietors, it was explained on their behalf that this mainly arose from the increasing difficulty experienced in finding separate tenants for large farms, and from their being obliged, failing a tenant, to take over sheep stocks at valuations made by farm valuators. They often felt compelled, it was said, to let their farms at a low rent to pluralist farmers rather than have them thrown upon their hands with obligations as to taking over stock which it was sometimes difficult for them to meet.

The following cases of farms in the hands of one individual as proprietor or tenant are taken from the Valuation Rolls :—

The Island of Lewis.

We have already indicated that the Island of Lewis, owing to the exceptional circumstances in which it is placed, requires separate treatment. While various districts in other parts of the area under our consideration are congested, as in Skye and South Uist, and while many of the crofters and cottars in such districts are frequently called upon to undergo privation, and cope with difficulties, there is no part of that area where matters are so urgent, or where what may be called the "crofter problem" is so acute as in Lewis.

The Fair Rent applications from the Lewis estate dealt with by the Crofters Commission in 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, and 1892 were 2572 in number, and the total arrears came to £40,979, 18s. 1d. Of that amount, £30,092, 7s. 4d. were cancelled (or an average of £11, 14s. per holding), and £10,887, 10s. 9d. were ordered to be paid. The former rents amounted to £7247, 15s. 1d., and the Fair Rents to £4944, 1s. 8d., being an average reduction of 31·784 per cent. It was earnestly hoped that with this relief a better state of things would gradually arise ; but we cannot say from the information we have obtained that such has been the case. We found that the arrears which the Crofters Commission ordered to be paid have not only been left to a large extent unpaid, but additional arrears have been allowed to accumulate on the Fair Rents. As at the date of our sitting in Stornoway on 9th July 1894, we were informed by the Estate Management that the arrears, exclusive of the rent for the year ended Whitsunday, and to be collected in September, amounted to £12,168, 8s. 4d. This sum is also exclusive of the instalments of arrears amounting to £198, 8s., which had not then become payable.

Further, we found, and it is indeed matter of common knowledge, that the average size of the holdings, even as these were originally lotted, is very small in the various parishes of Lewis, and notwithstanding this fact there has been going on for a length of time, and there is still going on, a most unfortunate process of sub-division, sub-letting, and of erecting or suffering to be erected on crofts, dwelling-houses otherwise than in substitution for those already upon the holding, notwithstanding the prohibition (without the consent of the landlord in writing) contained in Section 1 (4) of the Crofters' Holdings (Scotland) Act, (49 & 50 Vict. c. 29). The enforcement of this prohibition is by Section 3 vested with the landlord. It is no uncommon thing to find two and three dwellings, with separate fires and with a separate family in each, on, or attached to one holding. The dwellings are generally placed close to each other, and are sometimes in the midst of the holding. Sometimes the new dwelling-house or dwelling-houses are built on the common pasture. Many of these holdings were sub-divided long ago, and whether consented to or opposed by the Estate Management at the time, such sub-divisions are now stereotyped. They mostly take place on the occasion of a son or a daughter marrying and settling on the father's or mother's holding.

Without entering into too much detail, the following cases in one of the townships in the parish of Uig may be taken as illustrative of the minute sub-divisions which occur generally throughout the island :—

The result of this process of sub-division has necessarily been to crowd and congest the townships where it has occurred with an excessive population far beyond what the soil can support. Even though no sub-division at all had been resorted to, the condition of matters would have been bad. But as it is that condition has been rendered very much worse. Moreover, in most parts of the Island of Lewis, the arable land of the crofters' holdings is of poor quality, and has been exhausted by constant cropping, while, with certain exceptions, the grazing, whether township or common hill pasture, is also inferior.

Further, it appears from the evidence laid before us by the Estate Management that there are no fewer than 483 holdings in Lewis rented at £1 and under, yearly, viz., 232 in the parish of Stornoway, yielding a rent of £217, 10s.; 126 in Barvas, rent £110, 13s.; 66 in Uig, rent £50, 4s.; and 59 in Lochs, rent £42, 7s. The present number of holdings recognised by the Estate, and including both farms and crofts, exceeds by 995 the number in 1844, when the holdings numbered altogether 2110, with a rental of £9437, 19s. 2d., or about £1200 above the present total rental. The number of holdings, or so-called holdings, not recognised by the Estate is very large, but we are not in a position to specify how many.

On the neighbouring estates of North Harris and South Harris, on the other hand, while sub-division is considerable, it has not been carried to the same extent as in Lewis, but, as there, many of the holdings are very small, the arable land of a holding being often only between one and two acres in extent. In Harris the difficulty of cultivation, which is nearly all done by the spade, is very great, as the best arable land consists of patches of land between the rocks, and the arable part of the holding is made up of a number of discontiguous portions, many of them of only a few square yards in extent.

The lands open for consideration by us in Lewis were the forests of Aline, estimated area and rent, as taken from the Parliamentary Return of 1891,* 11,160 acres, rent £300; Arnish, 3290 acres, rent £50; Morsgail, 24,100 acres, rent £1000; Park, 50,000 acres, rent £2000; Scaliscro, 11,000 acres, rent £150.

Total area,	99,550 acres.
Total rent,	£3500.

There are also the following farms:—

On referring to the Ordnance Survey Maps it will be seen to what extent the foresaid forests and farms have been scheduled.

While the said return makes the whole sporting area in Lewis 99,550 acres, the Estate Management states this area at 75,105 acres, made up thus:—Park, 41,913 acres; Aline, 8774; Arnish, 2776; Morsgail, 13,311; Scaliscro, 3143; Grimista, 5178. (See evidence in Appendix, page 1082.) According to the figures of the Estate Management the distribution of land in Lewis stands thus:—Crofters, 258,958 acres; farms, 65,969 acres; forests, 75,105 acres; glebes, schools, town-lands, and the Flannan and Rona Islands, &c., 4148 acres—in all, 404,180 acres. On the other hand, the number of crofters in Lewis, as appears from the Estate evidence (page 1079), is 3076, and the number of cottars 900 to 1000, but this latter number can hardly be regarded as an over-estimate.

On these facts we are of opinion that were the whole forest and farm lands in the Island of Lewis made available for crofters in some form or other, this step, while it might allay or mitigate the more serious evils arising from the existing condition of matters, would not effect a permanent remedy, and would only relieve the urgency for a limited number of years.

Possibly it could be shown in various instances that Fair Rents have not been paid when they might and ought to have been paid; and that payment of rates has here and there been improperly refused: nor can we refrain from an expression of regret that such should be, if it is the case, but the acuteness of the state of matters which now exists is far past the stage when reluctance to act might naturally on these grounds arise in one's mind. The body politic has to be dealt with, as a whole, and the merits or deserts of individual members thereof touch, and only touch, the fringe of the case.

In considering the whole of the aforesaid matters we have refrained from discussing or referring to any questions which might be held to be raised with the owners of lands scheduled, in the event of the same being afterwards assigned to crofters.

* See Parliamentary Paper, 452, Session 1891.

We have not been directed to consider such questions in carrying through the present Inquiry, and accordingly we do not offer any opinion as to what the effect of assigning scheduled land from deer forests or from grazing farms may be, or what claims on the part of landowners or present occupants, if any, may arise in respect of such lands being assigned. Indeed such a proceeding on our part would be premature, as it is impossible for us to say whether all or, if some, which, of the lands scheduled may ultimately be assigned. Nevertheless, we have not been, and could not be, oblivious to the fact that claims and questions of importance on the part of landowners and tenants may arise.

Thus, both in extensions of grazings, and in the case of land for new holdings, the proprietor or grazing tenant, or sporting tenant, may be expected to claim that certain fences be erected, but not at his cost. The proprietor of lands now scheduled, and afterwards assigned, it may be anticipated, will urge certain views as to the erection of such new buildings as may be deemed necessary, and, in the event of the rent of lands assigned proving less than the rent now levied and obtained, he may likewise be expected to ask attention to his altered position.

Mere extensions of existing holdings, or extensions of grazings, may be obtained without much difficulty, and without raising any serious questions; but, on the other hand, we have not failed to notice that the transference of tenants to, and their establishment in, new holdings may raise questions of public policy. With these, however, we are not called upon to deal.

All which we humbly submit to your Majesty's consideration.

ADDENDUM to Report of the Royal Commission (Highlands and Islands, 1892) by the undersigned Commissioners.

While we concur in the opinion that the lands scheduled for the specific purposes described in the Report may, under certain conditions, be profitably cultivated or advantageously occupied by crofters or other small tenants, we are of opinion that this result can only be obtained under a well-considered scheme of land purchase by a representative body possessed of full powers for carrying out properly defined regulations, both as to the selection of the tenants for new holdings, and also as to the occupation of all grazings scheduled.

Without such a precautionary measure regulating the assignment of these lands, we are of opinion that not only would serious losses to the present owners of the lands inevitably result, but large areas of the Highlands at present usefully occupied would be rendered valueless, and existing evils, for which this Commission was appointed to suggest a remedy, would be aggravated.

ADDENDUM to the Report of the Royal Commission (Highlands and Islands, 1892) by the Rev. Malcolm MacCallum.

The unanimous Report of this Commission, and the evidence led before it, in my opinion conclusively prove that there is urgent need of fresh legislation for the settlement of the land question in the Highlands, and that such legislation should proceed on the lines of the Crofters' Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1886. The important reforms in the tenure and occupation of the land recommended in our Report can be most expeditiously and equitably carried out by a Land Court or judicial body similar to the Crofters Commission, which, notwithstanding its too limited powers and scope, has, in a marked degree, succeeded in restoring harmony and prosperity within the narrow sphere of its operations. The joint right of the Highland clansmen with the landlords to the land has, so far as existing crofters are concerned, been recognised, and to some extent been given effect to by the Crofters Act. But with respect to the land cleared for sheep and deer, and constituting an area much more extensive, valuable, and fertile than that presently in the occupation of crofters, the landlords have appropriated the clansmen's rights and interests in it without payment or compensation of any kind. The solution of the Highland problem is not land purchase, but resumption of the clansmen's right to occupy the Fatherland. It is an inexpensive solution, and one that would not impoverish, but might ultimately benefit, the landlords, seeing that the return from the large grazings is a constantly diminishing quantity, and many of them, well suited for crofters' holdings, are admittedly unlettable.

In any case, the demand that the cleared lands, now lying almost wholly waste, should be made available for the enlargement of present holdings, and for re-occupation under the conditions applicable to existing crofts, by the same class of tenants as those unfairly evicted, is a call for simple justice, and a wider and more consistent application of the main principle of the Crofters Act.

But these reforms could not be equitably and effectively carried out by local and elective bodies. In localities that have been cleared, and where the available land exists, no demand for it could arise. And, on the other hand, in congested districts there would be the demand for land, but no means of meeting it, the land being already fully occupied. In the course of our inspections we found not infrequently that the land suitable for the enlargement of a township lay in a different parish, and sometimes in a different county from that in which the township requiring enlargement was situated. No local body would be able to take a conjunct view of the Highlands and the requirements of the people as a whole; and no elective body could afford to give the close, unbiassed, and lengthened consideration that would be required for the adjustment of all the questions that would arise. And, as a matter of experience, it is found that the Highland County Councils have failed to carry out the Small Holdings and Allotments Acts, the administration of which has been entrusted to them. The County Council of Argyll may be taken as an example. Urgent applications, to the number of three hundred and seventy, were addressed to the County Council of Argyll for Small Holdings and Allotments, but the Council refused to take any action, and summarily dissolved its Small Holdings and Allotments Committee. The following extract from its Minutes, of date 20th December 1893, shows the position taken by the Council:—

"The report of the Allotments and Small Holdings Committee, dated 4th October "1893, and the summaries of replies received from landowners and applicants as printed "and circulated were produced.

"Mr Turner moved the adoption of the Report of the Allotments and Small Holdings "Committee, which was seconded by the Rev. Mr MacCallum.

"It was moved by Mr Allan of Aros and seconded by Mr Dickie, as an amendment, "that the Report be not adopted, seeing that Argyllshire is a poor and scattered county, "the ratepayers of which are already burdened with heavy taxation; it is therefore un-"fair to impose upon them the extra cost of carrying out the Small Holdings and Allot-"ments Acts, an experiment which ought to be borne by the State.

"The motion and amendment having been put to the meeting, and a division taken, "the amendment was carried and became the substantive motion."

To entrust the administration of any new land legislation for the benefit of the Highlands to the County or Parish Councils in the face of such an object lesson would be to court failure. The conspicuous success of the Crofters Commission points to the creation of a Land Court as the surest and safest instrument to carry out the reforms recommended in the foregoing Report.

MALCOLM MACCALLUM.

ADDENDUM to the Report of the Royal Commission (Highlands and Islands, 1892) by Henry Munro.

In signing the foregoing report I have done so subject to certain reservations hereinafter set forth; and in so doing, I wish it to be understood that my object is not to weaken the joint conclusions at which the Commissioners have arrived, but to strengthen the Report.

At page X. of Report there occurs the following sentence, namely:—"In dealing "with Grazing Farms, where only part of a farm has been scheduled, care has been "taken as far as possible to leave what, in the event of the scheduled lands being appro-"priated, would constitute a workable and profitable farm."

Acting upon this principle, it has frequently occurred, all over the area of our investigations, that in course of inspecting and scheduling lands as suitable for the purpose specified in our Remit, considerable tracts of land in connection with, and forming part of, Grazing Farms or other subjects have been excluded, on the ground, not that they were less suitable for occupation by crofters or other small tenants than the parts scheduled, but that to schedule them would mean the destruction of the usefulness or amenity of what should be left as a workable farm. I cannot concur in what has been here done, because the Commissioners are not invited to follow that course; and further because in my opinion they are not entitled to exclude any lands suitable for the purposes specified in the Royal Warrant.

In coming to this conclusion, I am far from wishing that every justice should not be done both to landlord and tenant in any changes which may hereafter be made. If indeed the Commission were entrusted with administrative powers I am free to say that they would not only be entitled, but bound, to give weight to claims which might be advanced, so as not in any way to impair unnecessarily the value or amenity of any property; but as the Commissioners were appointed to ascertain and report upon certain facts as these actually existed, they are, in my judgment, bound to so, and the interests of property may very safely be left to the consideration of Parliament.

HENRY MUNRO.

The Letter of Authority referred to on page xxv is in the following terms :—

6 Parliament Square,
Edinburgh, October 9th, 1894.

The Chairman,

Royal Commission (Highlands and Islands, 1892).

Dear Sir,

I have to inform you that I am about to leave this country for New Zealand, on matters of urgent business, and accordingly cannot await the final adjustment of the Report. I expect to be away from home for some time. In these circumstances, should the Draft Report as submitted by you at the Meetings of the Commissioners held here on 5th and 6th curt. be adhered to in substance, I hereby authorise you, acting with the written concurrence of Mr Shaw Stewart and Mr Gordon, first duly handed to you, to sign the Report for me, and on my behalf. At the same time, I reserve my right, if so advised, to append a special memorandum, on certain particular matters.

Believe me,

Dear Sir,

Yours truly,

JAMES NOEL M. FORSYTH.

21*st December* 1894.

We hereby consent and agree to the Chairman, Sheriff Brand, adhibiting Mr Forsyth's signature, under terms of above letter.

LXIX.	59	Lady Emily Steele Pringle Gordon Cathcart,	South Uist, .	South Uist, .	South Boisdale Grazings, .	...	...	66	4,409	...	...	The Commissioners in the course of their inquiries in South Uist ascertained that this Island was in a congested condition, while they found on these farms a considerable extent of land available for new holdings, or for extensions of existing holdings; but from the character and situation of the land scheduled, it was impracticable to separate the hill grazings from the low ground, and the Commissioners have therefore felt it necessary to schedule the whole of these farms, although there were certain portions of land under cultivation.

* The Commissioners deem it right to explain that they have scheduled these Forests (Nos. 90, 91 and 92) in respect of the exceptional circumstance of the case. They have abstained from scheduling similar lands on the Mainland. They do not believe that the lands now scheduled are suitable for new Holdings; but were these lands occupied as common pasture by the Crofters, under a properly adjusted system of management, their occupation would be of much advantage to the occupants and more than outweigh any disadvantages or supposed disadvantages otherwise arising. In considering the case of Lewis, it cannot be left out of view that the congestion is very great, and the demand by Crofters for access to the lands now scheduled is of a very urgent nature. The Commissioners recognise that in the event of these lands or any considerable portion thereof being assigned, such rents as are presently obtainable will probably not be got, and that there may be accordingly a corresponding increase of rates upon other parts of the Island.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE ROYAL COMMISSION

(HIGHLANDS AND ISLANDS, 1892).

tree, Skye.

FIRST SITTING.

PORTREE, SKYE, TUESDAY, APRIL 18, 1893.

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
MICHAEL HUGH SHAW STEWART, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
Rev. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
JOHN MACLEOD, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

irman.

The Chairman in opening the proceedings said—This inquiry, as the terms of the Commission show, differs in essential particulars, both from that made by the Highlands and Islands Commission 1883, and from the proceedings of the Crofters Commission commenced in 1886, and still going on. It is no part of our duty to take evidence of the scope and range submitted to the Commission of 1883; nor are we called upon or authorised to consider the cases of individual tenants, or grievances alleged to attach to particular holdings now, or which may have attached to them in the past. Further, we are not called upon, and have no power to assign, portions of land to individual crofters or to townships of crofters. As is doubtless well understood already, the subsisting power of enlarging holdings rests with the Crofters Commission, proceeding under and in accordance with the Act of 1886. Our duty is—adopting the words of our Warrant—to inquire whether any, and if any, what land presently occupied for the purposes of a deer forest, grouse moor, or other sporting purposes, or for grazing, and not already in the occupation of crofters or other small tenants, may be cultivated to profit, or otherwise advantageously occupied by crofters or other small tenants. In carrying out this inquiry, we, or any three or more of our number, are authorised and empowered to call before us such persons as we may judge necessary in order to our obtaining information from them of the matters submitted for our consideration. We are further authorised and empowered to call for and have access to and examine such books, documents, papers or records as we may judge likely to afford us the fullest information on the subject matter of inquiry; and likewise to inquire by all other lawful ways and means whatsoever. It is important to add that any three or more of our number are authorised and empowered to visit and personally inspect such places as we may deem expedient for the more effectual carrying out of the object in view. During these inquiries, we are authorised to certify our proceedings should it seem expedient to us to do so, and at the close to report to Her Majesty. It is matter of much satisfaction to the Commissioners that the parties on each side more immediately concerned in this inquiry have already indicated a desire to lend us their best aid to carry it on fairly and properly, and we trust that throughout our labours we may have the benefit of that aid. With regard to the mode of inquiry, it may be convenient to offer some explanations. It will be seen from the terms of the Commission already referred to, that we are not directed to lead evidence. Indeed, the word 'evidence' is not used, but we are to be the better informed by those who come before us of the matters submitted for our information. It is not only not the practice for a Royal Commission to take what is called 'evidence upon oath,' but without special parliamentary authority it is incompetent, and I need hardly say we possess no such authority. That incompetency arises in this way. By the Statute 5 & 6 William IV. c. 62 it was enacted that, 'from and after the commencement of this Act, it shall 'not be lawful for any Justice of the Peace or other 'person to administer or cause or allow to be administered, or to receive or cause or allow to be received, any oath, affidavit or solemn affirmation 'touching any matters or thing whereof such Justice 'has not jurisdiction or cognisance by some Statute in 'force at the time being.' It is further provided that nothing in that Act should apply to any oath or affidavit in any Court of Justice. This Act means that the power of administering an oath exists only where expressly conferred by Parliament. The practice in Scotland has been in conformity with this view, and in Scotland therefore no Commission, whether Statutory, Royal, or Departmental, has exercised or claimed to exercise such a power, unless it had been specially conferred by Act of Parliament. We find, accordingly, that the Highland Commission of 1883, which was a Royal Commission, had no such power. On the other hand, the Crofters Commission, which is a Parliamentary Commission, possesses the power under the following words of express enactment in Section 24 of the Act of 1886:—'In any application under this Act it shall be 'competent to any parties thereto to demand, and for 'the Crofters Commission to order, that the evidence 'shall be taken upon oath.' In England the same rule is acted upon, and in Lord Brougham's Act of 1851, amending the Law of Evidence, there is a special provision empowering every Court, Judge, Justice, Officer, Commissioner, Arbitrator, or other person now or hereafter having by law or by consent of parties authority to hear, receive and examine evidence, to administer the oath. That Act and other later Statutes, including the Special Commission Act of 1888, confirm the view that without direct statutory authority an oath cannot legally be administered by us. Upon the whole matter, therefore, it will be understood that such statements as are tendered and received are not to be given upon oath. The next question calling for observation is,

Portree, Skye.

The Chairman.

shall what is known as 'cross-examination be allowed'? Here it is necessary to remember that parties coming before us with divergent views and information are not in the position of opposing litigants in a suit, the one seeking to have a right declared or an obligation enforced, the other offering a defence to the action, and each endeavouring to prove to the satisfaction of the Court certain special propositions. There being no lis or lawsuit, it follows that cross-examination of witnesses, in the ordinary sense of that term, becomes inapplicable and inadmissible; but notwithstanding this, the statements made may often require to be sifted and tested in the most careful and exhaustive manner. This duty, in the absence of cross-examination or what would be analogous to cross-examination by parties, rests with us. The proceedings about to commence are not proceedings at a private instance, but at our own instance, moved thereto by Her Majesty's Warrant and authority; and on our shoulders, accordingly, lies the serious duty and responsibility of seeing that statements open to doubt or challenge are not allowed to pass without being tested by further examination. In conducting such examinations, most useful suggestions may be made by those interested on either side in this inquiry. Should either landlord or crofter or some one representing them desire that special questions be put, he may suggest such questions; and if these are competent and relevant, they may be allowed, but can only be actually put through me. The question then before us is the following:—Is there or is there not available land in this district within the meaning of the terms of reference? If there is not, our duty will be simple. If those or some of those who are to give us the benefit of their aid know or believe that there is such available land, they will proceed to say where that land is, and what is its nature and extent; and they will show whether such land can or cannot be cultivated to profit by crofters or other small tenants. The first statements to be taken will be from crofters in the Portree district; and as it may facilitate matters if some one representing them or a section of their number can give information applicable to the whole case they wish to present, he will be taken first. Following him will come individual crofters in this district; and when their statements have been received, information will be taken from the landlords also in this district, or those representing them. We hope that, as the inquiry proceeds, parties on both sides will arrange to convey their facts and views through selected representatives, and thereby not only save time but keep the inquiry within manageable limits, and render the information tendered more compact and effective.

John G. Mackay.

JOHN G. MACKAY, Merchant, Portree.—examined.

1. The Chairman.—I understand you are prepared to submit a statement to us?—Yes.

2. Please proceed?—As the statement which I intend to make contains a considerable number of statistics, I thought it better to put it in writing, and I will proceed to read it, merely premising that the statement bears not only upon this district but upon the whole island. I have been asked by the people of several parishes in Skye to give evidence before your Commission. I have been for a long time interested in the condition of the Highlands, and have made a careful study of the social condition of the country, past and present. I know nearly the whole of the island, and have had many opportunities of obtaining information from old people in different districts, and also from all written authorities bearing upon the subject. It was abundantly proved by the evidence led before the Royal Commission of Inquiry 1883 that the present unhappy condition of the Highlands was brought about by the introduction of the sheep farm system about the beginning of the present century, and in the following statement I wish to show that before the introduction of these changes, the people of this country were in a state of comparative comfort, that since that time the population has been gradually but speedily reduced, and that in adverse ratio as the population was being reduced, pauperism increased to an alarming extent. It will also be seen that the island of Skye before the introduction of sheep farming was able to maintain a much larger population than at present, and that, almost entirely on its own resources; while at present the population of Skye is maintained by the earnings of fishermen, labourers, tradesmen, and servant girls in different parts of the country. Skye in its present state would not maintain itself for two months of the year. All the wealth of the island is being drained out of it. If we except Skeabost, little or nothing of the rental of Skye is being returned upon itself. The twenty-nine sheep farmers who occupy at least three-fourths of the island, or I might say all the good land inthe island, employ little or no labour: they might, in fact, so far as the welfare of the rest of the community is concerned, as well not exist. It is true they claim to pay a large portion of the rates; but as I will show, pauperism has been created, or at least very much increased, through the introduction of sheep farming, and the system should not grudge its share in the maintenance of its own child. In the year 1801 the population of Skye was 22,592; in 1841 it stood at 23,086; in 1891 it was only 16,476. It would be naturally supposed that, with such a large reduction in the population, those remaining would be very much improved in circumstances, but, as the following figures will show, the very reverse is the case—

These figures are taken from the Census returns and from the Reports of the Board of Supervision; the figures for 1792 are taken from the old Statistical Accounts of Scotland, and as the population therein given refers to 'examinable persons' above nine years of age, a third or perhaps a fourth falls to be added to arrive at the actual population. From these Statistics it will be seen that the people began to get poor immediately on the introduction of sheep farming, and that it is in those districts in which they have been most completely divorced from the soil that pauperism has increased the most. This refers with equal force to the whole Highlands. In the parish of Bracadale, which has suffered most, the cost of maintaining the poor amounts to 13s. 3d. per head of the population, and in the Raasay district of the parish of Portree the cost of maintenance of a pauper is about double what it is on the mainland of the parish. This is accounted for by the fact that when the poor creatures live among crofter townships they get assistance from kindly neighbours, in the way of patches of potatoes, and many other kindnesses; and that when they are placed among large farms and sporting estates, like Raasay, they are entirely dependent upon the miserable dole from the parish. On the evidence of aged and intelligent witnesses examined before the Commission of 1883, it was made clear that the people in olden times were in comparative comfort. I would particularly direct attention to the testimony of Donald Macqueen, the catechist of Bracadale, a most intelligent man of over ninety years, who said that in former times 'the people had plenty cattle, sheep, and horses 'on the hills,' and that during the most of his time he had seen in the district plenty of food of all sort,—flesh and fish and milk. 'I have seen Mr Macleod of 'Ebost, when that farm was a granary, supplying food 'of all sorts to people as they required it, and a 'number of townships belonging to the crofters themselves.' This is amply proved by the reports of the ministers of the different parishes in the old Statistical Accounts in 1792. Is it not a terrible condemnation of the present division of land in the Highlands, that in the parish of Bracadale, with a population two and a half times less than it was a century ago, the miserable remnant of the population have been brought to such a state of pauperism that it takes sixty-four times the amount to maintain the disabled poor; and the parish of Kilmuir, which was at that time very properly called the granary of Skye, has to pay a hundred times more for the upkeep of its disabled poor, in the face of a decreasing population. In 1792 there were in the parish of Snizort 597 horses used entirely for tilling the ground and carrying home the peats; now there are only about 130 horses, and men and women have to drag the harrows, and women have been converted into beasts of burden to carry the peats on their backs. In Portree there were in the same year 362 horses as against 103 to-day,—without counting, of course, the horses used by carters and by the hotels. Such is the course of civilisation in these parts. The various writers in the old Statistical Accounts complain that the tenants in Skye were so slow in adopting the plough for turning the ground instead of what they even then called 'an antiquated instrument' the caschrom. Strange, that after the lapse of a century we find the Skye small tenants still using the caschrom, but unfortunately from necessity and not from inclination. Another strange comparison which illustrates the change for the worse in the circumstances of the people, is that in 1792 there were four students from the parish of Duirinish attending the Aberdeen University, while in 1892 there were only three. Portree at that time had three students attending the University, and after a lapse of a hundred years the number is exactly the same. The Rev. William Bethune, Minister of Duirinish, stated that during the twenty years from 1772 to 1792, on a very moderate computation, 2400 souls emigrated from Skye to America, carrying with them £24,000 sterling, ship freight included. I should imagine it would be very difficult to get £24,000 in Skye to-day, if we exclude the proprietors and a few larger farmers.

About sixty years ago, one of the Skye lairds, having got into difficulties, got from many of his small tenantry, in loan, sums varying from £10 to £100. Such was the confidence in their chief at the time that few, if any, had even an acknowledgment for the money. Some of these died, and their families knew nothing of the transaction; but his son, to his honour be it said, paid every penny with interest. I believe, if the same thing were tried to-day, it would be a difficult thing for any laird in Skye to get the loan of as many pence from his small tenantry. From all this it will be seen that the people have been gradually getting poorer since the introduction of sheep farming. They were cleared out of their former holdings without any compensation, and what stock they had they were compelled to sell for whatever they could get for it. Those of them who were too poor or infirm to leave the country were huddled on to the top of other townships where they had to build houses for themselves, and by this forced sub-division of the land the former occupants of the township soon became as miserable and wretched as themselves. As is well known, the old system of division of land in the Highlands was as follows:—Large farms were let to gentlemen of means, frequently relatives of the chief, who acted as officers in the clan army, when any military operations were being carried on. These tacksmen, as they were called, set the land to a number of sub-tenants who paid them in rent and kind, they themselves paying the chief in the same manner. There were also a number of farms let to joint-tenants who paid direct to the chief. This arrangement continued in force till the sheep farms displaced them. According to a statement published by Mr Macdonald of Skaebost, the number of such Tacksmen in Skye in the year 1733 was 142. The number of joint-tenants holding of the chief was 517; but that the greater part of the sub-tenants were in every respect equal to them there cannot be the slightest doubt. The tacksman had no great power over the sub-tenant further than as a middleman to collect the rent. The size of the townships occupied by these sub-tenants can still be traced, and the number of families occupying them is well known, as also the stock held by them. I will now proceed to give a list of the sheep farms as at present held, with the number of townships absorbed by them, and as far a I have been able to trace them, the number of families holding land in each, with the old Highland measurement or souming of each township.

The eviction of this class of tenant began about the year 1792, and was gradually carried on as the sheep farmers extended their stock, and as their respect for the tenth commandment decreased. In the year 1792, 150 families were cleared out on the MacLeod Estates alone, or 220 in ten years, among whom I find the names of one army captain, two lieutenants, besides many soldiers. From the legal proceedings taken in the removals, it is proved that the whole were direct tenants. A number of them held their lands on account of military services rendered, their sons having been enlisted by MacLeod, who was an officer in the 42nd Highlanders. In some parishes in Skye the removals are of a more recent date, and many are within the memory of people still living, and even the victims themselves are still to the fore in a good many cases. Though the greater part were forced to emigrate, at least those who were physically able to do so, many were accommodated with shares of existing holdings in other townships, which naturally resulted in overcrowding, so that crofts already too small were made totally unfit for the maintenance of any family. The question now is, what is to be done with the people? It is proved that they are getting poorer and poorer; the Census returns show that they are rapidly decreasing in numbers. I also hold it proved that sheep farming is accountable for the present unhappy state of matters. Sheep farming itself has proved a failure. Every proprietor who can is turning his sheep farms under deer, and the deer are driving the miserable remnant of the people before them. Will the land now occupied by sheep and deer pay, if converted into small holdings? The whole thing depends upon the size of the holdings, and the amount of the rent. If the upholding of rent rolls is a primary consideration with the legislature of this country, then it becomes a question for experts to say whether small tenants under the altered circumstances would pay better. But if the preserving of a comfortable peasantry is of more importance to the nation, the question 'will 'it pay' becomes very much modified. Apart from that, it is a fact that sheep farms have become unprofitable to a large extent, owing to the deterioration of grazing through being so long out of cultivation, the fortunes of former days having been made on the unexhausted improvements of the removed tenants; and the only way to improve these grazings is to replace the small tenantry on the soil. It will probably be argued that the crofters have in many cases failed to pay the arrears and fair rents as arranged by the Crofters Commission. True, many of them are in that unfortunate position; but it must be borne in mind that, while the Commission has reduced the crofters rents in Skye on an average about 25 per cent., all the sheep farmers in Skye have got their rents reduced 50 per cent.: that the sheep farms were much lower rented than the crofters before, that they occupy vastly superior land, and that, though many of the crofters got their small patches for nothing, it would not materially alter their circumstances. There is a great amount of land in Skye most suitable for re-occupation as moderate sized holdings. This is easily proved, and will be seen by the gentlemen of the Commission for themselves. Skye maintained a larger population before on its own resources, and would do so again if it only gets the chance. Is it not a melancholy fact that while in more favoured parts of the country education, invention, and increased knowledge of agriculture have caused two blades of grass to grow where one grew before, in the Highlands rushes, heather, and fog grow where corn grew not so long ago? In Skye, as in most parts of the Highlands, the appearance of the country, as well as the condition of the people, has gone back a century within the past hundred years. To quote again from the old Statistical Accounts of Scotland, the minister of Kilmuir says: 'The people all reside in the parish. 'The parish affords employment for all the inhabitants, 'but many of the young men, to the detriment of 'this part of the country, go to the south of Scotland 'to earn higher wages. This parish has more land 'employed in raising corn than any other in the island. 'In the particular district in which the incumbent lives, 'the eye can in one view see four miles which look 'like one continued field of corn, there not being the 'smallest portion of moor in the extent. The rest of 'the parish is also well calculated for the production of 'corn, though not equal to this part. It supplies itself 'with provisions, and in plentiful years it furnishes oat-'meal to those adjacent; but when the crop happens to fail, 'the inhabitants live worse than in the other parishes. 'The vegetables raised here are the same as are raised 'in the south of Scotland, and they thrive equally 'well.' At that time every parish in Skye had its mill, and some parishes two, kept constantly employed. All the millers sold large quantities of meal. It is within the recollection of many still living that the millers of Kilmuir employed a smack to go to Gairloch and other places to sell their meal. If such was the condition of Skye a century ago, why should it not be again under more enlightened and humane management? The main difficulty in the breaking up of the sheep farms and deer forests will be the stocking of the new and enlarged holdings, for it is quite evident that few people will be able, without assistance, to erect the necessary buildings and purchase the stock. So far as I can see, there need be no difficulty. The late Government, unasked for, offered £150,000 to transport Highland crofters to British Columbia. That amount would go a long way to stock new and enlarged holdings at home, with more benefit to the people, profit to the country, and security to the British taxpayer. I am aware strong objections are being made against advancing money on the security of stock, but with the introduction of parish councils I see no difficulty in the way of managing it with little risk. The re-distribution of the people on the land is a matter of vital importance, not only to the people occupying the land, but to every member of the community. As pointed out already, under the present system all the wealth of the country is being drained out of it, and very little of the earnings of the land is spent on it. If, on the other hand, in place of the present vast extent of territory under one man, there were a number of reasonably sized holdings averaging from £10 to £100, what a great increase of trade it would mean to the country.

3. Do you propose to give us any information with regard to the particular portions of land which you think are available within the scope of this Commission?—As far as I know—and I know a good deal of the country—there are very few, if any at all, of these townships that I have enumerated in this list but are suitable for re-occupation.

4. What size of holding do you point to?—Well, the size of holding I would suggest is what I have stated, averaging from £10 to £100.

5. Of rent?—Yes.

6. But I understand you are not at present in a position to indicate, except in so far as you have dealt with the matter in your written statement, any particular portions of ground?—I did not do so, for this reason, that there are so very many portions of ground. There are none of the farms I have enumerated but occupy the best portions of land in the island. It is not a case of any particular district, because there are so many portions the same way.

7. We would like if you could be a little more specific as to the portions of land, but perhaps you have not fully considered the question?—I have not, of course, considered that question, but I can very easily at a later period give you a list of the more suitable districts.

8. Now, suppose we endeavour to put a croft into shape, what area, arable, would you give? Take the case of a man who lived by his croft without depending on fishing, or on wages for occasional work, what area, arable, would you say?—I would say an average of 8 acres—8 or 10 acres, or so.

9. And what area of grazing?—Well, a person would require to keep half a dozen cows. The answer would depend again so much on whether the tenant was to be a separate tenant or in a joint-holding.

10. Suppose him to be a separate tenant—a sole tenant?—I should say half a dozen cows and two horses and about 100 sheep.

11. And paying what rent?—I cannot say as to the rent, I would have to leave that to a more practical man.

12. Well, but we are supposing a case?—I am not going to commit myself as to the rent at present. I did not consider that question, and I would rather not give a haphazard reply.

13. Would he require two horses for 8 or 10 acres?—Possibly not.

14. Is it not a fact, Mr Mackay, that two horses could work 40 acres or perhaps even 50 acres?—Two Clydesdale horses might, but with small ponies, such as are kept in this country, it is a very different thing. Half a dozen of these would not cost as much as one Clydesdale.

15. You are aware of the words of the Commission, 'land capable of being cultivated to profit.' Can you mention any crofter holding, which, to your knowledge, is being cultivated to profit?—As I have pointed out in my statement, the whole thing depends upon the rent.

16. Assume the rent to be a fair rent?—I cannot point to any one just now. It is a difficult thing for a person to say. I don't know the circumstances of the people, whether they are earning the rent of their holdings upon them, or elsewhere.

17. Mr Gordon.—Are you a farmer yourself,—a crofter or a farmer?—I am neither.

18. The Chairman.—You did not make any reference I think, Mr Mackay, to the cottars in Skye. Is there a large number of cottars?—There were in the year 1881 1360 families in Skye without land.

19. And are there as many now?—Well, possibly with the decrease in the population there will be perhaps thirty or so less. But that includes such people as schoolmasters, doctors, and others in Portree, for example. I should say there would be about 800 cottars in the island.

20. Are these cottars at present a considerable burden upon the crofters?—They are, decidedly.

21. And would the removal or emigration of these cottars be of great advantage to the crofters in the first place and to the cottars themselves in the second?—There is no doubt it would, because in many cases they are a great burden upon the crofters. Another thing is that the removal of these cottars and giving them land would certainly tend to decrease pauperism, because it is against the Poor Law Act for parties holding land to be taken upon the Poors Roll: so that the Poors Roll is swelled by these cottars.

22. Have you considered in detail the question, what extent of arable and grazing, with a given rent, would enable a man to cultivate a croft to profit?—No, I have not. This is one way in which I look at it:—Take some of these large farms that were occupied by sixty families before. If a hundred years ago, considering the primitive implements and the very small knowledge of agriculture possessed by the people, these families were able to maintain themselves without any extraneous aid, I see no reason in the world to doubt why half that number should not do so now.

23. Even allowing for altered circumstances?—Even allowing for altered circumstances, I could point, if you would allow me to go out of Skye, to a small farm of which I have a special knowledge, which was held on the old joint-tenant system, and which has been a decided success. I refer to the farm of Kirkton, in Lochalsh, which is occupied by six tenants. I believe I am perfectly safe in saying that so far as it is worked, in point of agriculture it is equal to any large farm, certainly to any that I know of, on the west coast. I know it pays a larger rent than a farm of equal extent and value in the neighbourhood, and I know that each of the tenants has been able to bring up a family, with their sons and daughters placed in as respectable circumstances as any sheep farmer I know.

24. Mr Macleod.—Cannot you give us a case in Skye?—I cannot, because the Skye landlords have not been so liberal with their tenants.

25. Mr Maccallum.—Do you think the small holdings are too highly rented in Skye?—Taking them in proportion to the large holdings, decidedly they are.

26. But still it is an advantage to have these small holdings?—It is a case of just having a home.

27. And if they lost the land they would not be so comfortable?—That is seen in the difference between the crofters and cottars.

28. The Chairman.—I suppose I am correct in saying that even those crofters who are not able to show that they cultivate their crofts to profit are in a much better position than the neighbouring cottars?—Oh, decidedly. There is another explanation that I should like to make. As everybody knows, about 150 years ago the Highland chiefs took a great deal of trouble to train their men to military exercises, and they proved exceedingly good soldiers, every one of them. Now, the unfortunate thing is this, that when they found it profited themselves more to turn their farms into sheep runs, they never took it into their heads that their native crofters could be taught. They merely took an adventurer from the south in some cases, and let the farm to him.

29. Mr Macleod.—Are there any cases of a crofter occupying a sheep farm in Skye?—No, not to any extent; there is only one that I know of in Skye.

30. You said there were 29 sheep farms?—Yes.

31. And are there 29 sheep farmers?—No, there is one case in which one farmer keeps two farms. There are a number of farms in Skye which have been let to sporting tenants who take the grazing and sport upon the farms; they occupy the grazing themselves, but the profitable working of it is a matter of secondary consideration.

32. You gave us rentals of sheep farms. Did these apply to the grazing only?—To the grazing only. They had nothing to do with the sport.

33. The Chairman.—There was one point you touched upon, Mr Mackay—the value of these grazing farms when originally formed from land previously in cultivation. But I understand you to say now that, owing to the length of time these lands have been occupied as grazing farms, the land has got sick for grazing purpose, and would be much the better of being again cultivated. Is that your view?—Yes, decidedly it is. They can very easily be seen, and at a distance not very far from us you can see land formerly under cultivation now growing heather. They do not now carry the same amount of stock. It is a fact, also, that a great many, if not the most, of the farmers in Skye have changed their stocks from the finest sheep to black-faced sheep.

34. Can you give us any statistics to enable us to compare the sheep stock carried in Skye a few years ago with the stock carried now?—That is not within my power.

35. You have not the materials?—No.

36. Mr Gordon.—How many acres of arable land do you think would keep a family?—I have already qualified my statement there. Not being a practical farmer, my statement is more general.

37. How many acres of land would you require for the 100 sheep?—I am not going to take upon myself to answer the question at haphazard.

38. Then you could not say what it would take to stock them?—No.

39. In fact, you have no practical knowledge at all about it?—Not as to Skye. I have a general knowledge as to the whole country.

40. Mr Munro.—You have told us that, as the population diminishes, the poor rates increase. Are we to infer from that that if we replace the people on the land the poor rates would diminish in the same proportion?—Decidedly. Not only is that the case with Skye, but I made up statistics as to all the Highlands, and the same thing applies with equal force to the whole of the Highlands. It is in those parishes which have been almost entirely cleared that pauperism has most increased, the poor having nothing to look to but their dole from the parish.

Portree, Skye.

John G. Mackay.

41. Can you give us any case in the immediate vicinity of Portree now occupied by large farmers that could be repossessed by crofters?—There is the farm in the immediate neighbourhood.

42. What is the name of the farm?—Scorybreck Farm: there is one township there that was occupied by some 30 families before.

43. What is the name of that township?—Rigg is the name of that place.

44. And how many families were in Rigg?—There were 30 tenants there, and I am told there were also 30 cottars who were very comfortable, living upon the tenants.

45. Mr Macleod.—You said, Mr Mackay, that sheep farms were no profit to the community generally. Don't the sheep farmers spend a considerable amount?—No, they certainly do not. They employ very little labour,—three or four shepherds and two servant men, and about a couple of servant girls or so.

46. Mr Maccallum.—And do you think that in these parishes you could stock small holdings if you got them?—Possibly a few here and there, but not generally.

47. There is a desire to get land?—Decidedly there is a desire to get land, if means could be devised by which that land could, under proper security, be stocked.

48. The Chairman.—I understand you, Mr Mackay, to take up this position, that so far as your knowledge goes, even if land, arable and pasture, were assigned to particular tenants in Skye, you don't think they could stock these lands, or properly cultivate them, and erect the necessary house and steading, without extraneous assistance?—I am perfectly satisfied they could not. Of course, I hold on the other hand that, as the people of this country who were formerly, as I have proved, in comfortable circumstances, have, through the operation of the laws of this country, been brought to their present unfortunate state, I hold that they are perfectly justified in expecting at all events that now, seeing that the system for which they have been pauperised has itself proved a failure, the law should step in and replace them upon the land from which they were dispossessed.

49. The Chairman.—That is not a matter immediately before us.

50. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Your view is that they could not cultivate the holdings to profit without having stock advanced to them?—No, I am satisfied they could not.

51. Mr Macleod.—Do you speak of the whole of the Highlands, or of Skye alone?—I am speaking in the meantime for Skye. I will qualify that by saying that there are a good number, perhaps, here and there, who could stock the holdings, but in the case of those particularly who are most needing land, the cottars, very few of them would be able to stock farms.

52. The Chairman.—Do you wish to add anything to what you have said, Mr Mackay?—Not just now, but further on I may. I will complete the statement in regard to other farms not dealt with.

53. The Chairman, on the suggestion of Mr Mackintosh, Factor for Lord Macdonald.—What becomes of the stock that is raised and reared on the sheep farms in Skye?—I think the answer to that question is exceedingly simple. If the same land was occupied by a greater number of tenants, possibly the output to the towns would not be quite so large; but in my estimation it would benefit the British nation equally, if not more, because in the first instance it would rear a healthy peasantry at home, the surplus as at present would go to the large towns, and in place of enriching one individual, would enrich perhaps twenty or thirty, or even forty or sixty, as the case might be.

ARCHIBALD STEWART, Slignach, Portree (60). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Portree, Sk

Archibald Stewart.

54. The Chairman.—What information do you wish to give us about the land?—That the people are not getting land as they had in previous years.

55. Can you tell us any land that would be available?—Yes, land that was in cultivation before, would be suitable.

56. To what land do you refer?—Borve away down here; and plenty of land in Rigg.

57. Anywhere else?—Tormichaig away beyond Portree here. Taking the parish of Portree itself, Raasay was cleared, and the population went off to Australia and America within my recollection.

58. Are there any other places that you can mention in the parish of Portree?—Tormichaig and Sconser, which were cleared for deer forest purposes; Maligan and Achachorc—there are people in Portree who were born there.

59. Is there anything else you would like to tell us about it?—There are plenty people here who would make good use of a piece of land, and they are not getting it; the people are living in places not worthy of counting at all, I myself living on the sea-shore.

60. Do you pay any rent?—No. In bad weather the sea comes about my feet to the depth of 14 inches.

61. Where is your dwelling?—Down here below us.

62. Are you in the township of Slignach?—Yes.

63. Did you at one time occupy a croft?—I have repeatedly asked for a croft before now, and could not get it.

64. What size of a croft would you like to get?—Enough to support a cow, and one or two young beasts, and a few sheep.

65. And what extent of arable do you wish?—Just as much as would support the like of that stock.

66. Could you put a stock on it?—Not just at present.

67. Could you put up a house and steading?—Yes, a house that would suit my own purposes.

68. Mr Macleod.—Would you get the assistance of friends, if you got such a holding as you have described?—I don't know; the friends have got so poor that I don't believe they would be able to help.

69. So that, even if you got the holding, you would not be able to stock it?—Not just at present; no.

70. Mr Munro.—What sort of help would be required?—Any help it would seem proper to give me: I would not ask much.

FARQUHAR MACLEOD, Portree (72)—examined.

Farquhar Macleod

71. The Chairman.—Can you point us to any land in the neighbourhood available for crofters?—Yes. There is Borve away down here, where my father and grandfather were born. It is waste now. About 30 families were there altogether. There is also the land away up by Scorrybreck.

72. Do you mean apart from the Farm of Scorrybreck?—Near Portree.

73. Any other land?—That is all I know well about.

74. Are you paying any rent just now?—I have no land. I am a householder. I cannot get land for which to pay rent.

75. But if you got land, could you stock it?—I have two cows and a young beast, and I have to buy grazing for them.

76. Mr Macleod.—What is your present occupation?—Scavenger.

77. Would you be able to stock such a holding as was described by the previous witness?—I lost my family, and I could not do much in the way of stocking land, but if I got a small portion of land I could stock it.

78. What extent of land?—About £3 worth.

79. What stock would you expect to put upon that

£3 holding?—Not much: it would not take very much stock.

80. Could you buy additional stock besides what you have at present, if you had the ground?—I believe I could not.

JOHN NICOLSON, Craiglea, Portree (72)—examined.

81. The Chairman.—What is your occupation?—I am a salmon-fisher at Craiglea.

82. Do you know the land hereabout well?—I know the most of it.

83. Do you remember lands being formerly in the occupation of crofters?—Yes, I remember being in the crofter's place nearest to this house.

84. Could you tell us some places that might be used for crofters at present?—Plenty. There is a place at Maligan where I remember there were eleven people and two cottars. That is within half a mile of where I live.

85. And you think that land could be used again?—Well, I think it could; I think it might.

86. What state is it in now?—It is now under sheep and cattle.

87. Is it on a farm?—It belongs to Mr Stewart, Scorrybreck.

88. Is it a part of Scorrybreck Farm?—Yes; it is part of it now.

89. Is there any other part of Scorrybreck Farm that would do for crofting?—Some of it is the best I know. That is about Torvaig there, and Mr Stewart ploughed a part of it above Torvaig.

90. Has the place got a name of its own?—Above Torvaig—Lag-na-Ceirdich.

91. Mr Macleod.—We have got Maligan, above Torvaig, and Lag-na-Ceirdich. Are there any other places in Scorrybreck that there used to be tenants on?—There is another place called Escadale; and one on this side of Escadale, called Gearaidh-Fraoich.

92. Are there any on the east side?—Plenty. There was a place called Rigg; my own grandfather was there. Another place to the north of that, called Tote.

93. Tote and Invertote?—Yes.

94. Any more?—A place called Achadh-a'-Chorc, and Holm close to the shore.

95. There is a small island there?—Yes.

96. Mr Maccallum.—Was not the whole of Scorrybreck at one time under small tenants?—There was some of it that tenants could not work. They had the pasture up to the top of the hills.

97. Mr Gordon.—These places are mostly all on the east side; do you know of any further inland, on the west side of the watershed?—No, I don't know that district.

98. The Chairman.—Do you know a place called Totrome, immediately south of Rigg—was that under cultivation?—Yes.

99. Do you remember any more?—There is another place called Borve, opposite Escadale, which I mentioned already.

100. Are there two places called Borve?—There is a place in Macleod's country called Borve, but there were different names on the crofter townships in Borve. There was one place called Peighinn-an-duin; another township called Beinn-na-h-Iolainn, and Breascot. I remember, when the crofters were there.

101–102. Mr Macleod.—Do you know how many families were in Borve?—I cannot tell.

103. Were they all small tenants, or were there any cottars amongst them?—Most of them had crofts or half crofts, but there were plenty of cottars there too, I think.

104. What stock would a crofter have?—I cannot tell; I was young when the crofters were there, but I know they cultivated the ground, and they held to the top of the hill for grazing.

105. How many cows would each man have?—I cannot tell.

106. Had they any sheep?—Plenty sheep.

107. The Chairman.—Do you remember a township called Cuishinish?—No. Portree, Skye.

108. Or one called Totabeg?—No; there is a Tote at Scorrybreck Farm. John Nicolson.

109. Do you remember a place called Stolemor?—No.

110. Or a crofter township called Pennymore?—No; I was a boy at school then, I mind of these things as I would see a dream.

111. Mr Munro.—Were the crofters at that time in comfortable circumstances?—Yes, they were very well off.

112. Had they money in the bank?—That is a thing I cannot tell, some of them may have had.

113. They were not in debt, I suppose?—Perhaps they were, some of them.

114. The Chairman.—Can you give us any information as to when the crofters left Borve, and where they went to?—I cannot remember, it is so far back.

115. What were you doing at the time they left?—I was along with my father and mother, on this farm called Escadale.

116. How many years ago was that?—I think about 50 years ago.

117. Where did they go to, or where were they sent?—Let them get places for themselves, or want. Some that had cattle and sheep had to build houses anywhere they could get a place.

118. Did they leave Skye, or did they find quarters in Skye somewhere?—Most of them were cottars to gentlemen that gave them a place to build a hut.

119. In Skye?—Some of them in Skye.

120. And did some of them leave Skye?—I am sure some of them did.

121. At the time you speak of, was there any general destitution in the Highlands, and especially in Skye?—Well, I don't say there was.

122. Do you remember when it was worse?—Yes. There was not much meal coming from the south at that time.

123. Do you remember why it was they left?—They were "raised" by the proprietors and factors. They were put away, as far as I can remember.

124. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Would they be paying rent?—They were paying as much as they could.

125. The Chairman.—You spoke of meal coming into the country. Was it usual for meal to come into the country from the south when you were a boy?—Yes. There were not many millers in Portree at that time, and vessels would bring in meal. The first meal-dealer in Portree, Mr Cumming, got cargoes of meal from the east coast.

126. Mr Maccallum.—And when the vessel did not come, were they ill off?—I did not feel much of that.

127. Mr Macleod.—What was it they gave to the meal merchant in exchange for the meal?—Money.

128. Where did they get the money?—There was good fishing going on at that time; they were making money on herrings, and by selling their cattle.

129. Mr Maccallum.—They made some meal themselves, did they not?—Yes, the mill would be crowded with meal, and the people would have to wait perhaps a fortnight for their turn to get their corn ground.

130. Mr Munro.—Did Skye ever raise a sufficiency of oats to make meal for the people without importation?—I cannot tell. The vessels brought plenty of meal from the east and south to Portree, which was sold to the people, and there was plenty of hand-fishing going on. The herrings were not then so cheap as now.

HENRY MACKAY, Crofter, Sconser (70). Henry Mackay.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

131. The Chairman.—You are a crofter in Sconser, I understand?—Yes.

132. How long have you been there?—About 40 years. I was born in Moll.

133. Do you desire to obtain more land?—Yes.

134. Can you tell us any place near your holding

Portree, Skye.

Henry Mackay.

where land can be got?—Tormichaig, Ceann-a'-chreagain, and Moll.

135. Were these old townships?—Yes.

136. How far are these places from where you live?—About half a mile.

137. How are they occupied at present?—By the deer forest.

138. Do you remember when they were added to the deer forest?—Yes, about 50 years ago.

139. How many families lived in these townships?—Eight in Tormichaig, four in Ceann-a'-Chreagain, and eight in Moll.

140. Was there any other township near?—Kinlochainort; only two were there. These are all the townships near that were cleared.

141. Is there land now where these townships were, available for crofting cultivation?—Yes.

142. Can you tell us how many acres?—I cannot say.

143. Were you living at Sconser when these townships were cleared?—Yes.

144. You saw the townships being cleared?—Yes.

145. Where did the people go?—Some to America, some to Australia, and some were crowded in on other townships, the holdings being divided.

146. When these townships were cleared, was the number of crofts in Sconser increased?—Yes, they were cut narrow.

147. From what number of holdings to what other number?—In Coillemore (or Sconser crofts), where I am staying just now, at first there were only 4 tenants, and now there are 30 crofters and 10 cottars.

148. Before Tormichaig, Ceann-a'-Chreagain and Moll were cleared, were there any cottars in Sconser?—A few.

149. But were they increased in number after these townships were cleared?—Yes, I believe so. There are three cottars on the bit of land I occupy myself.

150. Mr Munro.—How many tenants were there, and what amount of stock on each of these townships you refer to?—I already mentioned the number of tenants. Some crofts had eight cows, others four, just according to the townships in which they were situated; besides horses and sheep.

151. Would the people take possession of the lands again, if they got the opportunity under fair conditions?—Yes, very gladly.

152. And I suppose they could live there comfortably?—Yes, they would be fairly comfortable.

153. Mr Macleod.—Could they stock the places if they got them?—Yes, our crofters have a good deal of the necessary stock already.

154. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Would they have any thing over after they maintained themselves and stocked their land? After paying for their living, and the stock, and the upkeep of the land, would they have any money in their pocket?—I don't know that they would save money in it.

155. Would they be able to make any profit in the new holding?—Yes, if they could once get it stocked.

156. That is without counting any rent at all?—Yes, they could help themselves well.

157. They could help themselves to live, but would they have anything over to pay rent?—No, not out of their stock.

158. Do you mean that they would require to get these crofts rent free to enable them to live?—They would not ask them without a reasonable rent.

159. But do you think they would have money enough to pay a reasonable rent?—Yes. They could take it out of their stock.

160. Mr Macleod.—Can you tell us what rent was being paid by one of the crofters you described to us as having eight cows and so many sheep?—About £6.

161. Would you consider a holding that would carry that stock to-day a fair sized holding?—I would consider that a good croft that would carry eight cows.

162. Mr Gordon.—How many acres of arable land would be required?—Nine or ten acres.

163. You could hardly keep a cow on an acre, I am afraid?—Yes. I believe it could be done; as the ground has been lying so long out of cultivation, it would yield well now.

Portree, Sk

Henry Mackay.

164. No doubt for a time. Is it supposed that this land would be occupied in connection with the present holding, or as a new holding?—A new holding, not that it should be added to the present one.

165. Then they would require a new house?—Yes.

166. And practically a new stock?—Yes.

167. Have you any idea what it would cost to provide these houses and to purchase the stock?—The house would cost from £20 to £30, but I cannot very well say what the stock would cost.

168. Mr. Munro.—Could they build a house by their own labour without any outside help?—Some could, and some could not.

169–170. Mr Gordon.—Are you a tradesman?—No, I fish.

171. The Chairman.—Suppose new holdings to be formed at Tormichaig or Moll, could the crofters there get on without fishing at the same time?—No, they would not do without fishing.

172. They would require to fish besides carrying on their crofts?—Yes.

173. Is there any land in those districts that would enable a crofter to carry on profitably without fishing?—No.

174. All the crofters at Sconser at present depend more upon the sea than upon the land?—Yes.

175. And the same would apply to new holdings at Tormichaig and Moll?—Yes. If they did not get the hill grazing that was attached to these townships before.

176. What extent of grazing was attached to the townships before?—The big hills above the township.

177. Do you remember the extent?—Yes, I was herding sheep there myself.

178. Do these grazings now form part of the forest?—Yes.

179. And all the pasture the Sconser tenants now have is, I believe, between 1300 and 1400 acres?—Yes, and a great deal of that is rocks.

180. Mr Gordon.—How many sheep have you in the pasture just now?—I have about 40.

181. Do you keep two cows or one?—Two cows and a small beast.

182. Have you a horse?—No.

183. Were there horses on the old holding?—Yes.

184. Mr Macleod.—Do you mean to say that, supposing holdings were formed that would carry eight cows and their followers, and horses and sheep, such as you described to be the case in the cleared townships, the people would not be able to live without the fishing?—Yes, I believe I could support myself on such a croft without fishing.

185. Mr Shaw Stewart.—But only if everything went well with your sheep, I suppose?—Yes, provided I had a good piece of land.

186. Mr Gordon.—How many acres of arable land would they require?—About ten.

187. The Chairman.—What rent would you think it necessary to have to pay as a fair rent in order to live without fishing on a croft, say at Tormichaig or Moll?—I cannot say; the old rent, I think.

188. Have the Sconser tenants more than their proper number of stock at present?—Some have and some have not.

189. How do those who have, get feeding: do they feed on the forest?—No; but if our sheep trespass on the forest, the deer trespass on us.

190. Mr Gordon.—You say you have 40 sheep?—Yes.

191. What is your souming number?—Thirty. Some have only half that, or a third of that.

MURDO MACLEOD, Crofter, Sconser (62). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Murdo Macleod.

192. The Chairman.—Do you live at Sconser?—Yes.

193. What rent do you pay?—£2, 18s.

194. Do you know of any land in the neighbourhood

rtree, Skye. of where you live available for cultivation by crofters? —Yes, suitable enough land; Tormichaig and Ceann-a'-Chreagain are as suitable as any place could be.

195. And is Moll another place?—Yes, middling; though not quite so suitable as other places.

196. Why?—There is not so much arable ground in it.

197. Is there a small piece called Kinlochainort?—Yes, it is suitable enough.

198. Do you remember when these places were formerly occupied by crofters?—Yes, I myself came from Tormichaig.

199. What rent did you or your father pay at Tormichaig?—I am not very sure.

200. What stock had your father?—Four cows at one time; but when the hill pasture was taken from us the number was reduced to three.

201. Was the hill pasture taken away before the crofters were removed?—Yes, the one side of it.

202. Do you know what extent of pasture was taken away, or how many sheep you were reduced by?—One cow's grass we had reduced. There were no sheep in it then.

203. Was the land taken added to the forest?—Yes.

204. Were the tenants at Tormichaig removed because they were in arrear of rent?—They were not behind with the rent at all.

205. Were you behind, or your father?—Very little. Few of the crofters were behind, except perhaps some poor widow.

206. Do you remember what year the removal took place?—It would be 42 or 43 years ago this term.

207. How long before that was the hill taken from them?—Not very long, but I cannot say exactly.

208. Were you more or less able to pay the rent after the hill was taken from you?—Less able.

209. Do you remember what rent your father paid?—No, I was a young boy at that time. My mother survived my father two years.

JOHN MACKINNON, Crofter, Sconser (50).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

210. The Chairman.—Do you remember anything of these old townships?—I remember when Tormichaig was cleared.

211. Is it in your judgment suitable now for cultivation?—Part of it is suitable enough.

212. And the other part, what about it?—The other part would require draining.

213. Is Ceann-a'-Chreagain suitable for cultivation?—Yes.

214. The whole of it?—Not all without being put in order.

215. In what way?—Drained.

216. Is Moll suitable?—Bits of it; it was always a bad place

217. Were the tenants better out of it?—No.

218. Is it a place that you would desire to go to yourself now?—I would not like it as well as the other places. Tormichaig and Ceann-a'-Chreagain.

219. Did you or your father live at Tormichaig at any time?—My father and grandfather did.

220. What rent did your father pay?—I don't remember.

221. Suppose tenants were to be established in crofts in Tormichaig or Ceann-a'-Chreagain on the better parts of the land, could they subsist there without fishing?—Yes, if they got a good slice of it at a fair rent.

222. What slice, and at what price?—That would have to be determined by those who have to judge it.

223. But we would like to have your own idea of the size and the rent?—Between 10 and 12 acres of arable land, and I think they would require not less than 80 to 100 acres of grazing.

224. Do you mean for yourself as sole tenant?—Yes.

225. Suppose you had that, what would you be willing to give as rent, in the hope of getting on fairly well?—I cannot judge.

226. You have given us the situation of the holding, and the extent of arable and the extent of grazing; now, in order to get on fairly well, what rent do you think you should be called on to pay?—I have no idea. Portree, Skye. — John Mackinnon.

227. How many tenants would the like of these old townships accommodate, of the size of holding you have been describing?—I think about a dozen.

228. And could they live without fishing?—I think they should be able.

229. Would you like to undertake to do so without fishing?—Yes, if I got a sober rent.

230. What is a sober rent?—I don't know what it should be worth, but there are people set apart for the purpose of fixing fair rents. I think about £6 would be quite sufficient for such a holding.

231. Do the crofters at Sconser at present eke out their living by means of the sea?—Yes, every one who can goes to sea.

232. They could not get on, I daresay, without the sea?—No, it would not be half the living without the sea.

233. Mr Macleod.—What stock would you propose to put on the holding you have described?—About six cows, and one or two small beasts, a horse, and about 80 sheep. I should think the 100 acres of grazing would feed the 80 sheep, and the remainder would feed the rest.

234. The Chairman.—Would the tenants of Sconser be willing to leave the place altogether, if they got sufficient crofts on more fertile land?—I know that some of them would be very willing to do that.

235. But would most of them prefer to remain where they are?—I believe so.

236. With all their difficulties?—Yes.

237. Would you be prepared yourself to take a new holding?—I would try.

238. Mr Munro.—Is it possible for a crofter to cultivate a croft as it ought to be done, and prosecute the fishing industry at the same time?—No, but they have to do it; they cannot do justice to the croft and be fishermen also.

239. It depends, I suppose, upon the size of the croft?—Yes.

240. But it is not possible to do the two things well?—No, not properly; that is my opinion at any rate.

241. Mr Maccallum.—Is it not an advantage to the fishermen to have a small piece of land?—Of course he is the better of it, even should he only have as much as would enable him to stretch himself on it.

242. He has spare time to cultivate land?—If he is a fisherman it will take all his spare time to keep his fishing gear in order.

243. The Chairman.—Does it not stand in this way, that when a man has to choose between fishing and the croft, he must neglect the one to attend to the other?—Yes, that is likely enough, he cannot attend to both.

244. If you got such a holding as you have been describing, would you be able to stock it without assistance?—Not just at present, but I don't know but I could get help.

245. Where?—I have friends who are able to help me.

246. Mr Shaw Stewart.—But that would mean borrowing and paying back, would it not?—Yes.

247. You think they would be willing to lend you the money if you got such a holding at a fair rent?—Yes, I think so.

248. And do you think you would be able to stock the land and pay some rent, and also pay back the money you borrowed on that holding?—It would be hard enough to do as prices are at present, but if the years turned out good I could manage it.

249. The Chairman.—You could not have done it last year?—No.

250. What amount of money would you require to enable you to stock a holding of that size?—I think it would take about £140 or £150.

251. At present prices?—No, not at present prices. If there was a reasonable price going, it would take about that sum.

252. Mr Shaw Stewart.—But what about the buil-

Portree, Skye. John Mackinnon.

ing?—Any house that we have ever lived in was built without assistance; we built them ourselves.

253. But would you be content with that kind of house in the future?—Yes; the kind of house I am living in now would quite satisfy me.

254. Mr Munro.—Could you repay the money advanced you by easy instalments?—Yes, I think I should be able.

255. Even if years went bad?—It would be hard enough in a year such as last year.

256. But taking an average of years?—Yes, taking years by the average

257. What would you call easy instalments?—I think one would be able, on an advance of £140 to £150, to pay back £2 or £3.

258. What is to become of the interest on the money?—Paying the interest besides.

259. The Chairman.—What kind of house have you got: is it stone built?—Yes.

260. With lime and with corrugated iron roof?—Yes.

261. And how many apartments?—Four or five.

262. Are there upstairs and downstairs?—Yes, two rooms upstairs, and two rooms and a closet downstairs.

263. What did that house cost you?—About £50, besides our own labour.

264. And that is all paid?—Yes.

Ronald Nicolson.

RONALD NICOLSON, Crofter, Rona (45).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

265. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Rona?—Yes, from Doire-na-guaille.

266. Do you say that there is land in Rona which would be available for crofter cultivation?—There are plenty people in Rona already for the land that is there.

267. Do you mean by that that all the available land is taken up?—Yes.

268. Then there is no land in Rona which would be available for the formation of new holdings?—No.

269. Do any of the Rona tenants desire to leave Rona if they could get better holdings elsewhere?—Yes, most of them, I believe.

270. Is there land in Raasay that would be suitable for any of the Rona people?—Yes, plenty.

271. And are the Rona people desirous of obtaining land, if they can get it, in Raasay?—Yes, I believe so.

272. How many of the Rona tenants would be willing to leave, if they got suitable crofts in Raasay?—I cannot say, but I believe the most of them are anxious to leave; they are all complaining of the smallness of their present holdings.

273. Are these people who lived in Raasay in former times?—Some of them.

274. Do you wish to leave yourself?—Yes, if I get a better place.

275. What would you describe as a better place?—Fifteen acres of arable land.

276. And how much grazing?—Just up to the old marches, the old townships.

277. And what rent do you contemplate paying for that?—I don't know; I have not a good enough idea of rents.

278. Could you stock a croft of that size,—15 acres arable?—No.

279. Could you put up the necessary house and steading at your own cost?—No.

280. Where is the land in Raasay that you refer to as available?—The land in Raasay that has been wasted.

281. Give us some description of it?—Brochel Castle, in the first place: North and South Manish, Halig, Leac, Fearn, Haer, Ayre, Suisnish, and the two Screapadals (North and South).

282. Have all these places land available for the object we have in view?—Yes, all of them. They were all occupied by crofters in time gone by.

283. And are they now parts of farms?—They are in the hands of the landlord now.

284. At what time did the removal or change take place from Raasay to Rona of the Rona crofters?—About 40 years ago, that is what I hear. Portree, Sk

Ronald Nicolson.

285. Mr Maccallum.—Can you give us any idea of the number of tenants in these townships?—No.

286. Are the townships under sheep?—Under sheep and all sorts of game,—rabbits and deer.

287. Mr Gordon.—You have only about two acres of land just now?—I am not sure how much I have, it is scattered amongst rocks and stones.

288. Have you any sheep?—Seven sheep.

289. And cows?—Yes.

290. Do you do anything except fishing?—Yes, labouring and every sort of work that comes in my way.

291. Is there any labouring in the island?—It is in the island I was working last year.

292. For the proprietor?—Yes.

293. At what wage?—From 13s. to 15s.

294. Mr Munro.—What proportion of the people do you think should leave the island to leave the remainder comfortable?—I can only give an idea of the township in which I live myself. There are eight or so in my township, and it is only enough for two.

295. Is your township fairly representative of other townships?—Yes, they are much about the same.

296. Mr Macleod.—Would you be prepared to take a holding in Raasay, if you could get it?—Yes, I would take a croft certainly if I got it, but I could not make much of it unless I got assistance.

297. You could not stock it?—No.

298. Mr Maccallum.—Could you get assistance from friends to stock a holding?—No, my friends are as poor as myself.

299. The Chairman.—Do you do a good deal at fishing?—No.

300. Do you live by your croft and by your labour?—It is by my labour I live mostly, I am not making much of my croft.

301. Do you work your croft at a loss?—I cannot say about that: I would not say at a loss.

302. Mr Munro.—If you are not able yourself to stock a croft in Raasay, and cannot get assistance from friends, how then are you to obtain the means of working a croft satisfactorily?—I would not make much of it without assistance.

303. Where do you expect assistance from?—Who knows? I don't know.

Alexander Macswan.

ALEXANDER MACSWAN, Acairseid-thioram, Rona.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

304. The Chairman.—What is the name of your holding?—I live at Acairseid-thioram, 'the dry harbour.'

305. You are not a crofter?—Yes; I succeeded my brother John.

306. I understand there is no land available for crofters in Rona, for new holdings?—No.

307. Is there land in Raasay?—Yes.

308. Would you be willing to go to Raasay if you got a sufficient croft there?—Yes, it is long since I was expecting to get a croft in Raasay.

309. Did you hear what the previous witness said about the old townships there?—Yes.

310. Do you agree with that evidence?—Yes.

311. In what part of Raasay would you like a croft?—Either in Manish or in Castle.

312. What size of croft do you wish there?—A good piece that I could live on.

313. How much arable and grazing?—Land sufficient to rear six or seven cows, and between 80 and 100 sheep, and I would require a horse.

314. And what rent would you contemplate for all that? Would you be willing to give a rent of £20 for it?—No.

315. How much?—I am not a valuator at all.

316. Suppose you had such a croft, could you stock it?—Not without help.

317. Could you put up the house and steading without help?—I believe I could not.

318. How would you propose to flit from Rona to tree, Skye. Raasay to such a holding as you have described, if you could neither stock it nor put up the necessary buildings? How would you carry out the project?—It would not be easy without help. We have run to poverty so much that we would not be able to do it.

319. Are you in debt just now?—Yes.

320. Mr Maccallum.—Are there others in the township who could stock such a croft?—Possibly there are some. I did not come to speak for myself alone, I came to speak for the township.

321. The Chairman.—Then the Rona crofters are poor,—worse off than the Raasay crofters?—There are no crofts at all in Rona; only bits here and there, scattered among the rocks.

322. Mr Maccallum.—You say you wish to get a croft in Raasay? Why did you leave Raasay for Rona?—I was put out; my father was put out of Raasay.

323. The Chairman.—Was he in arrear of rent at the time?—No; we had a good stock too.

324. What was the reason given for the removal?—The township was evicted when Mackenzie, Suishnish, took it for a sheep farm.

325. Mr Maccallum.—How many families were evicted then?—Many a family; upwards of a hundred.

326. Where did the most of them go?—To Australia.

327. Suppose you had a croft of ten acres arable, would you know how to cultivate it?—Yes, I know how to cultivate, and make the best possible use of it.

328. Mr Shaw Stewart.—What is your employment; how do you live now?—Anything that comes to my hand by which I can make a living.

329. What comes to your hand?—Fishing.

330. Have you any knowledge of farming?—Oh yes, I have; I know how to manage stock and horses, and to use the scythe.

331. Are there any horses in Rona?—No, but we had them in Raasay.

lennan.

RONALD MACLENNAN, Rona.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

332. The Chairman.—Tell us what you would like to say?—I knew the townships which were cleared and which were occupied by crofters years ago in Raasay.

333. We have got all these, I think. You desire I understand, to get a croft on one of these townships?—Yes.

334. Where would you wish to migrate to in Raasay?—Any place between Ayre and Castle, where the small crofters used to be.

335. Mr Munro.—What stock had you in Raasay?—It was in Kyle-Rona we were before: we kept four or five cows.

336. Are you a fisherman?—No, I am in the lighthouse packet; I live by fishing and all kinds of work.

337. Are you one of the attendant boatmen to the lighthouse?—Yes.

338. And you have a regular wage from the Lighthouse Commissioners?—Yes.

339. What is that wage?—5s. a week.

340. That is all the year round?—Yes.

341. How long have you held that situation?—Four or five years.

342. Would you lose that, if you went south to Raasay?—Yes.

343. Are you anxious to throw that up for the chance of a croft in Raasay?—Yes.

344. Could you stock it?—Not in my present circumstances.

345. Do you know where you could get help?—No.

346. Surely you don't say that you would give up that situation, small as it is, on the chance of getting a croft which you would not be able to stock?—Yes, I would rather have a good croft in Raasay at the risk of losing the packet employment.

347. What rent would you be willing to give?—I don't know.

348. Could you give any?—Yes.

349. What would you give?—Just according to what I could raise off the croft.

350. Mr Macleod.—Where were you born?—On Rona, then we were in Umachan, and then in Kyle-Rona. Portree, Skye. Ronald Maclennan.

351. And do you remember Rona before the people were put there from Raasay?—No, I was but little at the time.

352. What is the name of the township you come from?—Doire-na-guaille.

353. The Chairman.—You have four cows, I think?—Yes, we have half a croft at present.

354. You want a croft in Raasay, with four cows? What other stock would you desire to have besides these on a new holding in Raasay?—I have seen them in Raasay up to 8 cows and 50 sheep.

355. I am speaking of such a croft as you would wish to have?—I think we would require not less than fifty sheep, five or six cows, and a horse, on a croft of that kind.

356. What arable land would be required for that?—I have no idea of large areas, and no idea of the measurement of land, we are so accustomed to broken land.

357. But you could give us some idea of what extent of arable land you would require with five or six cows, fifty sheep, and a horse?—No idea, as we have not been used to it.

358. Suppose you had a croft with the proper arable, and five or six cows, fifty sheep, and a horse, what rent would be a fair rent for you to pay and leave you the chance of cultivating it to a profit?—I don't know; we are not accustomed to big rents, but to small holdings. We are eight of us planted down where there was but one tenant before.

359. Are you entitled to any retiring allowance from the Lighthouse Board on superannuation?—No.

360. Mr Macleod.—Is there anything you would like to add?—No; but I can tell, if you wish to hear it, how the people were put out of Raasay.

361. The Chairman.—I should like to hear it, but state it briefly.—Witness. I have seen them knocking the houses over their heads when they were evicting them; and I have seen the time when the mill in Raasay had more to do than it could manage. In one day I have seen no less than 300 evicted and leaving the island, and I have seen them going to the churchyard in their grief at being separated from their homes, and taking handfuls of the soil and grass that covered the graves of their kindred, as mementoes. It was myself and two other boys who ferried across for Mackenzie, the new tenant, the first lot of sheep that were to occupy the land which was thus cleared; and from that beginning the eviction process was carried on till the whole place was cleared. I have seen all that myself, and I have seen seven landlords in Raasay, and it is but right of me to say that of the whole of them Mr Wood was the best. He gave us work, and he gave us money.

362. Mr Maccallum.—Were they all cleared at one time?—It was year after year. The two townships were cleared in Mac-Gille-Challum's time.

363. The Chairman (on the suggestion of Rev. Mr Darroch).—Who was the proprietor at the time of these evictions?—Mr Rainy was the owner when the big clearance was made. They were left to settle on the top of each other, and shifted to the Isle of Skye, and cleared anywhere. Some of them reside in the parish of Portree at the present day; I know one man in Portree whose father was a tenant in Keistle, and had 80 cows and 50 sheep. His house was demolished over his head, and he was obliged to go into a little hovel there until he could dispose of his stock.

364. The island was then put under sheep?—Yes, it was cleared for Mackenzie, the tacksman.

365. And is it used as a farm now?—Mrs Wood has sheep on it,—sheep and cattle.

366. Is it a deer forest?—There are deer on it too, and rabbits. It is not exactly a deer forest.

367. It is not fully stocked with sheep?—No. They have sheep and cattle on it, with rabbits and game.

Portree, Skye.

Ronald Gillies.

RONALD GILLIES, Fladday, Raasay—examined.

368–369. The Chairman.—You come from the island of Fladday?—Yes.

370. Near Arnish?—Two miles from Arnish.

371. What is the extent of your holding?—I have no idea.

372. Are you the son of John Gillies?—Yes.

373. Your rent is £2, 5s.?—Yes.

374. Do you know of land elsewhere in Raasay that would be suitable for a new holding?—Yes, plenty.

375. Where is it?—At the upper end of Raasay, the south end.

376. What is the name of the place?—Castle, North-Screapadal, South-Screapadal, the two Haligs, Leac, the Fearns, Baile-Meadhonach Ayre, Suishnish, and the two Manishes.

377. These have all been mentioned already, I think?—Yes, except one, Doire-Domhain.

378. What use is that land being put to at present?—It is under sheep and cattle, and rabbits and deer and birds.

379. What kind of land is it?—I believe it is better land than we have at present.

380. Could you stock a croft if you got one?—I could only place upon the new croft the stock I have on the present holding.

381. And could you put up a house and steading without assistance?—Not at present.

382. Are you in arrear at present?—Only this year's rent.

383. If we come to Raasay, will you show us the land to which you were referring?—Yes, I can show the places, but I cannot define the marches.

384. Mr Munro.—Do you know if there have been any deer or rabbits imported?—Deer have all been imported. I believe they are endeavouring to improve the breed of rabbits.

385. Do they injure the corn?—That is what I hear. They do not cause much damage to us in our township, but in others they do.

386. Do the pheasants do any damage?—Not much; we cannot complain much of that in our township.

387. Mr Maccallum.—What is the general size of a croft in Raasay just now?—About three acres, with about 10 sheep; that is the average. The holdings will scarcely feed that stock, but they are kept alive in a sort of way.

The Chairman here read an extract from Macdonald's Report on the Agriculture of the Hebrides, showing that so far back as 1811 the island of Raasay abounded with roe-deer.

388–389. Mr Maccallum.—Is it of the roe-deer that you complain?—I never quarrel with the deer.

390. What kind of deer are they?—Big beasts.

391. Mr Gordon.—Are you a fisherman?—Yes.

392. Have you a boat?—A share of a small fishing-skiff.

393. Would you like a croft to occupy your whole time, or would you wish to shift to better land and continue to be a fisherman?—I am sick-tired of the fishing: I would rather have a croft that would keep me entirely employed.

394. How much stock would you require to have?—Seven or eight cows, a horse, and 80 to 100 sheep.

395. Is the fishing not so good as it used to be?—No, not for some years past.

396. What rent would you be willing to pay for a croft that would keep that stock?—I don't know; but if it was I who had the fixing of the rent I would make it pretty light. I would say about £5 at any rate.

Alexander Gillies.

ALEXANDER GILLIES, Crofter, Kyle-Rona (40)—examined.

397. The Chairman.—What rent do you pay?—30s.

398. Where is your holding?—Kyle-Rona.

399. Would you like to get out of there into another holding?—Yes.

400. How much additional rent could you pay for a better holding?—I cannot say.

Portree, Sk

Alexander Gillies.

401. I see you had fallen into arrear in your old holding to the extent of £7, 16s. 7d.: but you were called upon to pay only £1, 10s. What extent of new holding do you desire to obtain?—What would keep seven or eight cows.

402. And how many sheep?—50 or 60.

403. And a horse?—Possibly.

404. Can you stock that land?—No.

405. Could you put up the steading and the house?—No.

406. Of course, you know that whatever the rent of such a holding might be, it would be a very great deal more than £1, 10s.?—I believe it would.

407. Would you like to face the maintenance and working of a croft, and live by it, with a rent of £15 or £20,—assuming that the rent was a fair rent for what you got?—According to the circumstances.

408. Would you like to contemplate having a croft worth, say £15 of rent?—It would be too much for me.

409. Would you feel that to be rather staggering?—Yes.

410. I suppose you have never paid a rent of more than 50s.?—No.

411. Therefore, a rent of £15 would be a very serious matter, would it not?—I think it would.

412. But remember, the rent of £15 might be a lower rent than a rent of £2, 10s., having regard to the difference in the holding. Is there anything else you would like to say? Do you do a good deal of fishing?—No, not at present; the fishing is far back in these years.

413. What are your means of livelihood?—Working sometimes, and fishing sometimes, and labouring about the railway.

414. Were you south working at the railway last year?—I was at the Black Isle Railway the summer before last.

415. And last year you were working on the estate?—Yes.

416. What was your wage?—It was contract work.

417. Did you do any fishing last year?—No, I was not at the fishing at all.

418. What was the contract?—Building a house for a crofter.

419. You can put up a black house, can you?—Yes.

420. Do you know about the cultivation of land, and the carrying on of stock?—I am not a practical farmer.

421. Mr Macleod.—About what rent would you be willing to pay if you got a croft?—£5 or £6.

422. Would you be prepared to take a croft of the size represented by such a rent if it were offered to you?—I would make an attempt to take it.

423. Do you think you could work it, if you got it?—Yes.

424. Mr Shaw Stewart.—What makes you think so, if you have not any practical knowledge of farming?—Practical enough in the sort of work that is in the country, such as the cas-chrom and the spade.

425. Do you think you could live on that without contract work?—I think it would be a help.

426. Would not the croft take all your time to cultivate?—No, I think I could finish it in a shorter time than my present croft, because it is a very convenient place to work at. Where I am we have sometimes to carry from one place to another on our backs, on account of the rocky ground.

427. Mr Macleod.—It would be easier for you to work a croft at £4 or £5 than your present 30s. croft?—That is my idea.

428. But you would still have to get help to stock it?—Yes.

429. Don't you think the stock you have got at present would increase on the new holding, and you would get a better price for what you had to sell?—I thoroughly believe that it is easier by degrees to stock a good croft than even to keep a stock on a bad croft.

430. You would, of course, be able to put up the buildings yourself?—Yes, the walls.

431. Mr Maccallum.—The difference between a rent of 30s. and £4 is not very much: you would make that up easily by working, and you would have the better croft?—Yes.

432. And your stock would increase?—Yes, on better land.

433. You would like better soil?—Yes.

434. Could you easily show us better soil in Raasay than the soil you have?—Oh yes, plenty of it.

435. Is the soil you have very poor?—Yes.

436. And I suppose it is worked out?—Yes, and getting worse.

JOHN GILLIES, Crofter, Torran, Raasay (60).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

437. The Chairman.—You come from Torran?—Yes.

438. What is your rent?—£3.

439. You used to pay a rent of £6?—Yes.

440. Are you anxious to leave your holding?—Yes, indeed I am.

441. Where do you wish to go?—To the south end of the island.

442. That is to say, to one of the places already mentioned,—Halig and Fearn?—Yes.

443. Is the land down there much better than the land you have?—Yes, indeed it is.

444. Could you show us ground that would be suitable for a croft in that quarter?—Yes, easily enough.

445. Could a number of crofters be accommodated with new crofts there?—Yes, there are these old townships, some of them are bigger than others, and could take more crofters.

445*a*. Are a number of the crofters in Raasay, besides yourself, anxious to get new holdings such as you wish?—Yes, the most of them, I believe.

446. Now, suppose you had a croft at the south end of the island, could you stock it?—No, I could only place upon the new croft the stock I have at present.

447. And wait till it multiplied?—Yes.

448. Can you tell us what rent you would be willing to give for such a holding as would keep you?—I cannot tell that: I could only say after seeing the croft cut out, and the marches defined, and seeing the land.

449. Suppose the land cut out or marked off, would you expect anything more to be done for you in removing from where you are to where you wish to be, or would you undertake to carry out the flitting yourself, and set up in the new holding?—No, I could not, without assistance.

450. What assistance would you require?—I think it would be a good deal.

451. Tell us a little more specifically what assistance you would require?—I would take £100, I think, of assistance.

452. And you would not move till you got it?—I don't know that: I am very anxious to leave my present place at any rate.

453. Have you any friends that could help you?—No.

454. Where would you expect the assistance to come from?—I have no idea.

455. You will show us the land you were thinking of when we pay a visit to the island?—Yes, with pleasure.

456. Mr Macleod.—If you got this £100 to remove how would you propose to pay it back, and when?—I cannot say; but if I got good stock on the land I would soon pay it.

457. But supposing some one gave you £100 to move to a good croft, how soon would you be prepared to pay it back?—That would depend upon the way the stock would be got, and how prices would be.

458. You would not be afraid that you would not be able ultimately to pay it all back?—I would be anxious enough until it was all repaid.

459. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Have you any practical knowledge of the management of stock?—Yes, I have.

460. The Chairman.—Are you thinking of a holding near a harbour, or a place where boats would have some shelter?—I would not consider it the worse of that.

461. Have you a harbour in view?—I would prefer a croft near the sea.

462. Mr Gordon.—Are you a fisherman, or partly so?—I would be trying to fish.

463. Suppose you got a nice croft with better land, where you could not follow the fishing, would you prefer that?—If I got a good croft away from the sea I would prefer that.

464. The Chairman.—Was your former answer given altogether apart from the question of a harbour?—I was thinking of the sea at the same time when I spoke of the poor croft.

465. Then your view is that, even if you got a good croft in the south of Raasay, you would require to have fishing besides?—If I had a good croft I could not give attention to the fishing.

466. Do you wish to say anything more yourself?—No, but the place I am in at present is very poor; should I begin to tell how poor it is, and how great are the difficulties connected with it, I would scarcely be believed.

467. Do you represent any other crofters in Raasay?—I appear for a neighbour of mine also.

468. Do you wish to tell us anything with regard to him, or with regard to the township of Torran?—No, I have nothing to say but to complain of the poverty of our holdings, and how much we are infested with game.

469. What game do you complain of?—Rabbits and pheasants, but not deer; the deer never trouble us.

ALEXANDER GILLIES, Crofter Kyle-Rona, Raasay (40).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

470. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes, I have a croft along with my father.

471. Your father's name is John Gillies?—Yes.

472. Do you and your father both desire to get out of the present holding if you can get a better?—Yes, we are very desirous of doing so.

473. Have you considered the kind of holding you would like, and be able to carry on?—A new croft with good land anywhere in the island.

474. Of what size?—A small farmer would require something like 15 acres of arable land to make his living out of it.

475. And what pasture?—Pasture according to that.

476. And stock?—I cannot say.

477. Suppose such a croft as that to come into the market in Raasay, would you and your father be disposed to offer for it?—I don't know; at the present time we would not be able.

478. Because you could not stock, and you could not build?—Yes, that is it.

479. Then you could not pay a fair rent for such a holding, I suppose, in the present circumstances?—Not in our present condition, unless the croft itself would yield it.

480. Do you and your father carry on any fishing?—I do, but my father's day for fishing is past.

481. Could you raise money by loan from friends to meet the expenditure on a new holding?—No, my friends are only just in the same position as most in the island; they would not be able to help me, and I have no prospect of help from any other quarter.

482. Are you quite satisfied, however, that there is land which would be much better suited for a croft in the south of Raasay than the land you have?—I know that there is land on the other side of Raasay, of the breadth of the sole of my shoe, which would be almost better than half an acre of the land I have now. It is not soil, but rocks we are occupying.

483. Mr Forsyth.—What stock have you now on the present croft?—I have two cows of a sort, and my father has other two small beasts,—that is four in all. We have four cows and one or two little beasts.

484. Supposing you got a new croft,—a good croft which suited you, what would you do with your present croft?—The landlord would have it to do his pleasure with it; he might give it to somebody else.

485. Would you wish to give it up then?—Yes.

486. Have you any sheep on this holding?—Yes, a few sheep.

487. The Chairman.—Are there many cottars in Raasay?—Yes, I may say that I am a cottar myself, for my name is not on the landlord's books.

488. Are the cottars a considerable burden to the crofters?—Not much; the crofters require to give them bits of ground.

489. Have you a bit of potato ground?—Yes, a third part of the croft.

490. How old is your father?—He is well past 70.

491. Do you wish to make any further statement either for yourself or for any one else in the north of Raasay?—No.

John Macleod.

JOHN MACLEOD, Braes of Raasay (55).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

492. The Chairman.—You come from the Braes?—Yes.

493. Is that in the south of the island?—Yes, just opposite Portree Bay.

494. Do you know the arable land of Raasay well?—Yes.

495. Is there any portion of that suitable for the formation of new crofts?—Yes, the townships already mentioned.

496. How many holdings would these townships allow of?—I cannot exactly say, but I know they were occupied by crofters: I have seen them myself occupied by crofters.

497. And would you like to get a holding in one of these townships?—I was in Kyle-Rona first, then for 20 years a cottar in Umachan. There is land contiguous to my present holding from which my present holding could be sufficiently enlarged.

498. The Crofters Commission may consider any claim of that sort?—Not but that I would like as well to migrate to another township if I could only manage the expense of it.

499. Where would you migrate to?—The township of Castle or of Screapadal. These are the best townships that have been cleared to my knowledge.

500. Would you be willing to migrate to a holding there without getting any assistance to stock or build?—When I came to my present holding it was empty, and I have now got live stock and buildings; and I believe if I got land in any of these townships I would do quite as well there.

501. But would you go there if you did not get assistance?—Yes, I would go; but I would like to have sheep on the new holding.

502. And where would you get them?—I think if I could put only a few sheep on the land, they themselves would not be long in multiplying.

503. Mr Maccallum.—How many holdings could be made out of Screapadal?—I think it would suit four well.

504. What stock would they have?—I cannot say about the stock, but I think it would support four crofters comfortably. I don't remember that particular township, I only remember the people there; but I could tell you about a township that I know better about, the township of Castle. In my earliest recollection there were 12 there, but at that time they were very poor.

505. And how many could be comfortably accommodated there now?—Four. I believe that the township of Castle would maintain in comfort an equal number with the township of Screapadal.

505*a*. The Chairman.—What would be the number of acres arable to each of the four?—I cannot say.

506. What number of acres arable would you wish for yourself?—I think that 15 acres, between arable and pasture, would suit me well. Portree, Sk John Macle

507. At what rent?—Any fair rent that competent judges would fix.

508. Mr Gordon.—Is this land which you referred to old arable land?—Yes.

509. Could it be reclaimed again with the plough without spade work?—It used to be ploughed before.

510. Is it rocky ground?—There is part of the land of Castle that I consider to be stony and hard, but not in Screapadal, which is fine green grassy land.

511. Wet or dry?—Dry. The arable land is not wet.

512. Does the land that you have in view as suitable for a holding require draining?—I believe the two townships I have mentioned don't require any drainage.

513. Mr Macleod.—Do you think if you were once in occupation of one of these old townships you could cultivate it properly?—A man that will take up a good big holding would require a good big family; the bigger the family the bigger the holding he could profitably utilise.

514. The Chairman.—Are you prepared to incur the risk of leaving your present home, and undertaking the management of a new holding at an increased rent?—I would rather have that and have sheep than be as I am to-day.

515. Are you very anxious about it?—Yes, I am very desirous of getting another place, and I would leave my present place at once. I have been there 13 years, and I would never have come if I had known of all the trouble I have had.

516. Mr Gordon.—You said you wanted 15 acres, but did you mean that to be all arable?—That is what I desire, 15 acres between arable and pasture.

517. But where do you keep the sheep—how much hill ground?—I am a man with a small family myself; but I think, besides the cattle I have, I would require to have at least 15 sheep. For the 15 sheep and the present stock I would require 15 acres altogether. I would rather have the sheep and be with one cow than have the cows and be without the sheep.

518. The Chairman.—Have you any family?—My wife and two daughters.

519. Mr. Maccallum.—What stock of cattle would you have on the 15 acres?—If I had the 15 acres where I am, it would be quite enough that I should keep three cows on it.

520. But if you got a new holding?—If the stock that I have at present were placed on a 15 acres holding I would not require another cow.

521. Do you mean 15 acres for the new croft, or simply in addition?—The new holding in the township of Clachan to which I have been referring.

522. The Chairman.—Would you prefer an addition to your present holding, or to go to a new holding altogether?—I would almost prefer any other land in any other township in Raasay to my land at present.

523. Would 15 acres be sufficient as the whole croft in the new place you speak of?—I think the hill grazing that belonged to these townships in the past would require to be added to the new township as well.

524. Mr Gordon.—And you would like really 15 acres arable, and hill ground, as a holding?—If I could not get an enlargement of my present holding to the extent of 15 acres I would rather go to another place.

525. But you would rather remain where you are than if you got it extended to 15 acres?—I would rather go to another township.

526. The Chairman.—When you spoke about 15 acres, were you not exclusively referring to your present holding?—It is the croft that I have at present that I had in view.

526*a*. But your present croft has 3½ acres arable and 9 pasture?—I was informed that it was only 7 acres.

527. I understand you think there is a piece of land that you think might be added to your present holding?—Yes.

528. How much is that?—I could make the addition unlimited. It is land that was occupied long ago.

DONALD MACRAE, Baile-'chuirn, Raasay.

529. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Baile-'chuirn, Raasay?—Yes.

530. Do you give in a statement on behalf of the tenants of Baile-'chuirn and Bailemeanach?—Yes. Murdo Mackenzie, crofter, Balmeanach, and I were duly elected by the people of our townships to appear before your honourable Commission. 'We respectfully state at 'the outset that the crofting townships in Raasay are, 'and unless relieved will remain, in a condition of chronic 'poverty: the reasons being (1) because the land 'occupied by the crofting tenants is the poorest land in 'the islands; (2) because the crofting townships are over-'crowded with crofters and with cottars; (3) because 'these townships have not the hill pasture necessary for 'a fair living; (4) because the best townships in the 'island have been cleared, and now form a huge sporting 'preserve; (5) because deer, rabbits, pheasants, and 'black game do incalculable damage to us. The town-'ships that were cleared of the people, and that are now 'under sport, are 13 in number. They are far the best 'land in the island, though now going back to a state 'of nature, having been 40 years waste. Over 90 families 'lived in them at one time. They would make 34 new 'holdings at the least, and keep that number of families 'very comfortable, at a just rent, and game would 'be much more plentiful than at present. The clearances 'were made by Mr George Rainy, the proprietor, between '1851 and 1853, when a large number were sent to 'Australia, who expected that those who remained 'in the townships would be much better off. When 'those were got away, the remaining tenants in the 13 'townships were violently and forcibly cleared out of 'the country, their houses being pulled down about their 'heads, their fires put out, and some of the people taken to 'the steamers half dead. Thereafter these townships were 'made into a sheep farm. Then Mr G. G. Mackay, the 'next proprietor, introduced deer about 20 years ago. 'Then the late Mr Wood, who succeeded Mr Mackay, 'introduced more deer and rabbits and pheasants. Rab-'bits are being imported every year since, though the 'island is swarming with them. If the people were put 'back to these 13 townships, and this is what the people 'want, it would relieve the conjestion of population in 'the existing crofting townships. Those migrating to 'the old depopulated townships would do well, and so 'would the existing townships when relieved of the over 'population. By such a scheme it would be found that 'there is plenty of land in Raasay for the people of 'Raasay.'

531. Do you wish to add anything to this statement?—No.

532. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Balmeanach, Raasay?—Yes.

533. Do you adopt the statement just submitted by Macrae as your own statement also?—Yes.

534. Do you wish to add anything?—Not at the present time.

535. Mr Macleod.—Would you be prepared to take a holding yourself in one or other of the townships mentioned?—Yes; about the time Mr Wood left us, but I am seriously impoverished since.

536. Do you want a new holding, or are you satisfied where you are?—If I could get the hill pasture where I am.

537. The Chairman.—Would you stay where you are if you got an addition to your holding, and some hill pasture?—Yes.

538. Rather than leave altogether?—If I could get a croft in Ayre I would shift.

539. Would you be able to stock it?—No, not at the present time, for I am seriously impoverished by what has happened during the last seven years. Here is a copy of a letter I addressed to Mrs Wood of Raasay:—

'6th February 1893.

'MADAM,

I beg respectfully to submit to you that, 'since the death of Mr Wood, my crops of every kind 'have been destroyed by pheasants and black game and 'deer. At rent time in each of those years I was 'bringing my case to the notice of the factor. He 'always promised to look into it, but did nothing 'hitherto. The crop of 1891 was so much injured that 'I was obliged to buy feeding-stuffs for my beasts to the 'value of £8, besides being short of two bolls of oat-'meal. The last crop of 1892 practically altogether 'destroyed. I have not a handful of oats left for 'sowings, and already I have been obliged to buy to 'the value of £4, not to speak of what I must yet buy 'for my beasts before the end of May. For want of 'fodder I was compelled to have my beasts out on the 'hill to keep them alive instead of having them housed 'as they ought to be during winter. Let it not be that 'my stock is excessive; for I have actually less stock 'now than when the Crofters Commission fixed it. I 'have been paying the rent regularly up to last term, 'that is as long as I could.

'When I had occasion to complain at the second 'last rent time, to our late proprietor, Mr Wood, he 'allowed me £8 compensation when I had only one-'third of the land under tillage that I had last year. 'Then the last rent time before his death that I submitted 'my case, he allowed me £5 compensation. As already 'stated, I suffered serious loss all those years since Mr 'Wood's death, and no attention has been paid to my 'complaints beyond promises. But the last two years 'have been simply ruinous. Mr Ross did, indeed, offer 'me, on the last occasion, £3, 10s. compensation, but I 'could not accept of that as part payment of compen-'sation. I am now obliged to submit these facts for 'your consideration, and I humbly trust you will order 'such inquiry into the above statements without delay 'as will be satisfactory to you, and that you will see to 'it that such compensation is allowed me as will be 'fairly proportionable to the loss that I have sustained.

I am,
Madam,
Your Obedient Servant,
M. MACKENZIE.

540. Mr Macleod.—Have you any sheep?—I had; but at the time of the Crofters Commission they told me to put them away.

541. If you got the hill pasture that is contiguous to your holding, you would be better off than you are?—Yes.

542. What is it presently being used for?—Deers and rabbits, and sporting.

543. Mr Gordon.—How many cows have you just now?—I have five cows, and a heifer, and a two-year old and four stirks,—eleven altogether.

544. No sheep at all?—One black-faced sheep.

545. Have you a horse?—No, there is not a horse in the island, except what Mrs Wood has.

546. How many quarters of oats have you grown?—I got three quarters sown with the caschrom, but it is very hard work, and if I had a horse I would make my living with it. I would like 15 acres better, as then I could give a rotation of crops.

547. But you must give these cattle to the land?—They are on the hill always. I dare not keep sheep on the hill.

548. Did you sow any turnips last year?—Yes, but they were eaten up by rabbits and deer.

549. Did you sow any grass?—Not the last two years. It did not grow with the soil.

550. You don't lay down grass, as a rule?—When I get it in caschrom I must lay it down.

[Mr Stewart, Estate Overseer, made an explanation as to the privilege of hill grazing attached to the crofts of this and the previous witness. The two delegates were allowed to put their cows on the hill of Mrs Wood's farm for six months in the year, but were not actually limited to the six months if they kept within ordinary bounds.]

551. Mr Gordon.—Is your whole croft under these four bolls of oats?—Mackenzie. No, there is some under fogg and under heather.

552. That is the whole that you cultivate?—Yes.

553. Have you any land under turnips this year?—No, it is useless to sow them for turnips.

554. How many acres do you sow?—I am not very sure.

555. If you had a little extension of your croft, you would keep a horse?—Yes, if I had the hill pasture.

556. You could hardly keep the horse if you had the hill pasture?—The horse would work for himself and for myself.

557. Mr Munro.—How many quarters would you reap?—I used to feed my cattle well, and make some meal in Portree, for our own grinding mill is turned into a sawmill.

558. Give us an idea of the quantity you would produce out of three-quarters?—It would take five or six bolls of meal, besides feeding my beasts, and giving me my seed back again.

559. And how much corn would you reap?—Well, one year when the game was clear of me, I fed my cattle, and had £12 worth of corn.

560. What was the weight per bushel?—I don't know. I have had corn and straw besides keeping my cattle.

561. Mr Maccallum.—When you sent it to the mill, how much meal did you get per boll of oats?—I am not very sure.

562. Would you get a boll of meal for a boll of oats?—And more.

563. What weight would those be—40 lbs.?—Yes.

564. If you sent two bags of corn to the mill, what would you get back in meal?—I have to carry it on my back to the shore, and I cannot carry it.

Norman Gillies.

NORMAN GILLIES, Oskaig, Raasay.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

565. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Oskaig, Raasay?—Yes.

566. Have you any statement to make?—Yes, I have a statement prepared by the township of Oskaig. John Maclean and I were asked by the crofters of our township to give evidence before your Commission.

'1. Disposition of the Land in the Island of Raasay. 'On the potato famine the proprietor, Mr George Rainy, 'started public works, and for some time gave the people 'work and a fair wage. When these works ceased, a 'number of the crofter tenants emigrated to Australia, 'at the expense of the proprietor. Before this the 'crofting townships were overcrowded, and a few left 'each township. Those who remained expected that 'the condition would thus be improved as all the towns 'were overcrowded before. But those who remained 'were afterwards evicted, every one of them by the 'proprietor about 1853, and the whole of the following 'townships made into one sheep farm:—

Norman Gillies.

'It is right to add that the two glens were cleared 'before Mr Rainy's time, and that if young Mr Rainy 'had lived he would have undone much of the evil 'caused by his father on the evil advice of the local 'factor whom he afterwards found out in his true 'character and dismissed.

'When the above townships were inhabited, black 'cock, grouse, and partridges were much more plentiful 'than now, though now so much preserved. We believe 'the same kind of game would increase again if the 'people got the land back.

'I, John M'Lean, attended a volunteer soiree in the 'time of the last Mr Rainy. Lieutenant Frederick 'Lillingstone of Balmacara was chairman, and Alex-'ander Macdonald, Esq., Portree was croupier. Mr 'Rainy at that time had enrolled 50 rifle volunteers in 'Raasay. He said that evening, that if he was spared 'another year he would get the sheep farmer to renounce 'his lease, and that he would put some of the people 'back to the townships that his father had cleared. Un-'fortunately he died before the end of the year, and a 'sporting proprietor bought the estate, and the whole of 'those 14 townships are now one sporting preserve. 'There is not one volunteer in Raasay to-day.'

567. Do you wish to say anything more?—The witnesses who have already spoken have said enough about Raasay.

[ADJOURNED.]

SECOND SITTING.

PORTREE, SKYE, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19, 1893.

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
MICHAEL HUGH SHAW STEWART, Esq., M.P.
ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
JOHN MACLEOD, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

Neil Macl

NEIL MACLEOD, Cottar, Eyre, Snizort (47)—examined.

568. The Chairman.—You are a cottar in Eyre?—Yes.

569. Do you pay rent?—Not in the meantime.

570. Have you never paid a rent?—Yes.

571. When was that?—Till last year.

572. What rent did you pay?—I was paying before the time of the Crofters Commission £14, 10s.

573. Did the Commission reduce that rent?—Yes, to £9.

574. And you had an arrear of £35, 5s., of which you were ordered to pay £22, and £13, 5s. was cancelled. Are you now a cottar?—A cottar.

575. How is that?—By the work of the Commission; they left part of those old arrears on me, and I was evicted for that sum.

576. You had to leave your holding?—Yes.

577. And are you living on another man's croft?—No, I am living below high-water mark just now.

578. You did not pay the £22 of arrears ordered to be paid by the Commission?—No.

579. And how long have you been living at your present place?—For the last six or eight months.

580. Did you get a place given to you, or did you settle there yourself?—No, I could not get an inch.

581. So you went below high-water mark?—Exactly.

582. Do you wish to make a statement?—Yes.

583. You appear for all the cottars?—Yes.

584. Did you write out the statement?—No, I did not write it myself.

585. Can you read it?—Not very well.

586. I suppose you can read English?—Sometimes.

587. Have you read that before?—No but I was at the writing of it along with others.

588. You know what is in it?—Perfectly.

589. Have you not gone over the statement after it was written out?—No, but it was read to me. The writer is here.*

590–591. Do you wish to make any statement to us?—Yes; I am desirous of obtaining a holding.

592. Can you show us land in the locality which would be suitable for a holding?—Yes.

593. Is it an old township?—It was an old township.

594. What is its name?—Kingsburgh.

595. Was there more than one township there?—Yes.

596. How many?—Five or six.

597. Different townships?—Yes.

598. Had they different names?—Yes.

599. Can you give us the names?—Vatragill, Romesdal, Sandwick, Corrobheinn, and Moileam; and that is, besides all the arable land about the house, five or six big parks, containing from 25 to 30 acres.

600. Were these also old townships?—I suppose they were.

601. Well, but do you know?—They were attached to the big house, three of them.

602. And the others—had they been old townships?—Likely they were.

603. You don't know?—I don't know.

604. Can we see traces of occupation there?—Yes; still there.

605. But you don't see the traces of occupation on the arable land round the house?—Oh, yes.

606. In what form?—In rigs, and the stones of the old buildings were removed and used for dykes for the parks.

607. Now, what size of holding would you desire to have?—A croft that would keep a man comfortably.

608. What size, in your judgment, would that be?—About 12 acres of arable land.

609. And how much pasture?—What would keep about 80 or 90 sheep.

610. And what else?—Six or seven cows and a horse.

611. Is it your view that on a croft of that size you could make it self-supporting?—Oh, I think so.

612. Without wages from labouring and without fishing?—With occasional labour I could make a living out of that.

613. Could you stock such a holding as that?—Not in the meantime, without assistance.

614. And I suppose I may take it that you could not put up the dwelling-house or steading without assistance?—No, not in the meantime.

615. What amount of assistance would you think necessary for your contemplated holding?—I would take as little as possible, unless I got it at reasonable interest.

616. You require a certain amount, you know?—I would take in hand to stock that in the meantime, because prices are low—about £170 or £180.

617. And within what period would you consider yourself probably able to repay that loan?—From twenty to thirty clear years.

618. You could clear yourself in twenty or thirty years?—Yes.

619. And would you pay interest?—I will.

620. How did you happen to fall so far behind with your rent as to get into this trouble?—By being rack-rented for twenty-one years, and then left with part of the old arrears on me, and law expenses and all.

* The statement is given under the evidence of the succeeding witness, Norman Maclachlan. See p. 21, Question No. 736.

621. Law expenses; were these for proceedings for rent?—For rent, and putting me out of my holding and everything—upwards of £20 last year.

622. Did you not make an effort to pay the sum left upon you by the Crofters Commission?—I offered to do so, but it was refused.

623. What did you offer to do?—I offered to pay last Whitsunday when I was summoned, and decree and poinding and everything. I offered to pay £10 of the old arrears then, and £5 in December.

624. And were you able to pay that?—Well, I would get it by some way or other.

625. When you offered to pay the £10, had you the cash to offer?—Yes.

626. And that was refused?—It was refused, and the fair rent would not be taken from me.

627. I am coming to that in a moment. And the £5 that you were to pay at Christmas you thought you could raise by a loan?—At September.

628. But that offer was refused?—It was refused.

629. Where had you got the £10 that you offered in cash?—I had them by some of the beasts I sold before that.

630. In order to meet the debts?—To meet the debts, and I would make something by fishing too.

631. Then you offered payment of the fair rent?—I offered payment of the fair rent at every collection time, and it was refused.

632. That is to say, you offered payment of £9?—£9.

633. Every time it came due?—Yes.

634. And it was always refused?—It was refused. I would come and offer what I had, and they would not take it unless I would settle with the law agent of Lord Macdonald first for the old arrears.

635. Have you a family?—One of a family.

636. Is your wife living?—Yes.

637. How do you subsist at present?—By fishing.

638. Have you a boat?—Yes; a small boat.

639. Fourteen feet keel?—14½ feet keel.

640. Mr Sutherland.—You were a crofter before you became a cottar?—Yes.

641. And it is only recently that you became a cottar?—Yes.

642. Have you any reason to suppose that it was by process of law you became a cottar?—I did not get justice by having these old arrears left upon me, because I had been paying the higher rent for twenty-one years, and I paid more than the fixed rent is now—about £140 more than the valuation of the Commission. I think there should not have been any arrears at all left on me. I could not pay it at long last, and I was spoilt almost before the Commission came. The croft is dear enough as it is.

643. But my question was directed rather to see how the cottars have become cottars. Some of them have become cottars through the landlord refusing to give them land to settle upon, and some, as you have become, by process of law for recovering rent?—Ay, that is the way I came to be a cottar.

644. Now, do those views that you stated to us to-day represent the views of the cottars round about—do you speak for a class?—Yes.

645. And everything you have said with regard to being able to take suitable land would refer to them as well as to you? Would every man be as able to take land under favourable circumstances as you consider you are?—Oh yes, I think so.

646. And in making these statements regarding the land that is available for occupation, you did not take into account at all, as I understand, land that can be reclaimed, but that never was reclaimed before?—I believe there is such.

647. And, as a matter of fact, the land that the crofters have got is not by any means the best land, is it?—It is the very worst.

648. So that any land that you could take in Skye would not be worse land than what they have?—I don't know if it is.

649. The crofters are in occupation at present of the worst land?—They are in occupation of the worst land that I know.

Portree, Skye. — Neil Macleod.

650. So that if the land that the crofters have now got is capable of being tilled at all, the greater part of the remainder is also capable of being tilled?—I don't know, but I know the crofters have the worst of the land.

651. They could not have worse land than they have now?—I don't know of it, if it is to be had.

652. So that, you think, ought to be taken into account in selecting the land?—I think the land will speak for itself when you see it.

653. For the 12 acres of arable land and the 80 or 90 acres you said was the proper size of holding, you always considered that the rent would be fixed by a separate tribunal, not by the landlord or by the tenant?—We hope so. We have got plenty of that already.

654. In taking into account this £200 that you said would be necessary to build a house, have you any idea as to how it could be got?—No, unless we get it from the Government.

655. Well, supposing it to be advanced by the Government, do you think that the people would be perfectly willing to enter into any reasonable condition for repayment of that money?—I am sure they will.

656. Do you know what interest the Government generally charges for money they advance?—I am not sure; but what I have been told is from 3 to 3½ per cent.

657. And do you consider these terms more favourable than are generally given in the localities—say, by local banks?—By far.

658. So you think it would be far easier to get money through the Government than money from a local bank?—Yes; I could not get it from the local bank under 5 per cent.

659. Are you aware of the arrangements made with County Councils for advancing money under the Small Holdings Act?—No.

660. But you think that a body like the County Council would be a good body to advance money to the crofters?—I don't know. I prefer it from the Government.

661. You would not deal with the Government direct, would you?—I cannot say.

662. Would you see any difficulty in repaying a sum of £170 to £200 in a term of thirty years?—Not the slightest.

663. And paying 3¼ or 3½ interest?—Yes, and fair rents too.

664. I always presume there would be a fair rent in the arrangement, that the rent would be revised periodically, and that, as prices went up or down, you would pay rent accordingly?—I want to be rented, not for ever, but that the rent would come to an end some time.

665. The same way as you would repay a loan to the Government?—When I pay it.

666. The Chairman.—You want the rent to run out, and then you will stand rent free?—Through time.

667. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Why do you think that you would be able to repay this money so easily if you had a new holding?—From twenty-one to thirty years.

668. How do you think you would be able to raise the money in that period?—By good management of the farm.

669. Entirely, and not from any outside labour?—No; by good management of the farm.

670. Have you taken into account the rates that you would have to pay?—Fine that.

671. And the fencing?—Everything.

672. Mr Gordon.—Do you say that the whole of the cottars in your part of the country are men who have formerly been in crofts?—Some of them are young.

673. Is it not the case that they are partly squatters and partly members of the same family as held the croft?—Oh, they are cottars.

674. No doubt; but is it the case that the whole of the cottars in your district are men who have been turned out of their crofts?—Well, no; some of them never had a croft, but they all like to get holdings and crofts.

675. The Chairman.—You say that too heavy arrears were left upon you by the Crofters Commission. Did you take an appeal against the order made?—No.

Portree, Sk — Neil Macle

676. Why?—There was no appeal at that time.

677. Now, are you aware that in Skye, as well as other parts of the West Coast, there are frequent instances of sub-division of holdings by crofters?—No, I was not aware of that.

678. Are you aware of this, that crofters frequently give a bit of their crofts to a son or other relative?—No, I am not aware of that.

679. You are well acquainted with the Eyre district?—Yes.

680. Are there many cottars there?—Six in the township, and only eight crofters.

681. Is that including yourself?—Yes, just now.

682. That is to say, there are five and yourself. How did these five come to be cottars, do you know?—Some of them never had land—they left their father's house, and put up a house on their father's ground.

683. Without the consent of the landlord?—That was going on in former years.

684. And it went on in your time?—In my time too.

685. These were not persons who had been evicted?—No.

686. They wanted to remain in the place, and set up this little establishment of their own?—Yes, and they could not get land.

687. Mr Sutherland.—Why? Was there no land in the country to give them?—But they would not get it. They would not get a place for building a house.

688. The Chairman—Is it the case, as Mr Mackintosh, the factor, states, that decree has been obtained against you in the Sheriff Court of Portree for the arrears of fair rent?—He refused it.

689. But is it a fact?—It was by the way he was refusing it. He would not take it. It is quite right; but he refused the money till I would settle the arrears with Mr Macdonald first. I can produce plenty other crofters who were refused the same way as myself.

690. You admit you were in arrear with your fair rent?—I admit I was in arrear with my fair rent.

691. How was it you fell into arrear with your fair rent?—Because he would not take it.

692. Did you ever tender payment of the full sum of fair rent?—I offered to pay that.

693. What did you offer to pay?—£9.

694. Always?—Two times, and it was refused.

695. Mr Sutherland.—Would you have to pay £22 and the new rent £9, i.e., £31 for the clear rent?—I suppose so.

696. The Chairman.—Were you bankrupt before you were removed from your croft?—No, until the time of the Commission. He made me bankrupt.

697. The proceedings taken by the landlord resulted in your bankruptcy?—Exactly.

698. Why did you not pay an instalment of the arrears?—I did not pay at all.

699. But you were ordered to pay £22 by four instalments of £5, 10s. each; did you not do that?—No, I did not.

700. Why did you not pay even a single instalment of the arrears?—I was unable to do it.

701. Did you try to raise the money?—No, I thought it was too severe to pay it, because I had already paid too much to the landlord.

702. Did you ever see a cottar on Kingsburgh Farm?—They are there still.

703. On the places you mentioned?—Yes.

704. I thought you said they were vacant?—There are some cottars there, and there were crofters there for the last eighty years.

705. And are there cottars there?—There are cottars and sub-tenants there still.

706. How many?—Seven sub-tenants and one cottar.

707. Who improved the land near the farm-house?—Well, I don't know. I suppose it was the cottars.

708. Do you know as a matter of fact?—It is eighty years since it was cleared.

709. You mentioned a sum of £170 to £180. Does that include the expenditure required for building?—The whole amount for stock and building.

710. And, indeed, the whole expenditure you need to make?—The whole of it.

711. Suppose you got a loan such as has been indicated, would you undertake to repay the interest at 3 or 3½ per cent. while the loan was due, and pay up the loan itself?—Yes.

711*a*. Both the interest and the capital?—Both interest and capital.

712. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You have told us you fell into arrears on the small croft with a fair rent. Have you any reason to think that you would not fall into arrears on a larger croft paying a larger rent?—Yes; because the croft I had was good for nothing.

712*a*. But the fair rent was fixed?—It had been turned for the last 200 years; and suppose it were sown this year, I would not get as much seed back as was sown.

713. But that was taken into account when the fair rent was fixed?—I don't suppose so.

714. But why do you suppose that the rent would be any easier in the new croft?—The gentlemen who valued these crofts did not understand the soil.

715. But how do you know that the next valuation will be any better?—Because it is a better soil.

716. But you would have a larger rent to pay, and heavier burdens?—Another good reason,—if I made improvements I might be removed next year, and be fined for my labour.

717. Mr Macleod.—Do I understand that if you had not those old arrears you would have been able to pay the fair rent, and continue in the holding?—Well, indeed, it was quite hard lines, because the croft was bad; but I would have paid it.

718. You would have managed if it had not been for the arrears?—Yes.

719. The Chairman.—This is a matter of some importance. The order left upon you was to pay £5, 10s. at Martinmas 1887, the same amount at Whitsunday 1888, the same amount at Martinmas 1888, and the same amount at Whitsunday1889?—All these arrears were put in the rental book as one sum.

720. That might be, but you could only be called upon to pay £5, 10s. at a time. Did you ever tender payment of that £5, 10s.?—I never paid it.

721. Mr Sutherland.—Were you asked to pay it?—It would be asked of me, 'Are you going to pay it?' and I would say, 'I am not able just now.'

722. Mr Macleod.—You fell into arrears when the rent of your croft was £14, 10s., did you not?—I did.

723. To the amount of £35, 5s.?—Something about that.

724. That was reduced by the Crofters Commission to £22?—Yes.

725. Divided over a period of two years,—that is £11 a year of arrears that you had to pay, together with a fair rent of £9?—Yes.

726. That is £20 a year altogether?—I suppose it would be something like that.

727. And the old rent of £14, 10s. you were not able to pay?—I paid it except two years; for twenty-one years I paid £14, 10s.

728. Mr Maccallum.—The result of the visit of the Commission came to this, did it not, that you were really called upon to pay an increased rent for two years—that is, you had to pay £20 a year for your croft?—Something about that.

729. The Chairman.—Oh, no. He had to pay a fair rent of £9 and an old debt of £11 for two years.

730. Mr Munro.—Did you tender any sum to the factor?—I did.

731. How much,—the fair rent, £9?—Yes.

732. And it was refused because you had not paid the arrears fixed by the Commission?—Yes.

Norman Maclachlan, Cottar, Kingsburgh (32)—examined.

733. The Chairman.—You are a cottar at Kingsburgh?—Yes.

734. Do you pay any rent?—No.

735. This written statement is in your handwriting?—Yes.

736. And it was prepared by you along with some of the other cottars in the locality?—Yes, it is from cottars in Kingsburgh, Eyre, Kensaleyre, Rhenetra, and Keistle in the parish of Snizort, on Lord Macdonald's estate, and is as follows:—'The following delegates 'were duly appointed by the people above stated to 'appear before your Commission, viz., William Beaton, 'Kensaleyre; Neil Macleod, Eyre; Norman Mac-'lachlan, Kingsburgh; John Mackinnon, Rhenetra. 'Eyre, Kensaleyre, Rhenetra, and Keistle are all croft-'ing townships, with landless cottars in each of them. 'There are 6 cottars in Eyre, 4 in Kensaleyre, 3 in 'Rhenetra, and 3 in Keistle. Besides these there are 7 'sub-tenants and 1 cottar on the sheep-farm of Kings-'burgh. All the above cottars are desirous of securing 'crofters' holdings in their native islands, and offer to 'show that plenty of suitable land is available even in 'their neighbourhood to meet their requirements. 'Kingsburgh sheep farm carries a sheep stock of at 'least 2600, besides 8 Ayrshire cows and 20 Highland 'cattle, and 6 horses. It contains old arable land 'where crofting townships once existed; in the follow-'ing parts:—

'(1.) Vatrigill, where the people were evicted about '80 years ago, and where 5 could be comfortable.

'(2.) Romisdale, where, within the memory of Angus 'Buchanan, there were 9 families, and where 3 families 'would live comfortably.

'(3.) Sandwick, where there were 15 families who 'were evicted by Lord Macdonald 80 years ago, and 'where 8 could live comfortably.

'(4.) Corrobheinn, where there were 3 tenants before, 'and where 2 could be comfortable.

'(5.) Moileam, where there were 10 families before, 'who were evicted, and where 5 would do well now.

'(6.) Besides the amount of old arable land in the 'above-mentioned townships, there are several parks on 'the farm, after leaving 50 acres of arable land to the 'farm-house, which, part of them, have lain waste for 'several years.'

737. You say 5 families could be accommodated at Vatrigill. What size of holding do you give to each?—I would say between 12 and 14 acres of arable.

738. And do you give grazing too?—For 70 to 90 sheep.

739. And a horse?—And a horse; and from 5 to 7 milch cows.

740. Do you intend a holding of that kind to be self-supporting?—Yes.

741. Without fishing and without labour?—Yes.

742. What labour in your opinion would be wanted to work that holding,—how many persons, male grown-up persons or strong youths, would be required?—I would say two able men and a boy would work it, so far as I can see.

743. Do you think you could work that holding without purchasing corn—seed-corn?—Yes, if I got it in some places that I know myself in the island of Skye.

744. Where?—Even on the Kingsburgh Farm.

745. Could you grow corn sufficient without purchase on a holding of that size?—Yes, in some parts of the arable land of Kingsburgh.

746. The arable land is so good?—Yes.

747. Is that arable land in these townships?—Yes.

748. There are great differences between the arable land in these townships, I suppose,—I mean in the quality of the arable?—Yes, in some parts.

749. Suppose you had a holding of the kind you describe, could you stock that holding?—Not I, for one, I being a poor cottar.

750. I suppose we may take it that none of the Portree, Skye. Norman Maclachlan.

cottars could stock their holdings without assistance?—No.

751. Some such assistance as the previous witness Macleod described?—They would require considerable assistance.

752. Have you a family?—Yes.

753. Have you sons grown up?—No, a young family.

754. How could you work this holding that requires two grown men and a boy, suppose you had it?—My family would be getting up, and I could be getting the help of a boy till then.

755. The crofters, I suppose, near you are much better off than the cottars?—They are bound to be.

756. And it would be a great advantage for the cottars if they could be placed in the position of crofters?—It would be to the advantage of the poor cottar to have even the smallest bit of land to better his wretched position.

757. And would not it benefit the crofters also by relieving them of the cottars?—Yes.

758. So that it would be a double advantage: the cottar would be made into a crofter, and the crofter would be relieved of these cottars?—Yes.

759. Is that your view?—Yes, that is my view.

760. Do you know any crofter's holding in your district which you consider to be self-supporting?—Yes.

761. More than one?—Yes.

762. These holdings are carried on to a profit; the crofter has always something to the good at the end of the year?—It is to the land that is at present under sheep and other vermin.

763. Yes, but I ask if you know of crofters' holdings in your district that are self-supporting?—Not near my district; they have enough to do to make the two ends meet.

764. Is this the case, that the crofters' holdings in your district, as at present situated, are not self-supporting—that they have enough to do, as you call it, to make a living?—I am only a cottar myself, the crofters will answer that for themselves.

765. I think you have half answered it already. You have some doubt on the subject, I think?—Well, they have enough to do this present year, owing to low prices and what not.

766. And in previous years also, I daresay?—Yes.

767. Mr Sutherland.—Do you see any very great difficulty in the repayment of money that might be advanced in order to build a house and steading and to reclaim the land?—I know, as far as I can see, that they would be able to pay it back if they got ample time given to do it, and to get the money at reasonable rates.

768. And settled on the land best fitted for settlement?—Settled comfortably on the land.

769. And under the best possible circumstances?—Yes.

770. Are you aware that when the people were turned out of these places that have been referred to, they got no assistance whatever to build houses?—I believe they got no security from the landlord.

771. They were simply sent there to live the best way they could, and they ultimately became rent paying?—Yes.

772. So that you think, under reasonable and proper circumstances, they would do better than they have done now?—Yes, I believe they would do better.

773. Something has been said about rates, but would it not be a considerable relief to the local rates if all the people were put into comfortable circumstances,—there would be no paupers to support?—I should think so.

774. That is also an element to be kept in view?—Yes.

775. Well, then, as to occupying the land to profit: would not the fact that a family would live in comfortable circumstances be an occupation of the land to the profit of the country?—I should think so.

776. I believe you gave to the Chairman the number of families of cottars that were in the same circumstances as yourself?—Well, I will say that I am worse situated than any of them.

Portree, Sk. Norman Maclachla

777. You consider yourself then an unfavourable sample of the cottars at Kingsburgh?—Yes, I do.

778. You are not living below high-water mark?—I am above high-water mark.

779. Mr Munro.—Supposing you got a loan of £180, could you pay that loan off in thirty annual instalments of £6, besides paying a fair rent and interest?—Well, I know I would have enough to do.

780. You have told us you could grow corn upon that croft. What quality of corn would you grow?—The quality that they generally sow in the country.

781. How many quarters would you have per acre?—Being a cottar, I could not say by the acre.

782. On half an acre then,—would it be over 2 quarters?—Yes.

783. The Chairman.—Supposing you had to pay an instalment of £6, and interest amounting to £5, making £11, and a fair rent of £10, which brings the total up to £21, could you manage to pay that?—If I got the land in proportion to that.

784. But you have given us the land, you know—10 to 14 arable. Suppose you had to pay even £15 to £18 per annum, do you think you would be able to work your croft and pay that till the whole debt of £180 was discharged in 30 years?—No, it is too high.

785. Mr Sutherland.—Are you aware of what they are doing in Manitoba—of the offers made to intending settlers, giving them 5 years in which no repayment is asked,—don't you think that is a principle that could be applied in this country?—I think it should be.

786. Mr Munro.—Could you not start a croft with a much lower advance than £180, say if you got £50, could you enter into possession?—Yes, If I could get a bit of land, small as it is, I would do my best to stock it.

787–88. Mr Maccallum.—Don't the families of the cottars suffer from a scarcity of milk? Is there a scarcity of milk in your district?—Yes.

789. How do you get milk for your young children?—I don't get any milk a all, though I am living in the midst of the finest parts in the Highlands.

790. And you think they must suffer a great deal through want of milk?—They are bound to suffer.

791. And is not that one of the great advantages that the crofters have, that they have milk?—Yes, it is. I would like to say that by some means I have got a stirk to myself, but I was refused the grazing of it last year, though it would be the greatest of support to myself and my young family.

792. To whom did you apply for the grazing?—The factor on the Kingsburgh Farm came and told me that I would have to take it from him on the term day.

793. Mr Gordon.—You have told us that you would like to get 100 sheep. Do you mean that you want a piece of exclusive pasture for the croft, or would you propose that these 100 sheep should be grazed in conjunction with other sheep?—I should say a joint stock would be better.

794. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You have really not much practical knowledge of farming?—I would undertake to work a good croft if I got it.

795. But you still think you could enter on a croft of this size with £50 to stock with, as Mr Munro suggested?—It would be so much of a help.

796. But would it be sufficient to commence a building and fencing?—No, not to build a house and steading, and to get stock.

797. The Chairman.—Are you a tradesman?—I am a country joiner.

798. Were you born in Kingsburgh, or are you a native of the country?—I have been in Kingsburgh for 23 years.

799. Do you know that Mr Macleod spent a great deal of money in improving the Kingsburgh Farm?—I understand he did, to benefit himself.

800. In trenching and in building dykes?—Well, I was not in Kingsburgh in Mr Macleod's time.

801. Did you ever see an eviction in Kingsburgh?—Not in Kingsburgh.

802. Mr Macleod.—You are a country joiner you state?—Yes.

803. So that if you got a new holding you would be able to help towards your buildings, with your trade?—I would prefer the holding to my trade, because it is a poor place.

804. But your trade would be a help, if you got a holding as well?—I would be able to do any work in the way of my trade.

805. You mean in making your buildings?—Yes.

806. You would be able to do the joiner work?—Yes, I would be able to do most of the work myself.

807. You have not much acquaintance, have you, with the handling of money? You don't know much about interest and rent and other things? You are a cottar, are you not?—I am a poor cottar.

808. And you don't know but if you got this holding it might be easier for you to pay these instalments than you think now?—Certainly it would be easier for me, if I could get a fair rent.

809. If your croft went on well, would you give up the joiner work, and stick to the holding?—Yes; entirely.

WILLIAM BEATON, Cottar, Kensaleyre, Snizort (48). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

810. The Chairman.—You are a cottar?—Yes.

811. Having formerly been a crofter?—Yes.

812. And what rent did you pay as a crofter?—£6.

813. When did you cease to be a crofter?—A bad factor evicted me although my rent was paid.

814. When did that occur?—About 12 years ago.

815. Where were you evicted from?—Keistle.

816. And how did you come to your present position?—I was flung down on a heathery hillock, and left to sink or swim.

817. And you built a house yourself?—Yes.

818. What is the size of your present holding?—Between heather and all about an acre.

819. At the time you were put out of your croft 12 years ago, were you in arrear of rent?—Not a penny.

820. What was the reason assigned for the proceeding?—The factor was clearing townships in another part of the country, and he took some of these evicted people and planted them in this township, and to accommodate some he evicted me.

821. Who got your holding?—A man of the name of Murchison, who was evicted from Glendale.

822. And is he there still?—Yes.

823. You are anxious to get a crofter's holding now?—Yes; I am very needy of having a croft now.

824. And you could show us the land that would be suitable?—Yes; plenty of it.

825. You heard the previous witnesses mention a number of townships in that locality having ground suitable for crofts, do you agree with their evidence?—Yes. I know of these townships that were mentioned.

826. Are all the townships that were mentioned within the limits of Kingsburgh Farm?—Yes, all of them, and more that were not mentioned, from which the people were cleared.

827. Just tell us any others that have not been mentioned?—Little Kingsburgh.

828. That is Kingsburgh Beg?—Yes.

829. Do you know a place called Lenncladich or Pennybeg?—Yes.

830. Is that one of them?—Yes.

831. And Glenhalton?—That is not in Kingsburgh.

832. What size of holding are you desirous of obtaining, if it can be got?—One who has nothing would like to have something; any croft.

833. You think, in short, that anything in the shape of a croft would be better than your present condition of cottar?—Yes.

834. Would you be willing to take a croft of the same size as the one you lost, at a similar rent?—Yes, if it was good land.

835. Had you some stock when you were put out of that holding 12 years ago?—Yes, a little.

836. What became of it?—I needed to have it to take myself and my family through. Portree, Skye. William Beaton.

837. Mr Maccallum. Have you got a family?—Yes.

838. Are they grown up?—From 25 to 12 years of age.

839. How many sons?—Five sons.

840. All at home?—No, that won't do for them.

841. And if you got a good holding, would these be able to help you at the working of it?—I am not very sure now that they have grown up, they have to look after themselves.

842. But do you think that some of them would remain with you to help with the croft?—They would do work for me.

843. Are you a tradesman?—A labourer.

844. From whom do you get labour?—Wherever anybody will employ me.

845. Where do you mostly get employment?—Through my own part of the parish.

846. Are you a fisherman?—No.

847. How many men are in the same condition as yourself in respect of land?—Four of us: we are the descendants of crofters.

848. At the time you spoke of, twelve years ago, was any other crofter thrown out in the same way as yourself?—No.

849. You are the only case?—I am the only case. I said to the factor that I would not go as my rent was paid, and he told me that if I did not go I would not get a foothold on the Isle of Skye, if I did not obey him.

850. Were proceedings taken against you?—Yes.

851. Was the stock your own when you left the croft?—Some of the stock belonged to myself.

852. What part of it?—The half of it.

853. Did your neighbours petition to have you removed?—No; they were very sorry to have me cleared out.

854. Were you in any trouble about anything, with the estate or with your neighbours, at the time you were removed?—I was not in any trouble personally, and my rent was all paid. My father was there sixty years before me.

855. Mr Macleod.—Why were you removed? Why should the other man have been preferred to you?—The factor was clearing out the other man from Glendale in order to make a sheep farm of the place he occupied.

856. The Chairman.—Can you say, of your own knowledge, that the removal from Glendale was made to make room for a sheep farm for the factor?—That is what the man said to me, and what I heard; and sheep were put into his place, and are still there.

857. Did the factor ever have that portion of Glendale for a sheep farm?—Yes, the factor had it for a year.

NEIL SHAW, Crofter, Eyre, Snizort (71). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter). Neil Shaw.

858. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Eyre?—Yes.

859. What rent do you pay?—£8, 17s. now.

860. What was the old rent?—£13, 10s.

861. Do you desire to leave your holding for another?—Yes, if I get a better one.

862. Can you show us land in your neighbourhood that would make a better holding for you?—I am a stranger in this part of the country. I was born in Macleod's country at Ebost, but I heard the witness who spoke already give the names of townships near me suitable.

863. You did not know this part of the country long ago?—Yes, I know the land here, and I know the land in Macleod's country; I was under three landlords.

864. Then could you point to land that would be available for new holdings?—If it was permissible I would go back to Bracadale parish, and show land there where I could get a good croft.

865. We are talking of land in this district just now?—Yes, there is plenty of land in Kingsburgh near me which would be suitable for crofts such as I desire.

866. Do you desire to say anything further?—I am ready to answer any questions put to me.

867. Mr Maccallum.—You say you wish to get back to Bracadale. How did you come to leave Bracadale?—My father was a tenant in Ebost. Old Macleod of Ebost put tenants out of the glens,—Glen-Ose and Glen-Ullinish. I was 20 years of age before I left Bracadale.

868. And had you a holding in Bracadale?—Yes, my father had a croft there, for which he paid £10 of rent.

869. Was he comfortable there?—Yes, and free from debt. When Mr Gibbon, Macleod's factor, evicted these two townships, there were 12 tenants in them, and there was not sixpence of arrears among them all.

870. And they were not so well off in the new holding?—We then got to Macleod's country, who sent us to the other side of Duirinish. We were only five years there; we had built new houses for ourselves, and settled there, when a bad year came. About 52 years ago, when the potato famine took place, the tenants got much reduced in their circumstances. There were ten of us there, and four of them went abroad, and the remainder got a small place there, where they could get a little crop.

871. Mr Sutherland.—Do you know any land in your neighbourhood that is better for cultivation than that you have got yourself?—Yes, plenty.

872. Land at present not under cultivation?—Yes; the land we have is not worth sowing at all.

873. Is it inferior to land that is lying uncultivated?—Yes, indeed.

874. You can show us the land when we visit the locality?—Yes, I will show the Commission the better land at Kingsburgh.

875. Did it formerly form part of townships?—Yes, it was formerly occupied by crofting townships.

876. And what is it being used for at present?—The tack of Kingsburgh.

877. Mr Gordon.—What is your present stock?—When I entered my present holding I paid £90 for my share of the joint sheep stock.

878. And how many cattle have you?—Four cows.

879. What is the number of the club stock?—About 60 to each share now: the times have been so bad that the stock has been decreasing.

880. How many are there to share it?—Eight, and a share vacant; there are nine shares.

881. How many acres of arable land have you?—Between five and six.

882. How many quarters of oats do you sow each year?—Four bolls would sow my present land, and a little potatoes.

883. And is the whole of your croft under crop except the potato land?—The area is so small, we keep it under crop except the potato land.

884. Where is your croft?—The minister's glebe is between us and the sea.

885. How many bolls will you reap from your three bolls sown?—About nine or ten. It would give enough to do to get that back, and some of it would not even sow itself back.

886. You have to buy the most of your meal?—Yes, every year.

887. Is it the usual state of matters for the people of your district to have to purchase the most of their meal?—Yes, every man, and oat seed too.

888. Is that owing to the climate?—Partly the climate, especially last year; and the soil is weak.

889. When you send your corn to the mill, do you get more than a boll of meal from a boll of oats?—No, we don't get a boll of meal out of a boll and a half of oats.

890. What sort of crop does the glebe yield?—He tried to use it in two ways, but now he has let it under sheep and cattle.

891. From what source do you principally derive your rent?—The income from the sheep will not this year pay for the shepherd's wages.

892. And where do you get the money?—Those who are able to pay it get it from their families' earnings in other places.

893. Is it a ewe stock that is kept on the club farm?—We have a few wethers, but they are in the same run; we are not selling lambs at all. We winter them ourselves.

894. Can you winter the whole of the sheep stock?—We don't winter them; last year we carried them through the winter in a sort of way.

895. Mr Sutherland.—Would you be able to carry a bigger sheep stock if you had more arable land?—We have plenty sheep for the holding we have: it is overrun with sheep and cattle and horses.

896. But if you had more arable land, would you be able to carry more sheep stock with your present grazing?—We could carry if we had a place where we could winter our hoggs; but if we got more arable land we would need to get more hill grazing too, to carry more sheep.

897. But could not you raise a lamb stock, and winter more sheep than at present?—Yes, we would be able to carry more stock, and to get more help for ourselves and our families.

898. Mr Gordon.—Does any crofter in your township raise turnips at all?—Every one of us.

899. How much?—Some 1 lb. weight, others 1½ lbs. We are scarce of manure.

900. Do any of them lay down clean grass?—They began that, but as they had no protection for their ground they had to give it up: the stock was spoiling it.

901. The stock of sheep?—Sheep and cattle and horses.

902. Mr Forsyth.—Your land is fully stocked with sheep?—Yes, the ground is spoilt by all sorts of stock being on it—we have almost as many stock belonging to other people as our own.

903. Then if you had more wintering land, you would need more summer grazing too?—That is what we want, but we would require ground out of which to take food for ourselves and for our stock.

904. Are you in favour of pasture being separate, or a common or club stock?—I would prefer the joint stock.

905. The Chairman.—There was left upon you a sum of £20 of arrears; is that paid?—The £20 is paid, but I am due something all the same.

906. How much?—I am not very sure; I am bandied about between the law-agent and the factor.

907. It is said that you are due £26, 11s.?—I am not sure.

908. Is the croft that you have at present a losing concern or a profitable concern?—It is a losing concern; if I had not my family working for me I would not have smoke out of my house.

909. Do you think you could show us land where you would be able to carry on a profitable croft in the neighbourhood?—Yes, if there was nothing else in the way but that, I could.

910. Do you think you could set up a new holding without assistance from outside?—No, I could not; but I can say this, that though I could not take a new holding, I have been under three landlords, and not one of them had a penny against me when they put me away; and should I leave Lord Macdonald to-day, there would not be a penny against me either.

911. Mr Sutherland.—You said your croft was not profitable at the present moment; do you think that is due to the fact of your having these heavy arrears to pay?—It is because of the arrears that the croft is not paying. I paid Mr Macdonald £25 of arrears since Martinmas last. That is £20 that the Crofters Commission left on me.

912. But are the arrears that are now due upon the Fair Rent?—Yes, because the factor would not take the Fair Rent; they were wanting to have occasion against us to put us out.

Portree, Skye. Shaw.

913. Where does the stock come from that trespasses upon your common pasture?—The townships about us; there are two townships beside us, as well as poor cottars that have no place at all.

914. The Chairman.—What amount of stock have the cottars upon their ground?—I don't know.

915. Take it this way—how many cottars have stock upon your ground?—There is a number of cottars about us.

916. What number would you say?—I am not very sure; there are five or six.

916*a*. Has each of these cottars got stock of his own?—A little.

617. And do they all put their stock upon your ground?—Yes.

918. Do they pay anything for that?—No, they are never asked anything, unless they pay for the smearing and dipping of them. They might give us a day's service at the fank.

919. Would you say that the cottars had more than half the amount of the whole stock of the township upon the ground?—No, not a third, nor a fifth; but the two neighbouring townships do not observe the march between them and us,—Keistle and Rhenetra.

920. Do the stock from these two places come upon your grazing?—Yes, and some of our stock go into theirs.

921. Mr Macleod.—How many crofters are in Eyre township?—Eight, with 14 families.

922. And five or six cottars?—Yes.

923. So that if the five or six cottars were taken away it would be a very great relief to the eight crofters?—No, I don't know that it would. What is a great burden on us is our own poverty, we are not possessed of anything to speak of.

Beaton.

JOHN BEATON, Crofter, Eyre, Snizort (63).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

924. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Eyre?—Yes.

925. What is your rent?—£8, 15s.

926. What was it formerly?—£13, 10s.

927. Do you desire to leave your present holding if you can get another?—Yes, I would need that.

928. Can you show us land in the neighbourhood that would be suitable?—Yes, Kingsburgh is near us.

929. Did you hear the names of the old townships mentioned?—Yes.

930. And do you agree with the evidence as to them?—Yes.

931. What is the extent of your holding?—I have 7½ acres arable, and a share of 1944 acres common pasture.

932. Mr Gordon.—How many sheep are kept on the 1944 acres?—About 400.

933. That is nearly five acres to a sheep?—Yes.

934. Is the crop grown upon your arable land sufficient to make meal for your family?—It is enough, if we get as much seed as will sow the land again.

935. How many of a family have you?—I have four boys.

936. You have either to buy meal or seed then?—I have to buy both.

937. What is your opinion of how much arable land would be required, of the same kind that you have, before you would have both meal and seed?—Fifteen to twenty acres.

938. Do you feed your stock on the corn you grow without threshing it?—Yes, it is more profitable.

939. So that you sell your sheep and buy your meal?—Yes.

940. Is the reason why you use your corn for feeding purposes because you are obliged to do so, having no other food to give them at certain times?—Yes, owing to scarcity of feeding for the stock.

941. Is it a common thing in Skye and elsewhere for the crofters to use their corn for feeding purposes and not for grinding?—Yes, that is the practice.

942. They don't grow any turnips, I suppose?—Yes, we grow turnips. Portree, Skye. John Beaton.

943. How much?—About an acre.

944. For how many cows?—My 'souming' is four cows, but my croft would not feed half the souming.

945. You don't give any of the turnips to the sheep?—No.

946. And is the land in the unoccupied townships of Kingsburgh superior to the land you have in Eyre?—Yes, it would need to be, or it would be worthless.

947. Do you think the land in Eyre is worse than the average?—Yes, I think there is not worse land in the whole of Skye than Eyre.

948. Are the unoccupied townships lower than the township of Eyre?—Yes, nearer the shore.

949. The Chairman, on the suggestion of Mr Mackintosh, Factor for Lord Macdonald.—Are you £19, 5s. in arrear with your rent?—No, I am not.

950. Are you in arrear at all?—I will tell you how that is. The people of our township got a summons a year last autumn; they were called upon to pay the rent a few days before, then there was an arrestment or charge of payment sent to us for the arrears. We went to the factor with what we had, but when we reached him he would not take a penny of it, but told us to go to the law-agent. We all went to Mr Macdonald with what money we had, and gave him that.

951. Did he take it?—Mr Macdonald took it. It was £5 that I gave him. Between that and the beginning of the spring following, Mr Macdonald sent three officers to poind my stock. He afterwards sent the sheriff officer with an auctioneer to sell; but my cattle were out of the way at the time, and they could not be got, so the sale did not proceed. I then went with £12 to him. He would not take the £12 unless I would sign a bill for the balance. There was a year's arrears of fair rent put into the bill, and Mr Macdonald has that on me now.

JOHN NICOLSON, Army Pensioner, Tote (75)—examined. John Nicolson.

952. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter at Tote?—Yes.

953. What rent do you pay?—£3, 5s.

954. What was your former rent?—£3, 16s. 3d.

955. Was it reduced by the Commission?—Yes.

956. Why did the other delegates not come back to-day?—They would lose their work.

957. You seem a very intelligent man, and can speak English. What is it you want to tell us?—I think if we could get a little extension of hill grazing we would not move; but if we don't get that five of us will remove to Kingsburgh, they tell me.

958. How many are there who wish to have an extension of the home grazing?—There are nine crofts on the place in the two townships of Tote.

959. Do the whole of them wish an extension?—The whole of them.

960. Are you one of the five who would like to remove if they don't get it?—Yes.

961. Where would you like to go?—It was Kingsburgh they pointed to this morning.

962. To the ground where there have been townships before?—Yes.

963. Would you be able to remove without assistance?—Yes, I think I would.

964. You don't owe the landlord anything?—No.

965. The arrears of £4 left on you by the Commission are all paid?—Long ago.

966. What size of holding would you like to get?—I suppose we would require about 14 acres of arable land, and grazing for about 60 sheep.

967. What rent would you like to offer for a holding of the kind you have in view?—I think about £7—between £6 and £7.

968. Suppose you had a rent of £6 or £7 for 14 acres arable, and the right to keep 60 sheep, could you make that a self-supporting croft?—I think I could, with good ground.

Portree, Skye — John Nicolson.

969. And do you think you could enter upon that new holding without outside assistance?—Yes, I could.

970. You would face that, though you are a man of 75? Have you a family?—Yes, three boys and a girl.

971. Are the three boys with you?—There is one here a tailor in Portree, and I have two with me.

972. Both grown up?—Over 20 years.

973. And they would help you?—Yes.

974. And you and your two sons would be able to carry on such a holding?—Oh yes.

975. You were only £5, 14s. in arrears?—Yes, and that was cleared off long since.

976. The custom in Skye, I think, as well as elsewhere, was to crop the land every year?—Every year.

977. And you do that of necessity from the smallness of the extent?—Yes.

978. You are not able to work in rotation?—Since the Crofters Commission was round I have worked on rye grass.

979. And have you improved a little?—Yes, I did. Of course, it put me back at the time, but I am gaining by it now.

980. You have better soil than you had before, and better yield?—Yes.

981. The manure you use is mostly sea-ware, is it not?—Yes, a little.

982. What else do you use?—I mix it with the other manure made about the croft.

983. But you would like if you could get into another holding where the land is more fertile?—Yes; and the holdings are too small.

984. Do you support yourself upon your present holding?—No.

985. You require assistance?—I depend on my pension for keeping me up.

986. Are you an old soldier?—Yes.

987. But you think, if you got a new holding of the kind you describe, you could make it self-supporting?—Oh yes.

988. Even without your pension?—I don't know.

989. Mr Shaw Stewart.—When you say that you would get on in a new holding of that kind, do you mean that you would be able to stock it yourself without assistance?—Oh yes; we have a little stock ourselves.

990. Have you included the cost of the burdens on the land—the rates?—I considered all that.

991. And the building?—Oh yes.

992. And the possible fencing? You would require fencing, would you not, for the arable land?—Yes, but I suppose I would be in shares with somebody.

993. And would you consider that the rent should come to an end after a certain number of years, like the witness we had a little time ago?—I suppose the rent would be paid twice a year, the same as before.

994. Mr Forsyth.—If you had 14 acres of arable in the new holding, would you sow grass seeds and let part of it down to grass so as to rest the land?—Yes, that would be the proper way, or else it would run out.

995. Mr Sutherland.—You have actually tried rotation of cropping in your present holding?—Yes. I leave it perhaps two years and take it in again, and then another piece.

996. And then, in forming new holdings, crofters would, of course, be in a better position to begin than cottars, because they have stock already?—Yes; but I suppose a new place like Kingsburgh has been for much over seventy years under sheep, and it would take a year or two before we got much use out of the soil, unless we were to buy manure.

997. But there is no doubt a crofter would be in a better position to begin than a cottar?—Oh, yes; the cottars have nothing, you may say.

998. Now, you said that some crofters in your district wished to remove to new holdings, and others did not?—Yes.

999. But those who remain would look forward to getting the crofts of those who removed, and thus have an enlargement?—Yes; they are for new holdings.

1000. Do you prefer to have your stock in common, or to have your own share of pasture allotted to you? —It would be handier for every man to have his own; but still there might be some families who could not attend to their sheep, and it would be fair to have common stock.

Portree, Sk — John Nicolson.

1001. But taking into account the circumstances of stock, do you think that holding the pasture in common would be the better arrangement?—Well, some would grumble, but I think it is fair to have a common stock.

1002. You think it is better on the whole?—Yes; because it gives fair play to every one. Some man might be losing his grazing because he had not a man to look after his sheep.

1003. So you would require less fencing for the hill pasture. The one fence would do for the whole township?—Yes.

1004. Mr Macleod.—Are there any cottars in your township?—Yes; there are three widows and two families of spinsters, and two men. The women could not do anything.

1005. There are two cottars in the township who are men?—Yes.

1006. And do they desire to get holdings?—They are prepared to stop in the way they are, if they get a piece from the crofters.

1007. Are they old or young?—Both young; one of them is married.

1008. They prefer to be as they are at present?—Yes, or else they would attend here; because they get pieces of ground from the crofters, and they are content enough. They sell corn every year and potatoes, and they are far better off than the crofters.

James Mackintosh

1009. The Chairman.—You are factor to Lord Macdonald?—Yes.

1010. How long have you been factor?—For five years.

1011. You had nothing to do with the former management of the land?—No; I was not connected with the island at all. I have prepared a statement applicable to the parish of Snizort, showing the extent of arable and pasture land, &c., held by the crofters of each township, the number of stock entitled to be kept by them on the common grazing, the fair rent fixed, and the arrears ordered to be paid by the Crofters Commission, also the arrears outstanding at this date. I shall read to you the figures of the fair rent and the arrears:—

Township.	Fair Rent.	Arrears at 18th April 1893.
Eyre,	£86 5 0	£230 6 10
Rhenetra,	48 7 0	84 1 0
Keistle,	34 14 0	37 6 6
Tote,	51 3 0	65 15 0
Peinmore,	22 14 0	36 3 0
Crepigill,	25 18 0	32 6 0
Carbost,	52 18 0	119 13 4
Glengrasgow,	15 14 0	92 8 0
Peiness,	26 7 0	120 14 6
Uigshader,	31 19 0	117 18 6
Garalapin,	20 6 0	74 17 11
Leachd,	12 0 0	14 14 0
	£428 5 0	£1026 4 7

1012. Have all these arrears accrued upon instalments left by the Crofters Commission combined with arrears of fair rent?—They have.

1013. None of them are arrears upon old rents?—No; none. The crofters are debited with the rents and arrears payable at Martinmas last, and credited with any payments made by them to account since that date.

1014. You are giving that statement as applicable to the present moment?—Yes. In regard to Glengrasgow, I should like to make an explanation about the arrears. It was publicly stated in this town by a gentleman whom I see before me that a widow, against whom proceedings had been taken by Lord Macdonald, had complained to him or to others that the factor had refused to take £5 from her to account of the whole debt due, which amounted to about £50, because she could not pay the whole. Now, there was no such thing occurred. This woman, like all the others against whom proceedings were taken, was referred by me to the law-agent if she offered to make any payment. She did offer to make a payment of a few pounds to the law-agent, but on condition that all further proceedings would be dropped. Now, when proceedings were taken against other tenants, the agent did not feel justified in agreeing to her proposal.

1015. Mr Macleod.—But it is a fact that you refused to take the money?—I did not refuse to take the money from her. I merely referred her to the law-agent, who was willing to take the money and place it to account, but he refused to accept it in full, and accordingly she did not pay.

1016. Is that all you wish to say?—No; I have some further information here about the parish of Snizort. In the township of Keistle there are no crofters who are not in arrear; there is one not in arrear in Rhenetra, three in Tote, two in Peinmore, three in Crepigill; all in Carbost. Peiness, Uigshadder, Garalapin, Glengrasgow, and Eyre are in arrear, and only one not in arrear in Leachd. That is to say, in the parish of Snizort there are only ten crofting tenants who are not in arrear with their rents. In the parish of Portree similarly there are seventy crofters not in arrear, made up thus:—Township of Achnahanaid, 1; Balmeanach, 2; Camustianivaig, 1; Colliemore, 11; Drumuie, 1; Fisherfield, 5; Gedentailer, 1; Glenmore, 1; who entered at Whitsunday last; Heatherfield, 6; Inveraliveg, 4; Mugary, 1; Nether Ollach, 4; Peinchorran, 1; Penefiler, 3; Woodpark, 2; Shullishadder, 6; Sluggans, 10, of whom 6 are cottars; and Craigleadh, 4.

1017. How many years' rental do these arrears represent?—A little over two years.

1018. And as the arrears apply to the others, not to the seventy, the average of those in arrear would be considerably more than two years' rent?—Yes.

1019. What is the oldest of the arrears you have been speaking about?—The arrears ordered to be paid by the Crofters Commission. We cleared our books then, and began anew.

1020. Are the arrears now due larger than the amount ordered to be paid by that Commission?—Yes. In Portree parish they ordered to be paid £882, 12s. 5d., and there is due to-day £1698, 12s. 9d. In Snizort parish the arrears were £910, they are now £1026, 4s. 7d. I produce a statement or list of the decrees pronounced against crofters on the Macdonald estate for rents and arrears, this shows that decree has been obtained for £3052, 9s. 3d. of principal sums, with law expenses amounting to £212, 6s. 7d., less £24, 1s. 6d. paid to account of these expenses. The total number of decrees was as follows:—

Small debt decrees . .	149
Debts recovery decrees . .	74
Ordinary Court decrees .	32
	255

1021. The Chairman inquired if the witness was to submit any further information.—Mr Mackintosh then read the following:—

'Report on Sconser Deer Forest, the Property of 'Lord Macdonald.

'The forest, which is situated in the parishes of 'Portree and Strath, extends to 9721 acres or thereby, 'and is bounded on the north by Loch Sligachan and 'Sconser township common, on the east by the Sound 'of Raasay, Loch Ainort and Luib and Torrin township 'common, on the south by the estate of Strathaird, the 'property of Sir William Mackinnon, and on the west 'by the property of Macleod of Macleod.

'The forest is principally composed of rough mountainous land, steep bare rock, and black moorland, 'with the exception of two parks of half cultivation 'land adjoining the shooting lodge, and which are used 'in connection with the lodge for the purpose of supplying summer grazing and winter keep for the shooting tenant's cows, as also for the cows belonging to 'the three keepers employed on the forest, and likewise 'for keeping the forest ponies while the shooting tenant 'is on the forest.

'The forest would be much deteriorated in value were 'the lodge deprived of this convenience; indeed, it is 'doubtful if it would let at any rent without those two 'parks going in connection with the lodge.

'After a careful inspection of the whole forest, we 'know of no land in any of the glens or corries that 'would be suitable for planting crofters; in fact, most 'if not all the corries in the forest are quite inaccessible.

'We are informed by Mr Scott, the head keeper on 'the forest, that the principal wintering ground for the 'deer lies in a point east of the public road between 'Sconser Lodge and the head of Loch Ainort, and known 'as the Moll. With the exception of two score or less 'that winter on the west side, the whole deer of the 'forest are usually on the piece mentioned during the 'winter. This is decidedly the best grazing on the 'forest, and the part which is least disturbed by men 'and dogs, and where the deer get most rest.

'We are quite of the same opinion as Mr Scott, as we 'see no other part of the forest so well adapted for wintering. It is necessary that in a deer forest there should 'be some portions that afford fair grazing, as generally 'it is hills that are good for no other use that are under 'deer, and this is particularly applicable to Sconser 'Forest.

'If the parts mentioned should be cut off the forest, 'we think it would almost be impossible to have the 'deer in condition, if they could be kept alive at all.

(Signed) 'James Mackintosh,
Factor for Lord Macdonald.
'John Taylor, Land Surveyor.

'Portree, 19*th April* 1893.'

1022. You have given us the area of the forest, can you tell us its altitude?—The highest altitude is 2600 feet, and the lowest is at sea level.

1023. Have any additions been made to the forest within the last twenty years?—None.

1024. What area of the forest is at or near sea level?—There is not much of it at sea level, most of it rises to high ground.

1025. Would you say that the greater part of it is above 1000 feet of altitude?—I cannot say.

1026. You have no acquaintance with the forest previous to the last five years?—No.

1027. Have any tracks been made through the forest of late years by the estate?—None.

1028. When you let the forest to a sporting tenant, what number of stags do you indicate he may probably get if he is a fair sportsman?—About twelve stags.

1029. And what is the rent?—£800 is the present rent.

1030. Is that above or below what it let at formerly?—It is a slight increase on the former rent.

1031. What is the increase?—£150; but that includes the rent of Strolumus, which is also included.

1032. Is that a grazing?—It is occupied as a grazing.

1033. Just the sporting rights of Strolumus, or the grazing rights as well?—The sporting rights only.

1034. Is that the grouse shooting?—Strolumus is grouse shooting and trout fishing.

1035. What is the extent of Strolumus?—Strolumus shooting is about 8000 acres. It is a sheep farm, with some crofter grazing let along with it.

1036. Is that in addition to the 9721 acres?—Yes, but Strolumus is not a forest.

Portree, Skye. — James Mackintosh.

1037. The tenant of the forest is lessee of 17,721 acres in all?—Yes; but out of that rent the landlord pays the wages of four keepers, all the rates and taxes, and the upkeep of a good shooting lodge at Sconser, well furnished, and containing ample accommodation.

1038. You say the two parks to which you alluded could not in your judgment be taken from the forest without seriously impairing its sporting value. Suppose these parks taken, would not the deer be able to find a sufficient living on the low ground during winter?—No, they would not; there is really little or no low ground except the parks.

1039. Is there a great deficiency of low ground below the higher altitudes of the forest?—Yes.

1040. It slopes down quickly to the sea?—Yes. I may mention that the cost of the lodge was about £3000, exclusive of furnishings. It was built eight or nine years ago.

1041. Would it not be an advantage to the forest if the Sconser tenants consented to be migrated to other holdings further inland?—It would.

1042. I daresay you could help us to find land for these tenants?—Not on Lord Macdonald's property, I am afraid.

1043. Conceding that it would be an advantage for these tenants to be migrated if they were willing, could not land be got elsewhere on Lord Macdonald's estate, which would suit them better, and at the same time benefit the forest?—I really am not aware of such.

1044. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You speak of crofters in the forest, are they in the forest itself, or on the sheep ground of Strolumus?—Not on the sheep ground, but on Strolumus shooting, which extends over the farm of Strolumus, and over the pasture of the crofting townships of Strolumus, &c.

1045. There are no crofters on Sconser forest proper?—None.

1046. That forest is one of the very old forests, is it not?—About the oldest in the country.

1047. Mr Sutherland.—You have stated that in your opinion, if some of the land were taken from the forest, it would decrease the number of deer?—It certainly would.

1048. Do you think they would get exterminated altogether?—Yes, I believe they would.

1049. Do you know of any shooting and sheep farms where there are deer?—I do.

1050. And they have not the exclusive use of the land there?—No.

1051. Was not that a common custom all over Scotland?—Yes; but the only sheep farm in Skye where you could count on having deer is in the hands of the proprietor, where they are not so much disturbed as in any other sheep farm.

1052. Would it then be the disturbance arising from the carrying on of a sheep farm that would drive them away?—Certainly.

1053. Where did they come from before the forest was made?—I believe they came from the mainland. It is said that they can swim Kyle-Rhea or Kyle-Akin; and it is said that they swam from Applecross to Raasay and from Raasay to Skye.

1054. What is your opinion?—I believe it is quite possible.

1055. But we must take it, that they are indigenous to Skye?—Certainly.

1056. And when there were no deer forests, how did they survive?—There was possibly not the same amount of trespassing as there is now.

1057. Were the people more scattered over the country than they are now?—Yes, but the crofters had not the same cattle and hill grazing as they have now.

1058. But you know shootings where there are plenty of stags to be got, and where there is not a deer forest?—I know shootings of that kind where ten stags were got last season—that is Kinloch, a farm in Lord Macdonald's own hands, but the shooting rent for it was of more consideration than the profit from the sheep stock on it, and the farm was worked very much for the convenience of the shooting tenant. In that way the number of stags were got; but if that farm was in the hands of a sheep farmer the stags would not get the same privilege, nor the shooting tenant the same sport.

Portree, Skye. — James Mackintosh.

1059. Is there a higher rental from deer forests, as such, than from the combined pasturing and shooting on a farm that is not a deer forest?—Certainly, there is or there has been.

1060. Is the tendency downwards now, or still maintaining?—I think shootings are maintaining themselves, and deer forests are maintaining themselves.

1061. I had rather in my mind the conditions that obtain on the mainland; I wished to know whether it was the same in Skye?—I know only one farm on the mainland with deer shooting equal to that I have mentioned, and that is the Farm of Meoble on Mrs Campbell's property, lying between Lochiel's estate and Loch-Arkaig, and let to Mr Gillespie as shooting tenant.

1062. But you would not go the length of saying that giving the land out in pasture would do away with deer altogether?—It would in Skye.

1063. You have had great experience of the Lovat forest?—I was twelve years with the late Lord Lovat.

1064. Would you say that taking these pieces of ground referred to by previous witnesses would be more injurious to the forest than it would be beneficial to the crofters?—I consider it would be.

1065. How then do you account for the existence of deer on places where they have not got it to themselves?—They break out from the forests, the old stags drive the young ones away.

1066. I could tell you of places where there were deer and no forest within a hundred miles of them?—That is quite possible; the deer may want fresh pasture.

1067. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Is it not the case that where a few stags are to be got on sheep grounds, they come and go from the neighbouring forests?—Certainly, that is so.

1068. And it is those that you meet?—I have known a case of a stag being stalked at Beaufort at 6.30 in the evening, and shot by Lord Tweedmouth at Guisachan next morning, a distance of 21 miles as the crow flies.

1069. Mr Maccallum.—I suppose you admit that there were crofting townships in the present forest?—Yes, there were, at Tormichaig and Kenchreggan, and they say at Moll.

1070. You have no reason to doubt the crofter's statement?—No, certainly not.

1071. And still the deer managed to live somehow, even with the crofters in these townships?—Yes.

1072. Probably when the game laws were not so strict?—Probably.

1073. But those that were there afforded very good sport?—A stag shot in the forest is the same sport as a stag shot anywhere else.

1074. Don't you think crofters might go there again without much harm?—No; I think the land in Skye is considerably more stocked with sheep and cattle now than it was then; the deer would probably leave Sconser and take a trip through some other part of the island, and come back to Sconser.

1075. That is to say, that in the old times the deer were more scattered?—Yes. Of course, the deer will come back to the place where he was raised.

1076. How is it that you are unable to find any other land for the Sconser crofters?—Because I consider Lord Macdonald's estate is more burdened with crofters than any other estate in Scotland.

1076*a*. Is there not a great extent of Lord Macdonald's property in large holdings?—There is not a great extent, there is more of it under crofters.

1077. Is Scorrybreck Lord Macdonald's?—It is.

1078. What was the rental?—£732.

1079. Could not room be found there for some crofters?—Quite possible.

1080. Then do you say that in these years land is profitably occupied by large tenants,—do they make a profit?—At the present moment holdings in Skye and elsewhere, I believe, are not profitable.

1081. The large holdings are not profitably occupied?—And I have shown you to-day that small holdings are not.

1082. Confine yourself to the large holdings; are they profitably occupied?—They may not be at the present moment.

1083. For some years back?—Two years ago they were profitable.

1084. Two years ago farmers were laying past money after paying their rent?—Possibly some of them were.

1085. But were they?—That is a matter for somebody else to say; they were paying their rents at anyrate.

1086. Have large tenants got large reductions in recent years?—They have.

1087. Larger than the small tenants?—No.

1088. There was a statement made before us at the opening, I think, to the effect that rents on large holdings were reduced about 50 per cent. since 1881; is that correct?—Some large holdings may.

1089. But on the whole do you think it is pretty nearly correct?—No; I don't believe large holdings have suffered such a diminution as that.

1090. The Chairman.—Has not there been a much larger reduction in the rents of large farmers than in the cases of crofters who applied to the Crofters Commission?—In some cases there may have been.

1091. But taking it generally?—Taking it generally, about 30 per cent., I believe.

1092. Was it not 50?—No.

1093. Mr Maccallum.—You are positive?—I am not positive in all cases, but I speak of the cases I have had to do with.

1094. Now, in regard to the statistics you have given us,—these arrears accumulated in very bad years?—No, they did not; I am sorry to say they were accumulated when prices of stock were very high.

1095. Do you think that since the Commission visited Skye there have been very good years?—There were good years; last year was not a good year, but some years were good.

1096. Such as?—Such as 1889, 1890, 1891.

1097. Mr Munro.—There were statements made here to-day that crofters were obliged to use the corn they grew for the purpose of feeding their cattle. Is it consistent with your knowledge that farmers in the low-lying parts of the country have been compelled to have recourse to a similar use of their produce?—It is this way, if I may explain: the class of cattle reared here and in the low country are quite different. In the low country the cattle must be housed; here they are not, except perhaps in the case of yearlings and aged cows. Highland cattle do with a wonderfully small amount of winter forage; and that forage is more easily supplied to them in the sheaf. It is most profitable to the crofter to feed his cattle in the sheaf.

1098. But it is not peculiar to Skye to feed the cattle with grain?—I believe not.

1099. It is the practice in other parts of the country?—Wherever Highland cattle are kept.

1100. And in the low-lying country?—I am not aware of any place in the low-lying country where cattle are fed with corn in the sheaf.

1101. Mr Forsyth.—So that it is not an evidence of poverty?—No, not at all. In former years the cattle raised in this country were not of half the value of the cattle now. They were small, ill-bred, and ill-shaped; now the people have got a superior class of cattle, and they find that it pays them to winter these cattle well. It is found more profitable to have one good beast worth £5 than two or three worth £1, 10s. or £2 each. It is on account of the increased value of the stock that they take more care of them, and winter them better.

1102. The Chairman.—In the Valuation Roll the yearly rental or value of the forest is at £150?—It is partly in two parishes. The rental I stated to you is not the rental payable now; it is the rental from Whitsunday next. Off the gross rental we are by Act of Parliament allowed to deduct the wages we pay to the keepers, and also a certain percentage for the furniture in the lodge. That is the reason why you do not see the gross rental there. The abatement was made by the assessor, who had full access to the documents showing the amount received.

1103. I see in the statistical account of Inverness-shire for 1842, dealing with the agriculture in the parish of Snizort. The writer says:—

'Agriculture.—From the physical quality of its sur-'face, a great part of this parish must remain an un-'cultivated waste. Pasturage forms the principal 'employment of a great part of the inhabitants. Like 'the Germans of Tacitus, "their pride consists in the '"number of their flocks and herds; these are their '"only riches, and in these they place their chief '"delight." Their cows are more celebrated for their 'fine symmetry than for the quantity of milk they 'yield.'—Mr Mackintosh. That is applicable to the present day.

1104. The Chairman (continuing to read extract)—'On the large farms agriculture is now conducted on 'scientific principles.'—Mr Mackintosh. That was written, I understand, by a schoolmaster.

1105. But that would not make it the less valuable?—They are not usually practical agriculturists.

1106. There have been a good many questions asked as to the ideal size of a crofter holding. Perhaps you might be able to give us your views upon the point?—That is a matter that I saw was not gone into fully by the witnesses; and Mr Taylor, surveyor, and myself have been considering the point. We have drawn up a statement of what, in our opinion, would be an ideal croft; it is supposed to be sufficient to keep six cows, one horse, and a hundred sheep, or equivalent in cattle. The extent of it would be from 15 to 20 acres, according to the quality of the soil, and from 200 to 300 acres of outrun. As to the rent, we would consider £22 a fair rent for such a holding. A holding of that extent ought to be cultivated by a crofter according to the most recent and the best adapted modes of cultivation, and I have put down the result in the form of an account, charge and discharge:—

CHARGE.

Rent,	£22
Crofter's labour, at 2s. 6d. per day,	38
Boy, per annum, with food,	18
Woman, do. do.,	18
Spring and harvest work,	7
Sundries (smith, joiner, rates, dip, and share of shepherd),	12
Grass, clover, and turnip seed,	3
Interest on capital invested, say £200,	7
Do. on buildings, if cut out of forest or farm,	7

DISCHARGE.

5 stirks sold at, say £4 each,	£20 0
One cow,	7 0
35 wedder lambs at 6s.,	10 10
10 mid ewe and wedder lambs at 4s.,	2 0
20 old ewes at 12s.,	12 0
Wool, say 20 stones,	11 0
Household benefit derived from croft, in the shape of milk, butter, potatoes, eggs, and poultry,	23 0
		85 10
Deficiency, if labour is paid,		£46 10

or £27, 10s. to the good, and for family maintenance if all the work is done by the family.

PORTREE, 19*th April* 1893.

Portree, Skye. — James Mackintosh.

1107. These figures are given as those of an average year?—Yes.

1108. How many lambs do you count on having out of your ewes?—A croft of the kind should have 80.

1109. Seventy-five is a very common average?—Yes, from 70 to 80.

1110. Do you contemplate a club stock?—Yes.

1111. Is your opinion in favour of a club stock?—Yes, because I consider stock are allowed more rest when it is a club stock, with one man in charge; whereas, when stock is held by each crofter, they go out to the hill every year. No stock would thrive with such usage.

1112. Do you expect to cast 20 ewes every year?—Well, he may exceed his number of 100.

1113. What do you allow for death-rate?—Not more than 7 per cent.

1114. Can you mention any crofter's holding in Skye at the present that comes anything near that,—as a concrete specimen?—No, I cannot.

1115. Do you know of any crofter's holding in Skye at the present moment that is being carried on to a profit, leaving out of view last year, which was an exceedingly bad year?—The only man I can ask is the ground officer; he has a croft, and may tell you, his name is Norman Beaton.

1116. You have indicated a certain size of croft; do you think there would be a proportional increase of prosperity to the crofter as the croft went up in size?—It would depend very much upon the individual crofter; one might start with a £22 croft, and be more successful than one with a £44 croft.

1117. But, speaking generally, are the chances better as you increase the size of the croft, within a reasonable limit?—Yes, as long as it did not become too big.

1118. Are you of opinion, keeping in view the economic condition of land, that it would be a great improvement if there could be established a middle class of tenants, holding crofts with rents from £15 to £60 or £70 in this island, assuming that they could be carried on to a profit?—Well, if they could be carried on to a profit it would be an improvement; but, unfortunately, they have gone otherwise in some cases.

1119. Are there many holdings in Skye at a rent of about £100?—There are not many; on Lord Macdonald's property there are about ten rented at between £30 and £100.

1120. Do you think that such holdings as your ideal croft would let readily?—Yes, I believe they would. Where any holding is capable of being worked by one man without employing outside labour, it is readily let.

1121. Is it your opinion that in the case of men who trust to the sea more than to their crofts for their means of livelihood, it is better for them to have a mere patch of ground and depend upon the sea, rather than a croft which distracts their attention from their boats?—I am decidedly of opinion that when a crofter takes his main living from the sea he is not benefited by having a large croft.

1122. A small patch of land close to the shore, and to depend on the sea, is a better arrangement than having a croft which distracts his attention from his main source of livelihood?—It is, certainly.

1123. So that you would divide crofts into two classes,—those down on the shore, where the men depend upon the sea, and have very little land; and those inland, which are intended to be self-supporting?—Yes, but I am not of the opinion that crofters should be placed inland, because, when that is the case, they are not conveniently situated for obtaining sea-ware for manure. Take, for instance, the cases of Glenmore and Mugary. At one time the tenants of those two townships were supposed to be in very comfortable circumstances, but through their mode of cultivating the land it has got quite run out, and the tenants are not now in anything like good circumstances.

1124. But would you not think it a good thing to have in land crofts of considerable extent, which would be manured very much in the same way as the large farmer manures his ground?—Yes, an inland croft of 15 or 20 or 30 acres of arable land, better cultivated; but when a crofter is sent inland to 5 acres he cannot manure it properly.

Portree, Sk — James Mackintosh

1125. But I am speaking of a croft of say 12 or 15 or 20 acres arable?—It is quite possible that such a croft could be cultivated inland by a crofter who knew how to do it.

1126. And who did not depend on the sea-ware at all?—Exactly.

1127. I am speaking theoretically, and apart altogether from Lord Macdonald's estate; you would be favourable to the formation of such holdings?—Yes, but there is one thing to be considered. Arable land in this country requires double the amount of manure that arable land on the mainland does. The rainfall here is so large.

1128. That is important. What is the rainfall?—From 80 to 90 inches. It came to 144 inches one year.

1129. The rainfall is at all events excessive?—It is excessive; and in consequence, the benefits derived from manuring land are to a great extent lost. I consider it takes double the amount of manure here that would be required on the mainland.

1130. The season of tillage in Skye, and the harvest season, are often very brief?—I have seen more bad harvest seasons since I came to Skye than tillage seasons. There is also this to be said in regard to the tilling of the soil in Skye; you cannot begin to till it too soon; you must leave it till very near the time of sowing the seed.

1131. The reason being?—The reason being that the rain would wash it out if you turned up the land in the winter time.

1132. The land would be very watery?—Yes.

1133. If a part of the land was held in first and second grass there would be less surface exposed?—Yes.

1134. And is there a danger of the soil being washed away altogether?—In some places.

1135. Do you mean that gentle rain falling would hurt it?—Not gentle rain.

1136. But every part of Skye is subject to excessive and violent rainfall?—Yes.

1137. Now, in the paper which you have just read, are your calculations based on the crofter cultivating his land on the system at present in vogue in the island?—No, according to an improved system.

1138. Can you tell me how many club farms or club stocks there are in Skye?—I can only speak of Lord Macdonald's property. In Sleat we have no club stock; in Strath there is the club stock of Heast and Torran; in Portree district there are Camustianavaig, Glenmore, Mugary, and Penifiler. In Snizort parish there is one in which seven townships have a share. There are 39 tenants, who have each a share in Unakille grazing.

1139. Now, is it your judgment that the crofters take more out of their stock when worked according to the club system, than the other way?—Yes, I am of that opinion.

1140. Have these club stocks in Skye been fairly successful, carried on harmoniously?—Oh yes, with the exception of the bad years.

1141. Mr Macleod.—There has been no difficulty among the people themselves in managing it?—They sometimes quarrel.

1142. Can you tell us the manner in which it is as a rule conducted?—It is usually in this way: take a certain piece of pasture land divided between so many crofters: one crofter occupying a whole croft has a whole share, one with half a croft has half a share: the number of stock is known, and they try to keep it as near that as possible. When a tenant dies, or leaves the place, the whole stock is valued, and a price put upon each class of stock that is on the ground, and the incoming tenant pays the price applicable to one share.

1143. How do they manage about the shepherd?—They pay the shepherd in proportion to the shares.

1144. Through a committee?—Yes, usually.

1145. How often is there a meeting to appoint a committee?—I think usually once a year.

1146. And this committee has the control of the shepherds, and the general management of the stock for the year?—Yes.

1147. How do they do about selling the stock?—They appoint one or two of their own managers. The managers have power to sell the stock at the usual times.

1148. Do they sell the wool in the same way, or divide it among the tenants?—Where it is a considerable stock I think they sell the wool; but in the case of a small stock they divide the wool among themselves.

1149. Is there a yearly division of profits?—Yes, at Martinmas.

1150. Subject to deduction of the expenses?—Yes.

1151. Then as to dipping and shearing, are all the tenants supposed to give their assistance?—They are. Each tenant must go himself, or send a representative to assist at these works,—dipping, and clipping, and gathering, and shearing.

1152. You would be in favour of a considerable extension of the club farm system?—I think it would be more advantageous in every way to have any crofter stocks existing at present put under the club system.

1153. And you believe that if new holdings were formed,—with hill pasture attached—that would be the best method of working the stock?—Certainly it would.

1154. Mr Sutherland.—You are aware, no doubt, of the existence of an Act of Parliament regulating these matters: do you know if it has been adopted in Skye?—It has not been adopted in Skye. On Lord Macdonald's estate there were very good rules in force, and where they keep to these rules the Act is not any better; but in some townships where they do not agree, I have been threatening to put them under the Act. If they fail to appoint a committee themselves, the factor or the landlord has the power to do that. I am quite prepared to put that power into operation in one or two cases.

1155. I have been listening to a great body of evidence in another place, and they rather favoured the individual system of farming. I am glad to find a gentleman of experience like you favouring the communal one?—I think it would work better.

1156. It is within your knowledge that that was the old system?—I am not aware from my own personal knowledge of Skye, but I know it succeeds elsewhere.

1157. Mr Macallum.—The crofters got very considerable reductions, and the very large holders also got very considerable reductions. Did the intermediate holders, say from £30 to £100, get any such reductions?—Those I had to deal with got reductions.

1158. Equivalent to what was given to the large farmers?—Yes, I may say so. I may say that, although there were leases current, Lord Macdonald gave the tenants who held these leases the benefit of reductions varying from 20 to 30 per cent.

1159. But did not the large holders get very much greater reductions than that?—No, they did not, under their leases.

1160. Let us take Scorrybreck. What was the rental in 1881?—When Mr Stewart entered on the farm, the rent was £1250: when the seasons became adverse his rent was reduced. I think the first year or two he got a reduction of 20 per cent., and latterly a reduction of 30 per cent.

1161. In addition to the 20 per cent.?—No, an increased reduction of 10 per cent.

1162. And now?—And now, when the farm came to be let, his rent is £750.

1163. That is £500 of a reduction?—Yes.

1164. Is that a special case, or may we take it as a typical case?—That may be taken as a typical case.

1165. It seems to come to this, that the reduction of rent to the large farmers has been much greater than the reduction to the crofters?—Yes, but that rent of Mr Stewart's was fixed only last Whitsunday.

Questions suggested by Mr Alexander Macdonald, Portree.

1166. When were the crofters' rents fixed on the Macdonald estate?—In 1810.

1167. Were they lowered repeatedly since then, before the time of the Crofters Commission?—They were.

1168. Were the rents of the sheep farms by the natural course of letting not doubled or trebled within the same period?—That is so.

1169. Do you think the two are fairly capable of comparison, seeing that while the crofters' rents were lowered the farmers' rents were doubled or trebled?—That is so.

1170. Mr Maccallum.—Were not the large farms increased in area as well as in rent?—I am not aware of any substantial increase in area.

1171. Suggested by Mr J. G. Mackay.—Is it not the fact that the crofters' rents were more than doubled and more than trebled in 1810, on account of the kelp?—No, that is not the case.

1172. Mr Sutherland.—Can you give us any idea what the rents of the crofters began at per acre, seeing they have been coming down ever since?—Not at present, but I may, perhaps, before you leave the island.

1173. When the people were shifting from these townships to the places they now occupy, they began to pay the high rents they are now paying for land that was not then cultivated at all?—I am not aware that the crofters were lifted from any of these townships and placed in their present holdings. The rents that were fixed in 1811 were rents fixed for crofters who were perhaps sub-tenants of the tacksmen, and who then came to hold their crofts directly from the landlord.

1174. That implies that they were not transposed at all?—Not all.

1175. So then it is not true what we have been hearing about the old townships?—Certainly, there were occupants there who were sub-tenants of the tacksmen.

1176. And they are not there now?—They are not there now.

1177. Mr Macdonald has stated that the tendency of small tenants' rents has been downwards. I want to know the point they started from?—From the time they were taken on the landlord's books as tenants holding direct.

1178. So that does not cover the whole case, by a long way?—Previous to 1810 they held from the tacksmen, and paid higher rents than when the landlord put them on his own books.

1179. But you can answer only from the time they appeared on the landlord's own books?—That is the only time we have any evidence.

1180. You do not take into account about the areas: there has been always a complaint that the crofting area was diminished, and that the rents were not lowered on account of the diminution?—No, I don't acknowledge that.

1181. Mr Macleod.—You said in reply to Mr Macdonald that the crofters' rents have been coming down since 1811 to the present day. Were you speaking within your own knowledge?—From information gathered from books and documents in my possession.

1182. The rents before the Crofters Commission fixed them were lower than they were in 1811?—A great deal less. I can produce the books.

1183. And you are prepared also to show that the rent of 1811 was purely a land rent?—Yes, the rent in 1811 was purely a land rent.

1184. And that in 1887 the rents of the crofters on Lord Macdonald's estate were actually less than in 1811?—Yes.

1185. You are prepared to prove that?—I am.

1186. Do you mean the total, or the average rent of each individual?—The average rent of each township or individual.

1187. That would depend very much on whether the population was increasing or decreasing?—Take the rent of the township.

Portree, Skye. — James Mackintosh.

1188. Can you state that the average rent of each individual has been continually coming down, without any reference to increase or decrease of population,—giving us totals only?—I will produce the rental, and allow you to make your own use of it.

1189. The Chairman.—I see from the statements made by Mr Macdonald himself to Lord Napier's Commission in 1883 certain statistics as to rents, among others the following:—

Township.	Rent in 1825.	In 1830.	In 1883.
Parish of Portree—
Balmeanach, . .	£05	£75	£78
Achanahannaid, .	52	34	47
Colliemore, . .	72	50	54

and so on. Some of these figures appear to indicate a rise in rental.—Mr Macdonald. These figures are all downward, with the exception of the first, where by a printer's error the rent in 1825 is stated at £5 instead of £105. Otherwise the figures are quite correct.

Examination of Mr Mackintosh continued.—I have here a Report on the Farms of Kingsburgh and Skirrinish, which, with your permission, I shall read:—

'Report on the Farms of Kingsburgh and Skerinish, 'in the Parish of Snizort, the property of Lord 'Macdonald.

'Kingsburgh.—This farm, which has been recently 'let to Mr Purves, extends to 8201 acres or thereby, 'of which about 170 acres are arable and permanent 'pasture, the remainder being hill grazing; and is 'bounded as follows:—on the north by the river 'Hinisdale, on the east by Scorrybreck farm, on the 'south by Romisdale river, and on the west by Loch 'Snizort.

'Besides the arable and permanent grass parks mentioned, there are three other places on the farm, at 'Romisdale river, Hinisdale river, and Sgur Ornachdain, 'where small patches of tillage had at one time been 'made, but it must have been many years ago, as it is 'now mostly under heather.

'The river Hinisdale, which forms the north boundary 'of the farm with the estate of Kilmuir, is the natural 'and only convenient march that could be formed on 'this side. On the south side the Romisdale river 'separates the farm from the crofter township of Eyre, 'and this also is the only natural and convenient 'march that can be got, and was fenced at great 'expense by Mr Tod, the late tenant.

'Upon the whole, as at present bounded, this farm 'forms the most compact grazing in the island of Skye, 'and can be worked, in proportion to its extent, at less 'expense than any other farm in the island.

'There are at present three sheep hirsels, one at the 'west end, and the other two extending from it to the 'east side of the farm. The sheep wintering ground 'on the last two mentioned is along the glens at Hinisdale and Romisdale rivers, and forms the only low 'ground in connection with them; and were the farm 'deprived of these glens, the remaining portion would 'be a narrow strip, composed entirely of moorland 'rising to an elevation of over 2000 feet above sea-'level, which would require to be fenced on both sides, 'and still three shepherds would be necessary to attend 'to a stock of about one half of what the farm at 'present carries. A Cheviot stock such as that now 'on the grazing could not, in our opinion, be kept 'without the parts mentioned.

'After a minute inspection of the whole farm, we 'know of no part that could be cut off without great 'injury to the remainder. With the exception of the 'parks at present cultivated in connection with the 'farm, there is little if any land that could be profitably brought under cultivation.

'Skerinish.—This farm, as presently occupied by 'the representatives of the late Mr James Macdonald, 'extends to about 5380 acres or thereby, and is bounded 'on the north by Kensaleyre and Glenhaultain, on the 'east by Scorrybreck farm, on the south by Achtalean, 'Drumuie, and Carbost, and on the west by Tote and 'Loch Snizort.

'The land kept under cultivation is close to the 'dwelling-house, extending along Loch Snizort from 'Tote farm in a northerly direction, and is 45 acres or 'thereby in extent.

'The other portions of this farm showing signs of 'cultivation are Birkises and Anishader, along the river 'Haultain, and at Borve, stretching along Uig and 'Portree public roads. At the former places the little 'cultivation that had been done is now scarcely visible. 'The glen along the river Haultain forms the low lying 'ground for the sheep on the north side of the farm, and 'the river here forms a very suitable march between it 'and the adjoining tenants.

'At Borve, where a considerable amount of cultivation was done fifty or sixty years ago, the pasture is 'mixed with strips of green grass and heather, the 'ground is uneven, being partly soft, wet, and boggy 'land, and partly thin and rocky, and never has been 'closely cultivated, as probably about one half would 'yield little if any return for labour.

'The part along Uig road where cultivation has been 'made, passes through the centre of the farm, and 'could not be detached from it without cutting it into 'two separate parts, and leaving the hill grazing and 'the dwelling-house and arable land apart. The Borve 'hill, which lies immediately behind the strips of old 'cultivation, has the appearance of being dry pasture 'on which sheep would not thrive so well without a 'change to lower and greener pasture, and the part mentioned is the only low green land on this side of the 'farm. We are therefore of opinion that without this 'portion, the farm would be very much deteriorated in 'value as a sheep grazing.

'The centre or remaining portion is moorland, and 'rises to nearly 2000 feet above sea level, and would 'clearly be quite unsuited for sheep without low ground 'in connection. Whether let as one holding or as a 'crofter township, the high and low ground should 'accompany each other. The farm on its present 'boundaries forms a good, healthy grazing, and carries 'a stock of superior blackfaced sheep, but is not well 'adapted for cultivation except on a very limited scale, 'and that principally where the tenant cultivates in the 'neighbourhood of his dwelling-house.

Factor for Lord Macdonald.
'John Taylor,
Land Surveyor.

'Portree, 19*th April* 1893.'

1190. Is Kingsburgh farm being carried on for the benefit of the trustees of Mr Tod?—Till Whitsunday next, when it is let to a Mr Purves from Caithness.

1191. What is the stock on Skerinish?—I have no information as to that.

1192. In whose hands is it?—The representatives of the late tenant Mr Macdonald, who died two years ago. They hold under a lease.

1193. When does the lease expire?—In two years, I think. I am informed that Skerinish carries 1500 stock, mostly ewes. The following is our report on Scorrybreck:—

'Report on the Farms of Scorrybreck and Glenvarigill 'the property of Lord Macdonald.

'Scorrybreck.—The farm, which is situated in the 'parishes of Portree and Snizort, extends to 15,747 'acres, and is bounded on the east by the Sound of 'Raasay, on the north by the estate of Kilmuir, on the 'west by Kingsburgh farm, Eyre, Keistle, and Glen 'Haultain common grazings and Skerrinish farm, and 'on the south by Achtalean and Portree home farm, '&c.

'The farm is at present occupied by Mr John Stewart, 'and is composed with very little exception of moss-'land, and it embraces the Storr Hill, which is at an 'altitude of 2360 feet above sea level.

'There are at present three parks, containing about '30 acres kept under cultivation in connection with the 'farm. There are some signs of former cultivation at 'three or four parts, viz.,—Loch Letham, Rigg, Tote, 'and also at the site of the old dwelling-house of Scorry-'breck, where the tenant is at present breaking up 'some old arable land for the purpose of renewing the 'pasture where it has gone entirely under fog. A little 'cultivation is also made at Rigg for the purpose of 'supplying wintering for some Highland cattle kept 'there.

'All, or nearly all the green pasture on the farm is 'along the Sound of Raasay, extending from Portree 'village on to the north end, is very steep and rocky, 'and quite unsuited for cultivation. It is also a very 'bare coast, without bays or harbours for boat shelters.

'The proportion of heath land is in excess of the 'green, and not quite what would be necessary to afford 'a suitable change of pasture for sheep; consequently 'we observe the tenant is breaking up small portions 'not well adapted for cultivation, with a view to im-'proving the pasture.

'We do not consider any great extent of this farm 'could be cultivated by crofters profitably. Probably 'a few could live at the places mentioned, but as these 'are along the centre of the farm, it would damage it 'to a large extent. The parks kept under cultivation 'by Mr Stewart are necessary for the farm, as 'without them no cows could be kept.

'Loch Letham, Rigg, and Tote are in a very remote 'part, and are distant respectively from the nearest 'public road 4, 5, and 6 miles, and a still greater dis-'tance from the nearest public school.

'There is also a place called Achachork, distant 'about two miles from Portree, where the land has at 'one time been irregularly cultivated, and is at present 'under heather and green mixed. This forms the 'wintering for this part of the farm, which is dry moor-'land, and has the appearance of ground where sheep 'without a change of pasture would be subject to pine.

'Glenvarigill.—This farm is presently occupied by 'Mr Lachlan Ross, and extends to 3880 acres or there-'by. It is bounded on the north by Woodend and 'Viewfield, on the west by Muggary and Glenmore 'common grazing and part of Drynoch farm, on the 'south by Drynoch, and on the east by Ben Lee and 'the Glebe.

'The farm, with the exception of about 25 acres, is 'entirely composed of rocky hill pasture, suitable only 'for grazing. The 25 acres kept under cultivation is 'necessary in connection with the farm; indeed, more 'would be required to give constant work to the man 'and horses employed in connection with it. Without 'those parks, the tenant would be unable to keep any 'cows, as there is no other land on the farm that could 'be brought under cultivation.

'After going carefully over the farm, we are unable 'to see any land that could be profitably cultivated by 'crofters. We are of opinion that the arable and 'grazing portions of this farm would not let separately, 'the arable portion being where the young sheep are 'wintered, and without which they could not be kept 'on the farm during winter. The arable on the farm 'might be sufficient for two crofters, but not more, 'whereas the grazing would not be sufficient for 20 or '30, so that we consider this farm quite unsuited for 'crofters in every way.

(Signed) 'James Mackintosh,
Factor for Lord Macdonald.
'John Taylor,
Land Surveyor.

'Portree, 19*th April* 1893.'

1194. What rent does Mr Ross pay?—£110.

1195. Has he a lease?—Yes.

1196. For a term of years?—For a term of years.

1197. When does it expire?—In nine or ten years.

1198. Mr Gordon.—Do you know what stock is upon that farm?—No, I do not.

1199. Is the farm paying?—I believe not. The tenant says so.

1200. What was the rent in 1881?—I cannot say without referring to the books.

1201. Did Mr Ross get the land as it had been possessed by the previous tenant?—He only went into it quite recently, within the last five or six years.

1202. I see in 1883 the rent was £160; in 1830 it was £105; and now it is £180?—£110.

1203. What is the reduction of rent on Skirrinish, may I ask?—The reduction was 30 per cent. The rent of the farm is £474, 11s., and the reduction amounts to £142, 7s. 4d.

1204. Mr Sutherland.—I gather from the statement read that your opinion is that there is not much land that is capable of being used for cultivation in these farms?—That is so.

1205. You know the native language, don't you?—I do.

1206. You can tell the Commission what the meaning of 'Dalchorc' is?—It means the cornfield or the oatfield.

1207. That points to something, does is not?—I believe it does; perhaps it points to the place where no corn would grow.

1208. Mr Maccallum.—You quite agree that there were townships in Scorrybreck?—I don't agree that there were townships; there were sub-tenants.

1209. There were people there holding the land?—There were people allowed to cultivate land, in return for which they did a certain amount of labour for the tacksman.

1210. There was a large population maintained at Scorrybreck?—It was not exactly maintained at Scorrybreck; they went elsewhere. A witness told us yesterday that there was excellent sea-fishing there, and that cargoes of meal came to supply the people.

1211. Was there a church at Rigg?—I am not aware that there was a church since Reformation times.

1212. You are not prepared to deny that there was a church there, in which the minister of Snizort preached?—It is quite possible it may have been a Kiltarglen on the march of Scorrybreck farm.

1213. Do you know how Rigg was occupied before it got consolidated to this big farm of Scorrybreck?—I am not aware.

1214. Were you aware that there was a gentleman there who had a house?—There was a family at Rigg.

1215. And is it not likely, then, that Rigg would be a place where a crofting township might be placed, seeing that that was so?—Certainly, Rigg is a place fit for cultivation, but it is a very out of the way place; there is no road to it; it is far distant from any school; and it is not a safe place for a boat.

1216. The Chairman, suggested by Mr J. G. Mackay.—Is it not a fact that Lord Macdonald's rent-roll in the year 1733 shows that there were nine tenants on Lower Tote and eight on Upper Tote on the farm of Scorrybreck?—I have not got that rental in the books, and I believe that information is gathered from different sources, and put together by a gentleman in the island.

1217. That information may be correct enough?—Possibly it may.

1218. You have no reason to doubt it?—I have no proof that it is correct.

1219. Mr Macleod.—I take it that you are a practical man. Comparing the land occupied by the crofters at the present time with the land in the different sheep farms on Lord Macdonald's property, would you be prepared to express an opinion as to which is the better in your view, speaking generally?—Generally the land occupied by the crofters has not got the same good usage as land occupied by farmers. Farmers make an attempt to drain their lands and improve them. I have not yet seen crofters attempt to drain their lands.

1220. Then you would be inclined to say that the land presently held by the large farmers is better than the land held by the crofters?—No, I am not prepared to say that.

Portree, Skye. James Mackintosh.

1221. You said that on account of the better usage which the large farmers had given the land in the way of drainage and otherwise it was better?—I have noticed land held by farmers which was not so good as land held by crofters, but the farmer drained his land and it thus improved, until it was better than the land held by the neighbouring crofters. I consider that if crofters would treat their hill-grazing in the same way as farmers do, their land would be quite as good, and in some cases they have very superior grazing.

1222. Taking it over all, there is not very much difference?—There is not much difference, if they were both treated equally well.

1223. Might I ask whether any steps have ever been taken by the estate management to improve the agriculture amongst the smaller tenants, in the way, I mean, of inducing them to drain their land or to sow with grass?—I think there has been in the way of draining lands; and I think I can say that in one parish you will find that crofters have, within the last few years, taken a considerable number of them to sowing grass—I mean in the parish of Sleat.

1224. And is there any means that you would suggest for causing that process to go on elsewhere—any method by which you think the cultivation amongst the smaller tenants could be improved?—No, unless they come to realise that. We had a very intelligent witness here to-day, who informed you that he found it to his profit. An example of that kind is better than a professor from an agricultural college.

1225. Then you could not suggest any means by which this knowledge could be spread, except by such concrete examples in the different townships?—There might be a little done in the way of teaching it in schools.

John Taylor.

JOHN TAYLOR, Land Surveyor, Ebost—examined.

1226. The Chairman.—You have prepared and signed certain documents along with the previous witness, Mr Mackintosh?—Yes; and I concur with what he has said. I don't wish to add anything.

1227. Are you a farmer in the island?—Yes.

1228. Where?—At Ebost.

1229. You are also a surveyor?—Yes.

1230. This report is drawn up for Lord Macdonald?—At Lord Macdonald's instance.

Donald Nicolson.

DONALD NICOLSON, Crofter, Bernisdale, Skaebost (58). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

1231. The Chairman.—You come from Bernisdale, Skaebost?—Yes.

1232. What do you desire to tell us?—It is poverty that brought me here to-day, and the injustice of landlords, and the oppression of bad factors—worse than that, the ground-officer.

1233. But you have nothing to say against the landlord I suppose?—Nothing against our own landlord.

1235. Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A crofter.

1236. Was your rent reduced by the landlord some years ago?—We got the rent reduced to the sum that we stated ourselves.

1237. What had it been before?—£3, 18s.

1238. Mr Sutherland.—Could you take a larger holding yourself if you got it?—It is not for myself altogether that I came here to-day. I came for the people of my place. I myself have come to years, and I don't need much land, but I would like to see land in possession of the young generation that is coming.

1239. Do your neighbours complain that their holdings are too small?—Yes; and they have much reason.

1240. Do you know any place in the neighbourhood where they could get larger holdings?—Yes; and there is no part of the island of Skye from which we have not representatives on our estate.

1241. Have you got any cottars?—Upwards of twenty.

1242. Do you think they would take land if they had the opportunity?—Yes, some of them are applying for it. Portree, Skye. Donald Nicolson.

1243. Would they be ready to show the Commissioners where the land is that they think might be profitably occupied by them?—Yes, in every place about; the whole island of Skye has plenty of vacant land in it.

1244. Mr Macleod.—You cannot specify any particular place?—There is only one township on our estate. The estate is not big altogether: but I am sure that if we asked our landlord he would give us part of it.

1245. Have you asked him?—What we asked of him we got.

1246. But he does not seem to have so much land to give as neighbouring proprietors, I suppose?—There is not on our estate what would serve one-fourth of our poor people.

ARCHIBALD BEATON, Crofter, Aird, Skaebost—examined. Archibald Beaton.

1247. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Aird, I understand?—Yes.

1248. What rent do you pay?—£2, 2s. 6d.

1249. Was that rent reduced some years ago?—The rent was £5, 5s.

1250. Did you fix your own rent at Mr Macdonald's request?—Yes.

1251. Do you carry on any trade?—Not much; doing the best thing I can. I have no trade—back and forward selling things.

1252. What things do you sell?—Bread and tea and sugar and things.

1253. You have a shop?—No, just a cart.

1254. What is it exactly you wish to tell us to-day? Do you desire another holding?—Yes, it is more land I want.

1255. Where do you wish it?—Anywhere I could get it. I am not particular.

1256. Do you wish land on the Skaebost estate?—There is no land on the Skaebost estate that I see proper to give to the like of me. All the land in Skaebost is under planting and deer.

1257. Where would you like to get it?—I cannot say; I don't see that our landlord has anything to give.

1258. But do you see land elsewhere?—Not near me.

1259. Do you wish to be transported to some other part of Skye?—Yes, anywhere where I could get land. I am not particular; I would go anywhere.

1260. Are not you better at home with the business you have got?—I could have the business there as well as anywhere else.

1261. What size of holding do you wish to obtain?—Between £8 and £16.

1262. Well, now, suppose a rent of £16, what extent of arable would you like for that?—I could not say.

1263. How many cows?—Four or five, and some sheep, and I would require a horse for my trade.

1264. How many sheep?—About 60 sheep.

1265. You would give a rent of £16?—No, I would give a rent that might be fixed by the Commission.

1266. Have you any particular locality in view for this holding?—No, any place would suit me well enough, as I go through the country side.

1267. Any part of Skye would suit you?—Borve, Kingsburgh, or any place round about. I am not particular, if I get more to live on.

1268. Mr Macleod.—Would you be prepared to stock such a holding?—I would try.

1269. Do you think you could manage it?—I would not like to say for certain.

1270. You would manage to put up some kind of building too to live in?—I would think so. It is not long since I put up a building already, and I would try to put up another.

1271. Did you get any help with it?—No.

1272. The Chairman.—Your landlord is very good to you?—He is good enough; I have nothing to say against him.

1273. What is your present stock?—One horse.

1274. What stock can your croft hold?—It could not keep a cow and a horse. I think I am better with the horse than going to the fishing or the railway, as I used to do.

ALLAN MACLEOD, Treaslane (49)—examined.

1275. The Chairman.—You come from Treaslane?—Yes.

1276. Are you a crofter?—I have half a croft.

1277. What rent do you pay?—The croft pays £3, 10s.

1278. Was that reduced?—Yes, the old rent was £5, 5s.

1279. Do you wish to obtain a better holding?—Well, our landlord has not much ground for us that he can spare; but we would like the hill along with the crofts. It was taken from our crofts before.

1280. Have you no hill ground?—No. It is a good number of years since it was taken from us.

1281. You want an enlargement of your holding, by the addition of the hill ground?—If we get the hill along with the crofts we will be content.

1282. And you do not wish to leave in that case?—No.

1283. What is the extent of the hill ground?—I cannot say how much it is.

1284. How many crofters are there?—Seven. The tacksman is going to keep two crofts himself, and he will take two shares of the pasture, with the five crofters.

1285. How many sheep do you suppose you would be able to keep?—I consider it will be about 30 sheep, each of us.

1286. Rather over 200 ewes?—Yes.

1287. In addition to that, you would be able to graze some of your cattle and a pony upon the hill?—Yes.

1288. Have you any cattle?—I have one cow and a stirk.

1289. And where do they graze?—On the crofts. There is a cultivated land on the hill that we could work for feeding cattle in the winter time.

1290. You would have to fence it?—To fence or dyke it as we like.

1291. Did you make any application for enlargement of holdings?—No.

1292. Is this hill ground that you refer to on the Treaslane estate?—Yes.

1293. Did you make any application to your landlord about it?—No. The two of us were sent up here from the township.

1294. But, as I understand, neither you nor the other crofters you represent, have any desire to leave your present places if you got this hill ground?—No.

1295. What is the rent of the hill ground at present?—That is more than I can tell just now. The tacksman Mackenzie died, but his sons and his daughter have the holding.

1296. Mr Sutherland.—What use is the hill pasture being put to now?—They have cattle and sheep on it.

1297. So that you want to take the land that the tacksman has got?—Yes, and he says he will share it out; he is going to leave it.

1298. If he is going to do that, you will get what you want?—That is what we would like to get.

1299. Are there any cottars?—No.

Questions suggested by Mr Alexander Macdonald, Proprietor of Treaslane.

1300. Are you not aware that I offered to give that hill to the whole of you twenty years before you were there?—That may be.

1301. Did you not hear that?—Yes.

1302. And I offered to stock it for you, and to back you with the money to take the stock, but you refused it; are you aware of that?—I heard it.

1303. That happened before I took you yourself out of pity when your father died, and gave you a holding there?—I should be there, for my father was there.

1304. Are not you aware that this was offered to you, and that you refused it?—Well, I heard that they got the offer, but it was in such a way that they could not accept it.

1305. What was that?—Because the other township was disputing with them.

1306. You want to break up the other holding, do you know the rent of it?—No.

1307. Is it not £30?—It might be.

1308. And do you think it would be advantageous to break up a £30 holding?—I cannot say.

1309. Supposing I went to live at Treaslane myself, what ground would be left for me if I gave that to you?—There is a park there.

1310. You would just confine me to the park?—You would get the pasture along with myself

RODERICK MACRAE, Crofter, Lynedale. (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

1311. The Chairman.—You are a crofter at Lynedale?—Yes.

1312. What rent do you pay?—£3, 10s.

1313. What was the old rent?—£6.

1314. Do you wish to get a new holding?—Yes.

1315. What extent have you at present?—3¼ acres arable and 20¾ of outrun, with 191 acres of grazing.

1316. Is that in your own hands?—It belongs to the township.

1317. Where is it you desire to obtain another holding?—On Lynedale, where I was born.

1318. Is there land available there?—Yes.

1319. Is it old township land?—Yes.

1320. What is its name?—Breabost.

1321. How many people were in Breabost?—Nine families.

1322. And when did it cease to be a township?—Upwards of 40 years ago.

1323. What led to the families leaving Breabost?—They were put away.

1324. The whole of them?—The whole of them.

1325. Was your father the tenant of the croft where you lived?—Yes.

1326. Where did he go?—Six of the tenants were located in a small corner by the sea-shore, the rest went of their own accord to America.

1327. Where did your father go?—He was one of those who were located on the small holding by the sea-shore.

1328. That is a different holding from what you have got now?—Yes.

1329. How many families could be accommodated now on the old township land of Breabost?—Five, if they got it by the old marches.

1330. How far is that from Lynedale House?—About half a mile.

1331. Is that Breabost township now part of the Lynedale farm?—It is part of the farm, but not part of the Lynedale policies.

1332. Did these removals take place for the purpose of adding the land to the farm?—Yes; our own sheep were gathered on the hill unknown to us, and cleared off the hill.

1333. I see there are two farms; the lands and farm of Breabost in the hands of Donald Macdonald, who is the proprietor, at a rent of £87, 10s.; and the lands and farm of Lynedale Mains, also belonging to Mr Macdonald, rent £56. The land you mean is on the farm of Breabost?—Yes.

1334. Have you been giving your statements just now, as for yourself or as representing others?—I am here for the people of my township.

1335. How many do you represent?—Twelve families.

1336. Do all these twelve families wish to get better holdings?—Yes, they require them.

Roderick Macrae.

1337. Are you now representing their views?—Yes.

1338. Could all these twelve families obtain holdings, such as you have been describing upon the estate of Lynedale?—If the five which Breabost would accommodate with comfort were taken from among us, it would leave the others more comfortable.

1339. By giving their land to the remaining crofters?—Yes.

1340. But is that their idea, do you think?—Yes.

1341. Could you undertake the expense of removal to a holding on Breabost without assistance, by which I mean the stocking of the new holding, and the dwelling-house and steading you would require?—No.

1342. How much assistance do you think you would need?—I have a weak family, and I have only my own earnings. If I got the ground I would try to stock it, with help.

1343. But you could not do it without help?—No.

1344. Indeed, all the expenditure you would need to incur would have to come from some friendly source?—Yes.

1345. Mr Sutherland.—Have you thought the matter all over?—No; I have not thought the matter out sufficiently.

1346. But do you think in a general way, that if an opportunity was given you would face the difficulty?—Yes; with good courage.

1347. The Chairman.—Are there any tenants in Breabost just now?—No.

1348. Are not John and Donald Macleod there?—No, not at Breabost at all.

1349. Do you know a man named John Macleod?—Yes.

1350. Where is his place?—In Fanks.

1351. That is not Breabost, is it?—No, and never was.

1352. How far is it from Breabost?—There is a burn between.

1353. Did that land never form part of the township of Breabost?—No.

1354. How long is it since there was a tenant in Breabost?—Not since the tenantry was evicted.

1355. Was not Peter Campbell living there, and had he a share in Breabost?—He had the hill of Breabost.

1356. I understand you to say there is nobody occupying the land called Breabost except the landlord?—Yes.

1357. And if five families, or whatever be the proper number, were located on that ground, they would not be putting out anybody else except the landlord?—No; not one.

1358. What use is being made of that land at present,—is it arable or grazing land, or what?—It is not cultivated; it is under sheep.

Donald Stewart.

DONALD STEWART, Crofter, Fanks, Lynedale (35)—examined.

1359. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter at Fanks?—Yes.

1360. What is your rent?—24s.

1361. What was your old rent?—£3.

1362. Was it reduced by the Commission?—Yes. I speak for my mother, widow Marion Stewart.

1363. Would you like a new holding?—Yes.

1364. Would the land spoken of by the previous witness, which he calls Breabost, be a suitable place for you?—Some parts of it.

1365. What extent of holding do you desire?—According to the lands.

1366. Suppose you got the best bit of Breabost, how many acres arable would you like?—Fifteen.

1367. And how many sheep?—About 100 acres of pasture.

1368. All to yourself?—Yes.

1369. Are you in any trade?—No.

1370. Do you live from your croft?—Not altogether.

1371. In what other way do you earn a livelihood?—Labour sometimes.

1372. Anything else?—Fishing.

1373. You have not been brought up to any particular trade?—No.

1374. Now, suppose you got such a new holding at Breabost, or similar lands on the estate of Lynedale, could you stock it?—I would try my best to do it.

1375. Have you the means?—We would try enough to do it if we got more land.

1376. Do you think you could do it without assistance?—There are nine of us in the family, and I think we would try to stock it.

1377. Are you all living at home?—No; we cannot live at home.

1378. Those at home and those away would combine to carry the thing out?—Yes.

1379. Do you think that you and your brothers and sisters could do that without any assistance from outside?—If we had the land we would try our best.

1380. But whenever you get the land a considerable amount of expenditure is required at once in stocking and buildings: could you and the rest of the family do that, without assistance?—If we had the land we would do our best. We cannot live on the land we have.

1381. Were the family all brought up on this holding of 1 acre arable?—The whole of them.

1382. How many of them remain at home?—Two of us now.

1383. Is the other your brother or your sister?—My sister.

1384. How many brothers have you away from home?—Three.

1385. What are they doing?—Working wherever they can get work.

1386. And they send home assistance to your mother?—Yes. My father died fourteen years ago.

1387. How was your mother able to struggle on with such a large family after her husband's death? Did she get assistance?—From the neighbours.

1388. Only from neighbours?—That is all. I had to work on the landlord's estate at 6d. a day since I was thirteen years old.

1389. How long did you continue at that wage?—Two or three years.

1390. Did any of your brothers work at the same wage?—Yes.

1391. That is the way your mother got on?—I was then raised to 10d. and then 1s., and that was the highest.

1392. You never got beyond 1s. a day?—The last year of it I got 1s. 6d.

1393. Have you been getting work on the estate recently?—Not for the last fifteen years.

1394. And where do you mainly get work now?—I mean to leave this country in about two or three weeks to get work in the south.

1395. And then come back home?—Exactly.

1396. Are you a skilled labourer?—Fishing is the thing I know best.

1397. Where do you go principally to get labour when you are not fishing?—I am going to make for Glasgow.

1398. Have you got labour there before?—Yes.

1399. Mr Sutherland.—What is the distance of Fanks from Breabost?—About 100 yards.

1400. So that if you got a new holding on Breabost or any other place near, you could build your house and make your new holding from your present home, and take time to do it, years, could you not?—Yes.

1401. So that the initial difficulty of getting a large sum of money to build your steading would perhaps not arise?—My grandfather's house is still up yet.

1402. In Breabost?—Yes.

1403. Mr Gordon.—How far is your house from the sea?—About 300 yards.

1404. Have you a share of a boat at all?—Not in the meantime. There are seven families on 12 acres of land—forty-seven souls in all.

1405. Do any of your neighbours own a boat?—Yes.

1406. Do they make a good living out of that?—Sometimes.

1407. Have you a regular market for your fish?—Not very handy; we have to send it to Glasgow.

1408. Does the steamer call at or near your place?—We have to hire carts at Portree, and pay 5s.

1409. Portree is your nearest shipping port?—Yes.

1410. How far are you from Portree?—About 11 or 12 miles.

1411. There are some families who carry on the trade of fishing near you?—Yes.

1412. And are they in pretty good circumstances?—Near about as myself.

1413. The Chairman.—Were you at the fishing last year?—No.

1414. How long is it since you have been at the fishing?—About seven years.

1415. Why have you given up the fishing?—I got a better situation.

1416. Where was that?—In Dumfries.

1417. What is it?—I was in the Lunatic Asylum.

1418. Do you mean the Crichton Royal Institution?—Yes.

1419. What situation did you hold there?—I was one of the attendants.

1420. How long did you hold that situation?—Eleven months.

1421. How long since is that?—Last year.

1422. That was a very good situation of the kind?—Not bad.

LACHLAN MACLEOD, Crofter, Flashadder, Lynedale (28)—examined.

1423. The Chairman.—You come from Flashadder, Lynedale?—Yes.

1424. Do you represent your father?—Yes.

1425. How old is he?—Seventy-four.

1426. What rent does he pay?—£3.

1427. What was his old rent?—£5, 10s., I think.

1428. What is your father's name?—Malcolm Macleod.

1429. Why does Donald Mackinnon not attend to-day?—He was not well.

1430. He asked you to come?—Yes.

1431. Did he tell you what he wished to be said?—He told us the same that the whole township was for.

1432. What is that?—For more land.

1433. Do you live on the farm of Lynedale?—Yes.

1434. Near where Donald Mackinnon lives?—Yes, in the same township.

1435. Does your father wish more land?—Yes.

1436. Where is the land that you would like to obtain?—All Breabost, as the rest have told you.

1437. Have you anything to add to what the others said?—I am younger than any of the rest, but I can see the land there.

1438. We may take you as concurring in what the others have said?—Yes.

1439. Do you speak for the township of Flashadder?—Yes.

JOHN MACKENZIE, Mossbank, Portree—examined.

1440. The Chairman.—You are factor on the Lynedale estate belonging to Mr Donald Macdonald?—Yes.

1441. Have you something to read to us?—Yes. There are thirty-nine crofters and cottars, paying a yearly rent, as fixed by the Crofters Commission, of £93, 9s. At Whitsunday 1889 the arrears of rent, as fixed by the Crofters Commission, amounted to £166, 7s. At Whitsunday 1891 the arrears of rent and instalments handed over by the late proprietor came to £157, 16s. 3d.; add the third instalment of arrears falling due under the Commission at Martinmas, £37, 10s.; and the arrears of rent for the year from Martinmas 1891 to Martinmas 1892, £23, 0s. 2d., makes a total sum in arrear at this date of rents and instalments up to Martinmas 1892 of £218, 6s. 5d. The expenses incurred in getting decrees for fair rent and arrears against seven crofters were £19, 11s. 3d. Of the thirty-nine crofters and cottars only six are clear of arrears. The probable acreage of the crofters' ground is 1352 acres, made up of 107 arable, 200 outrun, and 1045 pasture. There are only two cottars. The late proprietor, Mr Alexander Macdonald, railway contractor, laid out an enormous sum of money, which was spread among the people in improvements, and since then there has been a considerable sum laid out in fencing.

1442. Did not the property fall into the hands of the bank?—The Commercial Bank of Scotland.

1443. How long was it in their hands?—Four or five years. With reference to this part of Breabost, if it is disconnected with the farm of Lynedale, and only a small portion taken, it would cut up the whole of the ground, and make the farm perfectly useless.

1444. Could not some means be taken for connecting the hill ground with the lower ground, and at the same time allow Breabost to be utilised in the way suggested?—There is only a narrow strip up to the lodge gate, which is in possession of the hotel-keeper; and there is only a small strip to Breabost.

1445. Would there be any difficulty in making a cattle pass?—It depends on how much was taken.

1446. Is the sole reason you give that it would produce a discontiguity between the high ground and the lower?—Yes, it would be perfectly cut off.

1447. That would be your sole reason for opposing the proposition made?—And this low ground is necessary for the wintering of the sheep that summer on the high ground.

1448. Could not they winter elsewhere on the lower ground?—They could, but not without cutting through Breabost.

1449. They could have a pass through?—Passes are not very satisfactory.

1450. Assuming that the sheep could get from the high to the low ground, there is other low ground besides Breabost on which they could winter?—Certainly.

1451. And what would be sufficient for all the sheep that could summer on the high ground?—Both high and low ground are used for them.

1452. So that if this difficulty of a line of connection between the two grounds was got over, the principal difficulty would be overcome in giving this accommodation to the crofters?—Well, I am afraid the other bit would not let.

1453. You did not suggest that before?—It would require to be let as a separate holding.

1454. It would let as crofts?—No, there is no arable ground.

1455. Mr Macleod.—Do I understand you to say that, supposing there were small holdings made at Breabost, they would not require that high and low ground that you speak of for their stock?—Yes, if they took the whole of it.

1456. But supposing that you contemplate a condition of things where the small holders would take the whole of it, there would be no reason why these small tenants who would be in Breabost should not occupy the whole of that high and low ground?—If they take the whole of Breabost.

1457. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to the arrears on the estate, Mr Mackenzie, you made a statement about the delegates staying away on account of being in arrear, and it is quite evident that several crofters are in arrear; but is not that an indication that there is need of some change being made in their circumstances?—In the case of the absentee, he holds two crofts, and ought to be able to pay better than the others.

1458. But, looking at the matter generally, have the crofters not fallen into arrears very much through the smallness of their holdings?—I don't know that.

1459. And the low prices?—The low prices current affect everybody.

1460. And it is no wonder at all to find such people in arrear?—Well, others pay their rents, and they are subject to the same low prices.

1461. Many pay their rents by getting assistance from members of their families working in the south?—That is a general custom.

1462. The Chairman.—I want to ask you this, Donald Stewart—and the blue-book confirms him—tell us that his mother has one acre arable. Do you think that a suitable holding for anybody?—It is small enough; but it may be sufficient for a fisherman.

1463. But he has not been fishing for the last seven years. Do you think anybody can live, except in the most precarious way, upon a holding of one acre arable without fishing?—It is not supposed that they lived upon one acre.

1464. Do you suppose it possible?—It is not possible.

1465. It is not a means of livelihood at all?—It is simply a home.

1466. What is the lowest size of holding you would, if you had to begin the thing anew, give a crofter in your quarter of Skye,—a croft that would be self-supporting?—I should say a croft of about 30 acres, to give a man a decent living.

1467. How many acres arable do you put there?—I would give him from 15 to 20 acres, according to the ground.

1468. And how many sheep?—He would require at least 100 sheep.

1469. And how many horses?—He would almost require two horses.

1470. How many hands would be required to work that croft?—A man, if he had his family, might work the croft himself.

1471. I am supposing he has sons growing up, 18 to 25 years of age?—A couple of them should work it. A man and his son might work it, with a little extra assistance at spring-time and harvest.

1472. And would he require any female assistance?—Certainly.

1473. What cattle stock would you suppose that man to have?—He could have from 6 to 8 cows, according to the ground.

1474. And their followers?—And their followers.

1475. And, still supposing you proceed to begin the thing anew, is that the lowest size of holding you would assign to a man in the expectation that he would be able to work his croft profitably, and pay his rent, and make a comfortable living?—And to live entirely upon it.

1476. Is it your opinion that a man who has to live by the sea and not by his croft should have a very small croft?—Yes, a patch for his house and potato ground.

1477. He should not be distracted by the duties of a larger croft when he has the occupation of fishing to engage his time?—Very often the time when he would attend to his croft is the principal fishing time.

1478. He is apt to fall between two stools?—Yes.

1479. What was the outcome of the fishing in Skye last year?—Well, it was not good at all.

1480. Was it bad all over Skye?—In some parts it was better than here; but generally it was poor.

1481. It was a failure in the general case?—Yes.

1482. What was the outcome of the fishing the year before last?—It was very good in some parts of Skye at least.

1483. And the year before that again?—I don't recollect; I think it was good.

1484. Is the Skye fishing mainly herring fishing, or white fishing, or both?—Mainly herring fishing, but there is a good deal of white fish caught, and lobsters.

1485. Do the Skye fishermen go much afield?—Yes.

1486. They go to Stornoway, do they?—Stornoway and the east coast and the west coast.

1487. Do they go to the coast of Ireland?—Yes, but not so much now.

1488. Mr Gordon.—Is there any place at Lynedale where they could land their boats?—There is not a very good landing place.

1489. Could the landing place be improved?—I have no doubt it could.

1490. That would encourage them more to the fishing than the farming, if they had a better harbour?—Yes, they might fish there.

Portree, Skye. — John Mackenzie.

1491. Eleven miles is not very far—the fishermen on the east coast have further to go?—They might have a good landing place below Fanks.

1492. And in fairly deep water?—Oh yes.

1493. It would be safer for the boats?—Not very safe in a gale.

1494. It could be improved and made safe?—Certainly.

1495. Mr Macleod.—Have you employed any means to take advantage of the Act providing for the erection of boat shelters and slips?—I believe the County Council have been trying it, but the matter is hedged about with such difficulties that they cannot adopt the Act.

1496. But there has been a local effort to get the grant under that Act?—It has been several times before the County Council.

1497. But they found a difficulty in obtaining it?—There is a difficulty in the preliminary expenses before you can get it, which must all be paid locally. The Councils won't expend anything; you must pay the expense of survey and everything, and may after all find your application rejected.

1498. Would this be a pretty central place?—It is on the side of Loch Grishornish.

1499. Could a good few townships take advantage of a harbour there?—Yes.

1500. Within reasonable distance?—Yes; there are seven townships not far off.

1501. There was a crofter here who spoke about the number of cottars. Are you aware whether Breabost was occupied by crofters at any time?—I have no knowledge of it.

DUNCAN KELLY, Drumuie—examined.

Duncan Kelly.

1502. The Chairman.—You came from Drumuie?—Yes.

1503. Have you something to read to us?—Yes.—'We, the tenants of Drumuie, in the parish of Portree, 'beg most respectfully to submit to Her Majesty's 'Honourable Commissioners that the township of 'Drumuie occupies a most unenviable position, being 'hemmed in between the large sheep farm of Skirinish 'on the one side, and the small farms of Achtalean and 'Woodend on the other. Our souming consists of four 'cows and one horse (no sheep). The grazing for our 'cattle is in the Bigmoss, where our cows are in con-'tinual danger of being lost, and in fact many have 'been lost. The small patch of pasture to the north of 'our township is the resort of cattle going to and re-'turning from markets, so it is of no use to us. Our 'crofts, owing to continual cropping and the ground 'getting no rest, refuse to yield as much as we sow; 'this being the case this year when the return does not 'sow the ground back. We did not send a bushel of 'oats to the meal mill this year, and we are under the 'necessity of buying seed oats.

'The way by which our position can be remedied is 'by adding the small farm of Achtalean, presently in 'the hands of a landed proprietor and sublet to a 'Portree hotel-keeper, both non-resident, and a good 'piece of the farm of Skirinish to our township to 'enable us to keep between 50 and 60 sheep each.

'We have submitted the foregoing facts in perfect hope of our case receiving impartial attention.

(Signed) 'HUGH MORRISON.
JOHN MACLEOD.
ALLAN MATHESON.
MARY MACLEAN.
SUSAN NICOLSON.
DUNCAN KELLY.

'DRUMUIE, PORTREE, 19*th April* 1893.'

1504. Do you wish to add anything to that statement?—That is all I can say.

1505. You wish a part of the small farm of Auchtalean, in the hands of the proprietor, and a considerable portion of the farm of Skirinish; and you would show us the ground that you desire to get if we visit the place?—Yes, it is close at hand.

1506. Then you don't want to leave your present holding?—No; but we want more grazing.

1507. You simply want an extension of your hill grazing?—Yes.

1508. And when you say that, do you speak for the other tenants on the place?—Yes, as well as myself. We are six on the township.

1509. And none of you want new holdings—you simply want new pasture?—That is more than I can say. But I think if they got a piece of hill grazing that would keep about 60 or 70 sheep each, the others would be made somewhat comfortable.

1510. Then this is your own statement?—The statement of our township.

1511. You are here as a representative?—Yes.

1512. But have not you been asking for the arable land also that belongs at present to the innkeeper?—It is only a small bit in our neighbourhood.

1513. Is it good land?—Just like other land.

1514. It must be of some value to the present occupier?—I don't know, I am sure.

1515. How far are you from Portree?—Two miles. We have no pasture at all.

1516. What is the size of your croft?—We are not complaining of the crofts, if we had pasture along with them, and the bit of pasture we have we are in danger of losing every day. It is nothing but bog altogether. My rent has been raised twice since I came to it.

1517. Were you before the Crofters Commission?—When I took the croft at first I had it for £5, 10s., and then the rent was raised 3s. for every £1, that made it £6, 6s.; and then this last Commission came and raised it 9s., so that the croft is now rented at £6, 15s.

1518. It must be a very good one. You don't wish to leave it?—Not if I get pasture.

[Adjourned.]

THIRD SITTING.

STRUAN, BRACADALE, SKYE, FRIDAY, APRIL 21, 1893.

Present:—

David Brand, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
Michael Hugh Shaw Stewart, Esq., M.P.
Angus Sutherland, Esq., M.P.
James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esq.
George Gordon, Esq.
Rev. Malcolm Maccallum.
John Macleod, Esq.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

Duncan Mackinnon, Struanmore, Bracadale (38)—examined.

1519. The Chairman.—You are a crofter in Struan?—Yes.

1520. Are you here to make a statement on behalf of the crofters there?—Yes.

1521. Have you put it in writing?—Yes.

1522. Kindly read it.—'The bulk of the district is 'made up of the farms of Balmeanach, Ose, Ebost, Ullinish, Struanmore, Struanbeg, Balgowan, and Totarder.

'1. Balmeanach is two miles by about one. Fifty years ago there were on this farm 14 families and a tacksman. They were sub-tenants; they all had cattle and were pretty well off. Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

'At present it is occupied by one tacksman, carrying a stock of about 600 sheep. Townships were Carroy, Shagary, Balmeanach, Erobain. Duncan Mackinnon.

'2. Ose. There were 15 families on this farm fifty years ago, who were comfortable on their holdings. Townships were Lethglen, 3 families; Ose., 8; Glen-Ullinish, 4. It is $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles by 2, and carries a stock of about 800 sheep. There are 9 crofters on it at the present day; the souming of each crofter is 2 cows.

'3. Glenvicaskill. Fifty years ago there were 14 sub-tenants on this farm, 7 in Glen-vic-askill, and 7 in Glen Ose; they had cattle, horses, and sheep. At present there is only a shepherd on this farm. It carries about 900 sheep; is 2 miles by $2\frac{1}{4}$.

'4. Ebost is 1 mile by $2\frac{1}{2}$; at present estimated to carry about 900 sheep. Fifty years ago there were 27 sub-tenants, in Colbost there were 6, in Ebost 9, Garriemore 4, Glenostle 2, and Glencolbost 6. They all had cattle, and some had sheep. This farm is more suitable for crofters' holdings than any of the former, there being more arable land. There are only 2 crofters at Ebost now, and 5 at Garriemore.

'5. Ullinish. This farm is at present held by 5 joint-tenants, with a sheep stock of over 600.'

1523. What rent do these joint-tenants pay?—£60.

1524. Among them?—Each of the 5 pays £60. That is apart from any reduction.

'On Ullinish there are also 34 cows and 5 horses. Fifty years ago there were 16 sub-tenants on this farm, who were fairly well off. This farm is also naturally adapted for crofters' holdings.

'6. Struanmore is at present occupied by 18 crofters, with a stock of 18 cows and the same number of stirks. 'Fifty years ago there were only 11 on it. The greater part of the hill pasture of this township is now part of Ullinish. A petition by 8 of the present crofters for additional hill pasture has not yet been answered satisfactorily by the landlord.'

1525. When was that petition presented?—About five or six weeks ago.

1526. You say it has not been answered satisfactorily; has there been some answer sent?—We had a note from the factor stating that he had received it. I may add that we made the application because we had it on good authority that Ullinish, as a club farm, was in the market.

1527. Who is at present in Ullinish?—Five joint-tenants.

1528. And these 5 tenants pay, according to your information, £60 each?—According to their own words.

1529. That is £300 in all?—Yes. I asked one of themselves not later than a few days ago, and he told me that there were 5 shares, and that each share paid £60.

'7. Struanbeg. The whole of the hill pasture that belonged to this township has been added to the farm of Ullinish, and also a part of the arable land. There were 10 sub-tenants on this farm fifty years ago. There is only 1 now, with no land. It is occupied by the inn-keeper, what remains of the old arable land. It is only a part of the old original Struanbeg that is thus occupied by the inn-keeper; the rest was added to the farm of Ullinish.

'8. Balgowan is a narrow strip held at present by the inn-keeper at Struan. Thirty-five years ago there were 7 sub-tenants on it; there are 6 on it now, with very small holdings indeed.

'9. Totarder. This farm is at present occupied by one tacksman. It carries a stock of about 800 sheep. There are 2 sub-tenants on it. Twenty-five years ago it was occupied by 4 tenants, and 1 cottar or sub-tenant. These had a sheep stock of about 400 sheep, with 45 cows and 4 horses.

'These are all the old townships, and there are 6 delegates to corroborate these statements. The whole of the district is in every way suitable for crofters'

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

Duncan Mackinnon.

'holdings, there being sufficient arable land on which crofters could live in comfort. It is therefore the wish 'of the people that it should be subdivided into suit-'able holdings, so as to enable them to maintain them-'selves on their crofts. It is the urgent wish of the 'people that Government should pass a law that would 'benefit not only crofters, but cottars and sub-tenants.'

1530. How many cottars are hereabout, in this district of Struan?—We will give you that information later on.

1531. Are you a teacher?—I am a joiner to trade.

1532. You belong to the district, I suppose?—Yes, I was born here.

1533. In your opinion are the present holdings of the crofters here too small for profitable cultivation?—Do you refer to the 18 crofters?

1534. Yes.—Oh yes, by far.

1535. The whole of them?—Every one of them. They are equally rented, and by far too small for any family.

1536. Do the people live by their crofts, or partly by them and partly by fishing?—They do not live by the crofts. It is no wonder, since they lose by the crofts, because, supposing they were in other engagements, they would require to work in spring and in harvest, and they only keep the crofts at their present size in order to get the site of their houses.

1537. How do they mainly live?—At present they do not go into the fishing industry very much. They go to other places to work, mostly labouring.

1538. They mainly subsist by wages from labour?—Yes.

1539. Is it your opinion that if they got such holdings as you point at in that paper, these holdings could be made self-supporting?—Yes, by all means.

1540. To what size of holding do you refer; begin with the arable?—I think 15 acres of arable, and about 60 of outrun; but it depends altogether on where they got these, and I was thinking that 5 cows with their followers, and about 50 sheep and a horse.

1541. Now for these sheep, do you propose hill grazing?—Hill grazing.

1542. Common hill grazing, or club farm grazing, or exclusive grazing,—which?—In some senses the club stock does not work well. I think the crofter would thrive better if he had that piece for himself.

1543. A piece of grazing able to sustain 50 sheep?—Yes.

1544. Have you made any estimate of the number of holdings, such as you describe, that could be formed on the lands you have mentioned?—No, I have not gone into that.

1545. Is there, in the land you have told us of, an area sufficient to accommodate the whole of the Struanmore crofters on self-supporting crofts?—Well, the delegates were thinking over that, and, in their judgment, by getting the land the size of the croft I have mentioned, it would pay them well, as the large farmers of the district, at least some of them, hold their land.

1546. They would be willing to pay a rent for these holdings, corresponding in amount to the rent paid by the neighbouring farm?—That is what I mean.

1547. Would the crofters be able to stock these holdings themselves?—There might be an odd man here and there who would, but, take them as a whole, they would not.

1548. Do they know enough of cultivation of arable to work, say 15 acres, to the best advantage?—Yes.

1549. Would they be able to put up the necessary dwelling-house and steading without assistance?—There might be an odd crofter among them who would; but, as a whole, they would not.

1550. Have there been, among the Struanmore crofters, for a length of time, complaints made,—among themselves, I mean,—of the limited extent of their holdings?—It is mostly done every day that they go out among their crofts.

1551. Is the effect of the smallness of their holdings this, that they are obliged to scourge the land year after year; that they are not able to give the land a rest, but are obliged to sea-ware it from year to year, and take out of it what they can get?—Yes.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

Duncan Mackinnon.

1552. Having no spare land to rest one year and cultivate another?—That is so.

1553. But you think if they got a larger extent of arable, and corresponding grazing, that would enable them to give it a rest from time to time, as the necessities of the case required?—Yes.

1554. Then they understand about rotation of crops?—As a general rule, they do.

1555. What would they grow upon their holdings?—Potatoes, corn, and patches of turnips.

1556. Do they grow any barley?—No, it would not do.

1557. Do they grow anything else?—That is all; and patches of rye grass.

1558. Do they use their corn for the purposes of grinding, or for purposes of feeding?—For fodder.

1559. Why is that: is it because they are short of fodder, or because they think it is the best way to do?—It is not easy, perhaps, for me to answer your question.

1560. You are answering very well.—I think it is about ten years since we got these 18 crofts. Well, from the new ground that we took in, we were selling corn the first five or six years; but now, as the land has no rest, the cattle will take all the corn and the fodder, excepting there might be some that might sell a little corn now and again.

1561. You mentioned ten years. What did you refer to?—It is about ten years, if my memory does not fail me, since we got these 18 crofts from the landlord, Macleod of Macleod.

1563. When the landlord afforded these holdings, did he make advances,—I mean, did he spend money in any form in assisting them to settle?—No, unless this, that there was a march fence put up between themselves and the Ullinish small farmers, and for that fence they were charged 2s. per croft for three years, and at the expiry of three years our present factor cut off these two shillings.

1564. What kind of land was it that you got,—was it waste land, or land that had been formerly under cultivation?—Formerly under cultivation by the sub-tenants of old Struanmore.

1565. Was it run out or exhausted land, or land with a good deal of substance in it?—Almost run out.

1566. And did the tenants begin to experience the consequences of that two or three years after entering?—Yes, that is so.

1567. Did the landlord do anything towards helping to fertilise the land when the tenants entered?—Nothing.

1568. Or did he do anything towards trenching, or draining, or dykes, or building houses?—Nothing.

1569. That is a very important point. What was done about the building of the houses,—did they just put up their own houses as best they could?—The sub-tenants lived on the present township, and only possessed a corner of the arable land, and they were able to stay in their houses supposing they got these small crofts. But there are five or six new houses put up at their own cost since then, and they are very comfortable.

1570. Upon the holdings?—Yes.

1571. Some of them have houses on their holdings, and some of them have houses in this corner?—They have the houses where they had them at first, and they still hold these houses.

1572. We can see these houses, I suppose,—how far is Struanmore from where we are?—You can see some of the old houses from where we are.

1573. As to the thatching of the houses, I suppose they managed it themselves, without the assistance of the landlord?—They had the rushes that were used to thatch their houses when they were sub-tenants from the tenant of Ullinish, and they hold that yet. But there were some encroachments on that liberty some years ago. But when we received the present holdings, the late factor, Mr Alexander Macdonald of Portree, sent word to the crofters here to send a petition down to Dunvegan on a certain date, and he gave them their old rights in connection with the peats and the sea-ware.

1574. Where do they get their sea-ware,—opposite their own holdings, or have they a right of sea-ware over the neighbouring farmland?—They have a right to the sea-ware from time immemorial.

1575. As sub-tenants?—As sub-tenants.

1576. But do they get enough of sea-ware for the ordinary purposes of the croft?—Not on this piece of shore that they had from time immemorial; but they go to the other side Talisker, and on this side Drynoch.

1577. Do they go there of right, or on tolerance?—The first time that the Struanmore crofters went to the Talisker side they sent word to an old man, who is present here (Donald Mackenzie), that Mr Cameron of Talisker had to divide the sea-ware,—to come and put out pieces of sea-weed for them. Well, he did not come, and they went on with the cutting of the weed, and, of course, they were just allowed to do so. Well, later on they went to the Drynoch side, and on going to Mr Scott he asked them were they from Struanmore, or where, and they said, from Struanmore; and he kindly granted them as much sea-weed on his shore as they would like to get.

1580. And pay nothing for them?—Nothing for them.

1581. Was it intended, do you know, when this statement was made, ten years ago, that the holdings should be self-supporting, or was it only intended that they should have a home there?—Just a home. They had neither cow nor sheep, and it was, I may say, through Miss Macleod of Macleod that they got these 18 acres. She was the main starting point of them, herself, and her sister, Mrs Ferguson, deceased. They requested the Struanmore crofters to put in a petition to their brother, the landlord, and he kindly granted their request.

1582. Has any Struanmore crofter, since being settled there ten years ago, been able to subsist in any one year through the profits of his holding?—No, no.

1583. Not one?—No.

1584. They have always struggled along by means of outside labour?—Yes.

1585. Where do they get that labour in the main, in Skye or outside of Skye?—Outside of Skye.

1586. Going south working and earning wages, and coming back?—Yes, it is a great loss to them.

1587. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You said just now that some of the houses in Struanmore were old, were existing before, and five or six you said were new and very comfortable. Were they put up by the crofters?—By the crofters.

1588. How were they able to make them so comfortable?—By their labour.

1589. By getting work elsewhere?—All over the world. There might be an odd man that would get a few days' work in Skye, here and there.

1590. Then as regards Ullinish, you say the five joint-tenants pay £60 rent each. Have they not had considerable reductions of rent?—I could not say.

1591. Do you know if Macleod helped them by any advance of money when they first started?—To the best of my belief they put up their own houses at their own expense.

1592. But do you know if he gave them any advance of money at all?—I could not say.

1593. Mr Sutherland.—In the event of holdings being given to the people hereabout in the townships you have referred to, do you think there would be any great difficulty in building homes for them and reclaiming or re-occupying the land? Put it this way; would you yourself, if a favourable opportunity of this kind was given you, be inclined to take one of the new holdings in these townships?—Yes, but I might be an odd case.

1594. But supposing yourself to be in the general position of the people hereabout?—I could not.

1595. You believe that the people, without some assistance from outside, could build houses such as you would like to see them occupy?—Could not.

1596. But these club farmers to whom you referred in Ullinish are not crofters, of course?—No.

1597. Supposing these holdings were to be given as you seem to be desirous they should, do you think that farming could be conducted very much better than the crofters do their farming now?—Yes.

1598. You referred to the exhaustion of the soil by the constant cropping, and you think that that could be avoided to a great extent if the farm was of the size you indicated?—Yes.

1599. You could have a proper rotation?—Yes.

1600. And you think the people would carry out that system?—They are trying it on the present holdings.

1601. They have made a beginning?—Yes.

1602. And they have found it to their advantage, no doubt?—Oh yes.

1603. I have no doubt then that the necessity for sea-ware or sea-weed being used in these inland holdings would not be so pressing, you would not require to take sea-ware from the coast up there if you had a rotation of cropping?—No; because I would have other manure if I had stock.

1604. Are any of these townships far distant from where the people are just now? What distance is the farthest away of them?—5½ miles.

1605. Some of them are very much nearer, are they?—At the doors.

1606. Is all that land that you have referred to upon one estate?—Yes.

1607. In making houses of the kind you have indicated, the people could save a great deal of money by making the labour themselves, while they were living in their present houses?—Yes.

1608. They could travel to the new holdings, work there, and come back to the present holdings?—Yes.

1609. So that a great deal of expense that would in some cases be necessary, would be avoided in cases where the townships are near?—Yes.

1610. Mr Forsyth.—You said that the holdings which the people wished, and which would be suitable are about 15 acres arable, and 60 outrun; and you mentioned 5 cows and followers, with a horse and 50 sheep. Do you mean any hill pasture besides the 60 acres of outrun?—According to the number of acres that each township at present possesses, it would just come into something about that.

1611. You mean that that would include the hill grazing?—Yes.

1612. That 60 acres of outrun is to keep 50 sheep with the run of the arable?—In winter.

1613. That would be 50 sheep to say 60 acres?—In summer.

1614. Do you think that would be sufficient?—In some cases, I thought it would; but it depends altogether on the situation, as I said before.

1615. You think that the separate system of having the sheep would be best; you don't approve of club farms?—In the way in which the club farm is at present carried on, I don't think it would be to the satisfaction of all.

1616. That is with reference to the club farm of Ullinish?—Yes.

1617. But don't you think it might be possible, if there was a good stretch of hill pasture, that the sheep would do better if they were held in common like a club farm, I don't say like Ullinish farm, for I know nothing about that, would it not pay better to run them together?—It would.

1618. Mr Gordon.—If you were to hold your land separately, the expense of fencing would be very much greater?—We have no objection to a club stock on a right principle.

1619. Well, I am afraid even looking at your fine country here, that there would not be an extent of ground that would keep 5 cows and 50 sheep upon say 80 acres of land for many of your crofters?—It was simply my own opinion.

1620. I have no doubt there is some round about here that would do it, but if you went back from the township a mile, I am afraid you would have to take in a part of the hill?—Yes.

1621. And that would be an additional reason for having a club farm, rather than separate grazings all fenced?—The people as a rule have no objection to club farming on a right principle.

1622. You made a very good statement about the rents. You did not tell us what rent you thought your croft worth, but you said they would be worth the same rent as the farms. Now how much of the farm of Ullinish would you suppose to be taken up by crofters?—Ten or twelve, according to the number of sheep.

1623. You say these ten or twelve men would be paying £30, do you mean to say that a man with 50 sheep, 5 cows, and a horse could pay £30?—No.

1624.—Could he pay £24?—No.

1625. That is where I want to correct your statement. What rent do you think he would be able to pay?—As a rule I don't go by the rent that the present tenant of Ullinish is paying.

1626. But supposing it was very much less than that, I am afraid you would be too high?—I have no authority to state what one of the Ullinish tenants stated to me a few days ago, but I think it won't harm the Ullinish tenants, the landlord, the factor, or myself. I put the question direct to him, and he said that they were paying £60 each. I put the question to him in this way, Now if you would like that yourself and your family would do well in the fifth share of Ullinish, what rent would you like to pay? Half the present rent.

1627. That would be £15?—£15 instead of £30, according to the man's own statement.

1628. That £15 would be the rent of your croft, according to your view of it?—No; because my croft does not come up to near a fifth part of Ullinish. They have about 1000 sheep properly speaking.

1629. You said £800?—Yes, as a rule, but sometimes they have more.

1630. That would be 66 sheep each. What do you think yourself would be the fair rent for 50 sheep, 5 cows, and a horse?—Oh, we look for proper valuators for our land. We would not like to go into rents, because we might be committing ourselves, and I think it is better to keep clear.

1631. You said you would be able to pay the same rent as a farmer?—I am saying that yet. There are some farms on the Macleod estate that we are very willing to pay for a crofter township the same penny on each acre.

1632. Mr Macleod.—You told us about the Struanmore crofters, but you did not tell us the rent that each pays at the present time. What is the rent of each croft?—£3, with rates. We got a reduction of 10s.

1633. They were £3, 10s., and they are now £3?—Yes.

1634. What is the reason you have for being in doubt as to the club-farm principle, is it because the Ullinish club-farm has not been a success?—I don't think I should answer that question, because I have no right as a private man to go into the affairs of the Ullinish tenants.

1635. Quite so. Have you any objection to give me the information as to why you doubt whether the club-farm system would be a success?—It would be a success if each crofter were responsible for his own rent, and that his sheep and cattle or anything that he possessed would not be sold out—my neighbours would not be sold out if I failed.

1636. So that the objection you have to the club-farm system does not arise from anything that is inherent in that system, but from the fact that you are afraid that the rent question would come in and make difficulties,—that is to say, that if each tenant was paying direct to the landlord you would have no doubt the club-farm system would be a success?—It would give more justice to the stock, and save expense of dyking and fencing.

1637. And the only reason why you doubted the system was that you thought it would entail each tenant being responsible for his neighbour's rent?—I daresay that is cross-examination, and I want as a private man to keep clear of all these things.

1638. But you have no objection to state that it is the rent question, and not anything inherent in the club-farm system?—There is nothing in the club-farm system on a right principle to make it other than a success.

1639. You said that when you got these crofts at Struanmore, for the first five years you had good crops?—Splendid crops.

1640. And you have no doubt that if the arable land in those old townships were broken up you would have good crops too?—For a good many years to come, because the tenants would be in a position to manure their crofts with the dung of their cattle.

1641. So that you think that for the first few years there would be a larger crop given by the holdings than probably a few years afterwards?—Well, in reference to our own township, we have only the one cow, and within these five years we were reaping the benefit of the strength of the land; but only having one cow to manure that, we are not able to keep it up.

1642. But my point is that there is no danger that your crops would fail?—No danger at all, by having as many cattle as I refer to, and a croft of the size I have mentioned; it would yield a good crop.

1643. You said that most of the tenants, who are presently in Struanmore, would not be able to take new holdings without assistance. Do you think that if they get assistance they would be able to repay any loan that might be advanced to them, with interest, within a reasonable number of years?—I have no doubt about that; there might be an odd man that might fail, but such is the case everywhere.

1644. But generally speaking?—Generally speaking, I have no doubt about it.

1645. And you would be quite prepared yourself if you took a new holding to repay any loan that might be made?—Yes, on a right principle again; 2½ per cent. interest, and so many years to pay it. I have no doubt but such would suit well.

1646. Mr Maccallum.—About ten years ago, you had not the crofts at Struanmore—you had just houses without land?—We possessed a small corner off our present holdings.

1647. And the houses in that corner, by whom were they built—by the proprietor or by the tenants?—By the sub-tenants who possessed that corner of the Ullinish farm.

1648. And they got no assistance to build these houses originally?—Originally, to the best of my knowledge, they did not.

1649. Then you got crofts; and have these crofts proved a benefit to you?—A mercy to us.

1650. You think, if you had got more than you got of land, you would be still more benefited?—More so.

1651. You stated also that some five new houses had been put up. That was done without assistance?—Without assistance from the landlord.

1652. Would these houses have been built if you had not got the land?—We would not be allowed to build them.

1653. For new holdings you say you would pay a rent corresponding to the rent paid on large farms. Do you think you are paying higher than that just now?—It is our judgment that we are.

1654. And the crofters generally are paying at a higher rate than large farms?—Yes.

1655. You are alluding to the farms that are very large, such as Drynoch, not to medium farms. Is Drynoch a very large farm?—A very large farm.

1656. And you think you could pay a rent corre-

truan, Bracadale, kye.

Duncan Mackinnon.

sponding to such a farm as that?—I refer to that farm.

1657. You look to that more than to such holdings as Ullinish, that are not so large?—We don't want to covet any man's land.

1658. But is it your opinion that such farms as Ullinish, that are not so large, are higher rented than the very large farms, generally speaking—that medium sized farms are higher rented than the very large farms?—According to my judgment they are.

1659. And is it a fact that the rent of Ullinish now is £160?—I beg your pardon, gentlemen. It was £30 that this gentleman told me, not £60, as I said before by mistake. I beg to be excused.

1660. You are quite sure?—Yes, it just occurred to me just now. There are two of them that have one of these shares between them, and each of them pays £15.

1661. Those houses that have been put up on your crofts, which you built without assistance, are they of a character that would suit new holdings such as you have been looking forward to?—Yes.

1662. Mr Munro.—You have told us that if you got your croft extended to 15 acres you would be in a better position to cultivate it properly. Do I understand from that that you would be able to adopt some of the more modern implements, such as ploughing?—Yes.

1663. And, with the assistance of the additional cattle which you would be enabled to maintain on the farm, you could have a proper quantity of manure?—Yes.

1664. And cultivate the soil properly?—Yes.

1665. I think also you told us that the quality of the grain you produce was so indifferent that you used it mainly for the feeding of the beasts?—As a rule we do.

1666. Can you not at present make oatmeal of the grain you make on the farm?—As a rule we have to send south at least every second or third year for new seed.

1667. You are aware, no doubt, that large quantities of oatmeal have to be imported annually into Skye?—Yes, now.

1668. Well, supposing you got a croft of the size you have been speaking of, and had more modern implements of cultivation, would you be enabled to produce a better quality of grain, and thereby save the importation of oatmeal?—Yes.

1669. And I suppose that answer applies, in your opinion, to the whole of Skye?—To the whole of Skye.

1670. So that under the existing system of small crofts you are unable to cultivate them as they ought to be cultivated?—We are not.

1671. But if you had the larger holding, you could?—We could.

1672. You have spoken about advances to help you to build your necessary houses and steadings for the enlarged crofts,—what amount of money do you estimate would be required to enable you to build these houses? Take a holding of 15 acres, with 60 of outrun, would £60 be sufficient?—No.

1673. I mean with the assistance of your own labour?—Well, it would be a great help to build a house something similar to the new houses that were built in our township. But there are other outside houses which would have to be built very substantially in order to come up to the present mode of matters.

1674. Could you not manage now to build these houses, gradually removing from your present croft to the enlarged one?—If we got our new holdings within the 5 miles that I referred to, it would be a great saving for them to build their houses, when they could come back to their old holdings. I refer to the Struanmore township and the other sub-tenants.

1675. You are perfectly satisfied that if you got an advance of money necessary to enable you to build these houses and to acquire your large croft, you would be able to repay it?—Yes.

1676. With interest?—Yes.

1677. In how many years do you think you could repay it. Thirty?—To be sure of it; leave it just at that.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

Duncan Mackinnon.

1678. The Chairman.—What rent do you pay yourself?—£3, with rates.

1679. And do you live at Struanmore?—At Struanmore.

1680. What extent of land do you hold?—The outrun.

1681. Were you dealt with by the Crofters Commission.—Yes.

1682. Give us the extent of your arable as nearly as you can?—About 72 acres; there are 18 crofts.

1683. Do they average about 3 acres arable?—In making it up to-day, I brought it out at 4, but I am not certain.

1684. That is arable and pasture?—No, only arable.

1685. I think we may take it as averaging a little over 3 acres arable. Have you outrun besides?—There is 172 acres of common grazing.

1686. But has your croft attached to it any outrun besides the arable exclusively belonging to the croft?—Yes.

1687. How much?—It is common to the 18 crofts.

1688. Suppose these holdings you have been talking of were established, would the crofters of Struanmore be favourable to the adoption of the Grazings Act to regulate common pasture if they got common pasture? Do you know about the Grazings Act?—Very little.

1689. It has not been adopted anywhere in this locality that you know of?—I don't know about it.

1690. It is an Act of Parliament which enables the Crofters Commission to frame rules and regulations for the management of a common grazing by a committee of the crofters, the committee taking charge of the grazing and appointing a shepherd if a shepherd is required, and seeing to the management of the sheep stock from the beginning to the end of the year, and the division of the profits if there are any profits to divide?—Such is the case among people in our own day.

Questions suggested by Mr J. T. Mackenzie, Factor for Macleod of Macleod.

1691. Can you tell us the substance of the petition that you have referred to?—It contained a request that the eight crofters present when the petition was written out should get what lies of the Ullinish farm eastward from the old margin of Struanmore, and that Macleod of Macleod knew that we never went in for the 'no rent' policy, and we would each of us pay our rent; and that in asking our present request we did not want to rob Macleod of Macleod of anything, and that we were willing to pay our rents for six months, and take the stock presently on the ground at a valuation.

1692. Mr J. T. Mackenzie.—As I understand the petition, it was a request for the portion of the Ullinish farm which is pastured by the five tenants he has already referred to; and the next question I would wish to put is,—if he expected the prayer of the petition to be answered, what would he intend to make of these five tenants if the land were taken from them?—Witness. I am able enough to answer that question. I have it on good authority that there are two of the present tenants of Ullinish who are very willing to get rid of their part of the farm. We were led to understand that it was in the market, and it was that that led us to make the request. We had no desire to deprive the Ullinish tenants of their rights. But if these two left, then if we got our request, the other three that remained would be able to take up the remainder of the Ullinish farm.

1693. Mr J. T. Mackenzie.—Did my letter to you, acknowledging receipt of the petition, not state that no part of the Ullinish farm was on the market?—Witness. You said in your note that it was not on the market, and very likely it would not be this year; but that was after we had lodged our petition.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

Duncan Mackinnon.

1694. Mr J. T. Mackenzie.—The witness stated a short time ago that the ground at Struanmore, which they now occupy, is quite exhausted from overcropping.—Witness. Almost, not quite exhausted.

1695. Mr J. T. Mackenzie.—I now wish to ask whether the Struanmore people have or had at any time been selling the corn off their farm to people away out of the district altogether?—Witness. I answered that question to the Commissioners already,—to the Royal Commission.

1696. The Chairman.—Just answer it again to Mr Mackenzie.—Witness. There might be an odd stack of corn sold out from the township, and sold when these people were on the verge of starvation, and half-starved their own cattle in order that life might be kept in themselves and their families. I am certain sure of what I say, and I don't speak against a factor, a landlord, or a crofter.

1697. Mr J. T. Mackenzie.—Is it known to the witness and to many who are better versed in farming, that it is against the common rule of every estate to take corn off one farm and put it on to another, because that removes the means of manuring the ground?——

1698. The Chairman.—I think you need not answer that question.—Witness. I have no hesitation in doing it.

1699. The Chairman.—Well, do so.—Witness. If we had an outrun that would keep an additional cow, that would convert these odd stacks of corn that might be sold out into dung, we would be only benefited by it. But when we have not got that, then we must put it to the best advantage, and that is to dispose of it at its best value.—Mr H. V. Maccallum, Solicitor, Inverness. I should like to put one question.—The Chairman. Are you representing Macleod of Macleod?—Mr Maccallum. I represent the Highland Property Defence Association, of which Macleod of Macleod is a member. —The Chairman. What is your question?

1700. Mr Maccallum.—In reply to your Lordship, witness said that in none of the townships which he mentioned were the crofters able either to stock or to build. In reply to Mr Macleod he said that if they got a loan, he thought through time they would be able to pay back that. The question I wish to put through your Lordship is this: Supposing he got the loan, is he in a position to stock the holding?—Witness. As a rule, and according to my judgment, the crofters, when they get this loan, do not look on it as a help to make the necessary buildings, but likewise, if they cannot get the loan without taking over the stock, they look for that loan for both stock and building.

1701. Mr Munro.—Mr Mackenzie seemed to suggest that there was a complaint against the crofters, inasmuch as they were in the habit of selling the corn off their crofts occasionally. Now are you aware that that is a habit that prevails elsewhere as well as in Skye among the farmers in the lower parts of Scotland?—Yes.

1702. If you had a proper croft, and were enabled to pursue a proper system of tillage, am I right in saying that you would be in a position to have the grain now used by your cattle converted into meal for your family?—Yes.

1703. So that it is owing to the disadvantageous circumstances in which you are placed that you are at present compelled to sell off your corn occasionally?—To a great extent.

Donald Campbell.

DONALD CAMPBELL, Struanmore, Bracadale (65).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

1704. The Chairman.—You are a crofter at Struanmore?—Yes.

1705. Settled there ten years ago?—Yes.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

1706. Did you hear Mr Mackinnon's statement to us?—Yes.

1707. And do you concur in the evidence he gave? —Yes.

Donald Campbell.

1708. Do you wish to add anything to his statement?—Not much; I have nothing in addition to what he said.

1709. If there is anything special that you would like to tell us, we should be glad to have it.—Only this, that I remember the people being evicted from these places that Mr Mackinnon spoke of.

1710. How long ago?—Fifty years ago.

1711. Mr Macleod.—Do you remember the circumstances of the people before they were evicted?—Yes.

1712. Were they in comfortable circumstances?—Yes; those in the glen had horses and cattle and sheep, and others had two cows each.

1713. They were more comfortable than they are in Struanmore?—Yes, they had as much land as they could till.

1714. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Was not that the time of the great famine?—Yes, that is the year.

1715. And did not Macleod of Macleod do all he could for his tenants at that time?—He put out every man of them he could from Bracadale to Glendale.

1716. But did he not spend a great deal of money in buying food and seed for his people through the famine?—I don't remember that.

Hugh Macdonald.

HUGH MACDONALD, Struanmore, Bracadale (69).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

1717. The Chairman.—Did you hear Mr Mackinnon's statement—Yes.

1718. Do you concur in the evidence and the information he gave?—Yes, every word.

1719. Would you like to make any addition to it yourself?—I don't know.

1720. If there is anything special, or anything you think he forgot, we should be glad to hear it.—I have nothing special to say about the land.

1721. Mr Maccallum.—Do you know that the people were sent from Bracadale to Glendale?—Yes, I saw them in the Glen before they went to Glendale at all.

1722. Why were they sent to Glendale?—To clear the place for the factor, who took their land in their stead.

1723. Could they get work at Glendale?—No, except fishing, which they did not know anything about.

1724. They were not accustomed to fishing?—No, never; they were born and brought up in the Glen.

1725. And the only employment they could get at Glendale was fishing?—Yes, if they knew how to do it. I don't know if they ever fished.

1726. Mr Munro.—Are you now a fisherman?—I was fishing many a time.

1727. Do you practise fishing still?—Very little.

1728. Mr Shaw Stewart.—About fifty years ago, if there were tenants evicted, were there not new crofts formed in Glendale?—I don't know, but they were put out of the place they were in.

1729. Did you never hear that new crofts were formed in Glendale in 1845?—Yes, I heard that before; bits given them.

1730. And the deep sea fishing encouraged by Macleod at that time?—Yes, but they knew nothing about that.

Mr J. G. Mackay, Portree.—By some misunderstanding the delegates on this side of the loch have left out the farm of Drynoch. I would like your lordship to ask witness about the townships that did exist on the farm of Drynoch.

1731. The Chairman.—You know the farm of Drynoch?—Yes.

1732. Do you remember townships, or a township, there?—Yes.

1733. Give us the names?—Meadle, Somerdale, Crossbreck, Glenbracadale, Glencrossal, Boust, Achalean, Fearann-nan-cailleach, Amar, Achadh-a'-char, Crossal, Beinn-dubh.

1734. Do you remember all these townships yourself?—I remember some of them being inhabited, but the places themselves will show; the remains of the houses are there yet.

1735. How many families in your recollection resided on Drynoch?—I cannot say; I was so young at the time.

1736. Is it possible to trace the evidence of the townships you have mentioned upon the farm?—Yes, I will take the Commission to every one of these places.

1737. Can you give us the locality of each one of these townships you have mentioned?—Yes, I will show you the sites of the houses.

1738. Mr Maccallum.—The crofts at Glendale to which the people went from the glens were spoken of as new holdings made for them. Do you know if these were made out of a crofting township that was then occupied by crofters?—They got new holdings, not among other crofters.

1739. Did they remain long in that place?—Some of them died there, and some of them were cleared out from there again.

1740. Did some go to the township of Milovaig?—Some of them are in Milovaig yet.

1741. And that is a crofter township?—Yes.

1742. Did Macleod build houses for them there?—No, never.

1743. Was the number of the crofters doubled by the number going there from Bracadale?—I cannot tell that.

DONALD MACDONALD, Ose, Bracadale (75). Donald Macdonald.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

1744. The Chairman.—Did you hear Mr Mackinnon's opening statement?—Yes.

1745. And you quite concur in his evidence?—Yes, and he might have said more too.

1746. Is there anything that you would like to add?—He said enough, but I could tell a good deal more of what I have seen and heard.

1747. Mr Macleod.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

1748. What is your rent?—£2, 7s. and rates.

1749. Was it reduced?—No.

1750. You were not before the Commission?—No.

1751. To whom do you pay your rent?—To Macleod.

1752. Were you born at Ose?—I was born at Ebost.

1753. Why did you leave there?—I don't remember being in Ebost; my father left there and went to Ose.

1754. And do you remember when those townships that were spoken about were peopled?—Yes, and I remember many of the people occupying them.

1755. Were they in more comfortable circumstances than the people are to-day?—Yes, they were better than the sort of tenants who are left to-day.

1756. Had they more stock than they have to-day?—Yes, sheep, and cattle and horses; they were not under the necessity of buying food or drink.

1757. What arable land have you got?—I have not much; it was not measured.

1758. How many bolls have you sown?—Sometimes I sow 2½ bolls.

1759. Can you tell us what stock you have got?—Two cows; that is all, except hens.

1760. No sheep?—No, never had a sheep; I am in good hopes I will have them now.

1761. Mr Shaw Stewart.—At the time you speak of when they were more comfortable, was there any reclaiming of land or fencing going on?—Yes, they were doing that, and they were enclosing their ground with dykes, not with wire fence, as now.

1762. Was there not a good deal of work going in the way of trenching ground which Macleod was reclaiming from the waste?—I don't think there was; but the sheep farmers were certainly draining.

1763. So that there was a little work going, and wages for labour?—Yes, there was. The wages were not much. Struan, Bracadale. Skye.

1764. They were not entirely dependent upon what they got from their crofts?—The crofts would not do much for them. Donald Macdonald.

1765. Mr Maccallum.—Were the houses more comfortable then than the houses which they built in the corner to which they were sent?—The houses that they had served their purpose very well.

1766. Were they better than those they put up in the corners to which they were put?—To tell the truth, I myself have built three houses in succession, and each house was better than the one before, but the expense was entirely my own.

1767. Had they separate byres in the olden times?—In some cases.

1768. Mr J. T. Mackenzie.—The witness has told us that he was in the habit of sowing 2½ bolls of corn. I should like him to say what return he had from those 2½ bolls.—I sowed that quantity last year, and I bought this year a quarter of oats to sow the ground. I did not make a particle of meal last year, and I sold no part of the crop.

1769. Question repeated.—I never measured it, but I am thinking it would be quite enough if I got back the quantity that I sowed.

JOHN MACLEAN, Ebost, Bracadale (38)—examined. John Maclean.

1770. The Chairman.—You are a crofter at Ebost?—Yes.

1771. What rent do you pay?—£2, 10s.

1772. Were you before the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

1773. Recently?—Yes.

1774. And have you heard their decision yet?—Not yet.

1775. You heard the whole of Mackinnon's statement?—Yes.

1776. And do you concur in it?—I concur in every word.

1777. Do you wish to make any addition to that statement?—No, I have no addition to make, with the exception of this. There is one township on the farm of Drynoch that has been omitted—Glenvidigill.

1778. Are you able to speak of these townships of your own knowledge?—No.

1779. Was there a tenant on the farm of Drynoch?—No; he was a sub-tenant on Talisker farm.

1780. Have you anything more to say?—No.

1781. Mr Gordon.—Are there any crofters in this neighbourhood who would willingly take a small patch of ground at the seaside and prosecute fishing if they had a good house?—I believe there are, but I am not going to give that as the opinion of the whole.

1782. Do you think there are a few who would take to fishing naturally as an occupation?—I have no doubt there may be a few.

1783. The Chairman.—Mr Gordon means, who would live by the sea and not by the croft?—Not at present.

1784. As fishermen occupying a small cottage with a patch of potato ground?—There may be a few.

1785. The object of my question is to see if we can ascertain the number of applications for new holdings?—I believe they will all go in for new holdings.

1786. Taking to fishing as an industry, I mean?—Yes, I believe there are; but at the same time the means of getting the fish to the southern markets is so slow that the fish is quite useless before it gets there.

1787. Is there a harbour in which you can land fish?—In good weather.

1788. But not for certain?—No.

1789. Does the steamer call round here?—Occasionally.

1790. Not regularly?—There is a weekly steamer and a mail boat, but very irregular.

1791. Mr Munro.—I suppose you would prefer more land to fishing?—Yes.

1792. Mr Macleod.—Would the quantity of fish

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

John Maclean.

that could be got here pay for a steamer to call?—Not without a good many fishing.

1793. And do you think that if there were fishermen here they would get the fish? Is there fish to be got?—Yes.

1794. And do you fish now?—On a small scale.

1795. Are there any who fish on a large scale?—No.

1796. And yet the fish is there?—The fish is there.

1797. There is no regular white fishing?—Yes.

1798. As well as herring?—Yes.

1799. Is the reason there is so little fishing done the difficulty of transport?—As a rule.

Mr J. G. Mackay.—I wish to bring out that there is really no herring fishing on this side of the coast.

1800. The Chairman.—What is the extent of herring fishing on this side of Skye?—It is very limited indeed. In an occasional year we may get a haul, but not as a rule.

1801. Do they go away to the herring fishing from this part of Skye?—Very few.

1802. Are there any big boats on this side of Skye?—None.

1803. What is the largest keel of boat that you are accustomed to here?—About 18 feet keel.

1804. You have a boat, I suppose?—A small boat.

1805. Fourteen feet?—About that.

1806. But there are plenty of white fish in the sea?—Plenty. There was a boat's crew from Portsoy here last winter, and they prosecuted the fishing very successfully. But the steamer called so very irregularly that the fish was sometimes useless, and they had to throw it over the side.

1807. Do the crofters and cottars here get as many fish as they need for their own purposes?—As a rule they have no fishing here.

1808. Do they not go out to catch fish for their own use?—A little in summer time.

1809. Suggested by Mr H. V. Maccallum.—Suppose facilities were afforded for the transit of fish to the southern market, are there a good many in this locality who would be satisfied with small patches of ground and to live by the sea as an industry?—Oh, there are a few.

1810. Only a few?—Yes.

1811. The inclination is rather for a self-supporting holding?—Yes.

1812. Suggested by Mr Myles Macinnes.—Do you think a man who intended to live by the sea could do so all the year round, supposing he had proper boats and gearing?—I should answer that question by the evidence of the Portsoy fishermen last year, who said they could make a living on this side of the coast.

1813. Yes, if they could transport their fish?—Yes.

Donald Maclean.

DONALD MACLEAN, Carbost, Minginish (32).

1814. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter at Carbost?—A cottar.

1815. Do you pay any rent?—£4 to Talisker the tacksman.

1816. Do you work at the Distillery?—Yes.

1817. What wage have you?—£1 a week.

1818. Have you any written statement?—The person who was entrusted with the written statement left it behind; but I can make a verbal statement.

1819. We shall be happy to hear it?—It is the desire of the people to be reinstated in the townships from which they were evicted, and, if necessary, I can give the names of the townships on the tack of Talisker.

1820. Give us their names, please?—Talisker, Scalpatote, Ardhoelmore, Ardhoelbeg, Fiscavaig, Ardthreic, Neille, Lagmore, Ferrinlea, Gortanfhirich, Buaile-nan-clach, Carbostbeg, Tuasdail-iochdarach, Borlin, Leachd-a'-Chleirich, Cnocloisgte.

1821. Are you giving these as the names of townships, or the names of individual holdings?—The names of townships in which a number of people stayed.

1822. Can you tell us the number of families?—In some of them I can, but the statement which will be sent on contains them all.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

1823. Are these lands fit for occupation now by crofters?—Yes. There is no better land in the island of Skye.

Donald Maclean.

1824. Are there a number of crofters anxious to get holdings on these lands?—Yes; the poor remnant that was left of them.

1825. How many crofters are anxious to get holdings on this land?—They are not crofters, but cottars. Every family in which there is a male head.

1826. And how many will there be altogether?—About thirty families.

1827. What size of holdings do they desire?—As much land as would keep four cows and a horse, and fifty or sixty sheep.

1828. Do you mean the sheep to be kept in common, or sheep upon separate grazings?—Just as it would suit best.

1829. Which would they prefer?—To the best of my knowledge, and as I have heard the opinion expressed, it is a joint stock they desire to share.

1830. Would they be able to stock the crofts if they got them?—They are not able to stock them right off.

1831. But could they do so in course of time without assistance?—If they got assistance it would be better; it would put them on their feet sooner.

1832. Both for the stock and the buildings?—Yes.

1833. Of these thirty families, have a number of them employment in connection with the distillery?—Three or four.

1834. Have these families right to seaware or peats at present?—Yes, at present they have.

1835. What rents do they pay, what is the average?—£4 or £3. I understand that those of them who are working for the tacksman himself get the land for £3.

1836. How far is this land distant from the present places of occupancy?—We, the township of Fernilea, are right in the middle of them, and our township is worse off than any of them.

1837. In what respect?—That the soil in our township is worse than the rest, and that accounts for our being sent there.

1838. It is exhausted now?—There is nobody living that can tell when the particular bit that we are working began to be cultivated first; it has been turned often since then.

1839. Would any of these families be willing to take small patches of ground on the seashore, and devote their time to fishing?—They are not given to fishing at all.

1840. They want self-supporting holdings?—Yes.

1841. How far are they from the sea at present?—We are beside the sea at present.

1842. And is the white fishing there good, if it was prosecuted?—We have herring sometimes.

1843. And have you plenty of white fish?—White fish sometimes too.

1844. Have some of the families there got boats of their own?—A few have boats.

1845. And what rents do you think would they be able to pay?—We are not judges, but according to the rents which our tacksman is paying, such a holding would not be above £6 or £7. The tacksman has about 12,000 acres in his own holding.

1846. It is on that ground that these old townships stood, is it?—Yes, and I believe there are 700 acres of arable land in these 12,000 acres.

1847. What stock of sheep does it carry?—I am not sure, but I think it is 10,000. It used to carry 10,000, but the ground is deteriorated now, and it may be less.

1848. What rent does it pay, do you know?—I believe it is £800.

1849. Do you know how many pair of horses he keeps?—I believe he keeps two pair.

1850. Is the land under lease at present?—Yes.

1851. For a term of years?—Yes.

1852. Does the steamer call there?—Two steamers a week.

1853. What is the name of the port?—Carbost, at the distillery.

1854. Is the desire among the persons whom you represent very strong to get additional holdings?—Yes, and I believe they have a sevenfold reason.

1855. How many cottars are there?—Eighteen, some of them having as little as ¼ acre.

1856. What is the average of their rents?—Those who have cattle pay £4. I don't know what those who have not cattle pay.

1857. Are there no crofters there?—They are all sub-tenants.

1858. No cottar, I take it from what you say, pays a higher rent than £4?—Not now.

1859. Do all these cottars get employment from the farm in one form or another?—Not one of them, except two; unless at sheep shearing time.

1860. What do these two work at?—Draining to the farmer.

1861. How do the others live?—Just the earning throughout the kingdom; the common way for them to live is to leave the place and obtain wages elsewhere.

1862. Is it from that labour that they pay their rent, and not from the outcome of the holding?—The tacksman himself is in the habit of buying the stirks from them, and that helps them.

1863. They get along partly from the prices of the stirks, and partly from the labour they do elsewhere?—Yes.

1864. I suppose the tacksman gives them as good prices for the stirks as they can reasonably hope to get?—They are not complaining about the prices.

1865. Mr Shaw Stewart.—What wages do they get at shearing time?—Two shillings a day, and their food.

1866. And how long does the shearing time last?—Not above seven days.

1867. How many were employed at the distillery besides yourself?—Three others get constant work there.

1868. Do some of the others get occasional work there?—Yes, when a vessel with coal or with barley comes to the port, they get employment unloading; but that does not last long.

1869. How often is labour required for a cargo during the year?—There are not above twenty cargoes in the year.

1870. I want to know if the four men regularly employed at the distillery desire to get new holdings?—Yes, they are desirous of having new holdings.

1871. Could they work their holdings and do the work at the distillery too?—No, but they have no certainty of how long the distillery work would last.

1872. But they wish to give up the £1 a week they are getting now for the chance of making a better livelihood on the holding?—They are not all getting £1 a week; some of them are down to 15s. or 17s.

1873. But they would prefer to give that up on the chance of making a better livelihood from new holdings if they got them?—Yes, they would, without doubt. They are not sure but they may be put out of the distillery any day.

1874. Then if the distillery went, they would not be able to sell their stirks in the neighbourhood?—The distillery has nothing to do with the buying of the stirks; it is the tacksman.

1875. The tacksman is quite separate from the distillery?—Yes.

1876. But still, if the new holdings were made out of the tacksman's land, the tacksman would no longer be there?—If that was the case it would give good crofts to those that were left behind.

1877. Where would they sell their stock?—There is a market a Portree frequently.

1878. Have you any reason to believe the lease of the tacksman is likely to be given up?—I know nothing about it.

1879. Would the land that you describe as so bad be included in the new holdings?—I wish to say this on behalf of those from whom I am a delegate, that they would like to have the land that surrounds their present holdings, because their houses are on it, and it would be easier for them to get at. Struan, Bracadale, Skye. Donald Maclean.

1880. Yes, I understand the houses are there; but if the land is so bad it would cost a good deal of labour and money to improve it while you were ploughing the rest of it?—There is good land as near as within a mile of us.

1881. They would not like to leave their present holdings although the land is bad all round it?—Yes, they would leave if they got an opportunity of doing so; but what makes them desire to remain where they are is that if they got land in addition to what they have already, they could easily get on.

1882. Even although the land was some distance away?—There is good land that they could get on either side of them.

1883. How far off?—Quite close; there is only a march dyke between.

1884. How many yards?—The march dyke completely fences us in; the walls of some of our houses are built on the march dyke, and the good land is just beyond that.

1885. Arable or pasture land?—All sorts, in plenty.

1886. Now under the tacksman?—Yes.

1887. Can you show that land to the Commission if they visit your place?—Yes, with pleasure.

1888. Mr Munro.—Do you know anything about the farm of Glenbrittle?—It is in the neighbourhood of us.

1889. Do you know anything about the evictions that have taken place there some years ago?—There were evictions on the tack on which I am myself, as well as some other place.

1890. Are your father and mother still alive?—My mother is.

1891. Does your mother remember any evictions taking place there?—Yes, well.

1892. Does she remember the case of 35 evictions taking place in one day?—Yes, and to the best of my recollection she said it would be about thirty-five or forty years ago.

1893. The Chairman.—I want to put this point to you. You are making £1 a week. Now, suppose you got a holding which required all your time, and therefore must take you away from your present employment and deprive you of your present wage, do you think it would be a wise thing to venture on that new holding and give up your present wage?—I would wish to tell the Commission that I am only engaged for a fortnight where I am, but if I got a croft I would have the croft all the days of my life, and my family would have it after me; and after some time they should have the croft for nothing too.

1894. How long have you been in the employment of the distillery?—Eight years.

1895. In constant employment for eight years?—No; some parts of the year the distillery is not working, and I then go south to work.

1896. Did you go south last year?—Not last year.

1897. Or the year before?—No.

1898. Then you have been in constant employment from the distillery for several years past, at least for the greater part of the year?—Yes.

1899. But you would be quite prepared to give up that if you got a holding large enough to meet your purpose?—Yes, I am quite ready to give up the work any day for such a holding, and I hope it will not be long before I get it.

1900. Suggested by Mr J. G. Mackay.—Do you remember the rent of Talisker farm in 1881?—I heard that it was £1500.

ALEXANDER MATHESON, Carbost, Minginish (62)—examined. Alexander Matheson.

1901. The Chairman.—You are a Carbost man?—Yes.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

Alexander Matheson.

1902. What rent do you pay?—£4.

1903. How long have you been at Carbost?—Twenty-three years.

1904. Where were you before?—At Fiscavaig, at the mouth of the loch.

1905. Did you come up of your own accord?—I came along with my father-in-law.

1906. What brought him up?—They were removed to make room for sheep.

1907. Are you anxious to get out of your present holding, and get another holding?—A larger one.

1908. You heard the evidence of the previous witnesses; do you desire to add anything to that?—No, nothing in particular; I only want a larger holding.

1909. A holding you can live by?—Just that.

1910. If there is anything you would like to add to what has been said before, we shall be glad to hear it?—Nothing but what has been said; we are sub-tenants paying rent to the tacksman, and we feel keenly that we are excluded from the Act.

1911. Do you get work from the tacksman?—No.

1912. Have you any work with the distillery?—No, I have no connection with it; I sell groceries.

1913. You keep a shop, do you?—Yes.

1914. Who are your principal customers?—The people of Carbost and all the neighbourhood.

1915. Do you hold any license?—For tobacco.

1916. Is £4 the rent of the whole subjects you possess?—Yes.

1917. No separate rent for the shop?—No.

1918. Then I suppose if you got a holding you could put the necessary stock upon it?—Yes, to a certain extent.

1919. And you could build a new house with a steading?—I have built a new house already.

1920. In your present place?—Yes.

1921. At your own cost?—At my own cost.

1922. What did you lay out upon it?—I did it by degrees.

1923. How much have you laid out by degrees?—I would say about £80.

1924. And you could build a new house if you got a new holding?—Yes, I could make it.

1925. Mr Shaw Stewart.—I suppose if you had a number of people living round about you in better circumstances it would improve your grocery business?—Certainly.

1926. Would you still look to cultivating your holding, or would you give most time to extending your grocery business?—I could cultivate a middle sized croft.

1927. As well as attend to the business?—Yes.

1928. What do you call a middle sized croft, 15 acres, or less?—Between 15 and 20 acres, with 6 or 7 cows and a horse.

1929. Mr Gordon.—Hove you a horse just now?—I have what I call a jennet, a kind of mule.

1930. Do you use that for travelling through the country with a cart?—No.

1931. You do not travel?—No.

1932. Have you any cows just now?—One cow.

1933. Mr Maccallum.—Can you tell us about Glenbrittle farm, and the townships that were on it?—Yes. It was cleared in my own day with Satran, and Grula and Craiknish.

1934. Do you remember any more?—There were a number of townships cleared early in the century.

1935. There are evident signs on the farm that it was cultivated?—Yes, and the ruins of the houses are still there, and the marches of their crofts and boundaries of their townships are still visible.

1936. In whose hands is the farm of Glenbrittle now?—It is in the hands of the proprietor.

1937. It is evident from the ruins on it that it was thickly populated?—Very thickly populated.

1938. Do you think it is capable of maintaining a large population still?—Unquestionably it supported a large population before.

1939. Is there a church there?—The church is in ruins. It was supported by Queen Anne's bounty, and it went in ruins at the disruption; but the manse is still up, and the shepherd lives in it.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

Alexander Matheson.

1940. And there was a minister regularly officiating in it?—Yes, I remember him; the man that baptised me, Donald Macdonald.

1941. When did he leave, or was he put away?—He left of his own accord. After the disruption there was no congregation for him.

1942. There were not people in the place to attend church?—Oh, plenty; but they all left.

1943. And there has been no minister there since the disruption?—No.

1944. Is there a population there that could use the church?—No, very few; there are only three or four cottars in Glenbrittle.

1945. Mr Macleod.—Can you give us a full list of the townships that are in Glenbrittle, or is there any other witness who can do so?—There is another witness who can do that better.

1946. Would you be prepared to show us the townships you know?—Yes, any time.

JOHN CAMPBELL, Fiscavaig, Minginish (60). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

John Campbell.

1947. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A cottar.

1948. Where do you live?—At Fiscavaig.

1949. What rent do you pay?—£4.

1950. To the tacksman of Talisker?—Yes.

1951. Do you get work from him?—No, I go south to railway work sometimes.

1952. Have you been listening to the evidence of the previous witnesses?—Yes.

1953. And do you agree with that evidence?—Yes.

1954. Do you wish to make any addition to it?—No; it is no good telling all we have seen.

1955. Do you remember the names of the townships that were cleared in Glenbrittle?—Yes.

1956. The whole of them?—Yes, but I don't remember the actual evictions.

1957. Give us the names of the places?—Rudha-an-Dunain, Buaile'-n-tuir, Glenbrittle, Crackinish, Brunal, Gruile, Brae-Eynort, Carbostmore, Trithean, Satran, Mearcadal, Buaile-Shuain, Salachary.

1958. Were these townships cleared about fifty or sixty years ago?—I myself saw some of these townships about forty years ago, but the most of them were cleared before that.

1959. Are the places where these townships stood suitable for cultivation now?—Yes, fine townships.

1960. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Were the people comfortable on these holdings before they left them?—Yes.

1961. And it is all good land?—Yes, good land. There is a great deal that was in cultivation at that time gone under heather now.

1962. But is it in a sheep farm now?—Yes.

1963. When you say the people were living comfortably, were they getting better prices for things in those days than they get now?—I don't think the markets were very good at all; they were getting good out of the soil.

1964. Just living on it, or selling the produce?—Yes, the stock would pay the rent, and they had a good deal of land, and were getting much good out of it. They could kill a sheep then; nobody can kill a sheep now.

1965. Why?—We have no sheep. If we killed a sheep now we would get to prison.

1966. But they had not all sheep in those days?—I believe they had.

1967. Mr Maccallum.—How do you account for there being no delegates from Glenbrittle?—I don't know.

1968. Do you think it is because there are no people there?—There are very few people, but there are some.

1969. Are they scattered?—Yes.

1970. At the time of the disruption was there a fair number there?—Yes, there was a good number. The rules were so strict that if a young man married he dared not show his head within his father's house, and of course he would have to clear out and leave the place.

1971. And the reason the church was left vacant was that the minister left the Established Church?—I don't think that was the reason.

1972. Was there any minister in it after the disruption?—Yes, in the Established Church.

1973. Mr Macleod.—Who has got the farm of Glenbrittle now?—Macleod of Macleod.

1974. How long is it since it has been in the proprietor's hands?—Seven or eight years.

1975. Who was the last tacksman?—Donald Cameron, Glenbrittle.

1976. What became of him?—He went to Inverness.

1977. Suggested by Mr J. G. Mackay.—What rent did Cameron pay?—I believe he paid £1800.

1978. And at what rent does the farm stand now?—£1000 in the Valuation Roll.

JOHN MACASKILL, Fernilea, Minginish (50). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

1979. The Chairman.—Are you from Fernilea?—Yes.

1980. What rent do you pay?—£3, 10s. for an acre of land and grass for a cow.

1981. Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A cottar.

1982. To whom do you pay rent?—To Talisker.

1983. And do you get work from Talisker?—About seven or eight days at shearing time.

1984. How do you make your livelihood?—By shoemaking at home.

1985. You have heard the evidence of the previous witnesses?—Yes,

1986. And do you concur in that evidence?—Yes.

1987. Do you wish to make any statement of your own?—Yes.

1988. You heard the holdings mentioned that the other witnesses would like to see formed?—Yes.

1989. Would you like a holding of that sort?—Yes.

1990. Could you stock such a holding, and put up the necessary buildings without assistance?—It would not be easy for me to do it at the beginning.

1991. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Would you be able to attend to your business well, and work the holding too?—Yes, sometimes; I myself could work outside at the croft, and get others to carry on the shoemaking.

1992. Employ others?—Yes.

1993. By paying them?—Yes.

1994. Do you think the new holding would return you enough to pay the wages of some one to carry on the shoemaking work as well as work the farm?—No, but the shoemaking business itself would pay them.

1995. And have you considered all the burdens on the land,—the rates and taxes that you would have to pay?—Yes, I consider all that.

1996. Mr Sutherland.—Would you prefer to be a successful small farmer, to being a shoemaker?—I believe it would be better for me to be a small farmer; in these days shoemaking is not a paying business. The trade is run out, the people have got so poor. They now buy the cheapest shoes they can get.

DONALD MACLEAN, Carbost (Recalled)—examined.

1997. The Chairman.—You desired to add something to your previous evidence?—I wanted to say something about Eynort church and the minister. I heard my mother say that the congregation became so few at last in Eynort after the evictions had taken place that it had dwindled down to four or five people, and that the minister used to take them to the manse for the services.

1998. Was that after the disruption?—Yes. Another thing I wanted to say, in reference to the people being in comfortable circumstances. I have heard my mother tell of her father and grandfather in Tuisdale being for three years at law with Talisker's trustee in endeavouring to retain hold of the crofts; and those who were the tenants at Tuisdale had 18 head of cattle a piece at that time.

1999. I think it was stated that the steamer calls here twice a week?—The 'Dunara Castle' calls twice in the one week, and the next week it does not call at all; the 'Hebridean' calls weekly.

2000. Are there any shipments of fish made by these steamers to the south?—Very little fish out of our port.

2001. Mr Maccallum.—And your mother, who gave you information about these things, is still alive?—Yes, and she was very desirous to speak to the Commission about these things.

2002. How old is she?—72.

JOHN TOLMIE MACKENZIE, Dunvegan (64)—examined.

2003. The Chairman.—You are factor to Macleod of Macleod?—Yes.

2004. How long have you held that position?—I have been factor since 1886, but I have been connected with the estate otherwise since 1860.

2005. You wish to make some remarks to the Commission?—Yes. We have heard a good deal to-day about forced removals on this estate, but a large part of it is full of inaccuracies and quite unreliable. A witness stated a short time ago that to his own knowledge there were only three tenants or cottars still remaining on the farm of Glenbrittle. The fact, however, is that there are 38 at this moment, 28 of whom have got cattle and 10 have none. Now, as to the evictions that are said to have taken place on Macleod's estate in bye-gone days. The whole of the estate was originally and still is to a great extent in the hands of large farmers; there never were small tenants there at all, but on each of these farms there was a colony of cottars or squatters who used to be employed by the tacksmen to cultivate the land. In exchange for that labour they were paid in kind, as they very often were in those days,—even farmers often paid their rent to the proprietor in kind. These cottars got a patch of potato ground where they could grow corn, and in addition to that any member of their family who might be employed on the tenant's work got his food during the time he was so employed. That is the rule that was adopted on all the farms on Macleod's estate. Glenbrittle was the first tenant who introduced sheep farming into Skye, and his having done so is borne out by the fact that the first sheep that came to Skye (being the Rhu-an-Dunain-sheep) were branded S, a brand which still holds good as the mark on the Glenbrittle sheep. When the sheep began to be more numerous, agriculture began to go back, and as a consequence the work of these cottars was not in such demand, till at last, within my own recollection, there was very little agriculture at all, simply because sheep paid better than agriculture or cattle.

2006. Was it at any particular time that sheep began to be more profitable than agriculture or cattle?—Very soon after they were introduced into this country; that would be about the beginning of this century. Glenbrittle having found that it paid, the rest of the farmers followed suit. After the lapse of years, the people who were thus thrown out of employment began to complain just as they are doing now-a-days, and wanted to get holdings elsewhere. They did not feel themselves at liberty to do as they liked when they were under the tenant but got no employment, and merely lived on sufferance, so they petitioned Macleod, the father of the present proprietor, in the early part of this century, to give them land somewhere else. Macleod then decided that as a farm became vacant he would endeavour to lay it aside for the purpose of taking these cottars and planting them there. In 1810 I find that certain districts having become congested on the tenants' farms, were placed on the three farms of Harlosh, Roag, and Dunvegan. These are some of the evictions that are now recorded, and these are the houses that are now shown as having once been peopled by 'evicted' tenants.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

John Tolmie Mackenzie.

2007. You used the word 'evictions.' Were these people evicted against their will?—No. They themselves petitioned to be removed to new holdings, and that was done as far as possible.

2008. But you see, Mr Mackenzie, we heard a great deal as to removals, in the first place from the farm of Drynoch, secondly from the farm of Talisker, and thirdly from the farm of Glenbrittle, and we have noted a very long list of old townships on these several holdings. Were all these people removed?—Oh no, not the half of them; just as many of them as these new townships would accommodate.

2009. These different townships were depleted, and the people were sent out, or went away elsewhere?—Elsewhere.

2010. Now, were these removals all on their own petition, or were some of them on their own petition, and some of them against their will?—As far as I can make out, the petitions show that they wanted to be removed.

2011. The whole of them?—Not the whole of them but some of them.

2012. Were some of these removed?—Yes.

2013. Forcibly?—Not forcibly.

2014. Well, they were warned to remove, and went because it was the will of thy landlord? How many of them would there be?—I don't know. I did not expect that a written statement would be admitted, or I would have brought it with me. I will send that in yet with all these particulars.

2015. I would like to know from you, taking the removals as a whole, how many resulted from petitions of the crofters or cottars labouring for farm tenants, and how many were against their will? I suppose you admit there were both?—Well, I never heard that they were removed, except as I have stated.

2016. These people are complaining of removals, even down to the present moment?—They are.

2017. Does not that look as if some of them at least took place against the will of the predecessor who occupied the holding?—Possibly some of them might have; but no evictions took place in my day,—that is, since I knew the property.

2018. But these witnesses have gone back sixty years, and you are only 64; you were not responsible for them. I suppose it is the fact that a good many removals took place in the early part of this century against the will of the occupying crofter?—That is a thing I cannot say.

2019. Surely you, as factor on the estate, know the history of the place?—Yes, I know this much of it, that a good many were removed on their own petition.

2020. Yes, that is exceedingly probable; but was there not another principle applied?—Possibly there might have been others evicted; I don't know anything about that.

2021. Do you tell us, as factor on the estate, you know nothing about that?—Nothing about the evictions. I have no documents whatever proving any such. But I have heard that there were people who left Rhu-an-Dunain many, many years before I was born; and they emigrated to America. I believe they went of their own accord. It may or may not have been the case; I cannot say. The tenant of the farm went to America, and brought them to his own land there, and remained with them two years, and then left them, as we were given to understand, in good circumstances.

2022. Just continue, if there is anything further you would like to acquaint us with?—I did not altogether make up my mind upon the subject that has been brought before the Commission: I thought the attention would be entirely devoted to the point as to whether there was land available in the district, and upon that point I have heard no one give quite a direct answer.

2023. The answer they have given is this: they have specified these townships upon those different farms as places where there is land available for the formation of holdings where a man could carry on a croft to a profit, where he could subsist by his holding. That is what they say, and we would like to hear what you have to say in connection with that?—My experience is that no land in Skye would pay its cultivation, and so confident am I on that point that I took the opportunity of putting in my pocket a few notes to show what the return from a croft of £10 would be. Without troubling you in the meantime with a long statement, I may mention that in my opinion a £10 croft, well farmed, in a good year will only return £44 of money, selling all its produce.

2024. Gross?—Gross. The expenditure upon that croft will be £22, leaving £19, or 1s. 3d. a day for the man to work it for the whole year, and that is all that he can put in his pocket.

2025. I would like very much if you would give us the details of that, and show how you arrive at that result?—The following is the statement:—

Return from a £10 croft in an average good year. Stock to consist of four cows (£36), forty sheep (£50), and one horse (£15); one cart (£10), one plough (50s.), set harrows (30s.): in all about £115 of a capital to start with.
Return from four cows would be three calves annually, which at the term of Martinmas would be worth at an average not more than 50s. each,	£7	10	0
Butter from four cows, besides feeding the calves, and reckoning on their milking for six months, at the rate of 6lbs. a week, . .	7	16	0
Cheese made from the four cows, besides feeding the calves, .	3	5	0
Forty sheep would have thirty lambs, less deaths four to the score, say twenty-four alive in September, twelve of which would be wedder lambs, and sold at the average price of £8, 10s. per clad score,	4	17	2
Wool of forty sheep, four stones at 12s. per stone, ...	2	8	0
Eight cast ewes to sell at £12 per clad score, ...	4	11	4
Sixty barrels of potatoes, less ten kept for seed, leaving fifty to go to market, to sell at the average price of 3s. per barrel, . .	7	10	0
Fifteen bolls of oats, less six bolls kept for seed, and four bolls for the horse, leaving five bolls to go to market at 16s. . . .	4	0	0
Total Return from a well farmed £10 croft in a good year, . . .	£41	17	6

Deductions:—
Rent of croft, . .	£10	0	0
Poor, school, and road rates, ...	1	5	0
Township bull, 6s.; ram, 6s., . . .	0	12	0
Sheep dip, . . .	0	6	0
Shoeing horse twice, and changing, .	0	10	0
Repairs to implements,	0	10	0
Average mortality in cattle, 2½%, . .	0	18	0
Assistance in spring £1, in harvest £1, 10s.,	2	10	0
Interest on capital at 5%,	5	15	0
Total clear earnings of the crofter for twelve months,				£19	11	6

equal to 1s. 3d. a day; or if the croft was his own paying no rent, he could make 1s. 11d. for every working day.

(Signed) JOHN T. MACKENZIE,
Factor for Macleod of Macleod.

DUNVEGAN, 20*th April* 1893.

2026. Have you any crofters on the Macleod estate under your charge paying a rent of £10?—Not exactly £10, but some pay £9.

2027. Can you point to any one of these holdings that is worked to a profit in average years?—They were ver anxious to get them, and have only got them recently; but according to my calculation they cannot work them to a profit. They answer very well as a place to live in, when they supplement it by working elsewhere.

2028. Is this the characteristic of every crofter's holding on the Macleod estate, that it serves as a home, but is not cultivated to profit?—Most certainly.

2029. Then there is not a solvent crofter's holding on the Macleod estate?—There is no crofter subsisting upon his croft.

2030. You depend for the getting in of the rent upon the extraneous assistance which the crofter derives from the labour or the trade or fishing or whatever it may be?—Either that, or he must starve even if he got it for nothing.

2031. But don't you think it would be a vast improvement if holdings could be formed which were self-supporting?—If that could be done.

2032. But don't you think it is possible?—No, not under £100 of rent.

2033. Don't you think a holding could be formed with a rent of £20, or £30, or £40, which would be self-supporting, and leave the crofter with a sufficient margin to live?—He might make a small wage by it, but not wages equal to £1 a week. No £30 crofter could make £1 a week by the croft and pay his way. He could make it if it were a grazing croft.

2034. Then the only way in which, according to your view, the crofting system can be carried on is to serve as a home for a man who gets his living in other ways?—Yes.

2035. There is no other way of doing it?—No other way of doing it.

2036. That, of course, is very precarious?—Still, it is the best way.

2038. But must not he fall into arrear if he goes away to get work and cannot get it? does not that sometimes happen?—Very seldom.

2039. Must it not happen occasionally?—It does, but not often.

2040. Suppose the case of a crofter who depends in the main upon fishing, and the fishing fails, as we know is often the case, must he not fall behind with his rent?—He is a fisherman depending on his fishing.

2041. But if the fishing won't pay, does not the rent fall behind?—Certainly, if he has a rent to pay.

2042. I am assuming that; and does not that happen frequently?—Very often.

2044. Take the case of a failure of fishing in a certain place, and in that place there is a man who carries on trade as a tailor, or a shoemaker, or a joiner; in consequence of the failure of fishing the people who employ him are not able to pay him,—must not he fall behind with his rent?—Certainly he must.

2045. That is inevitable?—Inevitable.

2047. You would give them patches of land, and send them to the sea for their livelihood?—To the sea, or to labour elsewhere, where they could get work.

2048. That is to say, you would just carry on the present system?—Well, I would not have them so congested as they are just now.

2049. Tell us where they are most congested on this estate?—I don't know that they are congested at all.

2050. I thought you said they were?—Not on this part of the estate: they were congested at one time, but they are not so now.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye. — John Tolmie Mackenzie.

2051. Is not there some congestion?—There are some who want land, and can't get it.

2052. Where would you assign them land on the Macleod estate to relieve them?—Near wherever they are situated. There is a colony across here just now.

2053. What is the name of it?—Coillore. That is a township where it was in view to give them land, but through some mistake it fell through.

2054. But you think they should get land?—I certainly think so.

2055. Where do you think it could be got?—Close to their own lands.

2056. And you are willing to give it?—I have not it in my power to do so at present. When I had it in my power, I offered it to them, but from some cause or other which never came to my knowledge they refused the offer. First they were offered a piece of land, which they said was too small; then they were offered a piece of land, but it was too far from the sea. Then Macleod and the tenant, whose lease was about to terminate, offered to give them £60 hard money, £10 to each family, to build new houses upon this piece of ground which had a stock of 500 sheep. The excuse then was that it was too far from the sea.

2057. Are these men sub-tenants or crofters?—Sub-tenants.

2058. Paying rent to whom?—To the tenant, a Mr Scott.

2059. What is the average rent?—I cannot tell.

2060. What is the average extent of the holdings. What extent of arable have they?—I have not the figures beside me.

2061. Will it be more than two acres arable each?—Yes, I think so.

2062. More than three?—More than three.

2063. At any rate, whatever it is, you are satisfied it is much too small?—Oh, it is too small; I always thought it was too small.

2065. I see in the Valuation Roll that Neil Macdonald and Donald Cameron are rented at £1, 10s. What extent of addition would you deem it advisable if you had the power to make to these holdings so as to make them large enough?—I think if they had an additional cow each they would be pleased with it.

2066. You think that would satisfy them?—I think it would.

2067. Are you of opinion that a man whose arable does not exceed two or three acres, and who is not a fisherman, has much too small a holding?—No, I think his holding is enough if he gets work elsewhere. He must have a holding that will give grass for his two cows. It is not, however, by agriculture that he will live.

2068. You scout the idea of such a man living off his holding?—Certainly, because he cannot do it.

2069. You think he ought to have a small holding, and get wages elsewhere?—Yes.

2070. And that is your idea of the crofting system?—Yes.

2071. On the Macleod estate what is the natural harbour accommodation? There are piers built at different places.

2072. Where, on the Macleod estate?—There are natural harbours.

2073. Take the piers first?—There was a pier built here at Struan by the Destitution Committee for the purpose of helping the fishermen, and there is another one at Fiscavaig across the water.

2074. Where else?—Except at Dunvegan, I don't know that there are any more.

2075. The Dunvegan pier allows a steamer to come in?—Yes.

2076. Does either of the others?—No, only for boats. It is to the Fiscavaig pier that most of the east country boats come.

2077. Would you go on to specify the natural

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

John Tolmie Mackenzie.

harbours on the Macleod estate?—It is cut up with harbours. There is one at Struan, where the inn is.

2078. A good natural harbour?—Yes.

2079. Sufficient in all weathers?—Yes.

2080. Where are the others?—Orbost has a fair harbour, Varkasaig I think it is called; and one at Vatten. On the Dunvegan side there are any number of harbours. On the Dunvegan Loch there is Stein harbour, Dunvegan harbour, Colbost, and the landing place at Mainish, the best station on the coast.

2081. All these are good harbours?—Yes.

2082. So that if the fishing were prosecuted there is no lack of natural harbour accommodation?—No lack of harbour accommodation, except at Glendale, where there ought to be a pier.

2083. What is the greatest stretch of coast-line on the Macleod estate without a harbour? What is the furthest distance a boat at sea would have to come, say, that left one harbour before it reached another harbour?—If it went round from here, it is twenty miles to go round to Glendale.

2084. But there are as many as twenty miles of coast without any harbour accommodation?—And where no harbour could be put.

2085. Now, don't you think, looking to the amount of harbour accommodation there is,—good natural harbours and pier accommodation,—that an extension of the crofting fisher system would be an advantage,—that is to say, giving small patches of land on the sea-coast, and leaving the occupier to find his living from the sea?—That is my idea.

2086. You are in favour of that?—I am in favour of that.

2087. Do you know if there is any disposition among the crofting or cottar tenants on the Macleod estate to take up holdings on these terms?—I think that is what they are most likely to take up.

2088. Is there not also a strong disposition among them to get holdings further inland of a larger and self-subsisting kind?—There are some that are inclined that way.

2089. Now, don't you think that that is a laudable ambition?—I think it is quite laudable.

2091. What is the smallest croft you would give to a man in the anticipation that it would be self-supporting?—Certainly not under £80 a year of rent.

2092. How much land would you assign to such a tenant, taking the average of the arable on this part of the estate?—Possibly there might be 40 to 50 acres arable, and 1000 grazing.

2093. And a rent of £80?—A rent of £80.

2096. Would you have any holding between the £80 one and the fisherman's? Would you not prefer to have a gradation of holdings?—I would like to see that; but I am talking now from a financial point of view, and I have thrown all sentimental arguments aside altogether.

2097. And looking at it from a financial point of view, you would have no holding between the fisherman's holding and the £80 one?—There might be smaller holdings.

2098. Just tell us about these?—It would be a good thing for the country to have land of that sort.

2099. What kind of holding do you point to?—They might be of any size, from £80 downwards.

2100. What is the lowest you would make for a crofter's holding in a good country?—Not above £10. I don't think any of them would ask above £10.

2101. Do you think there might be a self-supporting croft at a rent of £10?—I don't say it would be self-supporting, but it would be a great help.

2102. How would you have the crofter to live?—He must live by something else.

2103. Labour?—Labour or a trade; not upon his croft.

2104. Then on what principle do you fix the rent of such a holding?—Suppose a man takes a holding from you, and you charge him £10 of rent; is that rent for the agricultural value, or is it a rent which you think you can get from him because he is a skilled labourer who makes a good wage?—It is the value which I put upon the land which he gets, which is both agricultural and pastoral.

2105. It is an agricultural rent?—An agricultural and pastoral rent.

2106. And you do not look for payment of the rent to wages he earns elsewhere?—I need not do it.

2108. Where do you expect to get your rent there from a £10 holding: do you expect to get it from its agricultural and pastoral value?—Scarcely.

2109. You want to get it from his wages?—To get it from his wages.

2110. Do you think that is fair?—Yes.

2111. Then you would seriously propose to rent a man, not upon the agricultural value of his croft, but upon his wages?—I should put the rent upon the croft.

2112. Yes, but you expect to get the rent out of his wages?—He cannot do it otherwise.

2113. So that your £10 rent is not a rent restricted to the agricultural and pastoral value of the croft, if you expect to get it from his wages?—From his wages, yes.

2114. Mr Sutherland.—Your statement regarding the status and history of the Highland people was at least to me novel, and contrary to the authorities we are accustomed to look to. You state that the people lived on sufferance: how far back, may I ask, does that statement refer to?—Probably 200 years, and 150, and down to the beginning of this century.

2115. Then your assertion is that the Highland clansman lived on the sufferance of the chief?—Well, he lived on the land, and he gave his labour and got paid in kind, in cattle and sheep.

2116. Who paid him?—The tenant paid him for his labour, and paid him in kind.

2117. You mean the sub-tenant?—The tenant paid the sub-tenant or the cottar for his labour, in kind.

2118. The sub-tenant surely paid the tenant, you mean?—He gave the tenant his labour, and in exchange he got land, and cattle, and sheep.

2119. That is on the clan territory?—Yes, on all the territories on the estate.

2120. You refer, I presume, to the introduction of the feudal system into the Highlands of Scotland?—No, that is going further back: I am not going into historical matters.

2121. Was the Macleod estate a feudal tenure, or the clan tenure?—I cannot tell you that.

2122. You said that when sheep farming was introduced agriculture went back?—Yes, I said so.

2123. So the tendency of the introduction of sheep farming is to set agriculture back?—Yes.

2124. That implies that there was more agriculture in the Highlands 200 years ago than there is now?—No doubt.

2125. So the land has been going out of cultivation?—Out of cultivation.

2126. Then you made what to me was a very novel statement, that the people petitioned to be sent away?—No, I did not say that.

2127. That they petitioned to be removed?—To be removed to other townships that became vacant, and that system has gone on till now.

truan, racadale, kye.

ohn Tolmie ackenzie.

2128. It implied that they went of their own accord; it was voluntary?—Yes.

2129. And that it was not by process of law?—Not by process of law at all.

2130. To what date does that statement refer?—I mentioned it already,—it commenced in the year 1810.

2131. And went on until?—The next was in 1844, when another farm was taken from a tacksman and given to a large number of small cottars or sub-tenants. Another took place in 1888, when Roag, which was peopled from these large farms in 1810, got congested. Macleod followed out his old principle of relieving the congestion by taking another farm from a neighbouring tenant, who paid £130 of rent for it, and giving it to eight cottars or squatters. He sent them to Vatten, where they are now. Very probably a generation after this it may be said that these were evicted. The farm of Ullinish is in the same way. Whenever that farm went out it was divided among the cottars who were on the land: they were here to-day. Eighteen of them got additional land. They were first under the tenant as sub-tenants, and when it came into Macleod's hands he gave them additional holdings, or additions to their holdings. There are eighteen of them; and he divided the rest of the farm between five tenants of the £30 or £40 class.

2132. Am I right in supposing that these removals were conducted by the sub-tenants, and not by Macleod of Macleod at all?—I don't know that they were removals at all.

2133. Listen to this. [Reads from document]. It is headed 'Number of decrees of removal from agri-'cultural holdings, &c., in the island of Skye, between '1840 and 1883, ascertained from the records of the 'Sheriff Court of Portree.' Macleod's estate, I see, totals up 223, and there is a note at the foot which says:—The above decrees have proceeded upon summonses containing on an average four sets of defenders each. Multiplying the 223 by four, you have a total of 892 different tenants who have been served with process of law?—These are what are called warnings to pay rent. The people were not removed by means of these; the process was merely for the recovery of rent.

2134. Were none of these ever carried out?—Not one of them; excepting four.

2135. These removals, I understand, were not carried out by process of law at all?—No, they were removed voluntarily.

2136. And other holdings obtained for them?—Yes.

2137. So that what we have heard of people living below high water mark and under tents has got no foundation?—I cannot call anything of that to my recollection: there might have been such.

2138. You said also that you believed the general wish of the people was that they should have small holdings, and prosecute the calling of fishermen?—I think a good many of them would prefer that.

2139. But you have heard the evidence given here to-day?—Yes.

2140. We have not heard that stated at all by any one?—Neither did I.

2141. Could any of the people be brought forward, do you think, to give us evidence to substantiate what you have said?—I don't assert this: I merely give it as my opinion.

2142. Your own opinion of their opinion?—Yes.

2143. But we have the direct evidence of the people themselves?—Yes.

2144. You gave us in a statement showing what in your opinion the financial result of a small croft would be. Do you know Mr Mackintosh, Lord Macdonald's factor?—I do.

2145. Do you consider him a good authority?—I am not intimately acquainted with him.

2146. From the fact that he is factor, the presumption is that he is a competent authority?—I suppose so. I don't know anything of the gentleman at all.

2147. Would you be surprised to learn that he handed in to the Commission this week a statement in which he gave as the return on a croft, smaller, I think, than the one you took, that if the crofter got the labour in his own family he would be £27, 10s. to the good on an average year, after paying all charges of every kind: would you agree with that?—No, I could not.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

John Tolmie Mackenzie.

2148. But still you throw no doubt on Mr Mackintosh's ability?—No, certainly not. But, for example, you have had a witness here, who stated that he sowed $2\frac{1}{2}$ bolls of oats, and only got $2\frac{1}{2}$ bolls in return. You will find in my statement that I give the crofter credit for $2\frac{1}{2}$ returns.

2149. I can believe that, because you give him better land than he has now,—it would be impossible to give him worse; there is something in that, is there not?—I don't give him more than three: I don't think he could do better.

2150. In the best land in Skye?—Yes.

2151. Do you commit yourself to that opinion regarding the whole of the land in Skye?—Regarding what has passed through my hands. It may not have been of the best land?—Perhaps it was not.

2152. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Do you think that there are men who would like to go to the fishing in the present state of facilities for transport of fish?—The more fish that is caught, the better would the facilities for transport become. There would be a greater inducement for the steamers to call for fish if there was a larger quantity to be taken away.

2153. Yes; but they would only wish to go to the fishing, and have a small holding if there were really good facilities for sending their fish to market, it would only be in those circumstances that they would wish to go to the loch side?—There are people there now.

2154. The Chairman.—I think what Mr Shaw Stewart means is this: Does your observation, with regard to the desire of the people to obtain small fishermen's holdings, apply to this place with its present facilities for transmit of fish, or with increased facilities?—Improved facilities. It would apply better then certainly, but it applies even as it is, I think.

2155. But they could not live in any number without a market for their fish?—But there is a market.

2156. Once a week?—Yes, and it would be oftener if it would pay the steamers to call.

2157. Mr Gordon.—You have mentioned a minimum size of a farm that you think would be self-supporting, with a rent of £80. Could you give the Commission any idea of the size of such a farm; or could you tell us what your opinion would be regarding stock?—The stock would be about 600 ewes, 4 cows, and 1 horse.

2158. Would that be black-faced or cheviot stock?—Black-faced.

2159. What would your sales be?—If the farm was good there should be about 500 lambs, but if the farm was not a good one perhaps 450.

2161. How much would you get from that?—Only the half; only the wedder lambs would be sold.

2162. 180 at 8s. 6d?—That is a low price, but it is the average.

2163. What else would you sell?—Wool; cast ewes.

2164. How many cast ewes,—about 100?—Say 90.

2165. At what price?—I think I put down 12s.

2166. Anything else?—Wool, which should realise from £60 to £70.

2167. Would you require two shepherds, or one?—One.

2168. At £40?—About £33.

2169. I am afraid that after allowing for expense of dipping, &c., and calculating interest on capital, you would be down below your £80 before you would make much profit?—Possibly, at the prices of the present day.

2170. You see it comes to be all a matter of rent?—All a matter of rent.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

John Tolmie Mackenzie.

2172. All?—Those who did go went at their own desire.

2173. There were none evicted?—I am not aware of any being evicted.

2174. How do you account for the very general desire that arose for leaving the place?—No work having been carried on upon the farms, they were not fed as usual, and in consequence they were getting congested, and they wanted to get a holding of their own.

2175. They had the use of land?—Free.

2176. I thought they were giving their labour?—Yes, until the labour was not required.

2177. But before this desire arose, they lost the land, and they lost the right to pasture, is that so?—Yes, they did, but I don't think they lost it after all; but they lost the right to it.

2178. So they were landless when this petition arose?—They could not be said to be landless, for they occupied the land. I have documents to show that letters passed between the proprietor and the big tenants to say that the small tenants could not pay their rents, but that they had their lands as formerly. That was the correspondence following on the transfer of them from one part to the other.

2179. Their holdings were not interfered with at all?—Their holdings where they sat were not interfered with until they removed from them.

2180. And they had the same right of pasture?—I would not call it a right, but they had the same privilege.

2181. Do you mean that they were not paying for it?—I say they were not, after their labour was dispensed with.

2182. And they might be sent away at will?—That is the position they were in.

2183. And that position became so unpleasant that they wished to get away.—Well, they expressed the wish to leave whatever the cause.

2184. And were they all put upon unoccupied holdings,—those whose petition was acceded to?—Yes, they were all put upon farms that had been in the occupation of big tenants who did not re-occupy them.

2185. Are you aware that it is asserted that 25 tenants from Bracadale were placed in the two Milovaigs where there were 8 crofters?—That was in 1848.

2186. Were the two Milovaigs vacant then?—I rather think so, for the farm was in the hands of a tacksman up to that date.

2187. But it is asserted that there were 8 crofters there, and that 25 tenants from Bracadale were placed amongst them?—I cannot speak quite with certainty on that point, but I may mention that when the Bracadale people went there were no people either at Milovaig or Ramasaig.

2188. Is it your opinion that there were not 8 tenants there?—I never knew that there were. I do not say that they were not, they might have been there. I know it was a sheep grazing, and the idea occurs to me that it would be strange if there were 8 tenants in an old grazing of that sort. Some fishermen at the shore might have been there.

2189. How do you account then for there being such a great desire on the part of the descendants of these people to get back upon the land? They seem to look back to those times as happy times when their ancestors had the land, and as you have heard to-day there is a great desire to get back to the occupation of these lands?—I heard that said.

2190. Does not that seem to point to the fact that their ancestors must have been pretty comfortable?—I do not admit that their ancestors were so comfortable as these people are at the present day. I know these labourers that used to be working on the farms were fed on the farms, they got porridge and milk to their breakfast, potatoes and herring to their dinner, and perhaps sowans and milk for their supper. I should like to know what farmer to-day would dare to offer his ploughman such feeding as that? he would be hounded out of the country. Yet these people in the old days worked for that cheerfully. The very paupers now-a-days get better fare than that. Therefore I say that the change of circumstances must be taken into account.

2191. On the crofts that you recommend, would you have sheep?—I think I mentioned that in the paper.

2192. The crofters that are on your estate just now, have they sheep?—Some of them have and some have not.

2193. Are there crofters on Soay?—Yes.

2194. What is the size of the croft there?—It has never been surveyed, but it is a 10s. croft.

2195. And do you know what stock they keep?—They were entitled to keep a cow, but they have been keeping more.

2196. Have they the whole of Soay?—No.

2197. How is the rest of it occupied?—The rest of it is part of the farm: the sheep stock is on it.

2199. That is, they have a right of pasturage on the whole island?—Yes.

2200. Are they allowed to put sheep there?—No.

2201. Don't you think it would be a good thing if they had sheep on the island?—I daresay it would be a good thing for them, but it would not be a good thing for the farmer.

2202. Who is the farmer?—Macleod, at present.

2203. And it would be an injury to him that they should be allowed to keep sheep there?—It would be an injury to the farmer, whoever he may be, that their sheep should be mixing with his sheep.

2204. Might they not have the whole island of Soay?—They might; but it was offered to them, and they would not have it. Not only is that the case, but one of the best hirsels at Glenbrittle was offered to them, and they would not go.

2205. They have no desire to get sheep there?—I am sure they have.

2206. They have a desire for sheep?—I have no doubt.

2207. And you don't allow them?—Certainly not.

2208. Do you encourage any home industry, such as spinning, for instance?—No, I do not go into any of these matters.

2209. But in the management of this estate, is there any encouragement given to these things?—The ladies on the estate used to do so.

2211. Would it not be a very good thing if the people had wool of their own to experiment with?—It would be a good thing for all those who have not, to have a thing.

2212. Is this not a very favourable opportunity to allow the crofters of Soay, for instance, the right to keep sheep?—I think the best way would be for them to take the whole island.

2213. Are they not prepared to put sheep on it?—I don't know. They would be prepared to put one or two sheep on, but that would not be a fair thing to do, because the sheep would not match with the other sheep of the island, and would do a very great deal of injury to the stock.

2214. But would they not take the whole of the sheep stocking on the island?—They might take the whole island at a fair rent.

2215. But you will not allow it at a fair rent?—Yes, I will give it to them at a fair rent.

2216. Under the Crofters Act?—Well, I don't know; but if we take the best valuations I don't know but we could give it even at that.

2217. Then you are prepared to give them the right of sheep pasture?—No, not unless they take the island as a farm.

2218. But it would be a good thing for them?—It would be a good thing to have the whole island.

2219. Mr Macleod.—You spoke very confidently,

Mr Mackenzie, about the manner in which the removals or clearances, or as you yourself called it, evictions took place on this estate of Macleod's. Were you speaking of your own knowledge?—Well, yes partly, and partly from what I could gather from documentary evidence.

2220. But you have seen some of the evictions, or what you termed evictions, yourself?—I just remember four.

2221. And all the others that you spoke of, or that were spoken of to-day, you know simply from what you have heard?—Yes, from the estate documents.

2222. And these four cases were all voluntary?—No, I would not say they were voluntary.

2223. They were all four by process of law?—Yes.

2224. You have handed in a statement bringing out a profit of 1s. 3d. a day to the crofter?—Yes, that is what he could make out of it.

2225. Are you prepared to say that all the crofters on Macleod's estate at the present time, living as they presently do, make as much all the year round as 8s. or 9s. a week?—They ought to make that out of the croft, 7s. 6d. a week.

2226. And do you think that at the present time the majority of Macleod's crofters are doing better?—I don't know that they are.

2227. They are not?—I don't know that they are. They would do better if there were better times; but I don't think they are doing well now, because I don't think any crofter could do more than I have given credit for, and according to the statement of the witnesses they could not do so well.

2229. But you don't seriously maintain that it is necessary for a man with a £10 croft to spend the whole of his time on his croft, if he can get work elsewhere?—Most certainly.

2230. How could a man work an £80 holding, if it takes a man all his time to work a £10 croft?—Simply because it is differently worked. One is an agricultural and the other a grazing holding.

2231. You meant to say then that the holding you spoke of was meant to be an arable holding?—Yes, the little holding.

2232. Then where was he to graze his sheep?—On the hill outside.

2233. And it is your opinion that an £80 croft could be worked to a profit?—To a profit as a grazing holding, but not as an agricultural holding.

2234. And you said, I think, that it would take not only the farmer himself but a shepherd to work it successfully?—Either the tenant or a shepherd,—one individual.

2235. You think that a man could work that holding without the assistance of a shepherd?—Yes.

2236. Would not it be as well to have a £40 holding, and let every man manage his own?—But you see the £40 holding would not be enough for a man to attend as a shepherd: there would not be enough of sheep. It would be just as expensive to have a shepherd for 200 as for 600 sheep.

2238. But that is according to your statement?—Yes, but it must have been misunderstood. I meant that one man should attend the sheep: I don't care whether he is the shepherd or the owner.

2239. So that to that extent the statement is to be corrected?—To be corrected to that extent.

2240. A shepherd would not be required?—A shepherd would not be required. I look upon an £80 farmer as a working man, not a man going about giving directions to his shepherd. He must go about his farm.

2241. Mr Munro.—Could you kindly tell us the gross rental of the Macleod estate?—£6000.

2242. Would you consider it a proper question if I asked you what proportion of that amount would be expended within the island itself?—I could not tell you that without my books.

2243. Give a rough estimate?—Possibly £2000

2245. Do you not think it probable that the island is likely to be impoverished from the fact that the main part of the rental gathered in the island is spent elsewhere?—It may contribute to it.

2246. Are you aware of the reason that the late tenant of Glenbrittle, Mr Cameron, gave for the poverty and depression of the people here?—I don't remember it.

2247. Are you aware that he publicly stated that it was owing to the influence of the Free Church?—Yes, I believe that is so.

2248. You don't agree with that?—No, I don't agree with that.

2249. Can you tell us at this moment what the population of Bracadale is?—It is over 900.

2250. Do you know what the population was at the beginning of the century?—No. The only reliable census we have begins in 1851.

2251. Are you aware that it was about 1800 at the beginning of the century?—I know it was a good deal more than it is now.

2252. Do you consider it is conducive to the well-being of any parish or district to deplete the country of its population in that way?—No, provided the country could maintain them.

2253. Are you aware whether the poor rates have gone down or gone up as the people were decreasing?—Well, I heard a statement on that matter at Portree, which very much surprised me, to the effect that as the people decreased the poor rates increased. I have been connected with Parochial Boards since 1852, and my experience is quite the contrary.

2254. You can, of course, ascertain whether the poor rates have gone up or down. I have got a statement here put into my hands that, at the time of the last Statistical Account, the population was 2250 souls, since that period there has been a farther decrease, so that it has now gone down to 1800?—What was it in 1851? That is a date I could rely on.

2255. I can give you the figures of 1842?—The statistics were not reliable.

2256. You have handed in a statement here showing a problematical balance sheet of a croft, and in that you bring out on the whole a result unfavourable to the crofter?—Yes.

2257. Well now, considering that the crofters live at all in their present poor holdings, do you not think it probable that if they removed to larger holdings in better land they would attain some measure of comfort?—It is put down there, what I think they would obtain. That is all I admit or can find out that they would ever make out of their holdings.

2258. You think they would not succeed in working a holding of that size, allowing some remuneration to themselves?—You could allow them just as much as I have stated there, and if the man had a large family the family would work the holding. That is only the work of one man. It is financially I look at the matter, not sentimentally.

2259. You look, no doubt, at the position of the crofter from the landlord's point of view?—Possibly.

2260. But you would consider it an advantage to the whole country if these people were to be put back on the soil, and allowed reasonable conditions of existence?—It might be an advantage to some.

2261. The Chairman.—The gross rental of the Macleod estates we find is £5832, 13s. What will the net rental be, after paying all rates and taxes, and public burdens; will it be more than the half of that?—Yes, more than the half. The rates and taxes are £1500 themselves, speaking at random.

Struan, Bracadale, Skye.

John Tolmie Mackenzie.

2262. Would there be a net rental of £4000?—I think so.

2263. After paying upkeep?—No. The upkeep will cost at least as much more, £1500.

2264. That leaves a net rental of £1832, or say £2000. Is that not much nearer the mark? Will the landlord put more than £2000 in his pocket?—No, nor so much.

2265. Now there is another matter which I should like to have cleared up in your own interest. Did not most of the Bracadale tenants at one time hold from the tacksmen?—That is what I said all along.

2266. But these tacksmen removed the tenant from the land?—I believe some were removed by the tacksmen.

2267. Now, was the petition we have heard so much about a petition presented to Macleod by persons who had been removed by the tacksmen?—No, it was from another section of them.

2268. You are certain?—I am certain. They were not removed by the tacksmen; they were taken away by Macleod from one part of his estate, and planted in another.

2269. You have given in a statement, which we have not had time to examine. Would you be willing to be examined at Dunvegan?—Certainly; and I should also like to state, on Macleod's behalf, that he would like to reserve the right of making his own statement at Dunvegan.

2270. The Chairman.—We shall be delighted to hear him.

2272. The Chairman. — We know from former experience in Skye that these 'summonses' were merely the system which the landlords in Skye took to enforce payment of the rent.

2273. Mr Mackay.—But that is not the case here. These were for the purpose of removals.

2274. Mr Forsyth.—Do you know that the summonses were actually carried out, and the people removed?

2275. Mr Mackay.—Decidedly.

2276. Mr Forsyth.—Have you any direct evidence?

2277. Mr Mackay.—I have, because these people turned up in some other part of the estate.

2278. Mr Forsyth.—Are you aware that the ordinary way of getting in rent is by applying to the Sheriff for a summons of removal, and you would have to find out whether these were absolutely carried out, otherwise it would only be the usual method of putting pressure upon tenants?

2279. Mr Mackay.—That might possibly be a more modern style, but the date I refer to was from 1792 to 1802.

2280. Mr Forsyth.—But the old process was the same?

2281. Mr Mackay.—No; because at this time I know for a fact that some of these townships were thus created into sheep farms.

[Adjourned.]

FOURTH SITTING.

Uig, Skye.

UIG, SKYE, FRIDAY, APRIL 28, 1893.

Present:—

David Brand, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
Angus Sutherland, Esq., M.P.
James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esq.
Rev. Malcolm Maccallum.
John Macleod, Esq.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

John Murchison, Glenhaultin (63). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

John Murchison.

2282. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Glenhaultin, on Lord Macdonald's estate?—Yes.

2283. What is the name of your holding?—No. 4 Keistle.

2284. What is your rent?—£5, 12s.

2285. And what was it formerly?—£7, 2s. 6d., I think, and I believe the road rates were included in that.

2286. Have you a statement to lay before us?—Yes. The following is a petition from tenants of Renetra and Glenhaultin:—

> Unto the Honourable the Royal Commission on Deer Forests, Portree. The humble petition of Tenants of Renetra and Glenhaultin, on the estate of Lord Macdonald,
> Humbly showeth,—
> That your petitioners desire to bring the following facts before your Honourable Commission:—
> For sixty years past and more our fathers occupied the lands we now hold. Eighteen years ago, on the death of Mr Peter Macdonald, merchant, Portree, who held the lands in common with us, the hill pasture, which represented his share, was added to ours, and, to our great loss, the low ground of his portion, extending to 25 or 30 acres, partly arable, where we wintered our sheep, was added to the tack of Skerrinish. We begged the whole from the factor, but he declined to give it. He charged us £9, 16s. for the hill pasture added, while the late joint-tenant paid for all only £12. By being deprived of the winter grazing we lost several hundred sheep. The factor, besides, planted a cottar upon us without granting us any reduction. We took the farm of Glenhaultin, formerly occupied by the parish ministers of Snizort, eighteen years ago at a rent of £70, for which we pay rates severally. Trustees were appointed over us, as we had upon security to borrow the money, of whom one still acts, viz., Mr Donald Clow, farmer, Cuidreach. The factor, in presence of the trustees, as prices fell, held out the hope that our rent would be reduced to £50. The rent, however, is placed to our credit. We are paying heavy interest on the borrowed money.
> Your petitioners humbly trust you will look into our case, and see justice done to us; and as one of our appointed delegates left the country, and the other was disabled, grant us liberty to explain our case still farther. And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.
> (Signed) Alex. Lamont.
> Lachlan Matheson.
> Roderick M'Innes.
> Alex. Lamont.
> James Gordon.
> John Murchison.
> John M'Innes.
> Donald M'Lean.
> John Beaton.
> Allan M'Leod.

Uig, Skye. — John Murchison.

2287. What is the name of the large farm nearest to your township?—Skerrinish.

2288. You are aware of the object of our inquiry here?—Yes.

2289. Can you indicate the locality of any land which you think we should look at in carrying out that object?—In the first place, it is the land that was taken from us, and the want of which has caused us a great loss, that we want back again.

2290. What land is that?—The lower part of Renetra.

2291. In whose occupation is it now?—Skerrinish, for the past eighteen years. It was taken from us to suit Mr Peter Macdonald, who had two crofts in our township.

2292. Was there an old township on that land?—It was part of our own holding.

2293. You mean of Renetra?—Yes.

2294. What use is made of that land now; is it grazing?—I will tell you first, so that you may understand it. Skerrinish has three tenants paying rent on that ground; it is in the possession of parties who pay rent to Skerrinish.

2295. Are there any other lands that you would like to mention?—There is a bit that we specially wish to be added to our holdings.

2296. Do you wish these tenants removed?—No, but it is the grazing that we want. We would not wish to put out these parties.

2297. But you wish to put them out of their grazing, do you?—It is the grazing attached to these holdings that we wish to have, and which is not occupied by them, but by Skerrinish.

2298. Then you don't wish any arable land?—No; we want wintering for our sheep; we are losing money for our sheep without the wintering.

2299. Do these three tenants have any share in the grazing?—No; they pay simply for the grazing of any cows they have.

2300. On that land?—On that land. Two of them pay rent to Lord Macdonald, and they are getting cows' grass on Skerrinish.

2301. It may be convenient for us when we go to the ground to know their names. What are the names of these tenants?—Hector Mackenzie is one, Widow Morrison is another, and the third is Widow Donald Macleod.

2302. Mr Sutherland.—Are you speaking for yourself only, or are you a representative?—I am speaking for the township of fourteen crofters.

2303. And they have never, have they, expressed a desire to be removed to larger holdings?—I did not hear about that; I cannot say anything about that. There is another small farm that was added to our holding (Glenhaultin) which is rented too dear. We cannot keep it.

2304. The Chairman.—We cannot go into any question of rent; that is not our present object.

2305. Mr Sutherland.—Are there any other places, then, that, in your opinion, are fit for holdings except this piece of Renetra?—Yes; there are plenty places about.

2306. Mr Macleod.—Can you tell us how many sheep the Skerrinish farmer has under his present arrangement?—No. The burn is the march on the lower part of Skerrinish on this side; the lower part of Renetra was taken from us, which was keeping our cattle alive in the winter. One acre of such ground is better than 20 acres of hill ground.

2307. But you don't know the extent of it?—I cannot say; there are big pieces in it. There are between 25 and 30 acres, I am told.

2308. The Chairman.—Did you make any application to the Crofters Commission for enlargement of holdings by taking this land that you have in view?—No.

2309. Why not?—We did not consider it; it did not occur to us.

2310. Mr Mackintosh, Factor for Lord Macdonald.—I should like to ask if the witness himself wishes a new holding?—Yes, if I could get it, and I need it too.

2311. Do you wish to remove from where you are?—Yes, if I got a convenient place elsewhere; the place that we have is without hill. The place that I myself have just now is too far out on the hill, and I am getting old and heavy. Uig, Skye. — John Murchison.

2312. Are you a tenant of Renetra or Keistle?—Keistle.

2313. You speak of having been deprived of pasture in Renetra?

2314. The Chairman.—He says this land was formerly in their possession eighteen years ago.—Mr Mackintosh. I got notice that they were delegates from Glenhaultin; I would not have appeared here if I had known they were only from Keistle. I might have a few words to say in regard to Glenhaultin, now or at some other time.

2315. The Chairman.—Have you anything more to ask, Mr Mackintosh?—Mr Mackintosh. Not from this witness.

2316. The Chairman.—Do you wish to make any addition to what you have said, Murchison?—No, nothing further occurs to me; that is the special business that brought me here to-day.

DONALD MACINNES, Renetra, Snizort (21). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.) Donald Macinnes.

2317. The Chairman.—Are you a Renetra crofter?—My father is a crofter there.

2318. What do you wish to say?—Nothing, except to concur in what the previous witness said.

2319. How far is Renetra from Glenhaultin?—About a thousand yards.

2320. Are you representing Glenhaultin now on behalf of your father, or are you representing Renetra?—Both Glenhaultin and Renetra.

2321. What your father desires, as I understand, is an addition to his grazing by the restoration of the lower part of Renetra?—Yes, that it should be added to the grazing of the crofts which we occupy.

2322. Your father made no application to the Crofters Commission for enlargement, did he?—No, but that place was promised us when the lease of Skerrinish would be out; the lease has run out since then, and we have not got it.

2323. Mr Sutherland.—Is the new land that they want in addition to their own grazing contiguous to their present holdings?—Yes, there is just a fence between.

2324. Mr Macleod.—You don't know the rent of Renetra?—No.

2325. Why did your father not come here himself, is he unwell, or too old?—He had to go south to earn money to pay the landlord.

JAMES MACKINTOSH, Factor for Lord Macdonald, Ostaig, Sleat—examined. James Mackintosh.

2326. The Chairman.—Do you tender any evidence?—Yes; may I be allowed to say a few words regarding Glenhaultin?

2327. The Chairman.—Certainly. — Up to Whitsunday 1885, Glenhaultin was held by the late Rev. Angus Martin, the parish minister of Snizort, at a rent of £105. About that time it was thought that that place would be a suitable place to give to crofters as an addition to their holdings. The sheep stock on it was taken over at valuation in the usual way, and the place given to the crofters of Renetra and Keistle; fourteen crofters got each a share in the grazing of Glenhaultin.

2328. The whole of it?—The whole of Glenhaultin as formerly possessed by Rev. Mr Martin. The rent of £105 was reduced for the crofters to £70.

2329. This was given to them under the Act?—No, my lord, it was before the Act came into force. Sheep stock to the value of £588, 16s. 3d. was handed over to the crofters. Several gentlemen in the district interested in the crofters, who wished to befriend them,

Uig, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

became security for this amount. The amount was lifted from the Caledonian Bank in Portree, and the total amount for which these gentlemen became security was £608, 10s. 10d., the difference being interest and incidental expenses, I presume. The names and amounts of the cautioners respectively are as follows:—

D. L. Ross, Esq., of Cromarty, at that time Commissioner on Lord Macdonald's estate,	£93	12	6
Alexander Macdonald, Portree, who was then factor on the estate,	93	12	6
Lewis Mitchell, tacksman, Kingsburgh,	93	12	6
D. A. Clow, Cuidreach,	93	12	6
James Macdonald, tenant of Skerrinish,	93	12	6
John Mackay, Home Farm, Portree,	93	12	6
Rev. Joseph Lamont, Snizort,	46	15	10
	£608	10	10

As far as I can understand, the amount now due, at least the amount of the bills current, is as follows. After the place being for so many years in the possession of the crofters, there is still this amount due to the bank:—

I myself am security for	£90	0	0
I inherited the bill from Mr Macdonald, who became security for that amount as factor on the estate, and when I succeeded him I took over the bill.
Mr Clow is also security for	90	0	0
Rev. Mr Lamont for	45	0	0
John Mackay of the Home Farm, for	16	4	0
James Macdonald of Skerrinish or his executors,	80	12	6
And the past due interest on that bill amounts to	15	0	0
D. M. Ross of Cromarty,	80	12	6
And there is past due interest due to the bank,	27	10	0
Total indebtedness to the bank,	£444	19	0

There may be more due, but I am not able to give any information. They are due two years' rent, £70. I have no information as to the stock now on the ground, but Mr Clow, who is one of the securities, has taken the greatest interest in the matter, and he will doubtless be able to supply any information in regard to the stock. The crofters when they got this land got the stock that was on the ground.

2330. They had not to stock it?—They got the stock on the ground. They did not treat the subject as a sheep grazing: they cultivated parts of it, cropping parts of the ground, and of course that curtailed the grazing for the sheep. I have no doubt the sheep stock suffered on that account. It is a mere matter of calculation when that sheep stock would be cleared by the crofters.

2331–32. Have you any addition to make, Mr Mackintosh?—I consider Glenhaultin is such a place as the Commission might be inclined to give to crofters were it not in their possession now; and the fate of the parties who became security for the amount advanced to them will no doubt be a warning to others who may be called upon to do the same again.

2333. Now tell me, of this total sum, for which these gentlemen became security, how much was paid by the crofters themselves?—Mr Mitchell's bill has been entirely paid up.

2334. By the crofters?—By the profit secured from the working of the farm.

2335. By the crofters?—Yes. They have been able to pay that, and to reduce Mr Mackay's.

2336. The late Mr Mitchell's bill was paid up by the profits derived from the crofters; what other sums, if any, were paid, or profits derived from, crofters?—They paid Mr Mackay's bill, except £16, 4s. The other bills have been reduced from the original amounts to what I have stated.

2337. Well, then, the difference between £444 and £608 has been got by the profits derived from the crofters?—Yes. And they have paid also some of the rent; they paid all the rent except two years' rent.

Uig, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

2338. You said there was due £70 of rent?—There is due two years' rent, £140.

2339. How much rent have they paid, then?—They have paid six years' rent.

2340. That is £420?—Yes.

2341. That makes £584 in all—£420 of rent and £164 of capital loan—that they have paid?—That is the gross payments made by them.

2342. What interest have they paid?—The interest, as far as I can make out, altogether has been £45, 10s.

2343. And have they paid that?—No.

2344. But my question is, What interest have they paid?—I am not aware.

2345. They have paid some, I suppose?—There has been some interest paid.

2346. The Caledonian Bank is the creditor?—The Caledonian Bank holds these bills.

2347. What rate of interest did it charge?—I am not aware.

2348. Something smart?—It ought to be, considering the risk.

2349. But, at any rate, you are satisfied the crofters did pay some interest?—Mr Clow is here; he manages the financial part of it, and perhaps the practical part, and he will be able to give you information as to that.

2350. Now what I want to be at, Mr Mackintosh, is this,—Do you think, speaking impartially, as I am sure you wish to do, that the crofters did what they could to meet the obligation imposed upon them by this land being taken over?—I am afraid they would not manage the place as Mr Clow wished them to do it. I am afraid he had a difficulty in doing that.

2351. That is hardly my point. There might be a difference of opinion as to how the place should be managed, and possibly a farmer might take one view and crofters a different view. But, allowing for all that, do you think they honestly made an endeavour to meet the obligations laid upon them or taken up by them? You see they have paid £584—not enough, no doubt, but still it is a deal of money—do you think they have fairly endeavoured, allowing for their want of knowledge perhaps in working a large tract of ground and a large sheep stock, to meet the obligations coming upon them?—No, I do not think they did.

2352. You think they could have paid a good deal more?—They might have been able to pay more from other sources.

2353. But do you think they could have paid a good deal more from the working of this grazing?—Not in the manner in which they work it.

2354. You think, I suppose, they meant to work it to a profit, and meant to pay when they began?—I have no doubt that was their intention.

2355. Had they applied for land before?—I am not aware; it was before my time.

2356. What I would like to be at is, how did this land come to be handed over to them? It was considered to be suitable for crofters, and so on; but had they asked for it?—I don't know. It was at the time that the crofter agitation or the difficulties of recovering rents were felt, and Mr Ross, who was a kind-hearted gentleman, thought that this might be a means of lessening the grievance, and giving the people a fair chance of doing well.

2357–58. Who started the movement?—I think it was Mr Ross or Mr Macdonald, Portree No doubt the crofters themselves would have been speaking about it, or they would not have got the neighbouring tacksmen interested in the matter.

2359. Who was the leading crofter on their side of the negotiation?—I don't know.

2360. Mr Forsyth.—Did you consider the rent when reduced to £70 a low rent for the times?—The rent was fixed before my time; and, considering the time it was held by Rev. Mr Martin at £105, I think the reduction of £35 was equal to any reduction that had been given on land at that time.

2361. And was the sheep stock handed over at a moderate valuation?—At a Whitsunday valuation.

2362. In the ordinary method of valuation?—In the ordinary method.

2363. Mr Macleod.—Can you tell me what the valuation was; can you give us any information as to the valuation, or would you prefer us to get that from Mr Clow?—Mr Clow can do so; it never came before me.

2364. Then there is the question about the stock: is the stock still on the ground, do you think?—Well, there is stock there; but, of course, it is not the same stock.

2365. But do you think there is an equal number of stock on the ground to-day to what there was when it was handed over to them?—I don't think there is, seeing they have cultivated part of the land.

2366. Mr Sutherland.—In your very interesting statement regarding this club farm, Mr Mackintosh, you have shown, I think, that in the six years the people of Glenhaultin have had this enlargement of their holdings they have paid off £608, or £628, 10s. taking all the charges,—that is what you have shown, is it not?—I don't exactly follow the figures. They had £608 to pay, and eight years' rent of £42, that is a gross obligation of £944.

2367. What I want you to do is to save myself making the calculation when their obligation would terminate at the rate at which it is going on. But I should think that in a term of years, such as 30 or 33, as is generally allowed, so far as I can see at the present moment without making the calculation, there is a probability that they would wipe off all their obligation?—That is so; but what of those securities who live out to the last? Some of the securities have died, and others must take up the obligations.

2368. Yes, yes, they would not lapse of course until they were paid off?—No.

2369. Then, with regard to the money that they have paid out of their holding, viz., the local rates, can you give us any idea what they would amount to?—I could not say for certain about that.

2370. Mr Maccallum.—At the time the crofters entered was the price of sheep very high?—I don't think they were very high at 1885; they have been higher in 1889.

2371. But during those six years prices have come down considerably, have they not?—Prices went up and have come down.

2372. When did they begin to come down?—Within the last ten years; prices were at their highest I suppose in 1890–91; they have come down in 1892.

2373. And they have got no reduction since they entered on this holding?—No, they have not.

2374. But other farms in Skye have been reduced in that time?—No farmer in Skye, on the Macdonald estate, who entered on a new arrangement at that term, or since that term, has got any reduction of rent.

2375. No reduction for six years?—No reduction since 1885. Any tenant who entered on a farm at Whitsunday 1885, or since then, has not in my recollection received any reduction.

2376. Mr Sutherland.—Do you mean independently of the lease?—Independently of the lease.

2377. Mr Maccallum.—And have the crofters been quite free in the management of the croft?—They were certainly allowed to manage it to the best advantage.

2378. Without any interference on the part of the guarantors?—I think Mr Mitchell and Mr Clow were specially appointed to see that the place was properly managed.

2379. Had they the appointment of the shepherd, for instance?—I am not aware.

2380. Then with regard to the arable land, do you think that the crofts are better cultivated now since they got the additional grazing?—I cannot speak as to how they were cultivated before, and therefore cannot make any comparison.

2381. Are they well cultivated now?—There are very few crofts in Skye well cultivated, and I do not think the crofts of Renetra and Keistle are better cultivated than others.

2382. Do they sow grass?

2383. Mr Sutherland.—It is not generally the custom.

2384. Mr Maccallum.—Have they improved their houses since they got the grazing?—I think the houses in Renetra and Keistle have improved in the last few years.

2385. Mr Munro.—I am rather interested in this venture, Mr Mackintosh, and I should like if possible to come to an approximate balance-sheet. The amount originally advanced was £608, 10s. 10d.; the amount now due is £444, 19s.; that is inclusive of interest no doubt?—Add £140 of rent, making £584.

2386. Yes, but I am speaking now with special reference to the bank loan. They are due to-day £444, 19s., inclusive of interest?—Yes, to the bank.

2387. Now, can you give us any idea of the value of the stock at the present moment?—No I cannot, for I do not know the number.

2388. Do you know whether it has appreciated or depreciated?—The price of stock is lower in general now than when they entered; but whether the quality of the stock is equal I cannot say.

2389. That is what I meant—you can have no idea beyond a rough sketch?—No.

2390. So that it is just possible they may have been making considerable progress since then, seeing that they paid £163, and have still the stock on hand?—I don't think they have the same kind of stock on hand now as they got when they entered; Mr Clow can probably give you exact information as to that. But their total indebtedness to-day is only £24 less than it was the day they entered.

2391. But it is not unusual in business transactions, Mr Mackintosh, even for business men to take a considerable time to pay off their indebtedness?—It is not usually allowed.

2392. I am familiar with transactions that took a much longer time to square up; but if we can estimate the amount or value of the stock in hand.—Mr Clow will give you information as to that.

2393. The Chairman.—What was the total area of additional land?—I have not beside me the book showing the area. I gave it to the surveyor, and he will give you that information. There is a book of areas of the Glenhaultin and Macdonald estates specially. I think it will be about 3000 acres, but I cannot say for certain.

2394. Well, now, how many crofters were to take that over?—Fourteen shares.

2395. What additional rent fell to be paid by each in respect of this enlargement?—Each of them paid one-fourteenth of £70, or £5.

DONALD ALEXANDER CLOW, Farmer, Cuidreach (42)—examined. — Donald Alexander Clow.

2396. The Chairman.—How do you describe yourself, Mr Clow?—As a farmer.

2397. And the name of your farm?—Cuidreach.

2398. You have heard the whole of Mr Mackintosh's evidence?—Yes.

2399. Now, do you know the circumstances under which this land was given over to the crofters?—I think so.

2400. Well, just tell us?—When Mr Martin gave it up they applied to Lord Macdonald for it; it was just at the beginning of the great crofter agitation.

2401. You mean the crofters applied?—The crofters applied for it. Mr Ross of Cromarty was Commissioner then, and I suppose, to keep them quiet, they gave them this piece of land.

2402. The whole of it?—The whole of the Glenhaultin farm.

2403. What was the stock on the farm at the time?—I cannot tell you that. I did not know I should be asked to speak about it, and I am not prepared with figures.

2404. You have been referred to by Mr Mackintosh as knowing all about it. What was the stock they got?—I cannot say.

g, Skye.
onald
exander
ow.

2405. Can you give us any idea?—I cannot say as to the numbers on the ground then.

2406. What was the specific arrangement made with the crofters? You became obligant on a bill to the amount of £93, 12s. 6d.?—Yes.

2407. Well, you will know all about the transaction. What was the specific arrangement made with the crofters?—They got this farm of Glenhaultin at a rent of £70, if they could find security for the stock, which they could not get without security.

2408. And the security was as described by Mr Mackintosh?—Yes.

2409. Now, after the land was handed over to the crofters, with the stock upon it, who managed the ground?—I was appointed one of the managers.

2410. Was there any one else along with you?—The late Mr Mitchell of Kingsburgh.

2411. Anybody else?—No more.

2412. Who appointed you?—The other securities and the crofters.

2413. Was the bank one of the appointers?—I did not hear.

2414. Who managed the farm, along with you and Mr Mitchell, on behalf of the crofters?—Nobody; we managed the whole thing ourselves.

2415. And the crofters took nothing to do with it, except that they were parties to your appointment?—They were seeing what was going on.

2416. Was there no crofter manager along with you?—No.

2416*a*. Then how was the stock dealt with from year to year?—Just in the usual way of farming—the usual cast was sold at the highest prices we could get.

2417. Then was the English of it this, that you and the late Mr Mitchell just went on managing the farm as if it had been your own?—Just the same.

2418. So that, suppose there had been no transaction with the crofters at all, but by some circumstances you and he had come in as obligants on bills to manage this farm, the result would have been what has occurred?—Just the same.

2419. You don't blame the crofters then for the shortcoming?—No, no.

2420. Mr Macleod.—You have said, Mr Clow, that you don't know the number of sheep that were on the farm when it was entered on by the crofters. Do you know anything about the price—what price they paid?—I don't remember the price.

2421. You will remember the circumstances, though, about the valuation?—Well, yes.

2422. And the valuators?—Yes.

2423. Who were the valuators?—Mr Macdonald, Ord, who acted for the outgoing tenant, and a Mr Forbes at Portree for the incoming tenants.

2424. Did you consider that it was a fair valuation, or was it rather heavy?—It was just about the usual prices at the time.

2425. Were the sheep blackfaced?—No, they were Cheviots. They are blackfaced now.

2426. Why did you change the stock?—Because the crofter stock was blackfaced, and we thought it would be better to have the two stocks the same.

2427. Do you think there was any loss in the change?—There was a lot of loss.

2428. And you think that to a considerable extent would account for it not doing so well as it might have done?—Yes, a great deal.

2429. You think, considering everything, you have done fairly well?—We have done just as well as we could.

2430. But, taking all the circumstances into account, you think that, considering the times and the changing of the stock, you did fairly well?—Oh, yes.

2431. I daresay you, as one of the obligants to these bills, will know the rate of interest that was charged by the bank?—I am not very sure.

2432. It was an ordinary bill?—An ordinary bill.

2433. And ordinary bills have been running, at least, 6 per cent. during that time?—Oh, no; about 5 per cent.

2434. You think that the average would be about 5 per cent.?—Yes.

2435. Not more?—I don't think it would be more.

Uig, Skye.
Donald Alexander Clow.

2436. Do you know about the rent? Are the crofters jointly and severally liable for the rent and for their obligations, or are they just liable for their shares?—The crofters did not pay any of the rent: the rent was paid from the money made out of the farm. All the rent that was paid was paid by me since Mr Mitchell died.

2437. But you don't know whether the proprietor holds all fourteen liable for the rent, or only for shares?—I believe they are entered separately in the valuation roll.

2438. As to the reduction on the bills, has that been done by you?—Yes.

2439. There has been no money contributed by the crofters?—They paid Mr Mackay's bill except the £16.

2440. That bill would not then be paid out of the profits from the sheep?—No.

2441. It was reduced from £90 to £16?—Yes.

2442. So that the crofters have not only not received any profit from the stock since they got this farm of Glenhaultin, but they have actually paid out of their own pockets a sum of £74?—They paid Mr Mackay's bill.

2443. For the sake of making out a fair balance-sheet, might I ask whether you received any remuneration yourself for all the trouble you have taken in connection with the farm?—Not a penny. Whatever I spent I got.

2444. Nor any of the others?—No.

2445. There has been no outlay for management at all?—Not a penny.

2445*a*. Mr Sutherland.—I think that with regard to the responsibility of this venture that attaches to the crofters, they have not much, so far as the success or non-success of this experiment is concerned?—Well, they have been cropping some.

2446. But they have had no voice, practically, in the management?—They could have the place.

2447. But they have not the place?—No.

2448. Mr Maccallum.—Are they managing their own crofts pretty well?—Oh, just like the ordinary crofter.

2449. But they have been improving the houses, have they not?—I don't see very much improvement in the houses.

2450. Mr Munro.—I understood from Mr Mackintosh, Mr Clow, that you could give us a fair idea of the state of the stock at this moment on the farm of Glenhaultin. Can you do so now, after thinking over the matter a little?—I don't believe there is much difference between the value of the stock, if prices were to-day as high as they were when the stock was taken over. But the stock has improved the last two or three years. Of course, in the changing of the stock, we lost a number of them.

2451. That is, estimating the value at the date on which they went in. The stock to-day is considerably enhanced in price. Is that the case?—I think so.

2452. It would bring more?—Yes, if the prices were the same.

2453. So that the venture has resulted in a considerable profit?—I am not very sure of the great profit, but there is no loss.

2454. But if the stock to-day is more valuable than when they entered, and they managed to pay £163 to account of their obligation, then, of course, the venture must have resulted in a profit; that is the precise state of the balance-sheet?—There would be no loss on it. I do not think there would be any loss even with the low prices.

2455. Must there not be a profit, seeing they have paid £163 apart from the valuation?—Yes.

2456. The Chairman.—Did the crofters put any sheep stock of their own upon this ground?—They put a few one year, about 40 small lambs.

2457. Nothing to affect the grazing?—No, nothing.

2458. Did they put any cattle stock?—They used to have a beast each there in summer.

2459. There was no objection to that?—No, no.

2460. That does not affect the matter?—Not a thing.

2461. You say they cultivated arable,—was it to any very great extent?—Not very great.

2462. You and your colleague, Mr Mitchell, did not make any complaint to them, I suppose, of their taking in a little arable?—No, it only improved. It was old arable, which was all under fog.

2463. They did it good?—Yes.

2464. And did not steal very much from the grazing?—Very little, because they had it in winter. It was the low land.

2465. Which of the crofters concerned in this, do you know, happens to know most about it?—Alexander Lamont, jun., who is present.

2466. Mr Sutherland.—I asked for the calculation from Mr Mackintosh, and he thought that perhaps you might assist me. Have you considered in what time they would terminate their liability altogether, at the rate at which they are going on?—I was just keeping it as far away as possible.

2467. It is a little over twenty years, is it not?—It will be all that.

2468. And they are paying at the same time the high rate of 5 per cent. interest upon the money advanced?—I suppose so.

2469. You have not made the exact calculation as to the number of years?—No.

2470. It is less than thirty, is it not?—I would think so.

2471. The Chairman.—I should have asked you this question, Mr Clow. Does the whole of this arrangement between Lord Macdonald and the crofters, and between you and the late Mr Mitchell and the crofters, stand upon verbal agreement?—I had to sign a trust deed. I was appointed a trustee over this place.

2472. By whom?—It was written by Mr Macdonald, factor for Lord Macdonald.

2473. Who granted the trust deed?—The crofters. We were appointed by the crofters and by the securities, in the deed.

2474. Have you got the deed?—Mr Macdonald has it.

2475. I should like very much to see that deed. On what narrative does it proceed?—I am not very sure.

2476. Have you a copy of it?—No.

2477. But the transaction took the form of a trust deed by the crofters, to which you and Mr Mitchell were parties?—Yes.

2478. Anybody else?—I am not very sure.

2479. Is Mr Alexander Macdonald in possession of the deed?—I think so.

2480. Did he act as agent for all the parties concerned?—Yes.

2481. And drew up the deed, and saw to its execution?—Yes.

2482. The Chairman to Mr Mackintosh.—Have you a copy of that deed, Mr Mackintosh?—Mr Mackintosh. I have not.

2483. The Chairman to Mr Maclachlan, Banker, Portree.—Have you a copy of it, Mr Maclachlan?—Mr Maclachlan. I believe I have. I think I have all the details of the valuation and everything.*

2484. Mr Mackintosh.—May I be allowed to put a question to Mr Clow?—The Chairman. Certainly.

2485. Mr Mackintosh.—The crofters paid up a certain part of Mr Mackay's bill, reducing it from £90 to £16. Did the benefit they derived from cropping the ground amount in value to that difference?—Witness. Oh, I daresay it did.

2486. The Chairman.—Is that a mere rough estimate?—Witness. Oh, just a mere rough estimate: I am not at all sure.

2487. Mr Mackintosh.—The total obligation by the crofters just now is £584. It was originally £608, so that at the present time their obligation is only £24 less than at entry. They have had eight years' possession of the land, so that they have paid up on an average £3 per annum. At the same rate, £584 divided by three brings out a period of 194 years as the time it will take to repay the loan?

2488. The Chairman.—That is not a question to Mr Clow. Before we leave this matter, we would like to know if any of the crofters are present who can tell the story from their point of view. Is Mr Lamont, jun., here, or Mr Lamont, sen.?

* See below, Question 8615.

ALEXANDER LAMONT, JUN., Keistle (46)—examined.

2489. The Chairman.—Have you a holding as a crofter?—Yes.

2490. Where?—At Keistle.

2491. What rent do you pay?—£6.

2492. What was your rent before it was dealt with by the Crofters Commission?—£8, 5s.

2493. You had something to do, I understand, with the management of the Glenhaultin grazing?—No, not with the management.

2494. Can you tell us anything about it?—I have a share of it from the trustees, that is all.

2495. Are you in the same position as the other crofters who have a share?—The very same.

2496. Did you confer with the late Mr Mitchell and with Mr Clow as to the management?—We all agreed to that.

2497. Was the thing entirely in their hands?—Yes.

2498. The crofters then, as I understand you, took nothing to do with it during the time it was in their possession?—They would always consult us before they did anything.

2499. The crofters and they worked harmoniously together?—We never cast out.

2500. Was the deficiency due to bad management, or decline of prices, or to bad times?—I don't think it was bad management, but at the time we took the farm there was a big slice of it cut off: perhaps that was the reduction.

2501. You mean cut off the grazing?—Cut off the grazing.

2502. Before being given to the crofters?—Most certainly.

2503. Who got it?—It was added to the farm of Scorrybreck.

2504. How much was taken from Glenhaultin and added to Scorrybreck?—It is impossible for me to say. It was a good run.

2505. Sheep run?—Yes.

2506. What would the carry of the run be?—I cannot give evidence on that.

2507. Can you tell me what the consequent reduction upon the stock was from the days of Mr Martin, by reason of the loss of this grazing?—We were told that Mr Martin paid £105, and we got it for £70; but a fence was erected first, and then this fence was knocked down by hammers and axes in the presence of the proprietor and the trustee by the crofters from the one end to the other. Then another fence was put up, but Mr Martin never agreed to this march. He said his march was further on, but we were told that unless we took it at this march we would not get it.

2508. Who told you that?—The factors and the ground-officer. But Mr Martin told us not to take it at this march. He advised us to get a map from Black in Edinburgh, and to go by it. I don't think we ever saw that map.

2509. But, at any rate, was there a considerable stretch of ground taken away?—Yes.

2510. Allowing for the rent of the land that was taken away, was there any real reduction in the rent after all?—There was from £105 to £50.

2511. To £70?—To £70.

2512. But then you lost land?—Yes.

2513. Would that account for the difference?—So I believe.

2514. Then there was no reduction of rent in reality?—No, but we were promised to have a reduction. We had a meeting with the two trustees and the factor; we got notice to have a meeting in the Royal Hotel, Portree, and at the meeting there the factor promised, in the presence of the two trustees, that we would get about £18 of reduction. The trustees complained first that they would put it off unless they got that, and the factor promised that. But after all the thing was left where it was, and the rent was put to the credit.

2515. Can you tell us anything more about this grazing?—We were trying to get it clear off our hands as well as we could. Everything was in our power; we were working it and paying it; we put on 60 of our own sheep, and we paid our own rates every year.

2516. You mentioned the trustees in the deed. Who were all the trustees?—Only Mr Clow and Mr Mitchell.

2517. Was that the whole?—That is the whole—two trustees. Mr Mitchell was a very kind gentleman to us, and he gave us fourteen years.

2518. To work it out?—To work it out.

2519. Has any trustee been assumed since Mr Mitchell's death?—No.

2520. The only trustee is Mr Clow?—Yes.

2521. Mr Forsyth.—I should like to ask whether the shifting of the stock from Cheviot to blackfaced was not the occasion of a good deal of loss?—I believe it was, at the beginning, for the first two years.

2522. But now that the shifting has been made, do you think that the blackfaced sheep would do better there?—I think they will now. They are doing that.

2523. And the place is fairly stocked now with good blackfaces?—I don't know.

2524. Have you any idea whether it is much understocked, taking the difference between what the land will carry in Cheviot and blackfaced?—I think it has been under, since I first saw it.

2525. Mr Macleod.—We were told by Mr Mackintosh that one thing which had gone against this farm doing well was that the crofters had cultivated some of the land, and in that way reduced the amount of feed that there was for the sheep. Was there much land cultivated in the farm?—In my opinion it was to the benefit of the sheep, all that we cultivated of it.

2526. It is out in grass now?—Out in grass now.

2527. And it is better than it was before you cultivated it?—Better in the winter.

2528. Mr Sutherland.—Do you admit that there has been any failure in this grazing? Are not you better off since you got it, than you were before you got it?—Yes, most certainly.

2529. So you do not admit that it was in any way a failure?—No.

2530. You believe it was a success?—Yes, and it is so still, although we met with difficulties.

2531. You had certain difficulties in the way to begin with?—Yes, and paying heavy interest on the money.

2532. It was stated that the Rev. Mr Martin had the land for £105, and that when you got it the rent was reduced to £70. But you have not the same amount of land that Mr Martin had?—Perhaps he had it all over.

2533. As a matter of fact, do you know that you did not get all the land that Mr Martin had?—Mr Martin never had a march fence.

2534. Have you got the same amount of land that Mr Martin paid £105 for?—No, and he told us that we had not.

2535. So you do not consider that the experiment was made in your case under favourable conditions?—No.

2536. They were very unfavourable, as far as the rent was concerned?—Very; according to the rent.

2537. And other conditions?—Yes.

2538. Such as having stock that was not fitted for you to carry on?—Yes. Another thing, Mr Martin had a glebe, and he would take his hoggs to the glebe and winter them there. We have to put them away to wintering, and pay 6s. or 7s. for them.

2539. And notwithstanding all these unfavourable conditions, you are in a much better position than you were before?—Yes.

2540. Mr Maccallum.—Then do you consider that the rent is too high?—Yes, and so did the trustees.

2541. Did the trustees ask for a reduction?—They told us they did.

2542. I think it was stated that you were promised a reduction; what reduction were you promised?—The factor stated in the presence of fourteen of us, and the two trustees, that it would come about £18 off the whole of the farm, and he said that would be about the same as other farms were getting.

2543. That would leave £52; but that would make a fair rent for it?—Yes.

2544. How did it come about that that promise was not implemented?—I don't know.

2545. It was distinctly given?—The trustee never told us, and I for my part never asked him, but he said when he paid the rent it was only put to his credit; he paid £50 for us.

2546. And if you had got that reduction, you would not now be in arrear?—I don't think it, though we might be pressed well.

2547. It was a reduction that the trustees thought reasonable?—Certainly. They said they would give it up unless they got that.

2548. And they were men who ought to know the value?—They should. They were two big farmers.

2549. So that in their opinion, as well as your own, the rent was too high?—Yes.

2550. And £52 would be a fair rent?—Yes.

2551. Mr Munro.—I wish to bring out the result of this transaction from a commercial point of view. How many years is it since you took possession of Glenhaultin?—About eight years.

2552. At that time you borrowed from the bank a sum of over £608?—Yes.

2553. And you have paid to account of that about £163?—Yes.

2554. How much total rent did you pay during the eight years?—It is added in the valuation roll separate to each of us; and we paid the rates ourselves, not the trustees.

2555. Was it £420 you paid in rent during the six years?—I cannot tell that.

2556. You know the value of the stock when you went in; can you tell us what the value of the stock is at this time? Is it less or greater than when you entered?—I am not very sure, but I think the ewe with lamb made £2, 5s.; that is my opinion.

2557. But is the gross value of the stock less or greater than when you entered?—The valuation day we would not get our lambs cut unless they would be paid first.

2558. But is your stock as numerous to-day as when you entered?—I don't think they are less at all events.

2559. So that you have managed to pay £163 to account of the loan, £420 in rent, and your stock is probably as valuable as when you entered?—Yes.

2560. Were those eight years exceptionally favourable to farmers, or otherwise?—Most of them were very severe.

2561. Bad years?—Bad years.

2562. The Chairman.—Did either of the trustees speak to you personally about the proposed reduction of rent?—Yes, they spoke to us before the meeting, and also after the meeting.

2563. You mean both Mr Mitchell and Mr Clow?—I don't think Mr Mitchell lived long after.

2564. Did they both speak to you?—I don't think Mr Mitchell did.

2565. Mr Clow spoke to you, did he?—Yes.

2566. What did he say to you?—We were there, the fourteen of us and the two trustees, in a room in the Royal Hotel, and the factor said we would get about £18.

2567. My question is, what did Mr Clow say to you?—He said that he and Mr Mitchell were to put it off unless they got this reduction.

2568. What reduction?—About such a percentage; I don't remember.

2569. But I would like if you could remember what Mr Clow said to you about the reduction of rent?—That is more than I can say.

2570. Did nothing pass at the meeting with regard to a reduction of rent?—No, not that I heard.

2571. Then there was nothing said at the meeting about a reduction of rent?—Yes, the factor said likely g, Skye, — exander mont, Jun.

we would get off about £18, and I know well what I said myself. I said we did not get the £20 off, and he said perhaps we would get that off through time.

2572. But was there a promise made of a reduction?—I don't know. I had nothing to do with that; it was the trustees.

2573. But did the factor make any promise of a reduction of rent?—No, he did not.

2574. No arrangement was come to for a reduction of rent?—Nobody told us that.

2575. That, perhaps, you would get off £18?—That we would get that off, as the other big farmers were getting.

2576. Was that Mr Mackintosh?—Yes.

2577. Now, to your knowledge, did anything more happen, or was anything more said, regarding a reduction of rent?—No, not to my knowledge; but Mr Clow was always telling us that only his rent was put to his credit.

2578. Now, why was it that the crofters, as you said, removed the fence with axes and hammers?—Because the fence was erected on a large piece of Glenhaultin, taking a large space off the Glen and adding it to Scorrybreck.

2579. And it was for that reason they took it down?—Yes.

2580. Was that done during the time of Mr Martin's lease?—Yes.

2581. Then it was before the crofters got it?—Yes.

2582. Then, when the crofters came to get the land, they saw that they were only getting the smaller portion?—Yes.

2583. They were not deceived in any way?—No, unless they would take it along the way the officer went they would lose it.

2584. But they were asked to take the land as it had been restricted?—Most certainly.

2585. You were only offered the land on the one side of the fence?—On the one side of the fence. The first fence was broken down.

2586. Then the rent you agreed to pay, or which was agreed to be paid, was a rent for the land as fenced off?—Of £70.

2587. Of £70 for the land that was fenced off?—Yes.

onald lexander ow.

DONALD ALEX. CLOW, Farmer, Cuidreach (recalled).

2588. Mr Maccallum.—About this reduction of rent, was there a promise of a reduction to the trustees by the factor?—He did not give us an actual promise, but he said he would do his best.

2589. He held out hopes?—Yes, he held out hopes.

2590. And you thought it would be a very reasonable thing to grant this reduction?—Yes, we just asked the reduction that the crofters were getting at the time from the Crofters Commission.

2591. He held out hopes that you would get that, and he has not implemented that?—No.

2592. The Chairman, on the suggestion of Mr Myles Macinnes.—Was it owing to this prospect that was held out by Mr Mackintosh that the rent fell into arrear?—I am afraid not altogether.

lexander acmillan.

ALEXANDER MACMILLAN, Crofter, Herbusta, Kilmuir (38). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

2593. The Chairman.—What is the name of your holding?—Herbusta.

2594. What is your rent?—£6, 15s.

2595. And what was it formerly?—£8 before it was fixed by the Crofters Commission; but we got an addition to our holding to the value of 25s.

2596. Not under the Act of Parliament?—No.

2597. Was Mr Macintyre hearing about that the other day?—Yes.

2598. What is the name of the farm nearest your township of Herbusta?—Monkstadt and Duntulm.

2600. We are more anxious to hear about land that is for our consideration at present than about these old matters?—The land out of which we were evicted is there, suitable for crofter occupancy.

2601. I will come to that, but will you kindly deal with the farm of Monkstadt in the meantime?—There is plenty of agricultural land in Monkstadt—it could support 100 crofters in good circumstances—all at present in possession of one man.

2602. Is that Mr Ferguson?—Yes.

2603. Was that land which you say would accommodate 100 crofters formerly in the occupation of crofters?—Yes; eight or nine separate townships.

2604. Give us their names.—Linicro, Grealin, Feaull, Holl, Dillista, Knockow, Saltanill, Lachasay, Score, Osmigary. There is a piece of ground attached to the farm which was in possession of crofters before, being the site of a lake that was drained—Loch Chaluim Chille.

2605. Is all that rich land now?—Yes.

2606. What side of the farm is it on?—On the east.

2607. And how far from the steading?—Part of it surrounds it, and other parts are miles away from it.

2608. Do you know the total size of Monkstadt farm?—I know the stock that it carries.

2609. Tell us the stock?—About 3000 sheep, to the best of my knowledge, and the previous tenant had 400 head of cattle on it, besides that number of sheep, and about 50 horses.

2610. What cattle and horses, if any, has the present tenant?—I believe he has about that number of cattle, though not quite that number of horses.

2611. You have mentioned the ground where these old townships were. Is there any other part of the farm, at a distance from this, where there is land of the same kind?—No; there is no other land except the sites of these townships.

2612. You say that land would accommodate 100 crofters. What size of holding would you give to each?—As much as would carry eight cows and a pair of horses.

2613. Arable and grazing to carry eight cows and a pair of horses?—Yes.

2614. Taking your own individual case, could you stock that land?—Yes, and more than that, if I could get the land of my forefathers.

2615. And you could put up the necessary buildings?—Yes, I could put up such buildings as would suit me until I could gradually improve them. I am quite willing to live in a tent until I could put up better.

2616. Is there a strong feeling among your friends and neighbours to get additional crofts such as you have been describing?—Yes, especially two of my neighbours.

2617. Who are they?—Widow Ann Macdonald and Widow Christina Macdonald; very anxious to shift back to the lands where we were born.

2618. But I suppose we may take it neither you nor they would go back to the lands where you were born unless you could work them to a profit?—No, we desire to get better holdings, and go back to these lands simply to better our circumstances.

2619. Quite so. Have you many cottars in your district?—Yes; but not in my particular township, where there is only one.

2620. Where are the cottars most numerous?—In Camusmore and Bornaskitaig.

2621. Speaking roughly—I don't want precise figures unless you can give them—how many cottars will there be in Camusmore and Bornaskitaig?—About thirty, between both townships.

2622. And how many crofters?—Fifty in Bornaskitaig.

2623. And in Camusmore?—In Camusmore there are only cottars.

2624. How many cottars are there in Camusmore?—About fourteen.

Uig, Skye.
Alexander Macmillan.

2625. These places are close to each other?—Yes; marching with each other.

2626. Have these cottars, or most of them, got some stock?—A few sheep.

2627. Have none of them any cattle?—A short time ago they got a few sheep; some of them have a cow. Most of them would keep a cow if they got land.

2628. They have no land?—No.

2629. Have they any patches of potato ground?—Neighbours give them that.

2630. Do they pay any rent for their grazing or for their patches of potato ground?—They give work for the potato ground.

2631. Would it be an advantage for these cottars, and for the crofters also, if they got suitable holdings elsewhere?—Yes; nothing would be of so much advantage.

2632. Is it within your knowledge that they desire to get such holdings?—Yes.

2633. The crofters would like it, because it would relieve them of a burden, and the cottars would like it, because it would improve their circumstances?—Yes; quite so.

2634. How did these cottars come to be there,—I mean, what is the general explanation of it?—Most of them have been shifted from crofts, and flung out, without a place to go to.

2635. And many of them, I daresay, are related to the crofters in Bornaskitaig?—Yes; most of them are crofters' sons.

2636. Would you say, putting the cottars and the crofters together, that in Camusmore and Bornaskitaig there are far too many people crowded together?—Yes; four times more than there ought to be.

2637. Now, passing from the farm of Monkstadt to the farm of Duntulm, do you know it pretty well?—Yes; every inch of it.

2638. Is there land of a similar kind there?—Yes; land that was occupied in former times by crofters. Those that left these townships never forget it as long as they live.

2639. Are these lands now suitable for cultivation and occupation?—Yes.

2640. Can you give us the names of the old townships there?—Shulista, Erisco, Aird, Duntulm, Brunistad, Lachasay, Urucag, Glomaig, and Scuddaburgh.

2641. How many crofters would these lands accommodate in your estimation?—About forty.

2642. In holdings similar to what you have described?—Yes; and according to the ability of the people.

2643. Are these townships too closely crowded together?—In these townships that I mentioned there is nobody at all.

2644. Were these townships scattered or on a compact piece of ground?—They are scattered throughout Duntulm.

2645. Is there any other part of Duntulm farm to which you would like to ask our attention?—No; except the grazing land which Kilmuir lost about twenty years ago.

2646. What is the name of that grazing ground?—Braemore, Glen Sleisdale.

2647. Was that land taken away about twenty-eight years ago, and added to the farm of Duntulm?—Yes; and the land that was left to us was doubled in rent.

2648. You were going to begin by telling us something you thought of importance with regard to the land near here?—Yes; it was there I was born.

2649. What land is that?—Peinchoinnich.

2650. Does that land belong to a farm now?—It belongs to the tack occupied by James Urquhart.

2651. That is Glenuig?—Yes.

2652. Is it suitable for crofters?—Yes; there is not the like of it in the island.

2653. It is the best bit of Skye?—It had that name.

2654. What is the extent of it,—how many would it carry?—There were six crofters in the township in which I was born, and I think it would accommodate four now.

2655. Were you born in the township of Peinchonnich?—Yes. It would now accommodate four enlarged holdings. My mother was evicted twice, though her rent was paid. She could not get leave to put the manure that she had on the one holding there; she had to carry it to her new holding.

2656. Mr Forsyth.—You say that you would like land for eight cows and a pair of horses. How much arable do you think you would need to carry that stock?—Twenty acres.

2657. And some infield grazing besides?—Yes; for summer grazing.

2658. By eight cows, do you mean eight milch cows, with their followers?—Yes; to provide a living to a crofter who could keep such a holding, and a number of sheep besides.

2659. I was going to ask that. How many sheep would each have?—Thirty ewes and their followers.

2660. Do you think you could winter eight milch cows and their followers with a croft of 16 acres, or say, 16 to 20 acres?—Yes; or up to 26 acres. There is plenty ground there to afford such crofts, and people quite willing to give the value for them.

2661. How would you work the land? would it be on the ordinary crofters' rotation of half oats and half potatoes? or would you propose to alter the system if you had plenty land?—I would leave the third part of it under sown grass, and I would have part of it in potatoes and turnips and part under oats; and I have both the knowledge and ability of working such a croft in that way if I only could get it.

2662. You have means to stock a croft of that kind at once?—I have a little stock, and, besides, I could manage it if I could only get the land.

2663. What rent do you think would be fair for a holding of that kind?—I think we would be quite willing to pay the rent that was on it when we left it.

2664. But you did not leave such a large holding as that, did you?—The croft out of which we were put contained about 15 acres of arable ground, and I think if we had a croft and a half of such a size to-day it would be a very good croft.

2665. Then you are not able to state what you think would be a fair rent for the new holding?—My father and grandfather and predecessors had such a croft for £7.

2666. Have you made any calculation as to the amount of stock you would sell each year so as to produce the same return for yourself, besides paying the rent?—Yes; I have considered that.

2667. Can you give any description of the prices, or any result of your consideration?—That would be according to the prices; they would be up and down; but I would make my living out of such a croft.

2668. Taking the average prices, you think you could make your living at a fair rent?—Yes. I think, judging by the average of past years, I would both make a living and pay a rent out of such a croft. I am very sure of that; only to get the land at the rent it was before.

2669. How would it be with a man who has not got means like yourself? how would he get on in a holding like that without means?—I believe that he would get on in such a holding, even entering it with borrowed capital.

2670. Would he not be in difficulty the first two or three years until his young stock came forward for selling?—Yes; but then there is the difficulty of supporting a family in the present day without land.

2671. Then, even if he had to pay interest on borrowed money, you think he could get on?—Yes, I am sure of it; if the man could manage the croft properly.

2672. But he could not pay more than £7 for the holding you have described?—I would like to have the croft at its value, more than that if it was worth it.

2673. Have you considered the fencing and the draining that might be necessary in some places?—Yes, I could do all that myself.

2674. You would put in stone drains if required?—Yes, I have done that already; thousands of 'rods' of draining without anything for it, in bad ground.

2675. Mr Macleod.—You said there were some thirty cottars between Camusmore and Bornaskitaig. How many of these do you think would be able to take holdings, supposing suitable ones were available?—About twenty of them.

2676. You think twenty of them would be able without assistance?—Yes, but not crofts of any great size. There is a man here to speak for the cottars, who knows more about them than I do.

2677. What is his name?—John Macpherson.

2678. You are appearing more particularly for the crofters?—Yes.

2679. Mr Sutherland.—One question with regard to the rent. In the event of your getting a croft such as you describe, I suppose you would be content to pay the rent that the Crofters Commission would fix?—Yes.

2680. And, doubtless, it would be easier to pay an increased rent for an increased holding, than the present rent for the holding you have?—Yes, it would, than even the dues for the present holding.

2681. You stated you were a crofter yourself; have you been brought up on a croft?—Yes, and my forefathers were all crofters. It was by the forced removals we had to undergo that we lost a number of our family.

2682. Mr Mackenzie, Factor for Baird's Trustees.—May I be allowed to put one or two questions to the witness?—The Chairman.—Certainly: let us hear them.

2683. Mr Mackenzie.—How many crofters are there on Osmigarry?—I heard that there were three, but I never saw any of them on it.

2684. Do you know the last tenant of Osmigarry?—Yes, I was speaking to an old woman who had land in Osmigarry, and she is living to-day.

2685. Are you aware that there was only one man, Donald Macleod, living there about a hundred years ago?—I know that there was.

2686. Are you aware that it was afterwards occupied by the parish minister?—Yes, I saw it in possession of two ministers of the parish.

2687. Can you state any other one?—No; but I was told by the woman, to whom I have referred, that a man of the name of Macpherson had it.

2688. You spoke about Feaull: in whose possession is it at present?—It is in possession of about eighty crofters to-day, for grazing.

2689. You spoke also of Linicro: can you tell about what date the crofters went there?—Forty years ago. I have seen the people who were living there.

2690. That was in the time of Lord Macdonald?—Yes.

2691. Have you any idea how or why they left that place?—It was so long ago, I cannot tell.

2692. Was it about the time of the destitution?—I cannot say whether it was landlord's oppression or the famine, or what it was.

2693. Then as to Bornaskitaig, how long is it since crofters occupied that place?—I heard that it was before then occupied by three; there are old men here belonging to the place.

2694. Are you also aware that it was occupied by one tenant at that time, Donald Macdonald?—No, I know nothing about that.

2695. And there is Knockow: when were the crofters there?—I have seen an old woman who was born there.

2696. Are you aware that over a hundred years ago it was occupied by one tenant, Alexander Macdonald?—I don't know.

2697. You spoke also of Lachasay: are you aware of any tenants by name that have been living there?—Yes, I knew two or three that were there.

2698. And are you aware that they are living there still?—No.

2699. What name did the place now called Peingown formerly have?—I only knew it by the name of Peingown.

2700. Not by the name of Lachasay?—Score is attached to Peingown.

2701. And practically also Lachasay is attached to Peingown?—Yes, I have known it by that name.

2702. You spoke also about Glenuig. I am not in a position to enter into the details of this matter, I take it from the late factor who had to do with this. In the Report of Lord Napier's Commission, he says:—'I have only seen two or three forcible evictions carried 'out by officers of the law for the last twenty years' (Q. 8318); and about the tenant of Glenuig, 'I have 'seen the tenants of Glenuig voluntarily going at the 'request of the proprietor, but they were not turned out 'by officers' (Q. 8319)?—I entirely repudiate the accuracy of that; I saw the summons of removal being served, and the people weeping and wailing.

2703. Is it not the fact that Colonel Fraser gave new crofts and new houses to the tenants removed?—He gave us new holdings certainly, but we were no better off than if we were planted on the sea-shore, we had no houses. We got nothing for the stock that we had upon our holdings. We were deprived of our hill pasture, and had no place to keep our sheep on. We got nothing for the houses we left behind, and we were sleeping in houses with the snow falling on our beds.

2704. Are you aware that Colonel Fraser paid the tenants for their houses when removed, or gave them compensation for them?—Not a penny, unless we would set fire to them. I was an eye-witness of the performance that day.

2705. How many acres of arable land have you got just now?—Eight acres 22 poles, with 2 acres 1 rood 19 poles of outrun, and a share of 201 acres of common pasture. It is reckoned at 8 acres, but it will not yield as much as sow it back, and has not done so for the last twelve years.

2706. Mr Sutherland.—As the point has been introduced, I think I might have some questions to ask the witness with regard to these evictions, though I deprecate their introduction altogether. The matter has been introduced, and we are bound to ask some questions to rebut the statements made.—Mr Mackenzie. I did not introduce the subject; I merely asked for certain information to elicit the point as to the people who occupied these townships.

2707. Mr Sutherland.—I wish one point cleared up, Mr Chairman. The witness stated that certain families were in the township known as Knockow. Mr Mackenzie stated that there was only one tenant. Does the witness still say that there were more than one tenant?—The outline of the crofts is still visible on the ground.

2708. Is it not possible that Mr Mackenzie might have referred to the tenant principal, and that the witness might have referred to sub-tenants of his?—No, they were paying rent to Lord Macdonald.

MURDO MACKINNON, Crofter, Hungladder (54)—examined.

2709. The Chairman.—What is the name of your township?—Hungladder.

2710. You heard the evidence of the previous witness, I think?—Yes, I heard the most of it.

2711. Which is the farm nearest your township?—Duntulm farm.

2712. How far is it from you?—It is quite close.

2713. It marches with your township?—Yes.

2714. Are there any lands near your township on the Duntulm farm suitable for occupation and cultivation?—Yes.

2715. Have these lands any particular local name?—Yes, Osmigarry is the nearest.

2716. Do you desire to get out of your holding and into a better one if you can obtain it?—Our township has put in a petition for enlargement.

2717. Has it been heard?—No, owing to the death of the landlord the thing has been postponed.

2718. The application is for grazing ground?—Yes.

2719. If you got that grazing ground which you have applied for, is that all you want?—If we got plenty of it; but what we have applied for might be too limited for the township. But there is plenty of land beyond that.

2720. Suitable for cultivation?—Yes.

Uig, Skye. Murdo Mackinnon.

2721. Such holdings as Macmillan described?—Yes, or thereabout.

2722. Do you wish to make any addition to his evidence? Have you anything special to say yourself?—I should do with one horse on that size of a croft, and more sheep.

2723. How many sheep?—Sixty at any rate.

2724. The previous witness said 30 ewes, with their followers; do you mean 60 ewes?—From 50 to 60 ewes, with followers.

2725. And how many acres arable do you think you would require for the wintering of that stock?—20 to 25 acres arable.

2726. You know the whole farm of Duntulm, I suppose?—Yes, very well.

2728. Any more?—I think there were nine there, and in Shulista I think five, and in Aird there was one, but I think there were some sub-tenants; and in Clachan there were seven, whether sub-tenants or not I cannot say. There were some crofters in a place called Urucag, but I don't remember that.

2729. You think there is accommodation for thirty at any rate?—Oh yes, I think so.

2730. Are there many cottars about Hungladder?—No, there are only two.

2731. Are they desirous, do you know, of getting holdings if they could get them?—One of them is an old man, who has a small farm already, but he has a young boy who would be very glad to get one.

2732. What is his name?—Donald Nicolson.

2733. How old is he?—About 24.

2734. And the name of the old man?—Colin Matheson.

2735. They have some stock, I daresay?—Matheson has a cow, but the young lad has no place to keep any stock.

2736. And they pay no rent?—No.

2737. Mr Sutherland.—In giving your estimate of the number of tenants that could be accommodated on the Duntulm farm at thirty, you had in your mind, I suppose, the old size of holding?—Yes, provided I would get the hill pasture connected with the place.

2738. But do you think that would be a large enough size under the changed conditions?—Yes, if the farm was broken up. I am not referring to the original farm of Duntulm, but only to the land that was available in the townships.

2739. Mr Macleod.—Do you think that that portion of the present farm of Duntulm, which is not part of the original farm, could be profitably converted into crofter holdings with grazing attached?—I think so; because I knew some of the men that were there, and they were very comfortable.

2740. Have you ever improved any land, Mr Mackinnon?—Yes.

2741. You have trenched land?—Yes.

2742. And you have drained land?—Yes.

2743. And enclosed land?—Yes; I was a farm-servant for a long time. I have enclosed a little piece that I have myself.

2744. You said you knew the farm of Duntulm very well. You have been over Duntulm frequently?—Oh, yes.

2745. Do you think there could be any considerable addition to the extent that could be put under crop by taking in land which was not even cropped by the old people?—Yes.

2746. That is your opinion as a man who knows about land?—Yes.

2747. And you believe that land could be taken in by crofters on the farm of Duntulm that was never under crop before, and that they could do it profitably?

It was mostly all under crop, except there was grazing sometime.

2748. Mr J. Mackenzie, Factor.—Do you say that Lower Lachasay is now, or was in former times, under crofters?—I have seen crofters in Lower Lachasay.

Uig, Skye. Murdo Mackinnon.

2749. What were their names?—One of them was Alexander Macphie, one Angus Macleod, another Angus Macleod, jun., and another Donald Macleod.

2750. I have a rental book here, dated 1855 or 1856, which mentions Murdo Mackenzie, No. 2 Donald Maclean, No. 3 Angus Macleod and Donald Macdonald. Who occupies that land at present?—It is part of the tack of Duntulm. The crofters were evicted from that place thirty years ago.

2751. Are you aware that Lower Lachasay is part of Peingown just now?—Yes.

2752. You are, of course, aware that Duntulm has been a farm from time immemorial?—Yes.

2753. And are you aware that the place called Clachan has been occupied by one tenant,—I am speaking just now from the old records of the estate in 1751?—I am not aware of it.

2754. The Chairman.— Do you know the farm of Monkstadt?—Yes.

2755. Do you know it well?—Very well. I went there when I was 11 years of age, and remained there until I was 25.

2756. What was the name of the place?—I was just at the farm; I went there as a farm-servant.

2757. Then you know a good deal about the farm. Were you a ploughman?—Yes, when I left it.

2758. Are there considerable tracts of ground on that farm suitable for occupation by crofters?—It is all, in my opinion, suitable for occupation by crofters, the whole of it.

2759. As arable or grazing?—Arable and grazing.

2760. And how many crofters of the kind you have in view would it accommodate?—It would accommodate a good many.

2761. There are two general questions I would like to put to you. First of all, with regard to the farm of Monkstadt: has that farm within your knowledge and recollection, greatly increased in size, been greatly extended?—Oh, yes.

2762. By additional lands being added on to it?—I believe twice the size of the original farm.

2763. Was that by taking in lands that had been in the possession of the crofters?—Yes.

2764. The whole of these additions?—The whole of these additions.

2765. You are able to say that, as I understand, from your personal knowledge and recollection?—Yes, I have seen the men in the townships. There is one township that was added which I remember well—Linicro. I was a very young boy when the men were sent away from that place.

2766. The land was added to the farm?—Yes.

2767. Now I pass from that, without going into further detail, to the farm you have spoken so much of,—Duntulm. Has it, in your recollection, increased in extent?—Oh yes, it is three times as big as when I first remember.

2768. There was always a farm of Duntulm, but it is a much larger farm now?—Far larger.

2769. Was the extension brought about by the same process, adding on crofters' land?—Yes, by adding crofter townships to it.

2770. So that the same process has been going on in the case of the two farms?—Yes.

2771. And are the lands which you and others have been speaking about to-day, as suitable for cultivation in each of these farms, lands which have all been formerly in the occupation of crofters?—Yes, the land that was added to the farms.

2772. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—When the enlargement of Duntulm farm was made, was it made from crofters' land, or from good-sized holdings that had fallen into arrear of rent—small farmers?—There is Glen Shulista, that was taken from the crofters as they were. Lower Lachasay was, a few years prior to being added to the farm, let to one of the tenants that was in that township before, and he had to leave.

2773. The Chairman.—What rent did he pay?—I cannot say.

Uig, Skye. Murdo Mackinnon.

2774. Had those holdings that were larger than the ordinary crofters holdings been in the possession of separate persons before?—Yes.

2775. It is a gradual process of consolidation and extension—first, of small holdings, then of bigger holdings, next of small farmers, and then the small farmer is swallowed up by the large grazier?—Yes.

John Martin.

JOHN MARTIN, Crofter, Upper Bornaskitaig, Kilmuir (43)—examined.

2776. The Chairman.—Do you come from Bornaskitaig?—From Upper Bornaskitaig.

2777. Which is the farm nearest your township?—Monkstadt.

2778. What rent do you pay?—£2, 15s.

2779. What was your old rent?—£4, 15s.

2780. You have heard all the evidence we have got already to-day about Monkstadt and Duntulm?—Yes.

2781. And do you agree with it?—I cannot say, for I don't remember it all. I remember men being in many of the townships that were named.

2782. Is there any additional information you would like to give us?—I concur in the evidence of the previous witnesses.

2783. Would you like to get a larger holding if available land can be obtained?—Yes, if it can be obtained, or if the present holding can be enlarged.

2784. But if it could be enlarged, you would be content to stay where you are?—Yes.

2785. Which do you prefer?—What I want is to get my present holding enlarged. I am here for the rest of the township.

2786. And is the view of the township of Upper Bornaskitaig this, that they would be content if they got enlargement of their present holdings?—I am not prepared to answer that question, for some of them would remove if they got suitable places, and some would remain where they are if they got enlargements.

2787. Which class do you yourself belong to?—To those that would like to have their present holdings enlarged.

2788. What kind of enlargement are you aiming at?—More arable land and pasture, and the hill grazing that was taken from us for sheep.

2789. What hill grazing was that?—It was mentioned here already,—Braemore and Glensneisdale and Ben-Sca', and over to Sartil. I remember when it was taken from us.

2790. What extent of addition to your arable do you desire?—A dozen or fifteen acres.

2791. What additional pasture do you wish,—the whole of that hill grazing, I suppose?—The share of the hill grazing; we had it between us in common.

2792. You would be ready and willing to pay the rent of such an enlarged holding?—Of course, the fair rent.

2793. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—You spoke about Ben-Sca'. Had the crofters the privilege of putting their stock on Ben-Sca'?—Yes, the whole of Kilmuir had.

2794. Had any others,—the Kilmaluag people, for instance?—That is a thing I cannot go into, for it was not in their possession in my memory, but it was in Kilmuir's.

Murdo Gillies.

MURDO GILLIES, Crofter, Lower Bornaskitaig, Kilmuir (54).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

2795. The Chairman.—You come from Lower Bornaskitaig, I understand?—Yes.

2796. What rent do you pay?—£3, 5s.

2797. And what was your old rent?—£5.

2798. Are you desirous of enlargement of your present holding, or a new holding?—A new croft.

2799. Tell me where you would plant it?—Where I was born and brought up,—in Holl.

2800. Is that now a part of the farm of Monkstadt?—Yes. Uig, Skye.

2801. Where is the nearest place to it?—It marches with Balgown or Dilista. Murdo Gillies.

2802. You are of opinion that there is land there suitable for the object you have in view?—Yes. I was 25 years of age when I was put out of it.

2803. Were there seven crofters there?—Six crofts in the township.

2804. You heard the evidence given here to-day?—Yes.

2805. And do you agree with it?—Yes, I agree with it.

2806. Do you wish to make any additional statement?—I should like if arrangements could be made to advance money from Government or the landlord to stock our holdings.

2807. Do you mean that you could not remove to a new holding without assistance from the State?—We could not get on quickly enough on a new holding without assistance.

2808. To what extent would you require assistance, calculating everything?—About £200. I myself would require about £200.

2809. You mean in the form of a loan?—Yes.

2810. At a small rate of interest?—Yes.

2811. And within what time would you anticipate being able to repay that?—I have not gone into that subject.

2812. Twenty years?—Twenty or twenty-five.

2813. Interest and capital?—Yes, interest and capital.

2814. And your rent?—Yes, rent besides that.

2815. Fixed by an independent tribunal?—Yes, by a land court.

2816. On the holding you have in view, what stock would you wish to possess?—Seven cows, a good horse, and between fifty and sixty sheep with followers.

2817. How many acres arable do you give?—Twenty acres.

2818. Mr H. V. Maccallum, of the Highland Property Defence Association.—I should like to ask this witness whether he is a fisherman?—No.

2819. I understand you live near the sea. If you had a good harbour near where you live could you obtain a livelihood from the fishing?

2820. The Chairman.—Have you a good anchorage where you are?—No.

2821. How far is your croft from the sea?—Less than a quarter of a mile.

2822. Do you go to sea at all?—Sometimes; I used to go to the fishing also.

2823. Suppose you had a small croft near the sea, do you think you could get your livelihood there by fishing instead of crofting inland?—Not where I am.

John Macpherson.

JOHN MACPHERSON, Cottar, Upper Bornaskitaig (38).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

2824. The Chairman.—You are a cottar?—Yes.

2825. Where?—At Upper Bornaskitaig.

2826. Have you any land?—A small bit from the people of the township.

2827. Do you pay rent for it?—A little.

2828. What rent do you pay?—About 30s.; but I have the grazing of a cow.

2829. Have you any sheep?—I bought five this year, but I have no grazing for them.

2830. What quantity of potatoes do you grow on this bit of land that you have?—It is only a very small bit, and not many potatoes would grow on it.

2831. How many barrels did you grow last year?—Four or five.

2832. You are anxious, to be made a crofter on land elsewhere than you are?—Yes, that is what I want.

2833. Is it on one of these farms we have been hearing about so much?—Yes.

2834. Which of them?—We put in a petition to the landlord last winter for a slice of Duntulm.

Uig, Skye. John Macpherson.

2835. And what came of that petition?—It went through the factor's hands, and we have not heard a word about it since.

2836. Did you not get an answer to the application in some form or other?—No, nothing.

2837. What land did you ask for?—About 20 or 30 acres: we wanted Lower Lachasay.

2838. Were the 20 or 30 acres arable?—That is what we said in the petition.

2839. You have heard the evidence that has been given already?—Yes.

2840. And do you concur?—Yes.

2841. Do you wish to say anything more?—Only that I am here as a delegate from all the cottars of Bornaskitaig, and that they won't be right until they get new holdings.

2842. How many cottars do you represent?—Fourteen in Kilmuir.

2844. Do these cottars, of whom you are one, cause a good deal of inconvenience to the crofters by being there?—Yes.

2845. In fact, they are obliged, whether they will or not, to live upon the crofters to some extent?—Yes; if it was not for the crofters I don't know what they would do.

2846. The crofters are very good to them, as far as they can?—Yes; if the landlord was as good to them as the crofters they would be well off.

2847. It would be a great advantage to the cottars themselves, and to the crofters also, if the cottars could get more land?—Yes.

2848. And, in saying that, you represent the views of the whole of them?—Yes.

2849. And are you also conveying what you know to be the views of the crofters?—I believe the crofters need all they have of land, and it is too little.

2850. Mr Maccallum.—How do the cottars get their means of living just now?—In the south country, most of them. They earn wages in the south during the summer months.

2851. Are they able to prosecute fishing on the coast?—Some of them.

2852. Would they prefer a croft of such a size that they could make their living by it without going to fishing?—Yes, and it would be a surer source of income.

2853. Mr Macleod.—Supposing you got a larger holding, would you be able to stock it, and to build the necessary buildings without assistance?—If I got the croft I would do my best.

2854. You would not be afraid to take it even although you got no assistance?—I would be the better of a loan, but I would rather have the croft without it than no croft.

2855. You mentioned fourteen as applying for land. How many of these would be able to take holdings if they got them?—I don't think there are many of them who could take a new croft without assistance, for their families are heavy on them. I myself bought 22 bolls of meal last year for my family.

2856. You did not get any assistance for the building of your present house?—No.

2857. Nor for the buying of the cow and the sheep?—No, nothing.

2858. So you think if you had more land you would come to stock it in the way you have already done?—I am certain of that. I would take food out of it for my family, and plenty too.

2859. What family have you?—Five living.

2860. Mr H. V. Maccallum.—I should like to ask this witness about the lobster fishing.

2861. The Chairman.—Do you engage in lobster-fishing during winter?—Yes; we have to do something. Uig, Sye. John Macpherson.

2862. Do a number of your neighbours also engage in lobster fishing?—I do not see any of them idle.

2863. In fact, they scrape a living as best they can?—Yes; but they will not make their living off lobster-fishing.

2864. They do a great deal of outside labour?—Yes, that is the most.

2865. But they all wish to better their condition by getting holdings which would be self-supporting?—Yes.

2866. Could the cottars live there at all if they were not frequently receiving assistance from the crofters?—They would only be very middling.

2867. They would be worse off than they are?—Yes, a good deal.

2868. Do the cottars there at any time get assistance from the landlord?—No, not the black of my nail.

2869. Do any of the other cottars you have mentioned pay rent besides yourself?—Only one or two besides myself. Three or four of the cottars work for the tacksman, Mr Ferguson.

2870. And are paid wages, of course?—They get bits of land from him for work.

2871. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—None of these cottars hold land directly from the proprietor.

2872. The Chairman.—That is not suggested. They have no tenure of any kind; they are there by tolerance.

JOHN GILLIES, Crofter, Balgown, Kilmuir (60). John Gillies.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

2873. The Chairman.—You come from Balgown?—Yes.

2874. What rent do you pay?—£6.

2875. What was your old rent?—£10, 10s.

2876. You have heard all the evidence given here to-day, I suppose, or most of it?—Yes.

2877. And do you concur in that evidence?—Yes, some of it.

2878. Do you wish to say anything different, or anything in addition?—I don't wish to say anything different from what was said, and not much more.

2879. In short, you would like to get a new holding, larger and better than the one you have?—Yes, if I got the croft out of which I was put before.

2880. What farm is it upon?—Dilista.

2881. Is that on the farm of Monkstadt?—Yes, on Monkstadt.

2882. When were you put out of there?—Twenty-five or twenty-six years ago.

2883. You think that land now would be suitable for a holding to you?—I don't know of any land that was better when it was occupied before. I was about thirty years living on that croft, and I believe I did not eat anything during that time that was not yielded by the croft.

2884. You were able to support yourself and pay rent?—Yes. We were put away out of the croft without being a penny in arrear.

2885. What was your rent there?—About £6.

2886. Were you better off at that time than you are now?—Oh, yes.

2887. Mr Maccallum.—What stock had you then?—Six cows. We ourselves had four cows; the other crofts had some five and some six.

2888. And sheep?—Yes, plenty.

2889. What number?—Forty or fifty.

2890. And horses?—One horse. The whole of the pasture was taken away from us at the time we were evicted.

JOHN GRAHAM, Crofter, Peingown, Kilmuir (68). John Graham.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

2891. The Chairman.—You come from Peingown?—Yes

Uig, Skye.
John Graham.

2892. What rent do you pay?—£11, 15s.
2893. What was your former rent?—£16.
2894. Did you hear the evidence given in the forenoon?—Yes.
2895. And do you concur in that evidence?—Yes.
2896. Have you any additional statement to submit?—Yes, about the hill pasture that was taken from us.
2897. What was the name of that hill pasture?—Braemore and Glensneisdale and Ben Sca'.
2898. You want that pasture back?—Yes.
2899. And you would be satisfied with that; you don't want to change your holding?—There is a croft belonging to Lower Lachasay which was taken from our township, and we want that added to our township too.
2900. So that you wish additional grazing, and this croft of Lower Lachasay to be restored?—Yes.
2901. But if you had these two things would you be satisfied?—I don't think there is much desire to leave the present holdings; what they want is to get the grazing back, and to get new houses built.
2902. You mean advances to enable you to build?—We should like that too—we need it. The township is very small for the number of crofters in it at present.
2903. What is the number of crofters in Peingown?—Five. There is another thing I want to tell; there was a piece of land set apart for providing sods to cover the grass in the churchyard; it was set apart by Lord Macdonald, but we cannot get the use of it now, as it is all fenced in.
2904. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—There is no objection to their getting these sods; we will put steps over the fence if desired.—Witness. Sods cannot be taken over steps at all.
2905. The Chairman.—That is not a matter in which we can interfere.
2906. Mr Macleod.—What is your souming?—Five cows, two 2-year olds and a heifer.
2907. Any sheep?—Three ewe sheep.
2908. How many acres of arable land?—17 acres on my croft.—Mr Mackenzie. It is 11 acres arable land.
2909. The Chairman.—Is this one of the cases dealt with recently?—Mr Mackenzie. Yes.
2910. The Chairman.—And how many of outrun?—Mr Mackenzie. Six.
2911. The Chairman.—Your present rent is £11, 15s., and your fair rent you don't know yet?—That is so.

lexander
acdonald.

ALEXANDER MACDONALD, Crofter, Kilvaxter, Kilmuir (58)—examined.

2912. The Chairman.—You come from Kilvaxter?—Yes.
2913. How many crofters are in Kilvaxter?—Twelve.
2914. And how many cottars?—There are no cottars in Kilvaxter.
2915. What rent do you pay?—£4, 9s. 6d.
2916. What was your former rent?—£9.
2917. Are you anxious to get a new holding?—No; my ancestors have lived there since 1492, and I would not leave that holding for any amount of money. I want my holding enlarged.
2918. Do you wish additional arable?—Yes.
2919. How much?—About five or six acres.
2920. And grazing?—And grazing as well.
2921. Is there land to get?—Oh yes, adjacent to the croft.
2922. And on a farm?—Of Crochtore, part of Monkstadt.
2923. Do you think you could cultivate that land to a profit?—Yes.
2924. And could you stock it?—No, I think that is a great mistake. I think we must have Government aid to stock the land.
2925. You think you could not do that without aid?—Perhaps I could as regards myself, but I think it is a mistake in the long run. In my opinion Government should advance the money to stock enlargements of holdings at a reasonable rate of interest. The land is there and plenty of it, and it is the very best for cultivation—it is the granary of Skye.

Uig, Skye.
Alexander Macdonald.

2926. Are you of opinion that money should also be advanced by Government for buildings?—Decidedly.
2927. Dwelling-house and steading?—Yes. As I believe the Commission was started for the interest and for the welfare of the crofters, why not? There is enough money spent in human butchery; should it not be devoted to the agricultural interests, and to the interest of the poor people that suffer, and the loyal people, as loyal as are to be found in the land of Queen Victoria. Should they not be encouraged as well as others who are traitors and cut-throats? We have been loyal and industrious—we are not lazy as some of our opponents say, but how can we live in such a way as we are now? Thousands of pounds we have sent to Dunlop in Glasgow, the money that should be circulating among the crofters here if the land was properly cultivated.
2928. I suppose you heard most of the evidence here to-day?—Yes.
2929. Do you wish to make any additional statement?—Yes.
2930. We shall be glad to hear it?—I should make large holdings for large families, and small holdings for small families. I remember the time when one crofter in Monkstadt had more potatoes than Mr Ferguson had for the last ten years. He was selling potatoes at 6d. a barrel. There are thousands of bolls of meal brought in charity, hundreds of seed oats,—but why not cultivate the land as it should be done? that is what I want, the land for the people, not for the few. It is far better for us to give our work to the land than to be pulling and ploughing the Atlantic and the German Ocean for fish. I don't believe in charity at all; I believe in manly work. It is a well-known fact that we are paying 15 and in some cases 30 per cent. for interest on money lent.
2931. To the bank at Portree?—No, to private individuals, money-lenders.
2932. Mr Munro.—I was glad to hear you say that you disapproved of the principle of charity being given to crofters; but you would not object to receiving a loan from Government to assist you in taking a large croft. Now, have you ever considered what amount you would require to put you in a position to start a large croft fairly?—Yes, I have made some calculation about that.
2933. How much would you say then?—About £200 would make a pretty fair start for a working man.
2934. That agrees with what another delegate said here to-day. Now, in what period of years do you think you could overtake that loan and repay it?—According to the lines of the Royal Commission, about thirty years. I don't mean to pay rent perpetually. I think something should be done in regard to that. My ancestors have paid rent for four hundred years; am I to pay rent, and my children after me?
2935. The loan has no connection with the rent at all; you would have to repay the loan, and pay the rent as well?—Yes.
2936. Now, do you think you could do both? £200, at say 3 per cent. interest, would be £6 a year. How much in addition to the £6 could you pay?—If I got a good start, say two years.
2937. You are quite satisfied you could repay the £200, principal and interest, within a period of thirty years?—I am quite certain of it.
2938. Mr Maccallum.—You consider that the crofts in your district are too small?—Yes.
2939. And there are several townships congested, having too many crofters?—Yes.
2940. But is there land that would afford to give self-supporting crofts to all the crofters and cottars in the district?—There is a portion of it, a fair share I should say.
2941. They could easily be accommodated with self-supporting crofts?—Yes.
2942. Is the land that the crofters have just now equal in quality to the land in Monkstadt farm?—The land in Monkstadt farm is far better than the land the crofters have. The latter has been under cultivation since I was born—a part of it.

Uig, Skye. — Alexander Macdonald.

2943. Do the crofters cultivate just now with the caschrom?—Yes, some of them: not so much as they used to.

2944. And that is because they cannot afford to get horses. But there would be no necessity for such cultivation if they got holdings on Monkstadt?—No.

2945. It could be easily ploughed?—Yes.

2946. And that would be the mode of cultivation that they would adopt,—they would not use the caschrom?—No.

2947. Mr Sutherland.—You have stated that your ancestors have been about Kilvaxter since 1492?—Yes.

2948. You have no doubt as to that?—No.

2949. And I suppose the same could be said about most of the Macdonalds?—I don't know, I am sure. They say I am a descendant of Somerled.

2950. You do not consider that residence there for 500 years has led to the result you would expect?—No.

2951. Would you expect that if they had been in the country they ought at least to have a right to live there, apart from the will or whim of any individual?—Yes.

2952. And the State has found it necessary to step in and give them that at last?—Yes.

2953. I suppose you do not see any reason why they should not go a step farther and assist in the way you have stated?—Yes.

2954. They neglected the interest of the clansmen in the past?—Yes.

2955. You base your argument upon that?—Yes.

2956. Then with regard to starting a new holding, and the wish of the people to be put back upon these lands, would they have any greater difficulty to meet than they had when they were turned out of their holdings and planted where they are now?—They would not be so great.

2957. The people built up their homes and reclaimed their land in many instances without help from any person?—From nobody.

2958. And they always managed to pay, for hundreds of years in some cases, or at least for eighty years in some cases, large rents over and above that?—Yes.

2959. So that you do not see any insuperable difficulty in making a fresh start under more favourable conditions?—Not the least.

2960. Like Mr Munro, I was very glad to hear you repudiate the idea of charity for Highlanders. You feel strongly on that point?—I scorn the idea.

2961. And you say that it is degrading to the people of the Highlands that they should have to ask for charity in their native land, with so much land around them lying waste?—Yes.

2962. Are you aware that that feeling is pretty general among the people of the Highlands?—Yes.

2963. And you have very good opportunities of knowing the prevailing sentiments of the people in the Isle of Skye? You think it is a great pity that the Highlanders should be reduced to the position of ever asking for or receiving charity?—I do.

2964. And you think it would be for the benefit of the nation in every way that they should be taken out of that position?—Yes.

2965. And the restrictions removed from the land which have put a block to their industry?—Yes.

2966. You have heard what has been said regarding fishing here to-day?—Yes.

2967. Do you think that it is best to exhaust the resources of the land before you go to the sea?—Yes.

2968. The sea is always free to you, is it not?—Yes, it should be free to everybody.

2969. And you can go there when you like?—Yes, to catch what I like, and kill what I like.

2970. And you think that if the people had all the resources of the land placed at their disposal they would then, of their own accord, turn to the sea-fishing,—is it not so?—Yes.

2971. And if you planted the people judiciously up and down upon the land, there would be a home market, would there not, for the fish? You would not require to send it to Glasgow, London, Liverpool, and Manchester when you would get a sale for your fish at your doors?—That is so. Uig, Skye. — Alexander Macdonald.

2972. You are aware, I have no doubt, of the incidence of the poor-rate throughout the Island of Skye?—Yes.

2973. You are no doubt aware that before a certain date the poor were maintained voluntarily?—Yes.

2974. Just in the same way as the crofters help the cottars now?—Yes.

2975. They were maintained by the church-door collections?—Yes.

2976. And now the poor-rate in Skye is very high?—Very high.

2977. Is there, in your opinion, any connection between the clearing of the people off the land, and the increase in the poor-rate?—There is.

2978. Do you think that the one is to a large extent the cause of the other?—Yes.

2979. You could point back to the time when there was no poor-rate?—No poor-rate at all.

DONALD MATHESON, Crofter, Kilvaxter (52)—examined. Donald Matheson.

2980. The Chairman.—Is your holding near Kilvaxter?—Yes.

2981. Close to it?—Close to it.

2982. What is your rent?—£9, 10s.

2983. And what was your former rent?—£14, 7s.

2984. You have heard Macdonald's evidence, I suppose, and that of the other witnesses to-day?—Yes.

2985. Do you wish to make any addition to their statements? I have no desire whatever to exclude any statement that you think important, but my colleagues and I are against going over the same ground repeatedly. If you have anything additional to state, however, we shall be glad to hear it?—Nothing in particular.

2986. You concur in their evidence, I suppose?—One thing I want to add to it, is this: I don't think there is a township in Skye like the township of Kilvaxter, which is without run for pasture except the bare crofts.

2987. The outrun is so poor?—There is no outrun. And if we put down anything like what is required to winter the souming we have, we cannot keep the souming in the summer-time, because we have no place for them: if we keep the souming, on the other hand, we cannot cultivate the ground. Another thing is, that we cannot keep the ground in rotation, owing to the smallness of the crofts.

2988. You are obliged to scourge the land?—It is just run out.

2989. With sea-ware?—Oh, there is no manure of that description. We are not allowed to go to the sea.

2990. I think you know Feaull very well?—I have been there, and my father, and grandfather, and great-grandfather.

2991. You were tenant of it before it was added to Monkstadt?—Yes.

2992. Is it suitable for crofters' holdings?—Yes.

2993. Good land?—Yes, good land.

2994. Now, what size of holding is, in your judgment, suitable for the crofters in your vicinity,—how many of them would you put on Feaull?—Four tenants.

2995. What size of holding would that give to each?—There were nine crofts in Feaull, and I would allow four.

2996. What arable would you allow to each?—The five crofts were taken in by my father, and improved,—drained and trenched and fenced, as is visible to this day. My relatives have been there for the last 160 years: as far as I can see, my namesake Donald Matheson was there in the year 1730, and one Lachlan Mackinnon, and the rent was then only £1, 8s.

2997. The whole of it?—There was another tenant at the other end, one Mackay, whose rent was £3, 8s., to my recollection.

2998. What extent of arable would you give to each of the four crofters you propose for Feaull?—I would think they would require between 25 and 30 acres arable.

2999. Each?—Yes.

3000. And is there land to afford that?—It was calculated about 14 acres, the bounds of the crofts. The most of it is trenched and drained, and some good parts are quite visible from the road.

3001. Is there enough of old arable in Feaull to allow 25 acres to each of four crofters?—To my mind there is.

3002. And grazing?—And grazing. During my time the souming was, to my recollection, 20 sheep for each croft on the hill, a horse (there were nine horses), and 180 sheep for the township; and the rent was £45. For five crofts I paid £81 some odd shillings, without the right of sea-ware and very little of the outrun.

3003. That was when you had the whole of it?—No; there were four crofts taken from my father, and when I took my father's place I got only five crofts, and the last rent was £81 odds.

3004. What stock would you give to each of these four crofters?—Eight cows, two horses, and about fifty sheep to each.

3005. A ewe stock?—Yes, ewes.

3006. Are you satisfied, because you know this land probably better than any of us, that, with a croft of the kind you mentioned, you could make it self-sustaining?—I would feel satisfied if I got anything in addition to my present holding, because I can make no living out of it. I am a man with eight of a family—eight boys—and I am obliged to allow them to go south and north to earn money and help me.

3007. And you think, if you had a holding on Feaull of the kind you are describing, you could do well?—Yes, for myself, not for my family.

3008. Mr Macleod.—You say that you have no pasture at Kilvaxter?—Not an inch.

3009. Is there any pasture marching with your holding that you could get?—That is the only place that is suitable for outrun, Feaull, which was given to other tenants.

3010. Feaull has been given to other tenants?—Yes.

3011. There is no suitable pasture for Kilvaxter?—There is another pasture on the other end of it, at a place called Loch-Chaluim-Chille.

3012. Who has got that?—Mr Ferguson.

3013. It is part of the Monkstadt farm?—Yes.

3014. What was the old pasture of the township of Kilvaxter?—To the best of my recollection it had no pasture; but some old people told me that there was a slice of land that they had on the north side of the hill.

3015. But there is at the present time pasture contiguous to Kilvaxter, on the Monkstadt farm, that might be added to the township of Kilvaxter?—Loch-Chaluim-Chille is on the end of the lower crofts of Kilvaxter and Feaull on the upper, and Dilista Hill on the south side of Kilvaxter and Balgown.

3016. You spoke of what your father did in the way of reclaiming land at Feaull and otherwise. You have yourself some knowledge of the reclamation of land?—Yes; I have been working there since I was a little boy.

3017. What I wanted to be at was this, Mr Matheson. Do you think now, giving your opinion as a practical man knowing about the reclaiming of land, that there are considerable extents in those large farms that were never under cultivation that might be brought into cultivation? Is there any land, say at Feaull itself, that has not been under crop that could be taken in?—It is the case with every township in the outrun they have. They used, in former times, to till what they call the parks which they had for keeping the cattle; they used to take them in.

3018. Occasionally?—Occasionally. And there are patches of that description in every outrun that I am aware of in this end of the island. In the farm of Monkstadt these townships that were added to it are set out in crofts, and the marches are visible there. There is not a township that was added since I recollect but has crofts, and the runs of the old houses are there, and the marches of each croft, except Linicro.

3019. You know that in the large farms, whilst there is a very great extent of grazing, there is a comparatively small extent of old arable land to winter the stock that could be grazed in summer on the grazing land. Now, as you are a practical man, I want to get your opinion whether you think the boundaries of the arable portions of the old townships could be extended, or whether, in the case of the farm of Monkstadt and the farm of Duntulm, you think there is a sufficient area already of old arable land to supply wintering?—There is.

3020. There is, in your opinion?—There is. In these townships that were added to the farm of Monkstadt the outruns and the boundaries are there, and there is sufficient grass on these outruns for the amount of arable land in the townships; and in the other end of Monkstadt there is any amount of arable land that people do not recollect of seeing with tenants.

3021. So that, supposing a case where the whole farm of Monkstadt was put under crofters, you do not think there would be any difficulty about the wintering of the stock?—I do not think there would be, because there is any amount of pasture on both ends of the arable land in Monkstadt. There is a kind of outrun between that and the sea on both sides and at both ends.

3022. You would think it a good plan, supposing you were laying out a new holding, to include in the new holding a proportion of the old township land, and a proportion of land that might be improved, so as to increase the area under crop?—There is none of these townships that were added to Monkstadt, that I am aware of, which has any arable land close to it, except some patches on the outrun.

3023. So you think the old people did their work so well that they have not left any land to reclaim?—Yes.

3024. Mr Sutherland.—Could the pasture between Kilvaxter and the sea on the west be added to your arable land with advantage?—That is the place that I mentioned, Loch-Chaluim-Chille.

3025. But, as I understand generally, the case of Kilvaxter is, that it has good arable land without any pasture attached to it at all, or at least very little?—It is ten years since I went there, and I was obliged to buy seed every year.

3026. You said you had no access to sea-weed?—None.

3027. What is the nearest point of the sea-shore you could get it from?—Kilvaxter lies in the centre of Kilmuir, and the easiest road is going down the way of Kilmuir, where the small tenants are.

3028. Why don't you get access to that?—It is little enough for themselves, there are so many of them. There are fifty small cottars in two townships, Lower and Upper Bornaskitaig.

3029. Is that the only place then where it could be got easily?—Yes.

3030. And you think it is little enough for themselves?—Little enough.

3031. Do you cultivate a rotation there?—Very little. I generally sow a little rye grass every year.

3032. And is it because you have too little land that you cannot subdivide it; you require the whole of it to be under crop?—Under crop.

3033. But with a larger holding you could give it the benefit of a rotation?—Decidedly.

3034. Mr Maccallum.—With regard to this farm of Monkstadt: from the description you give of it, there does not seem to be any great need of reclamation of land. You have already good arable land in Monkstadt, ready for the plough?—Yes.

3035. While you are working with very inferior land?—Very.

3036. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—I am afraid there is some misunderstanding. Feaull is presently in the hands of the crofters; it was a part of Monkstadt till last Whitsunday.

Uig, Skye. Donald Matheson.

3037. The Chairman.—But Feaull is now, you say, in the hands of crofters?—Yes, since Whitsunday.

3038. Mr Sutherland.—Is it the Kilvaxter crofters who have it?—Some of it; but we sent a petition to Mr Mackenzie the factor for outrun.

3039. The Chairman.—Feaull has been given over to the crofters—some of them from Kilvaxter and others from where?—It was given instead of the hill pasture.

3040. But what crofters got it?—The most of Kilmuir; there are 60 tenants have a right to it. It is given to 60 tenants on the Kilmuir estate.

3041. Some in one township and some in another?—Yes; those that petitioned for it.

Donald Macdonald.

DONALD MACDONALD, Crofter, Totescore (60).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3042. The Chairman.—Where do you live?—At Totescore.

3043. What rent do you pay?—£3, 5s. for half a croft.

3044. Do you wish to make any addition to the evidence we have heard already?—Yes. The hill pasture has been taken from our township for a long time past, and we are scarce of arable land. A number of us would require to have our agricultural land added to.

3045. Do you know where land could be got?—Plenty on each side of us, marching with us; there is plenty arable ground both at Scuddaburgh and at Monkstadt. We are just wedged in between the two tacks.

3046. Could you show us that land if we went there?—Yes, if I see the Commission.

3047. We have not heard so much about Scuddaburgh; does it march with the lands of the township of Totescore?—Yes.

3048. Are you of opinion that there is available land in Scuddaburgh?—Yes; it mostly consists of arable land that was in cultivation by tenantry in times past.

3049. Were there a number of townships on Scuddaburgh?—No; it was entirely in the occupation of crofters. Before being converted into a tack, Scuddaburgh was entirely in the possession of crofters.

3050. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—I should like to be allowed to ask this witness whether he can give us any idea how many tenants have been at Scuddaburgh?—I cannot say.

3051. Would you be surprised to know that there were no tenants in it for 200 years?—I don't know, but it is not 200 years since there were small tenants there.

3052. I have records here going back to the year 1733, when Scuddaburgh was occupied by one tenant, John Nicolson; what have you to say as to that?—It is very strange, for it is only four or five years since a man died who was born there. It was at Scuddaburgh my grandfather's family lived, and an aunt of mine lived at Scuddaburgh when the tenantry were evicted from it. It is only four years since she died.

3053. Mr Maccallum.—Are there ruins of crofters' houses to be seen?—They were all cleared, and dykes and drains were made out of the stones of the houses. There is not a vestige of the sites to be seen: they are all cleared.

Donald Mackinnon.

DONALD MACKINNON, Cottar, Linicro, Monkstadt (76).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3054. The Chairman.—You are a cottar from Linicro, I understand?—Yes.

3055. Do you pay a rent to Mr Ferguson of Monkstadt?—Yes.

3056. What rent do you pay him?—There are three of us cottars in Linicro, and one of them has only half a croft; we pay £1 a piece.

3057. Do you get work from Mr Ferguson?—Yes; it is by work we pay our rent.

3058. Work on the farm?—Yes. We have ever been paying the rent with our work, and we think it ought to be free now to us. It is upwards of sixty years since I have been paying rent. Uig, Skye. Donald Mackinnon.

3059. Do you want to get a croft?—Yes.

3060. You want a croft on Monkstadt?—Yes, where I am.

3061. And there would be no difficulty in that,—I mean the land is there?—Yes, plenty land. I myself have seen the place in the occupation of ten crofters, myself herding as a small boy there.

3062. Mr Macleod.—Can you tell us anything as to the condition of the people at that time?—Very well off they were: they had milk and potatoes, and were not importing meal as they are now. Sheep and cattle they had also, and each croft was rented at £4, except one which was rented at £6.

3063. The Chairman.—Mr Mackenzie, have you any questions to put to this witness?

3064. Mr Mackenzie.—Have the seasons been very favourable for cultivation during the last ten or twelve years?—Yes.

3065. Have the crops raised during the last twelve or fifteen years been better or worse crops than those raised in the old times you have described?—The crop is worse. The yield is worse.

Donald Macpherson.

DONALD MACPHERSON, Lower Glen-Hinisdale (39)—examined.

3066. The Chairman.—Where do you come from?—Lower Glen-Hinisdale.

3067. What rent do you pay?—£6, 5s.

3068. What was your former rent?—£12.

3069. Do you concur in the evidence you have heard?—Yes; I have nothing to say against what was said. Those taking new holdings ought to get assistance from Government if they are not themselves able to build houses and stock their holdings.

3070. What is the name of the grazing farm nearest you?—Kingsburgh on the one side and Cuidreach on the other.

3071. In your opinion is there land upon Kingsburgh suitable for crofters' holdings?—Yes, I know that there is.

3072. And also land upon Cuidreach?—Yes.

3073. I suppose you can show us that land when we go to the quarter?—Yes.

3074. Does the township of Hinisdale march with one of these farms?—Cuidreach is on the west of our croft, and Kingsburgh on the house.

3075. How far is your holding from Hinisdale bridge?—About a mile and a quarter above the bridge.

3076. Mr Maccallum.—Is there a general desire in the township you represent for enlarged holdings?—Yes, some want to leave the township altogether and take new holdings, so that the holdings of those who remain may be enlarged in that way.

3077. Would you yourself be willing to leave and make room for the rest?—Yes, very glad indeed, if I got a suitable place.

3078. Could those who are willing to go to new holdings stock them?—Yes, perhaps they could; with the stock they have they would do a good deal in that direction: but if they got such a holding as they would desire on the new places, they would need some assistance.

3079. The Chairman.—You are not prepared to leave your holding, and take a new one without a loan?—No, not well.

3080. Do you mean a loan both for stocking and for building purposes?—Yes, for the two purposes, but especially for building.

3081. Do you represent the other crofters in Glen-Hinisdale?—Yes, the lower part of Hinisdale.

3082. Are they in the same position regarding a loan, would they require a loan as well as yourself?—I think so, every one of them.

3083. Both to stock and to build?—Yes, for both purposes

ig, Skye.
acpherson.

3084. Would you leave your present holding if you did not get a loan?—Yes, if I got a better croft than the one I have.

3085. Are there any cottars in Glen-Hinisdale?—No.

harles
ackinnon.

CHARLES MACKINNON, Upper Glen-Hinisdale (40) — examined.

3086. The Chairman.—You are from Upper Glen-Hinisdale?—Yes.

3087. What is your rent?—£7, 5s.

3088. What was it formerly?—£12, 10s.

3089. Do you follow some other calling than that of a crofter?—Yes.

3090. What do you do?—I am a joiner.

3091. In the township, or in the south?—No, I went abroad.

3092. Where to?—South Africa.

3093. As a joiner?—Yes.

3094. How long were you there?—Four years the last time.

3095. And the first time?—A little over two years.

3096. Are you home for good?—Yes.

3097. Are you here representing your father?—I am here representing the township of Upper Glen-Hinisdale.

3098. Does the whole township wish to leave if they get better holdings?—I don't believe the whole of them would, but some of them would.

3099. How many?—I think there are four or five of them ready to remove.

3100. Including your father?—Yes.

3101. Are these four or five ready to stock new holdings and put up the necessary buildings?—I believe some of them are, I don't mean to say the whole of them.

3102. But I mean the four or five?—I don't think the four or five would all be able without assistance.

3103. Are you and your father prepared to do it without assistance?—Yes.

3104. And in your judgment is there land suitable for the purpose?—Yes.

3105. Where?—In Kingsburgh, right opposite us.

3106. And marching with you?—Yes.

3107. Do you look to the formation of a croft that would be self-supporting?—Yes.

3108. You have a little money of your own?—Yes, I have.

3109. You would be prepared, therefore, to stock and build?—Yes.

3110. What size of holding have you in view?—Well, I believe that would depend greatly on the place where you would get a holding.

3111. Suppose you got a holding in the place you have mentioned?—I would require a holding of, I should say, about 27 acres arable, and as much as would keep seven or eight cows and a pair of horses.

3112. And how many sheep?—I should say 150 ewes with their followers.

3113. You want a biggish place?—It amounts to this: there are some in our place who would take larger holdings than others.

3114. And you want the largest?—I want as large as I can get.

3115. I see that, and you will be prepared to pay a corresponding rent?—Certainly.

3116. As duly fixed?—Certainly.

3117. You would be ready to pay a rent of £15 to £18 perhaps, supposing that to be a fair rent?—I would, but that would have to depend upon the holding.

3118. Mr Sutherland.—Do you think, Mr Mackinnon, it might be a good thing, in forming new holdings, that there should be a considerable difference between them in size, or would you have them the same size?—That is my opinion, and the opinion of the township as well.

3119. And do you think that would give a chance to people who wanted land, and who had some little means at their disposal?—Quite so.

3120. Mr Maccallum.—Is the land in Kingsburgh farm peculiarly suited for holdings?—There have been crofters there before. Uig, Skye.

3121. Is it better than the land you have in Glen-Hinisdale?—Much better. One acre there is better than two where we are. Charles Mackinnon.

3122. Mr Munro.—You have been abroad a good deal, and have seen a good deal of the world?—I have seen a good bit.

3123. Notwithstanding that, you would prefer yourself to come and settle down in your native Highlands to remaining abroad?—Certainly.

3124. And you think that applies to all your neighbours as well?—That is my opinion.

3125. Supposing you got a croft of the size you have just mentioned, would you undertake that croft without Government assistance?—I would myself personally.

3126. You recognise, of course, that there is no help like self-help, I suppose?—Just so.

3127. You have heard one of the witnesses here repudiate with a commendable spirit of independence the idea of bestowing charity upon Highlanders. Do you agree with that sentiment?—I quite agree with it. I believe it is greatly against the spirit of the Highlanders to ask or receive charity. I know for myself that if I were away abroad, I should not like to be told by anyone that Highlanders were in such a state.

3128. It is an easy matter to speak of taking a loan of £200, but it is quite a different matter to repay it. Do you think if the money were advanced to crofters, they would be able to repay it in easy instalments, and would never attempt to repudiate the debt in any way?—My opinion is that they would do their best endeavours to pay. I believe they would pay it too.

3129. That is, provided they get crofts of reasonable dimensions, and subject to fair conditions of occupancy?—Just so.

ALEXANDER MATHESON, Earlish, Kilmuir Estate (45). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter). Alexander Matheson.

3130. The Chairman.—Have you a croft in Earlish?—My father has.

3131. What rent does he pay?—£5.

3132. What was the old rent?—£9.

3133. Does your township march with the farm of Cuidreach?—Yes.

3134. And with any other farm?—No; Cuidreach is the only big farm that marches with us.

3135. Do you represent the township of Earlish?—Yes.

3136. Along with Donald Maclean?—Yes.

3137. Is there a desire among the crofters there to get larger holdings?—Yes, and very needy they are of them too.

3138. Have they too little land where they are, according to your view?—Yes, and the land they have is very much impoverished.

3139. Are they not able to cultivate the land to a profit?—We have tried that in every conceivable way, and it has beat us.

3140. I see your rent was reduced from £9 to £5, and, notwithstanding that reduction, you have found it difficult to get on?—Yes, as difficult as ever.

3141. Were there any arrears left on you?—Yes, on some of us.

3142. But upon you individually?—Yes.

3143. How much?—£5.

3144. Have you paid that?—No.

3145. Have you tried to pay it?—I could not pay it.

3146. You could not make as much out of the holding as would pay the arrears?—No.

3147. What had the arrears been that were reduced to £5?—£18 odds, to the best of my recollection. It was my father who was paying rent at that time.

3148. You want to get a holding large enough to enable you to pay your way?—That is what I want.

3149. Do you think you could stock that farm and put up the necessary buildings without assistance?—No, I don't think I could. If I got the land, I would work it in such a way, that I don't think it would be long before I could stock it well.

Uig, Skye. Alexander Matheson.

3150. Are there any cottars in Earlish?—Four.

3151. Do they pay any rent?—No.

3152. Would it be an advantage for them to be taken away, and get crofters' holdings elsewhere?—Yes.

3153. Are they a considerable inconvenience to the crofters, being where they are?—Yes; but they don't much trouble the crofters. There are two of them here who are wanting land; the crofters can give them very little land.

3154. But I suppose they could not get on without the assistance of the crofters?—It is the crofters' land that is feeding them. They give a little work to the crofters in return, but the crofters could not avoid assisting them. The cottars are people who had land before. There are 23 families in the township.

3155. That is counting the cottars, I suppose?—No, exclusive of cottars. The land is becoming so impoverished that they are very anxious to leave the place and get new holdings elsewhere.

3156. They want to migrate bodily, do they?—No.

3157. To leave the township, I mean, not to emigrate?—Yes, to new holdings. Some may stay in the township.

3158. Do you think there is a single crofter's holding in the township worth occupation at the present time?—At one time the whole place was occupied by four tenants; perhaps it might do for four tenants yet.

3159. But not more?—My great grandfather was there in possession of a fourth.

3160. You think it would not fairly accommodate more than four tenants now?—No, not more than four.

3161. Have you any questions to ask, Mr Mackenzie. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—Does the witness remember as far back as thirty years?—Yes.

3162. Do you remember what kind of crops the crofts produced at that time? Were they good crops, or bad crops?—There were no good crops there since the township was divided into twenty shares.

3163. The Chairman.—When was that?—When Blackadder 'cut' the crofts in 1811. The land has been cultivated incessantly ever since then, and what crop could be taken out of it now?

3164. Mr Mackenzie.—Were the crops better then than they are now?—Yes, I suppose the crops would be better for the first few years. How can they be good now, with constant cropping? it is 200 years since part of the township began to be cropped.

3165. You have got 8 acres of arable land?—Yes.

3166. Do you work your croft by rotation?—I believe I have 2½ acres, the rest is old dykes, the sub-soil of old feal-dykes that was spread over rocks, and is now reckoned as arable land.

3167. The Chairman.—The question is, Whether it would not be better for you to cultivate these 8 acres by rotation, yes or no?—I have tried sowing grass and cultivating them in rotation; I have tried every conceivable way of cultivating it, and it is no use.

3168. I wanted to ask you this question: Do you know who it was that originally cut the township into four crofts?—Lord Macdonald about the year 1810.

3169. When were the additional families thrust in upon the township?—It was first set to seven, and one of these left because the seventh part was too small for him. That was my great-grandfather. It was Mr Blackadder who 'cut' the twenty crofts in 1810.

3170. Mr Myles Macinnes, Secretary of the Skye Land League.—I would like to ask the witness whether the farm of Cuidreach which marches with his township is not suitable for crofting.—The Chairman. We heard a great deal about it from previous witnesses.

Donald Maclean.

DONALD MACLEAN, Crofter, Earlish, Kilmuir Estate (60).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3171. The Chairman.—What rent do you pay?—£6.

3172. What was your old rent?—£9.

3173. You represent the township of Earlish, I understand?—Yes. Uig, Skye.

3174. And you heard the evidence of the previous witness, Mr Alexander Matheson?—Yes. Donald Maclean.

3175. Do you wish to make any addition to his statements?—I want that our holdings should be improved, should be added to.

3176. Do you mean additions to the present holdings, or new holdings altogether?—Either. I could not be worse than where I am.

3177. Your land is run out?—Yes.

3178. And your crofts are too small?—Yes, the arable land is too small, and our stock does not get grazing. They are dying for want of grazing. The feeding is so scanty upon our holdings, that one cow belonging to myself died last year from starvation.

3179. How many acres arable have you?—I believe it was measured as 8 acres arable, plenty of rocks.

3180. And how many outrun?—There will be as much outrun as arable.

3181. Mr Mackenzie.—The evidence given before the Crofters Commission shows that there were 40 acres in his holding.—Witness. They are giving a big area for my croft which is only covered by rocks. I have lost several cows in the last few years over these rocks.

3182. Mr Sutherland.—Over what is called the land?—Yes, what is measured as so many acres of land.

3183. The Chairman.—Is your croft held by Donald and Roderick Maclean?—Yes.

3184. I see it is stated to contain 9 acres 3 roods 16 poles arable, 40 acres of outrun; township grazing 264 acres, and 1829 of pasture common to all the crofters in Glen-Hinisdale. So that you have in your croft practically 50 acres of land at a rent of 120s., equal to about 2s. 4d. an acre?—My grandfather had the place for £2, then it was raised to £3, and then to £9, and now it is £6.

Catherine Macdonald.

CATHERINE MACDONALD, Cottar, Earlish (48).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3185. The Chairman.—You live in Earlish?—Yes.

3186. Are you married?—No.

3187. Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A cottar.

3188. And do you pay any rent?—No, I have no land.

3189. How do you live?—I have two sons in the south who help me. My mother has been bedridden for years: she gets 3s. a month of parochial relief.

3190. You are anxious to get a croft?—Yes.

3191. But you would require a loan to stock it and put up the buildings?—Yes.

3192. Mr Sutherland.—I presume that if you got a holding your sons would come back and conduct it?—Yes, whiles.

3193. And do you think there would be a chance of your succeeding?—Yes, better than being empty. My sons won't come to the place as there is no land.

3194. Do you not think they could take as much out of the land as they require?—My mother has paid rent for 60 years: she paid £3 for the croft to Lord Macdonald. When Major Fraser came in he raised it to £8. Another man who came in has got it, but my father and grandfather were in the occupation of it.

3195. What occupations do the sons follow?—One is a shepherd, and the other is at work in Glasgow.

3196. Has the one in Glasgow been working land?—He is but young, and did not do much land work.

Malcolm Nicolson.

MALCOLM NICOLSON, Crofter, Sheader, Glenuig (60)—examined.

3197. The Chairman.—Do you live in Sheader?—Yes.

3198. Have you a croft, or are you a cottar?—I have a croft.

3199. What rent do you pay?—£3, 5s.

3200. What was your old rent?—£5, 16s.

Uig, Skye.
Malcolm Nicolson.

3201. I see you have a statement. Do you want to read it to us?—Yes. It is as follows:—

'To the Royal Deer Forests Commission.

'Gentlemen,—Most people in the district know as 'well as I do that the Glen-Uig tenants were the most 'thriving in Skye. Generation after generation—'father, son, and grandson—occupied the same holding, 'large enough and so improved by them as to yield a 'comfortable living; and the people brought up there 'would, by their good conduct, diligence, thrift, and 'manliness do credit to any country.

'The comfortable look of the place so struck Captain 'Fraser, who bought the estate in 1855, that he almost 'doubled their rents, but allowed not a penny of com-'pensation. Some seven or eight years afterwards the 'proprietor, finding that sheep farming was becoming 'lucrative, and that the place would pay him better as 'a sheep farm than at even the increased rents extorted 'from the tenants, turned it into a sheep farm. And 'he did tyrannically, and under cover of our land laws, 'which are now admitted to be a disgrace to our 'statute-book, clear out the tenants from their com-'fortable houses and lands, the fruit of their own and 'their fathers' industry for generations. No more dis-'graceful "clearance" ever took place in any country. 'The hardships suffered by the unfortunate people can 'never be told. Some were forced to emigrate,—old men 'and women of 70 years of age,—others died broken-'hearted, but the greater number still eke out a 'miserable existence on poor and unproductive bits of 'land in the neighbourhood, in sight of happy homes 'and broad acres once their own, reclaimed and im-'proved by the sweat of their brow, but now a monu-'ment of landlord cruelty and landlord oppression.

(Signed) 'Malcolm Nicolson,
Crofter, Sheader,
'Pro Glen-Uig Tenants.'

3202. You represent the Glen-Uig tenants?—Yes.

3203. And you are of opinion that there is good land in Glen-Uig?—No doubt of it.

3204. It would accommodate a number of crofters?—Yes.

3205. How many?—We were 17 in Glen-Uig before.

3206. You lived in Glen-Uig yourself?—From the north to the south.

3207. How long since?—Twenty-eight years ago.

3208. And what rent did you or your father pay in Glen-Uig?—We paid to Lord Macdonald from £7 to £8, 10s. each, the township.

3209. You had the run of the rig land?—We had separate crofts.

3210. And grazing?—And grazing.

3211. That land is now part of the farm of Glen-Uig?—Yes.

3212. And is it arable land?—Yes.

3213. You could show us the place yet?—Yes.

3214. And if you got a croft there you would be prepared to work it and pay the rent?—Of course.

3215. And to put on stock and put up the buildings?—As much as I could.

3216. Without assistance?—Perhaps I would require a little.

3217. You would take as little as you could?—Just that; that is what anybody would mean.

3218. The land is close to where we are now?—Only the river between.

3219. And you can show us it when we go to inspect the ground?—Yes.

3220. Mr Sutherland.—I understand there are two cottars in the township. Would they take land if they got it?—Yes, they would.

Angus Macleod.

Angus Macleod, Idrigil, Uig, Kilmuir Estate (38)—examined.

3221. The Chairman.—You hold a croft in Idrigil, here, I believe?—Yes.

3222. What is the number of your croft?—No. 9.

3223. Is it near the new pier?—Yes.

Uig, Skye.
Angus Macleod.

3224. Sloping down to the shore?—Yes.

3225. You don't want to leave it?—I do.

3226. With a pier there?—Yes.

3227. Do you want to get into Glen-Uig?—Glen-Uig or Scuddaburgh—on either side that would be suitable.

3228. And you say there is land in both?—In both.

3229. Suitable?—Suitable.

3230. And you would like to have a holding by which you could subsist without external occupation such as fishing or labour?—Yes.

3231. But don't you think it would be a serious matter to leave your present holding when there is a pier going up beside you?—The present holding is so small, there are 37 tenants confined in about a mile.

3232. What is the size of your holding?—Two and a half to three acres.

3233. And what grazing?—I am not sure how many acres; we can only keep one cow each.

3234. What rent do you pay?—£3.

3235. What was your old rent?—I think it was £4, 5s. before I came into the croft. I have only had the croft three years.

3236. You are a crofter?—Yes.

3237. Your arable land is particularly good, if I remember rightly?—Parts of it very good, and parts bad.

3238. The arable land of Idrigil, if I remember rightly, is better than most of the arable that we saw in Skye?—I do believe it is not the worst; but we have only small bits. It is like a garden, and they are bound to be better with big, large crofts.

3239. What extent of arable would you like on a new holding?—A holding that would enable us to keep eight cows, and about fifty sheep, and a pair of horses.

3240. You wish arable suitable for that stock?—Yes.

3241. I think the Idrigil crofts are much of the same size?—Yes.

3242. Two or three acres arable, and one cow each?—Yes.

3243. Mr Sutherland.—I wish to ask a question regarding the extent of the holding. Have you any pasture?—Yes.

3244. What is the extent of it? You say there is only grazing for one cow, or that you have got only one cow?—We have got only one.

3245. Could you keep more?—We could keep two small beasts.

3246. And no sheep?—No sheep.

3247. And you pay for this upwards of £1 an acre?—Yes, we pay £3, and some more than that.

3248. In the island of Skye?—Yes, in Idrigil.

3249. Mr Macleod.—You say you would require two horses for the holding that you were speaking about. Don't you think two would be too many for such a small-sized holding,—it would be a great burden to be keeping up two horses?—One horse might do, if my neighbour had one.

3250. I naturally assume that your neighbour would have one as well?—Yes.

3251. You would never think of keeping two horses for all the work you would have to do on fifteen acres of arable; what do you say to that? You think, if your neighbour had a horse, one would be quite sufficient?—Oh, yes. I think so; we could work together.

3252. And it would be a better arrangement than keeping two horses?—Yes; if we could not afford to get them, we would have to do that.

3253. You don't think you could manage to keep two horses on fifteen acres of arable land, even supposing you had plenty pasture,—you ought to know best?—I cannot say, indeed; it would depend greatly on the kind of land we would get.

3254. But if you are able to work three acres just now without any horse at all, you would be quite able to work fifteen acres with one horse?—But if I get a pair of horses by paying for them.

3255. You think the arrangement of working with your neighbour would be perfectly satisfactory?—In one sense it would, and in another it would not be very convenient; but it is better than having no horse at all.

3256. But supposing you had the two, what would you do with them all the year when you would not be ploughing,—you would only require two for a short time in the spring?—I would keep them working at everything I could get to do with them,—carrying peats and coals, and everything of that kind. Some have carts here that work mostly the whole time.

3257. And have they a pair of horses?—Sometimes, and at other times one.

3258. Mr Forsyth.—Have you any other business besides holding the croft?—Yes, I do some fishing.

3259. Would you be able to stock the holding that you spoke of?—Yes.

3260. You have the means to stock it?—Yes.

3261. And to put up the house?—Yes.

3262. The Chairman.—Are you in the croft that Martin Macpherson used to occupy?—Yes.

3263. How did you come to enter into that croft?—After Martin left it I got it from the factor.

3264. And that is three years ago?—I think it is near about that.

3265. It is since the Crofters Commission was round in 1887?—Yes.

3266. And you got it at the same rent that Martin paid?—Yes.

3267. You are allowed to keep the croft under the Act of Parliament, are you? there was no question made about that?—(No answer).

3268. That is so, Mr Mackenzie, is it not?—Mr Mackenzie, Factor. That is so.

3269. There was no question raised about his being a crofter?—Mr Mackenzie. There is no question about his being a crofter.

3270. Did you apply for the croft?—Yes.

3271. And you were allowed to get it at the Fair Rent which Mr Macpherson had paid?—Yes.

3272. Your case is rather different from most of those we have been dealing with. I see your holding is 2 acres 1 rood 24 poles arable, 1 acre 16 poles outrun, and a share of 271 acres of pasture common to the crofters of the township of Idrigil?—Yes.

3272*a*. The old rent was £4, 7s. 6d., and the fair rent £3. Did you agree to pay that?—Yes.

3273. And you have been paying at that rate since, no doubt?—Yes.

3273*a*. Mr H. V. Maccallum.—I should like this witness to be asked about the fishing.

3274. The Chairman.—Have you a large fishing-boat?—Yes.

3275. What keel?—Forty-six feet keel.

3276. Do you go to the coast of Ireland?—Not now, but I used to go there about fifteen years ago.

3277. What is the longest time you were away fishing?—The longest time would be seven or eight weeks.

3278. Away at a time?—Away at a time.

3279. You make your living mostly by the sea?—Of course, I have nothing else to make my living upon.

3280. Do you wish to give up the sea?—Yes, I do; because it don't pay me. The fishing is failing, and I can hardly get a crew to go into the boat now. The fishing is not paying us, and the men cannot make their living out of it, so I have a hard job to get men to go. I have to go to Stornoway in search of men to form part of my crew.

3281. What crew do you take?—Six, and two boys.

3282. Counting yourself?—Counting myself.

3283. That is eight, all told?—Yes.

3284. But if the sea were to yield you a fair return every year, would you not prefer to stay in this small croft and work the fishing?—Oh, yes, if that were possible; but the fishing has failed for the last five or six years.

3285. It has been a failing concern for five or six years?—Yes, and it is only running into debt. I see at the latter end I will lose the whole lot.

3286. Do you know any croft in Skye that has been a profitable concern during the last five or six years?—No, I do not.

3287. Then they have been failing as well as the fishing?—Yes, they have: the crofts have been so small. If we had large crofts, and could afford to keep sheep, we might manage.

3288. Were you at the Barra fishing three years ago?—It may be four or five years since I was there; it is more than three.

3289. Did it pay you that time?—It did not pay.

3290. You say that the fishing has been a failure to you for the last five or six years?—Yes, it was.

3291. Do you know any croft in the Uig district that has been a paying concern?—No, not one.

3292. Considering your previous experience as a fisherman, and the suitability of your croft in respect of access to the sea, do you not think it would be better to try fishing a little longer instead of venturing upon a large holding?—I should wish to try the land, and drop the sea.

3293. Mr Sutherland.—You answered a question with regard to crofts in Skye not paying for some years. Don't you think a croft pays if it returns £1 an acre?—It will pay the landlord.

3294. And I take it that you do not see a very good prospect in taking rent out of the sea to pay for land?—I had to do so to pay my croft's rents. I could not get off it as much as would pay the rent.

3295. And you prefer, and I am not going to say unnaturally prefer, that you should take the rent out of the land itself?—Yes, I mean to get as much land as I can afford to get to support itself.

3296. And that actuates you in asking for a larger holding?—Yes, that is my reason.

3297, The Chairman.—Do you belong to Idrigil?—Yes.

3298. I think you said already that you made application to the factor for this croft?—Yes.

3299. You knew before you took it what the rent was?—Yes.

3300. And you were desirous to get it?—Oh, yes, I had known it before.

3301. It is a very suitable croft for a man with a 40-feet keel boat?—Yes, if he does well with the 40-feet keel boat.

3302. But, whether he did well or not, you were desirous of getting this holding when you applied for it?—Yes.

3303. And were quite ready to pay £1 an acre of rent to get it?—Yes.

JOHN GRAHAM, Cottar, Idrigil (45)—examined. John Graham.

3304. The Chairman.—What is your number in Idrigil?—I am not a crofter.

3305. You are a cottar, are you?—I have a lease of an acre at present.

3306. You are a leaseholder?—Yes.

3307. Is it a lease or a feu—how many years?—Ninety-nine years.

3308. What rent do you pay?—£2.

3309. You are not under the Act of Parliament as a crofter?—No.

3310. We are only dealing with crofters and other small tenants. What is it you want to tell us?—I am anxious to get grazing for one cow, if possible, and I was put down to speak for the rest of the cottars at Idrigil.

3311. How many cottars are in Idrigil?—Seven.

3312. Are they leaseholders too?—No.

3313. Are you the only leaseholder?—There is one besides me.

3314. What is his name?—Angus Mackinnon.

3315. Is he holding on a 99 years' lease?—Yes.

3316. And he is paying a rent of £2?—Yes.

3317. How many other cottars are there?—Five, and we two.

3318. You are speaking for cottars who are not leaseholders also; do they want to get lands elsewhere?—Yes.

ig, Skye.
hn Graham.

3319. And they are willing to pay the rents?—Yes, they are willing to pay the rent.

3320. Do they want land in Glen-Uig?—Well, Scuddaburgh is more handy for them.

3321. Mr Sutherland.—Do you know anything about the Small Holdings Act?—No.

3322. You did not hear about that?—No.

3323. There is an Act, if I may be allowed to state it to you, that enables people situated as you are to apply for such a grazing as you want through the County Council. You have not thought of that?—No, I did not know of that; and in the present circumstances I am sorry to say that it is not easy for me to stand my ground. I got a house feu, and I was told to build it as well as I could, and I would get a valuation for it when I left it, but I had to get a lease for it.

3324. The Chairman.—We have no power under our remit to deal with leaseholders as a special class.

3325. Mr Maccallum.—You would be content with a small croft?—Yes, under present circumstances.

3326. With grazing for one cow?—With grazing for one cow.

3327. And you think it would be profitable for you to have such a holding?—It would be profitable for me.

3328. You would take it in the vicinity here, or are you particular about the place?—I would prefer it near my house—it would suit me better.

3329. You are very anxious to get such a holding?—Yes, because I only get grazing from the crofters.

3330. The Chairman.—You are anxious to help him if you can?—Mr Mackenzie. Yes.

Roderick Dingwall.

RODERICK DINGWALL, Uig (49).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3331. The Chairman.—Do you pay any rent?—Yes, a little to the crofters.

3332. How much?—8s. I now pay.

3333. You are anxious to get a crofter's holding?—Yes.

3334. Would you be in a position to take a croft if you got it?—Yes.

3335. And you know where suitable land is to be got?—Yes, where the rest of the township want it.

Donald Nicolson.

DONALD NICOLSON, Crofter, Solitote, Kilmuir (85)
—examined.

3336. The Chairman.—Are you a cottar?—Yes; but I have paid rent to nine factors.

3337. Have you a statement you wish to hand in?—Yes.

3338. You say:—'I, Donald Nicolson, the undersigned (or "Brave old Crofter," as commonly styled) cottar in Solitote, Kilmaluag, wish to lay my eviction grievances before the Deer Forest Commission, and trust they will give me an opportunity of doing so. I was evicted from Totescore about sixteen years ago by Captain Fraser and his factor, Mr Alexander Macdonald, Portree. I got nothing for the houses I was evicted from, or for other improvements made, and all the rest got it but myself.—I am your obedt. servant,

(Signed) 'DONALD NICOLSON.'

Is that what you wish to say?—That is only as an introduction.

3339. We will take the rest of it?—We want a holding there badly.

3340. Where?—At Kilmaluag. I would like a bit of land on which I could keep a couple of cows and a horse. I was not paid for the houses I left, from which I was evicted. I was to have got £6 for the drains that I executed upon my croft, and that sum is still due me on the landlord's books; I cannot get it. Uig, Skye.

3341. Mr Maclachlan, the Interpreter.—He is repeating the evidence he gave before Lord Napier's Commission.—Chairman. Would you explain to him that all that evidence is down in print, and that we have a copy with us here.—Witness. And after all I have not told the one half of the injustice that was done to me. If I got a croft, a nice piece down at Duntulm, I would be well pleased. Donald Nicolson.

3341*a*. I see you were called late in the day on 10th May 1883, and that after hearing you they adjourned?—I had a very long story to tell them.

3342. We will see your place when we are out looking at the lands, and ascertain what like it is?—I shall be glad to meet you there.

[ADJOURNED.]

FIFTH SITTING.

STAFFIN, SKYE, SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1893. Staffin, Skye

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
Rev. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
JOHN MACLEOD, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

MALCOLM ROSS, Crofter and Catechist, Kendram (73). Malcolm Ros
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3343. The Chairman.—You are a crofter and catechist?—Yes.

3344. What rent do you pay?—£8, 10s. I am paying just now.

3345. What was your old rent?—£13, 10s.

3346. Is there, in your opinion, land available for profitable cultivation by crofters near your township in this district?—Yes, there is land which is now in possession of the landlord.

3347. What land is that?—Duntulm.

3348. Does Duntulm farm march with your township?—No.

3349. What comes between?—Solitote and Connista.

3350. Do the lands of Solitote and Connista march with the farm of Duntulm?—Yes.

3351. What extent of available land is there, in your opinion, upon Duntulm on this side?—Floddigarry and Duntulm are the parts.

3352. I will come to Floddigarry immediately; I am speaking now of Duntulm. What extent of land, in your opinion, available for profitable cultivation by crofters, can be found on the farm of Duntulm on this side?—I have no idea.

3353. Well, how many crofters would you plant upon it?—I cannot be sure.

3353*a*. What is the general character of the soil in the land you are referring to?—All sorts of land.

3354. What size of a croft would you think it desirable to have upon the farm of Duntulm?—Five or six cows, twenty ewe sheep and their followers, and a horse.

3355. Is that all?—Yes, but they would take bigger crofts than that if they could be got reasonably. That is the sort of croft we have at present.

3356. Is your view to have a croft at Duntulm of Staffin, Skye. — Malcolm Ross.

the same size that you have at present, or larger?—Doubtless they would be better larger.

3357. What size have you in view?—I cannot be sure.

3358. Have you considered in detail how you would carry out a transfer of your holding from where you are to a farm or croft in Duntulm?—Am I asked if I would be willing to leave my present croft to go to a new one?

3359. Have you entered into consideration of the details by which you would effect a transfer of your holding from where you are to where you wish to go, —the cost, &c.?—Yes, I thought it out; if I would get paid for my present houses.

3360. And have you made any estimate of the cost it would be to transfer yourself and your belongings to the new holding?—It would not be much expense: it is not far away from us.

3361. Mr Forsyth.—Do you wish merely to go to a similar croft of the same size because you think the land is better there at Duntulm?—Yes, if that was permissible, and in the order of things.

3362. And then you would give up your present croft?—Yes.

3363. But you would prefer a larger croft, would you?—Well, should it be larger than the one I have, it would be more desirable.

3363*a*. What stock have you on your present croft?—Five cows, 4 stirks, and a young beast 18 months old; a horse and about 20 sheep.

3364. Then a croft of the same size on better land is very much what you want, is it?—Yes.

3365. You think the expense of removing would not be great, but you would get to better land. But you don't see how you could leave without getting compensation for what you have done on this croft: is that the state of matters?—It would be easier for me to do it if I got valuation price for my present houses.

3366. Mr Macleod.—How many crofters are there in your township?—Eleven crofts; there are some of them broken.

3367. How many of them are divided?—Four.

3368. How many cottars are there?—There are three, besides women who are on the poors' roll. I think there are five cottars altogether.

3369. That is including the women?—Yes.

3370. I understand you are speaking for the township of Kendram?—Yes.

3371. And there is a number of both the crofters and the cottars that would take new holdings if they could get them?—There are some who are without crofts who are to speak here to-day.

3372. Then do you think that the size of a place that you have got just now, if it was in good land, would be a sufficiently large place for a man and his family?—The times have changed.

3373. But if times were good?—If we had the times that we had once, it would be big enough.

3374. The Chairman.—I see your holding extends to .7 acres arable, and 5 acres 1 rood 20 poles outrun; your arrears of rent were £15, 16s. 3d., and of these £12, 16s. 3d. were cancelled.

3375. Mr Maccallum.—Can you say, with regard to the other crofters, that they would be content with the same size of a holding that they have now, in better land?—I cannot say.

3376. You have not got the mind of the others upon it at all?—No.

3377. Mr Munro.—Have you had any experience in the reclamation of land?—Oh, yes; the land that we have was reclaimed.

3378. Would you be prepared to take in land on favourable conditions if you got it contiguous to the new croft?—Yes, doubtless one would make the best of it if he got it.

3379. Mr Mackenzie, Factor for Baird's Trustees.—You speak about your croft: do you consider it as good a croft as other crofts of the township, or do you consider it the worst of the township?—I consider that my croft is worse than the other crofts.

3380. The Chairman.—You wanted to say something about hill pasture: what was it?—The hill pasture was taken from us some years ago by Captain Fraser; only part of it was left to us. We are wanting it back, and they are keeping it from us, wanting to keep us impounded in the small portion of the hill pasture which Major Fraser left to us.

Staffin, Skye. — Malcolm Ross.

3381. I see that there are 467 acres of township pasture, and 753 acres common to Balmacquien, Kendram, and Connista. Is it the desire of the township to get new holdings, or is it only their desire to get back this pasture?—They are wanting the pasture back first.

3382. Is it their desire to get both?—I don't know what they want; they want the hill back for the sheep. There are 25 horses and 500 sheep on the pasture.

3382*a*. Would you be satisfied with getting back the old pasture that you have lost without a change of holding?—At the present time the sheep have to be sent to the hill, and would require grazing.

3383. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—I may explain, in connection with the hill pasture, that the proprietor was willing to grant them 200 acres additional of hill pasture to those who had paid their rents; but there were very few of these.

3384. The Chairman.—When was that?—Mr Mackenzie.—Lately, my Lord.

3385. The Chairman.—This year?—Mr Mackenzie. Yes, but they have not come to any definite agreement yet. He offered it to them at a very moderate rent, 8s. an acre.

3386. Mr Sutherland.—Were you using the extension of the pasture for the purpose of collecting rents?—Mr Mackenzie. Not at all.—Witness. They were offering us the worst part of the hill.—Mr Mackenzie. The part contiguous to their holdings.

John Macdonald.

JOHN MACDONALD, Solitote (67).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter).

3387. The Chairman.—You are a crofter, are you?—I have a small lot, three quarters of an acre. I am not a cottar. I am a crofter.

3387*a*. What rent do you pay?—10s.

3388. Were you before the Crofters Commission?—Yes. I was not the last time, but I was before the Crofters Commission and had a fair rent fixed.

3389. What was your previous rent?—30s. 3d. Fourteen families were settled upon one croft in the township, the rent of which was £7 or £8.

3390. Are you John Macdonald, senior, or junior?—Senior.

3391. Do you know the lands of Duntulm very well?—Very well, and long since.

3392. Is there land available there for use as crofters holders?—Yes, plenty. I have seen eighty families on Duntulm tack, between Lachasay, Score, Erisco, Shulista, Duntulm, and Aird; these are the townships that were cleared.

3393. Were there eighty families on these six townships?—Between crofters and cottars there were eighty families on the townships I have mentioned.

3394. How many of these, roughly, would be crofters and how many cottars?—Most of them were cottars.

3395. In the employment of the tacksman?—Yes; they had as much land as they could till: they used to cultivate on half foot.

3396. How many families could settle on that land now with crofters holdings?—That is a question on me.

3397. What size of holding do you think would be required on the soil there to make a self-supporting holding?—Thirty acres of arable land, some less than that—from five to ten and up to thirty acres.

3398. Quite so; you would vary the size of the arable according to the quality of the land?—Yes, that is what the people want. The people have become impoverished.

3399. You think the district has suffered from these holdings having been done away with?—Yes, I will tell you a little thing about it. The spring before the tacksman of Duntulm, Mr Mackenzie of Letterewe, took it,

I saw thirteen boats leaving the farm laden with produce exported—corn, and barley, and oats.

3400. When was that?—I cannot remember the date—upwards of forty years ago.

3401. How old were you at the time?—I was twelve or thirteen years old.

3402. You mentioned the farm of Floddigarry, I think?—It was the previous delegate who spoke about it. I know about Duntulm and the tack of Duntulm.

3403. That is the only tack that has available land that you know about?—Yes, I don't take anything to do with this part.

3404. How many cottars are in Solitote?—There are fourteen that have land.

3405. Fourteen cottars?—Fourteen crofters, and two or three cottars without land.

3406. But are there any cottars with land?—Oh, we are all cottars for what we have.

3407. Well, do these two or three cottars without land pay any rent?—No rent.

3408. But they have a small stock?—They have nothing.

3409. Would it be a relief to the township of Solitote if these cottars were afforded holdings elsewhere?—No, it would not be felt.

3410. Mr Sutherland.—For how many of the remainder would there be land in Solitote if the others got holdings elsewhere?—It would be small enough for two, what the fourteen have; and they would require to get a share of the hill pasture in addition to the present Solitote.

3411. And if the remaining twelve were to go to another place, do you think there would be much difficulty in their beginning in their new holdings?—It would be hard enough on them.

3412. Could land be got where they could carry on the preliminary stage on the new holding without leaving their old homes?—The place that we have is not comfortable in any manner of way.

3413. But what distance is the place that is in your mind for the new holdings from Solitote?—It is no distance at all.

3414. Is it two miles?—No, not a quarter of a mile.

3415. So that if they made new holdings, they could remain in the old holdings till their houses were built in the new place?—Yes, that could be done.

3416. Mr Macleod.—Did you say there was only one tenant in Solitote at one time?—Only one, and he paid £7 or £8 of rent.

3417. Where did those come from that were put into it later?—Off the tack of Duntulm when it was being cleared.

3418. The Chairman.—Do you wish to add anything to what you have told us?—Perhaps I have said enough; but I saw a great deal of the injustice and iniquity of the world.

3419. The object of the present inquiry, however, is as to the question of available land rather than into historic details of the past?—I quite understand. The land is there visible that was inhabited by people in the past.

3420. We are going to look at it?—Yes.

3421. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—I should like to ask the witness if he is aware that some of those who have applied for more land in the township have got the same?—Yes; but I myself was asking the factor for a cow's grass when the rest of the people got it, and he would not listen to me.

3422. He did not make application, my lord, at the time the others did, and I had no authority to give it. I had to get authority before I could give him land. (To witness.)—Are you aware also that Isle Flodday, Clachan, Solitote, Connista, Brunistot, and Scamnidale were occupied by one tacksman over a hundred years ago?—No; I don't believe there is such a thing.

3423. Would you be surprised to hear that they were occupied by one tenant (Mr William Macdonald) in 1733?—I know that Aird was occupied by a gentleman of the Macdonald family. There was also Floddigarry, which was occupied by a captain; Duntulm, by a captain; and Aird, by a captain; but neither Shulista nor Connista.

CHARLES MACDONALD, Crofter, Baile-mhic-Cuithein (67)—examined.

3424. The Chairman.—Do you represent the township of Baile-mhic-Cuithein?—Yes.

3425. Your fair rent is £5, 14s., and your old rent was £8, 10s.?—Yes.

3426. I see you hold 4 acres 1 rood 30 poles arable, 7 acres 3 roods 8 poles outrun, a share of 493 acres township, and 753 common pasture. Do you know the tack of Duntulm?—Yes.

3427. Is there land available there for cultivation to profit by crofters?—Yes; there is as good land as I know anywhere.

3428. Is it richer and better land than the land of your own holding?—Very much better.

3429. Is your own land wrought out?—Yes.

3430. Then it would be an advantage to you to transfer yourself to a holding on the tack of Duntulm?—Yes.

3431. Are you ready and willing to do that?—Yes.

3432. Could you undertake the cost?—Yes; we would rather be at the expense of doing it.

3433. Than remaining where you are?—Yes.

3434. And pay an increased rent, suitable to the new holding?—Yes; we would rather do that; we would go as far as we could with the rent.

3435. What size of holding do you think you would require in order to live by it?—A small family would need about 12 acres of arable land.

3436. And what outrun?—About 6 cows' grazing, and 2 horses and 50 sheep; but stronger families would take up more land than that.

3437. Stronger families might have twice that arable, might they?—Yes.

3438. What family have you?—I have not much of a family just now. I have two or three daughters there, back and fore.

3439. No sons?—Two sons; but they are not long with me, but they would help me.

3440. How many sons have you that could help you?—Two.

3441. Now, suppose your two sons were to help you, would they and you together be able, without hiring assistance, to work 12 acres arable, and look after 6 cows, 2 horses, and 50 sheep?—Yes; we would do it ourselves without hiring outside assistance.

3442. And would you stock the land and put up the buildings without requiring assistance from outside?—We would do our best to stock it. We could not do it right off, but we would do our best. We would put on what stock we could until it would increase naturally.

3443. And could you put up the buildings?—We would try and do that too.

3444. Would you be willing to attempt an undertaking of that kind without any assistance?—Yes; I would.

3445. Where are your sons at present?—One is in Kensaleyre and one is here.

3446. Mr Macleod.—How many crofters are in Baile-mhic-Cuithein?—Seven crofts; three of them whole.

3447. How may cottars?—Four.

3448. Are these all men?—They have always a man in the house, at any rate.

3449. And how many were on that township before there were any removals from surrounding tacks?—Seven crofts were there since I remember.

3450. Have they got hill pasture?—They have a share of that hill pasture that Malcolm Ross spoke of. Stewart, Duntulm, got the rest of the hill pasture, and what they have would not keep the half of their stock.

3451. Would you rather take a new holding than get an extension of your hill pasture?—Yes; the croft I have is no use. I have not this year or last year taken a handful of seed off it. I have been buying seed oats every year, sowing and getting nothing back.

Staffin, Skye.
Charles Macdonald.

3452. Mr Maccallum.—How many of the seven crofters would be willing to leave and go to new holdings?—Judging by what they were saying to me, I believe they would all go.

3453. And the present place would suffice for how many?—Five.

3454. But you think they would all prefer to go to Duntulm?—Yes, I believe so; but I think some of them would elect to remain where they are if the township was set to five families.

3455. There are four cottars: are they a burden on the crofters?—Yes, they are; they are getting pieces of land.

3456. And do they get grazing?—No.

3457. Can you speak for these cotters, whether they would be able to take new holdings?—They would, if they had strong families.

3458. Mr Forsyth.—How does the township of Baile-mhic-Cuithein stand in the matter of payment of rent or any arrears there may be, with the view of going to new land?—I believe they are in arrear.

3459. Do you know the amount?—I am not sure what they are due, but the years are so bad, and they cannot live but by buying, buying everything.

3460. The Chairman.—Are you in arrear just now yourself?—Yes, a little; but I believe I shall be able to pay it at Whitsunday.

3461. What are you in arrear just now?—One year's rent.

3462. Is that all?—That is all, since the Commission came in.

3463. There were arrears left upon you by the Commission, I suppose?—Yes.

3464. Have these been paid?—No.

3465. What was the amount of arrears ordered to be paid?—I don't remember.

3466. I see your arrears are stated to have been £29, 8s. 4d., of which £17, 8s. 4d. were cancelled, and you were left to pay £12 in six instalments of £2 each. Have you not paid any of that?—No, I have paid none of it.

Murdo Lamont.

MURDO LAMONT, Connista (40)—examined.

3467. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A crofter.

3468. What rent do you pay?—£4.

3469. What was your old rent?—£5, 10s.

3470. Are you representing the Connista tenants?—Yes.

3471. How many are there?—There are six crofts, one of them divided into two.

3472. Six crofts and seven crofters?—Yes.

3472*a*. How many cottars are in Connista?—All except a few paupers.

3473. How many paupers?—Two.

3474. You know the tack of Duntulm?—Very well.

3475. The whole of it?—The whole of it.

3476. Is there land there available for crofters' holdings?—Yes.

3477. Which could be cultivated to a profit?—Yes, crofters.

3478. And you are one of those that would be ready to take a holding if you got it?—Yes.

3479. Could you stock such a holding?—Yes, my lord, to-morrow.

3480. And put up the necessary buildings?—Yes.

3481. What size of holding have you in view?—About 16 acres arable.

3482. And what stock?—Keep for 6 cows and followers, 80 sheep, and 2 ponies.

3483. Have you in view both outrun grazing and common grazing, or is your view to have a croft to yourself that would sustain the whole of these?—I would rather to myself.

3484. A compact holding with exclusive right to the arable and grazing?—Yes.

3485. What size of grazing have you in view?—Just what would keep that.

3486. I need not say that a holding of that size would infer a considerable rent, even as a fair rent?—A fair rent. Staffin, Skye. Murdo Lamont.

3487. A much larger rent than you pay at present?—It could be valued.

3488. But your fixed rent is £4?—£4.

3489. The rent of the holding you have in view would be a great deal more than that?—Oh ay, ay; far more.

3490. Is your land worked out?—Yes.

3491. Exhausted?—Exhausted. It is one of the worst patches in the whole estate.

3492. And do you only get a crop by the constant use of sea-ware?—No; we have no road to Connista township.

3493. How do you manure your land?—Just by dung.

3494. Are there available lands on Duntulm much better protected from stormy winds than the lands of your holding?—Yes, the hill of Duntulm is suitable for crofters, the whole of it: the Commissioners can see that by examining it.

3495. You can show us the land you refer to?—Yes.

3496. What holding are you in?—Half of No. 1.

3497. John Lamont was in it before?—Yes, my father.

3498. The area is 4 acres 28 poles arable, 3 acres 1 rood 20 poles outrun; old rent £5, 10s., new rent £4, arrears £1, 15s. cancelled. You are not in arrears since the Commission?—No, none since. I am not a penny in arrear.

3499. Your rent was reduced from £5, 10s. to £4.—Yes.

3500. Do you follow any trade?—Not at present, I must be at the croft.

3501. But you have had something else than a croft?—I am a compulsory officer for the School Board just now.

3502. And what income have you from that?—4s. a week.

3503. Is that all?—That is all.

3504. Have you any other local appointments?—No I attend to my croft, but I am losing by it. If I had a larger croft I would do better.

3505. But what I am pointing at is, have you any other engagements?—Not just now.

3506. Mr Macleod.—Have you had any experience of the reclamation of land,—have you ever taken in land yourself?—Yes; I am well acquainted with that.

3507. You said you knew very intimately the farm of Duntulm?—Yes.

3508. Do you think there is any land there, besides the old land that was occupied by the people when they were there, that could be taken in or reclaimed?—Yes; there were small holdings besides that crofters had at Duntulm.

3509. But do you think there is any land there that might be reclaimed that was not under crop before?—The whole of Duntulm could be reclaimed, except the grazings of every township.

3510. But are there not pieces amongst the grazing that might be reclaimed?—Yes, but it would be useful for the grazing itself.

3511. Certainly; but your objection, as I take it, to a farm like Duntulm at the present moment, is that it is a grazing, and nothing but a grazing: would not it be more profitable if the land was in crop?—Yes, with crofters.

3512. I take it that if there were crofters,—small holdings planted in Duntulm,—they would be able to add considerably to the old area of arable by reclaiming land that is fit for reclamation amongst the pastures?—Yes.

3513. You think that?—Yes.

3514. As a practical man you think that?—Yes. You will see it yourself when you go through it.

3515. Mr Sutherland.—How long have you been compulsory officer for the School Board?—About three years.

3516. Mr Forsyth.—You say that you could stock and build for the holding you described at once.

Staffin, Skye. Murdo Lamont.

Have you calculated the cost of that in such a holding as you describe? I have no doubt you could do it yourself, but perhaps others could not do it so easily. Could you give us any idea of what you estimate the cost of stocking, building, and fencing for such a holding as you describe?—There is not much to be out on stocking to-day, as prices are low, but it would cost about £50.

3517. To get into such a holding as you describe?—Yes.

3518. Do you allow anything for fencing there?—No, but for building.

3519. And would that include stocking?—No, no.

3520. £50 for building alone?—Yes, for the house and square.

3521. And what would you say for fencing and stocking? Let us take fencing first. You see you rather want your 60 sheep to yourself if you could get them,—you would prefer that to a common grazing?—I want 80 sheep to myself.

3522. That means, of course, a still larger stretch of hill to fence if you have it to yourself?—I will do that. I will do it.

3523. You could fence it yourself?—Yes.

3524. That means money, you know, of course?—Yes.

3525. Could you estimate the cost of it, because others might not be able to do it?—The fencing was not very dear, but it is getting scarce now, so much goes out of the country. It would cost a sum of money, but we would manage to do that.

3526. We have got £50 for the building. Now we want, if possible, an estimate for the stock?—The stocking is not very dear.

3527. But say even at low present prices?—Some people have stock already.

3528. Yes, partly; but still you would need to put something for that?—Yes; but they are fit for it.

3529. £100 or £150?—No.

3530. £100?—No, not that either.

3531. Not for 80 sheep and all the cows?—Oh, well, some have perhaps 6 cows already.

3532. Quite. I admit that if you have stock already there will not be so much needed?—No.

3533. As to the hill fencing, that would cost something,—you could hardly estimate that?—No.

3534. But, of course, you will understand that there is a possibility of your having to expend a good bit of money if you do it properly?—Yes.

3535. You have calculated and thought over that?—Yes.

3536. The Chairman.—Suppose you found, on going carefully into the matter, that you could not hope to settle on the new holding under an expenditure of less, all over, than £150, would you face that?—I don't require that much at all.

3537. How much do you require altogether?—I have most of the stuff already.

3538. What about the building?—£50, I could spare that.

3539. You think that with an expenditure of £50 you could set up in the new holding?—Yes.

3540. And work it to a profit?—Yes.

3541. You were asked about arable, and you said, I think, that you would require 16 acres arable?—Yes.

3542. You mean on the tack of Duntulm?—Yes.

3543. Old arable that simply requires to be ploughed?—Yes.

3544. You don't mean land that requires to be taken in?—Some of it.

3545. I am speaking of your 16 acres: would you require that the 16 acres should all be old arable?—All old arable.

3546. Mr Sutherland.—About fencing: are sheep farms at present existing separated from each other by fences, do you know?—Yes, they are putting up fences lately between them.

3547. But only lately?—Only lately.

3548. You have known sheep farms bordering each other for years without any fences?—Yes.

3549. It is better with a fence, of course?—Yes.

3550. But sheep farms have been carried on for a number of years without any fences between them?—Yes.

3551. And perhaps it might not be necessary, to begin with, to have a fence separating you from your neighbours, any more than in the case of sheep farmers?—No.

3552. Of course, in cases of trespass by sheep, the trespass of one is neutralised by the trespass of the other?—Yes.

3553. So that if you chose to carry on for some years,—I don't say it is a good thing, but if it were necessary to do so,—you might perhaps delay the expense of erecting a fence, to begin with, until you were better able?—Yes, and my neighbour perhaps, if he were able, might pay the half.

John Lamont.

JOHN LAMONT, Connista (37).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3554. The Chairman.—You are the son of Duncan Lamont, a cottar in Connista?—Yes.

3555. How many cottars are in Connista, two?—Two.

3556. And two paupers, I think we were told?—Yes.

3557. Does your father pay any rent?—He was paying at one time, but not now.

3558. To whom did he pay rent?—The landlord evicted him, and his rent paid, when Holl and Greauline were cleared.

3559. Do you know the tack of Duntulm?—Yes, very well; I know it from the one end to the other.

3560. Is there land available there for new holdings?—Yes, plenty.

3561. And would you and your father desire to obtain a holding on that tack, if you could get it?—Yes, and very needy we are, and have long been, of getting such a holding.

3562. Could you stock the land and put up the buildings?—Yes.

3563. Without assistance?—Yes, without any help but ourselves. I have another brother.

3564. Where is he?—At home.

3565. You and he and your father together could manage it?—Yes.

3566. What size of holding have you in view?—I would need 10 acres of arable ground.

3567. And what stock?—Seven cows and their followers.

3568. How many horses?—One.

3569. How many sheep?—About 50 sheep.

3570. Do you follow any trade?—No; I have no particular trade, but I do anything that comes to my hand.

3571. You are a labourer?—Yes.

3572. What does your brother do; is he a labourer also, or has he a trade?—He has no trade.

3573. Do you go to the fishing, you and your brother?—Yes.

3574. Do you do a little in lobster fishing?—No.

3575. Have you any land at present?—We have a bit from the township people.

3576. For potatoes?—Yes, potato ground.

3577. Mr Maccallum.—You say that you have been long desirous of getting a croft?—Yes, and we have much need of it. We would make good use of it.

3578. Did you make any application to the landlord for a croft?—Yes, four years ago, and did not get it. It is not long since we asked the factor himself, and he would not listen to us.

3579. You and your brother who would be quite able to work a croft?—Yes.

Kenneth Macdonald.

KENNETH MACDONALD, Cottar, Brogaig (45)—examined.

3580. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter or the son of a crofter?—A crofter and the son of a crofter.

3581. Are you the tenant of the holding?—There is no holding.

Staffin, Skye. — Kenneth Macdonald.

3582. Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A cottar.

3583. Do you pay any rent?—No rent.

3584. How many cottars are there?—Eleven cottars.

3585. How many crofters?—Eleven. In my grandfather's time there were only four crofters and a cottar in Brogaig. My grandfather had the fourth part of it. He died when the family were very young, and my uncle was taken away in Lord Macdonald's Fencibles. The widow was left with a young family; likely she had fallen back in her means,—I don't know whether she was in arrear or not, but it was taken as an excuse to evict her, and two or three were put in her place who were taken from Balmeanach. This is a peculiar district, my lord: it had the misfortune of not being suitable for a sheep farm, and it was made a kind of asylum for evicted crofters, such as widows and old men and half lunatics that they could not send away to America. These got leave to multiply in Staffin.

3586. Do any of these eleven cottars pay rent?—Not one.

3587. And are they located on the crofters' lands?—Everyone of them.

3588. And are a considerable inconvenience, I suppose?—They are a great burden to the crofters, and a burden to themselves at the same time.

3589. And would it be a great relief if these eleven cottars could be accommodated with holdings elsewhere?—There is no doubt about that.

3590. Do you speak for the whole of them?—I am representing the whole of them.

3591. Are they all anxious to get away?—Everyone of them most anxious; and they are determined to get it—if not by legal means, they are determined to get it somehow.

3592. I would recommend you not to indulge in these answers. We will confine ourselves to what is legal and legitimate, and kindly adhere strictly to that kind of reply, otherwise we shall stop the examination.—Very well, my lord.

3593. Now, where is there land to be obtained?—There is land on the farm of Sartil.

3594. Does that march with Brogaig?—Yes.

3595. Who is in occupation of that farm just now?—Mr Ferguson, Monkstadt.

3596. Is it treated as part of the farm of Monkstadt?—Yes.

3597. Suppose you got a holding at Sartil, would you be prepared to stock it without assistance?—I would do my best.

3598. Could you do it without assistance?—Yes, I could do a little of it.

3599. But you would require assistance for the rest?—I don't say the majority of them.

3600. I am speaking of your own case?—Well, I could stock a good size of a croft.

3601. What stock could you put upon it without assistance?—Two or three cows and a few sheep.

3602. But could the rest of the cottars do that, or would they require assistance?—I cannot say about the majority of them, but a great number of them could.

3603. And some of them could not?—Some of them could not.

3604. Have you any stock just now?—I have two sheep.

3605. Have you any cattle?—No.

3606. Is there any other cottar from Brogaig here along with you?—No.

3607. You represent the whole of them?—The whole of them.

3608. Mr Sutherland.—Brogaig is in this neighbourhood, not very far from where we are?—Marching with Monkstadt.

3609. What distance from this point where we are sitting?—About 1½ miles.

3610. You say you march with the Monkstadt farm?—Yes.

3611. Have you any particular place on this farm in view where you say you would like a holding?—Yes, a place called Balmeanach. We approached the factor for it last year, when Mr Macleod's lease was out. We got a kind of a promise—a verbal promise.

3612. But you did not get it?—No.

Staffin, Skye. — Kenneth Macdonald.

3613. Well, then, what I wish to know is, whether Balmeanach is better than any other place, or do you simply wish to go back to it because your people were there before?—It is the most suitable place for us.

3614. It is most suitable for the place you are living in at present?—Yes.

3615. You would take a reasonably-sized holding if you could get it there?—Yes, and the rest would do the same.

3616. Do you believe it would be a greater difficulty for you to start a new holding than it is for you to live now in your present condition? Would you have less or more hardship?—Of course, I would have a little,—I could not be idle; at the same time I could live.

3617. And with the prospect of succeeding in the future?—Yes. In my present circumstances I have nothing to do while I am at home. I must go to the south to earn my living: while I am at home in wintertime I can do nothing for my family.

3618. And in Balmeanach you would be in reach of your own home, so that you could work at the new croft and then come home?—My hut is quite close to the march.

3619. You have already been asked whether you think others would be in the same position and would be willing to do the same?—Able and willing, the whole of them; and sore needing it.

3620. And you are quite prepared to show the Commissioners the land that you refer to?—Quite prepared.

3621. Mr Macleod.—Has this increase in the number of crofters and cottars in the township of Brogaig arisen from the natural increase of the population, or have people been put into these townships?—People put down, and natural increase also.

3622. Put from where?—From Balmeanach.

3623. From this place that you want to get back to?—Yes. Six families were evicted. I don't know whether they were put there all together or not.

3624. Mr Maccallum.—I think you say that there are eleven cottars in Brogaig?—Yes.

3625. And would the others be able to start a small croft as well as you without assistance?—There are some of them more able than I am, with strong families.

3626. You think the most of them would be able to begin with a small croft?—The most of them.

3627. And is it your idea that crofts should be of a varying size, some smaller and some getting much larger?—Well, generally speaking, according to the size of the family, from 3 acres to 25 acres.

3628. That would be better than having them all of a size, of a large size for instance?—Yes.

3629. The Chairman.—You go south to work. What is your main employment when you go south?—I tried many a thing just from land to sea, but my last occupation was a fireman.

3630. In Glasgow?—In Glasgow, the Clyde.

3631. How long were you engaged at that?—A good while now. I have been away for the last 18 months on the Manchester Canal.

2632. Working there?—Working there as a kind of dredger.

3633. How long were you employed as a firemen?—Five years. I used to be a few months off in the winter time.

3634. You have given your evidence very distinctly, but I think it my duty to recommend you very strongly and earnestly not to do anything that is illegal or improper, either now or in the future. Kindly remember that.—Thank you, my lord.

ARCHIBALD MACDONALD, Merchant, Garrafad, Kilmuir Estate (48)—examined. Archibald Macdonald.

3635. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter in Garrafad?—Yes.

3636. What rent do you pay at present?—£14, 6s.

3637. What was your former rent?—My rent is actually £18, 17s. 6d., but I get 20 per cent. off it.

3638. Was your rent fixed by the Crofters Commission?—No.

3639. The rent is £18, 17s. 6d. in the valuation roll?—Yes.

3640. But the rent you actually pay at present is £14, 6s., being 20 per cent. off?—Yes.

3641. Can you give us any idea of the size of your present holding?—Twelve acres arable land.

3642. What stock have you got?—I have 6 cows and 6 stirks, and 30 sheep, that is the stock allotted to the holding.

3643. And is that what you have, or less?—I have more than that, but I don't keep them on the holding during the whole year.

3644. You send them away?—Yes.

3645. What stock have you actually got at present?—Two horses, 6 cows, 3 queys, 2 two-year-olds, and 7 stirks.

3646. And how many sheep?—Sixty-five.

3647. Do you take grazing from other crofters?—Yes, during the summer.

3648. You hire grazing?—Yes. Some of these cattle I only got a few days ago.

3649. You live by dealing?—Yes, to a great extent.

3650. Now are you desirous of leaving this holding if you can get another in Sattil or Duntulm?—I have got one already.

3651. Where?—In Staffin Inn.

3652. You have taken Staffin Inn?—Yes. I am not speaking for myself.

3653. Have you Staffin Island as well as Staffin Inn?—Yes.

3654. Do you wish to give evidence regarding the requirements of the district?—Yes, that is what brought me here.

3655. Then kindly state the case from your point of view on behalf of these other tenants?—They should have new holdings of from 12 to 25 acres arable.

3656. What sort of stock?—Six cows and their followers, 30 ewes with their followers, and a pony, that is for the 12 acres.

3657. What stock would you say for a 25 acre holding?—Just in proportion to that.

3658. That would be something like double?—Yes, according to the quality of the land.

3659. Do you think that a holding of that sort could be carried on at a profit?—Yes.

3660. Now let us consider the matter in some detail. What average value do you put upon the stock, beginning with the cows?—£8 per cow.

3661. Then take the horses or ponies?—About £14 each.

3662. Next take the sheep?—The quality of sheep we keep here is not very good.

3663. Take the quality that you think would be most suitable for the district?—15s.

3664. Is that the ewe alone, or the ewe and the lamb?—The ewe alone.

3665. That would be, in your view, the probable cost, if a person required to purchase all that stock?—Yes.

3666. Take the buildings. What would the dwelling-house cost?—Between £30 and £50.

3667. What steading would be required?—Drystone wall and thatched roof.

3668. But I mean the outhouses for the cattle?—I include outhouses in the £30 or £50, with the man's own labour.

3669. What should the steading consist of in your opinion?—A barn, a byre, and a stable.

3670. And a cart shed?—And a cart shed?

3671. What expenditure would you require to put upon fencing, or do you allow for that?—I don't allow for that.

3672. That would be done by the man's own labour?—The man's own labour.

3673. Do you allow anything for implements?—No.

3674. Or for feeding stuffs?—Get the feeding stuffs out of the ground. You would require implements all the same.

3675. Now what would be the gross income derivable in an average year in this district from a holding of that size and so stocked?—The 12 acre holding should be something like £30 on an average, after it was a going concern for about three years.

3676. Suppose it has been a going concern for about three years, what would you sell?—I would sell the first year, out of the cows, two stot stirks.

3677. Expecting to realise what price?—£4 each.

3678. What else would you sell?—Nothing at all that year.

3678*a*. No sheep?—No.

3679. Would you propose to buy, say, blackfaced cast ewes, when you put them at 15s. a piece?—Yes.

3680. In the third year you would only sell two stot stirks hoping for a price of £4 each?—Yes, but I would have other two quey stirks on hand.

3681. For sale?—For sale next year when they arrived at a proper age. Next year I would sell other two stot stirks at the same price.

3682. And what else?—And these two quey stirks, and being two-year-olds they would make £6 each; and this year I would have a foal of the mare likely that would realise between £5 and £6.

3683. Yes, and what next?—That is two years: well, the thing would go on like that.

3684. And the third year?—The third year I would just sell two stot stirks and two two-year-olds, but I would have a foal only every second year, so that I would put it down at £2, 10s. per annum.

3685. What would you make the sheep return?—Twenty lambs off the sheep at least.

3686. You are giving us 30 ewes, would not you allow more than 20 lambs?—The ground is bad here.

3687. You would only allow 20 lambs?—Twenty lambs.

3688. What would that come to?—I would sell five of the ewe lambs the first year.

3689. How much would you hope to get?—5s.

3690. How many ewe lambs the second year?—The same, at the same price.

3691. And the third year?—Five again, and I would have some ten wedders and a three-year-old.

3692. And that would sell for what probably?—About £1 each.

3693. Cast ewe?—That would be required for the family.

3694. What about the wool, would that be required?—That would be required for the family as well.

3695. Any other thing you would sell?—No.

3696. On these figures then you have something to the good that way, and a means of livelihood?—I think so.

3697. Inside your holding?—Yes.

3698. Without fishing or labour or extraneous assistance?—Yes.

3699. Do you think the crofters generally would understand to work that system as well as you do yourself?—Oh yes, the whole of them.

3700. As well?—Just as well.

3701. But perhaps on a small scale?—Yes, and on a larger scale some of them.

3702. Is the land of the holdings in this quarter very much run out?—Yes.

3703. And is it only kept going by constant manuring?—Oh yes, but it would do much better if they would leave it out for a certain time.

3704. Do they leave it out because they are lazy, or because they can't help themselves?—That is not what I mean. It is that they continually crop it, and instead of manuring it, if they would allow the land to have a rest.

3705. Could they allow it to rest with the small amount of land they have?—Oh, yes.

3706. Why don't they?—Because they do not believe in it.

3707. But in your view they might allow it to rest, and if rested it would be very much more productive?—Much more.

3708. You are always in the habit of allowing your land to rest and taking it in certain rotations?—Yes.

Staffin, Skye. Archibald Macdonald.

3709. Is the system of sowing grass seeds understood here?—Oh yes, by some.

3710. And is it followed?—Yes, but to a very small extent, nothing to benefit the community.

3711. Speaking generally of crofters and cottars who wished new holdings, would you say that they could form these holdings and stock them, and build upon them without assistance, or would they, generally speaking, require assistance?—They would require assistance.

3712. The most of them?—The most of them.

3713. Could any of them except, perhaps, one or two do without assistance?—Most of them would require only partial assistance, because they have a lot of stock, and the implements, and a great deal of the concern.

3714. Then you would put them, perhaps, in three classes,—a very few who might do without assistance, a considerable number who would need partial assistance, and some who would require the entire assistance?—Oh none, because there is no one of them but has stock.

3715. The cottars?—Very few cottars but have stock in this part.

3716. One man here to-day has said he has only three sheep?—Yes, but there are others who have cattle and sheep.

3717. But is not the stock of the cottars generally very small?—Yes, but they have a cow, most of them.

3718. We have not had many of them giving evidence then. But you think that both cottars and crofters could do what is required with some assistance?—Yes.

3719. And some of them could do without any?—Yes, and most of the crofters have as much already as would be a sufficient guarantee for the assistance.

3720. Mr Forsyth.—Were you thinking that the sheep would be held separately or in common?—In common.

3721. You think that is the best plan?—Yes, in so small holdings.

3722. You don't allow anything for dipping or for tups?—No.

3723. There should be a little put for that?—Oh, well, perhaps they would get that out of the wool extra, besides keeping the family.

3724. Mr Sutherland.—I wish to ask this: In starting such a holding as you indicated, the first few years would, of course, be far more unfavourable than the succeeding ones?—Yes.

3725. The result of the labour would be cumulative?—It would always be remaining there.

3726. Gathering up; and the lands would be gradually getting better?—Yes.

3727. And what number of years do you think would be a proper number to take to estimate the average of success?—Between three and four.

3728. Do you think that by the end of the fourth year you would be in a position to say distinctly whether it was a success or not?—Yes, after the land was broken up and cut a bit, and good crops taken from it, I think I would have sufficient land taken in to prove that the thing would be a success or a failure.

3729. But you think it would be more favourable to the venture to take a period of, say, seven years?—Oh, yes; the longer it would be, the more favourable; but I think it ought to be tested in four years.

3730. And the stock would be continually increasing in that time, and the land would be improving, would it not?—Yes.

3731. The land at present—the pasture land especially—is degenerating on the large sheep farms, because there are no cattle on it?—The grazing would be continually getting better, unless it was overstocked.

3732. And would keep more stock than the average sheep farm does now?—Yes, owing to their own labour I think they would keep much more stock than the farm does.

3733. Then with regard to not following a rotation of crops in this neighbourhood, there is no reason to suppose but they would have a rotation in the new holding if they had a sufficiency of land?—Not the least if they thought they had a sufficiency of land. However small the holding, it could be taken up in rotation.

Staffin, Skye. Archibald Macdonald.

3734. But there is a good deal of inconvenience, is there not, in subdividing it into seven parts?—That is the cry they have.

3735. It would be a very minute subdivision, would it not? Does it not require seven subdivisions of two acres?—Yes.

3736. So that that might account in some degree for the present want of rotation?—Oh, yes.

3737. But you think, under more favourable circumstances, and with larger holdings, they would introduce an improved system of agriculture?—Yes, that is what they look to.

3738. Mr Macleod.—I presume you know the large farms in the neighbourhood of this district?—Yes.

3739. You know the ground?—Yes.

3740. And you have a knowledge of stock?—Yes.

3741. How does the land occupied by the crofters compare with the land occupied by the tacksmen?—The land of the tacksmen is much superior in grazing and arable.

3742. That is your view?—I am quite certain of it.

3743. There is a question which you probably heard put by me to-day, but which I might put again to you: it is about the amount of land that could be reclaimed in those large tacks?—Very considerable tracts of land.

3744. One of the difficulties that has to be contended with in making small holdings in a large tack is that there are very considerable areas of grazing, the stock on which would require to be wintered, and the danger would be that there would not be a sufficiency of arable for this purpose?—Oh, there is plenty.

3745. In your opinion there would be plenty of arable?—Yes.

3746. For wintering all the stock that could be summered?—For wintering all the stock that could be summered.

3747. You gave a number of figures here as to the produce of a croft of 12 acres arable with a sufficiency of pasture to graze 6 cows and their followers, 30 ewes and their followers, and a pony?—Yes.

3748. But I presume you don't mean to say that that is an exhaustive balance-sheet that you gave us,—that it exhausts everything that might be taken from the croft?—No, there are a great many odds and ends, but that is the most important part of it.

3749. You did not give us the value of the wool?—No, I said for the family.

3750. But if you are making a balance-sheet, it is only fair to credit the holding with all that it produces, even supposing the family does use it?—Yes, and the landlord on the other side.

3751. Certainly. Well, I make out that, with the figures you gave as to the stocking, it would take just £99, 10s., or say £100, to stock?—Yes, just about that.

3752. And about £50 for the buildings?—Yes.

3753. £150 would put a man fairly on his way to support himself?—Even supposing he had nothing, and they have a fair share already, £100 would do as a rule.

3754. Then there is the question of the rent,—do you think there would be any difficulty in meeting that?—Not in the least; none whatever.

3755. You think that any failure to pay a fair rent at the present time is due to the people's actual inability to do it owing to their circumstances?—Yes, that is it; and they have such small patches of land that they cannot make their living out of it. They lose more time about these small patches of land than it is worth; whereas, if they had a holding of the proper size, it would keep them employed, and they would both earn their living and be able to pay a fair rent.

3756. Then, taking the figures of the third year, you gave us two stirks at £4—£8, and two queys £12; and calculating, if you had a mare, you would make £2, 10s. a year of it. And the number of lambs with the lambs and wedders that you would sell, you would only make £2, 5s. off them?—Yes, but then there are 10 wedders at the end.

3757. In the third year?—Yes, 10 three-year-olds at £1.

3758. That is £10?—That is £10.

3759. And the ewes at 25s. make £11, 5s. You said the produce would be about £30?—Yes.

3760. Well, as a matter of fact, it comes to more than that,—it comes to £60. Then there are the 10 wedders: you allow nothing for deaths?—Yes, I calculate upon having 15. No, I am wrong there. There are 30 sheep.

3761. You said that you would take 20 lambs off the 30 sheep. Then you would sell 5, leaving 15?—Yes, but in the beginning I left out, so as to count for that, 10.

3762. Ten would be wedder lambs?—That is not what I mean. I counted upon having 30 ewes and 20 lambs, and 10 I left out for deaths during the time.

3763. Ten net?—Ten net.

3764. That represents all your mortality, that third?—Yes.

3765. Could you give us the value of the wool after the third year when you had got the thing into thorough working order?—Between £4 and £5.

3766. Put it at £5?—The quality is very low, as the ground is broken.

3766*a*. But I am not taking so much the holdings that the people have just now as the improved holdings?—They would likely be better, if the ground is better.

3767. There is nothing about the sheep. How many lambs would you expect to take off the 30 ewes?—Twenty.

3768. No more than that?—No, counting the loss during the time. I kept the half of them for three years, and very likely I would not have more.

3769. Are you allowing a larger or a greater proportion than say a tacksman allows?—I am not aware of what probably the tacksman allows.

3770. Mr Forsyth.—Do you expect to rear 10 three-year-old wedders from a stock of 30 ewes? Do you think that is a sufficient allowance for death, taking it from the lamb up to the three-year-old wedder?—If the lambs were only tended, I would not get 30, but I would say 25.

3770*a*. Well, supposing you have 25 even, that would give you about 12 or 13 wedder lambs?—Yes.

3771. Can you expect to have 10 three-year-old wedders to sell off that?—Yes.

3772. You think that is a moderate estimate?—It is rather bare, perhaps.

3773. It is very bare?—The mortality in the sheep here is when they are young.

3774. It is when they are hoggs?—And wedders, too.

3775. Would not 7 or 8 be more like the thing?—It might in some years.

3776. Mr Macleod.—But you would have twin lambs?—There might be.

3777. Mr Maccallum.—Then it is your opinion that the pasture on the large holding has very much deteriorated through want of cropping?—Yes, I know it.

3778. And that these large holdings are not able now to keep so large a stock as when they were formed?—No.

3779. And then, on the other hand, with regard to the crofters holdings, you think the land has deteriorated from overcropping?—Yes, from continual overcropping.

3780. And that overcropping, you think, is occasioned by the smallness of the holding?—To a very great extent.

3781. The holdings are small, and then there is the other factor that they have to give land to the cottars?—Yes.

3782. But you think that if holdings, such as you have described, were available, they would not overcrop?—I don't think they would.

3783. They would allow the land to rest?—To rest.

3784. You have some experience yourself with the cultivation of land?—Yes.

3785. Did you make any reclamation of land?—Yes.

3786. And how did that pay you?—Very well.

3787. How much land did you reclaim?—Almost all over.

3788. And you found it profitable to reclaim?—Yes, very profitable. The landlord did spend £30 over it.

3789. He helped you?—He helped me.

3790. And you think that the crofters would be quite as able as you were to reclaim land on these large holdings?—Oh yes, and on their present holdings.

3791. Then have they made any improvement since they got security of tenure?—Yes, a lot.

3792. A very great deal of improvements?—Yes.

3793. With regard to their houses, for instance?—Yes, and more about their holdings.

3794. They are better cultivated now?—Yes.

3795. And you think that for starting these holdings the most of them would require some assistance?—Most of them. There are some who could stock without it.

3796. Mr Munro.—I would like to come a little closer to this question of land reclamation. You have told us you have had some experience in that direction: have you ever laid out an entire croft from reclaimed ground?—No, but parts of it.

3797. Do you know accurately the result of your experience in that direction as to the taking in of land; did it pay you?—Yes.

3798. It paid you well?—Yes.

3799. You are in a position to say that if crofters got access to lands at present under sheep farms they would be in a position to reclaim these under a regular system of cropping?—Oh, yes.

3800. And with results favourable to themselves?—Yes. I believe they would get grand returns out of it.

3801. Would they pursue a regular system of rotation?—That is their idea.

3802. That they could do it?—Yes; but they consider their present holdings too small.

3803. You have told us a little ago that crofters would be the better of some assistance in taking possession of new lands. Now, in what way would you expect assistance to come to you,—by way of loan, or an absolute gift?—By loan.

3804. You disclaim the idea of the natives of Skye seeking charity in any form whatever?—Yes.

3805. What they want, I understand, is not charity but fairplay?—Fairplay. They think that if they were wronged by bad land laws, it would be only fair for just land laws now to come to their assistance.

3806. If they were assisted in that way by loans from Government or otherwise, do you think they would repay these over a series of years?—Yes.

3807. The Chairman.—Reverting to the holding that we have been having in view, twelve arable and so forth, I must ask you a question which we have asked before and not got answered, but probably you can answer it. What rent would you affix to this holding?—Between £6 and £7.

3808. Not more?—Not more.

3809. How many hands would be required to work it?—One man and a boy and a servant girl.

3810. Who might all be within the circle of his own family?—Quite so.

3811. Would you not require two men and a boy?—No, if they have a horse.

3812. Then you make no allowance for hiring servants?—No, none whatever; I mean the crofter and his family to work this croft, except they got a few days' assistance in autumn.

3813. And in spring?—Oh, well, only a day or two in spring. They would require not one single day in spring except while sowing the potatoes, and they generally gather together and help each other.

3814. But they would need a little assistance in autumn?—Yes.

3815. Do you make any allowance for that?—The man and the boy and the servant girl could work it.

3816. Without assistance?—Without assistance.

3817. What do you estimate the cost of keep, say of a man, his wife, and five children, the eldest not more than twenty, for a twelvemonth?—I cannot answ that, because the crofters get so much out of their croft.

3818. But there are a good many things which they have to buy that they cannot well do without?—Yes, I cannot get at that on the spur of the moment.

3819. Have you calculated that at any time?—No.

3820. You have given us a number of most useful details: have you set these down in black and white, on the debit and credit sides?—Yes, I have been considering that.

3821. Have you got that paper?—No; I have it in the house.

3822. Would you let us see it?—Yes.

3823. We would like very much to see it. What do you bring out?—Between £33 and £34 as the net return, after three years.

3824. After three years you bring out £33 or £34 of a yearly return?—Yes.

3825. Gross or net?—On the figures I gave you.

3826. Are these gross returns?—Oh, no. There are a great many things about the farm more than I have mentioned, such as fowls and pigs, and a lot of things of that kind.

3827. Would you sell any butter?—Yes; if they were such a small family, with four cows, they would sell butter.

3828. Do you allow anything for the crofters' own labour?—No, none whatever. I leave all the small things and the crop and other things as a return for his labour.

3829. There is one small item occurs to one,—for example, do you allow anything for smith-work?—No; but that would be required.

3830. In one croft you mentioned there is one pony, and in another two ponies. A good deal of smith-work would be required for them?—Yes.

3831. And repairs to carts and implements. We would like very much if you would show us that paper.

3832. Mr John Mackenzie, Factor.—In removing to new holdings, would not a crofter be under a great disadvantage in bringing new stock in on that land, and invariably have a very large mortality for several years?—I think the stock they have would get considerably better on, because the land would be better.

3833. I mean new holdings?—In new holdings.

3834. Would not that be a great disadvantage? Would not it be a great advantage to any person going to occupy that land to get the stock upon it?—Of course it would be an advantage, but the stock there is not suitable for crofters.

3835. Are you aware that there might be a great mortality in bringing a new stock that is not acclimatised in the place?—Yes, some stock; but I am perfectly convinced that the stock the crofters have at present would greatly improve if they were removed to new holdings on the big farms—considerably improved.

3836. How does the crofters' stock compare with the stock presently on the farms you mention?—Very much inferior.

3837. Would they be better to have a superior class of stock?—The stock that the crofters have would suit them better.

3838. If a crofter brought in, say, 20 sheep to this land from some other place, might there not be only 6 or 7 of them alive next year?—There might be none of them at all, but it is not quite probable.

3839. Do you know from your own recollection, or from experience, that there have been cases of that kind?—I don't know of them; but one thing I know, when stock of the best of the crofters stray on these big farms they are considerably better than those that are continually on their own.

3840. That is a different thing. I mean by getting new stock into a place where that stock has never been on before, is it not a great risk?—The thing is this ———

3841. The Chairman.—There is undoubtedly a risk in acclimatising a new stock to a new ground?—There is, but I will put it in this shape. The crofters bring their own stock from the worst grazing to better, and I contend that they will improve and thrive better than those that were on already. Staffin, Skye. Archibald Macdonald.

3842. They will take to the new land, which is better feeding?—Better feeding.

3843. Mr Mackenzie, Factor.—Another question I have is this: When estimating this croft, did you make any allowance for bad seasons or failure in the seasons?—Yes; I made an average price during bad and good years.

3844. Are you aware that, generally speaking, the crofts are worked profitably and to advantage at present in the way in which they are worked?—They are not.

3845. If the same system was continued in the new crofts?—That is quite right. The idea of the people is that they would take the arable land in rotation.

3846. And now supposing—you said that you had some experience of it—supposing that you had a garden (a small garden of half an acre) which had been sown with one kind of crop, and the ground sick, would not it be better to work even that by rotation, and more profitable?—I have no experience of the garden.

3847. Are you aware that that would be the case?—I don't remember the question.

3848. However small the holding might be, even suppose it was a garden, would not it be better?—I have said so already.

3849. Mr Macleod.—In the figures that you gave you were more concerned with what the crofter would sell off the croft than with the whole total produce?—Yes.

3850. It is not the whole total produce?—The whole total produce would return a great deal of money.

3851. Mr Sutherland.—Retaining his own living at the time?—Yes.

3852. We have heard a great deal from you about the produce of a croft. Are you the product of a croft yourself?—Yes.

3853. The Chairman.—Are you of opinion that any disadvantage which would attach to the transference of stock to a new holding, such as you have described, and consequent loss, would be more than countervailed by the advantages derived from the new holding otherwise?—I don't think any disadvantage would arise owing to the transference of the stock. It would be more to the advantage of the stock.

3854. Suppose there was a disadvantage, however, would that be more than met by the other advantages?—Oh, yes. But I cannot believe there would be any disadvantage, because they are under the same climate; it is only moving over a march to a better ground and more sheltered.

3855. At present the crofter does not cultivate his croft in this district to a profit?—No.

3856. But you are of opinion that if he had a large holding he would be able to cultivate it to a profit?—Yes.

3857. Just explain in a word? Why in the one case is it unprofitable and in the other case, in your opinion, profitable?—I don't know exactly.

3858. You admit that at present he does not cultivate his holding to a profit?—Yes.

3859. But you think that if he had a holding of the size you describe he would be able to cultivate it to a profit?—Yes.

3860. And would do so? Wherein lies the difference?—The difference lies in this: The land is completely exhausted, and this ground, the old arable land in the tacks, is in good condition for crops in the meantime; and the idea among the people is that when they get this good ground in heart they will keep it in heart by continual rotation.

3861. Then let me ask this further question. You think that getting a holding of the size you mentioned there would not be the risk of the land becoming exhausted and the profits falling, as is the case with the small holdings where the arable is too limited?—There is no fear of that.

3862. They would be able to work it by rotation and a better system of cultivation altogether?—Altogether.

Staffin, Skye. Archibald Macdonald.

(Later in the day the witness handed in the following statement):—

3863. The Chairman.—I understand you wish to make a correction on your previous evidence in reference to this statement?—Yes. I stated £33 as the return instead of £23, and on this calculation I based the rent.

3864. Now, does that show both a debit and a credit side?—Yes, as far as the rent is concerned.

3865. We cannot go into the details of your statement at this moment; but suppose, on entering into the matter, we think it desirable to examine you further, would you be willing to attend at some other place?—Yes.

Charles Macarthur.

CHARLES MACARTHUR, Crofter, Ellishadder (62).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3866. The Chairman. Are you a crofter in Ellishadder?—I am.

3867. What is your rent?—£6, 5s.

3868. What was your old rent?—£9. I have been sent here from Kilmuir: the crofters were removed from Holl and Greanline.

3869. Do you know of available land near your present holding?—Yes.

3870. Where is it?—On Sartil.

3871. How far is that from your present house?—About three miles.

3872. Are you anxious to leave your present holding, and acquire a holding on Sartil, if obtainable?—Yes. I was promised a better place, but did not get it.

3873. Would you be prepared, without assistance, to put on the necessary stock and erect the necessary buildings?—I would be the better of help.

3874. How much help?—About £100.

3875. And would you be prepared to repay that at low interest?—I would try.

Staffin, Skye. Charles Macarthur.

3876. Mr Sutherland.—How many tenants are there in Ellishadder?—Eight.

3877. Any cottars?—Two: five of the crofts are divided.

3878. Is the name Sartil the name of a township or of a farm?—Where the people were before.

3879. The Chairman, on the suggestion of Mr Myles Macinnes, Portree, Secretary of the Skye Land League.—How long has this farm of Sartil been in the occupation of the present holder?—From Whitsunday last.

3880. Did you make any application for this ground, or part of it?—Yes, and for other places; for Greauline and Holl, and Linicro and Feaull and Brae. It was out of that I was put myself.

3881. How many applications were given in altogether?—The applications that I referred to were applications at the time the clearances were being effected, but we particularly put in an application for Sartil, and were not successful.

3882. When was that?—Last summer.

3883. That was an application direct to the proprietor or to the factor?—Yes; they were asking it from the factor, and he would not give it.

3884. Was there any written reply sent?—Asking us to take over the sheep stock that was on the ground.

3885. What was the sheep stock?—I am not sure; there would be about a thousand.

3886. And you were not prepared to do that?—No.

3887. Well, but suppose the application had been entertained by the landlord, how would you propose that he should have dealt with the sheep stock if you could not take it?—There were markets where they could be disposed of.

3888. But that might have been at a loss?—The people themselves, the applicants, would take over the sheep stock if they would get terms of payment.

3889. Did you make any offer?—No, we had not the chance: it was set to the other man.

3890. What answer did you make to the proposal of the factor that you should take over the sheep stock if you got the land?—We answered him that we were not able to take over the sheep stock.

3891. Then what did you think would become of them?—We did not know what he was to do with the sheep stock that was on it, unless he would give it to us until we could pay it.

3892. So it is your position that you did not care what became of the sheep stock if you got the land?—No. We did not find the landlord or the present factor bad at all, but the previous landlord spoilt us entirely.

3893. Mr Ferguson has Sartil at present?—Yes.

3893*a*. Have you any questions, Mr Mackenzie?—Mr Mackenzie. No; I think the witness has given his evidence fairly well. The only thing I have to add is, that I asked them to send in the terms on which they would take the stock, but never received them.

Peter Macdonald.

PETER MACDONALD, Crofter, Garros (39).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3894. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

3894*a*. Where do you come from?—From Garros.

3895. What is your rent?—£5, 15s.

3896. What was the old rent?—I don't quite remember what the big rent was.

3897. I find it was £9, 15s., the area being 3 acres 3 roods 36 poles arable, 5 acres 2 roods 36 poles outrun, 248 acres township pasture, and 3672 hill pasture. Do you wish to leave your present holding?—Long since, if I could get another.

3898. Why?—It is so small and so poor that I could not make my living on it.

3899. Have you ever been able to make your living on it?—No.

3900. Then how do you sustain yourself?—By my earnings, with the assistance of the croft.

3901. Where is there land that you think would be suitable in the neighbourhood?—I think that any one of the six tacks that are vacant of population on the estate is suitable enough.

Staffin, Skye. — Peter Macdonald.

3902. Just give me the names of the six tacks?—Cuidreach, Glennig, Scuddaburgh, Duntulm, Floddigarry and Sartil.

3903. You are ready to take a holding on any one of them?—Yes, I am desirous of getting such a holding.

3904. And putting on the necessary stock, and erecting the necessary buildings?—I think I would try to do that, but every one cannot do it.

3905. Could you do it yourself without assistance?—I believe I could.

3906. What expenditure would you look forward to in order to effect a transfer?—About £40 or £50.

3907. Are there any cottars in Garros?—No.

3908. How many crofters are there?—Four crofts, and one is in two.

3909. Then there are four crofts and five crofters?—Yes.

William Nicolson.

William Nicolson, Crofter, Marrishadder (53). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3910. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Marrishadder?—Yes.

3911. What is your rent?—£8.

3912. The old rent?—£11.

3913. I see your holding has 6 acres 1 rood 6 poles arable, 4 acres 4 poles outrun, 660 acres township grazing, and 3672 hill pasture. Did you hear the statements of the previous witnesses?—Yes.

3914. And do you concur in their evidence?—Yes.

3915. Do you wish to make any addition?—No, but that I am desirous of getting more land.

3916. The land of your holding is exhausted?—Yes.

3917. And do you know of land near at hand much more fertile?—Yes.

3918. And you would be prepared to undertake the task of transferring yourself to a new holding and working it to a profit?—Yes.

3919. Without assistance or with assistance?—Not without assistance.

3920. How much?—That would be according to the holding that I might get.

3921. Suppose you got 10 acres arable?—No, I could not take such a holding as that without assistance.

3922. What assistance would you require for a holding of that size?—Up to £100.

3923. Are there any cottars in Marrishadder?—No.

3924. How many crofters are there?—Eight.

3925. Are any of the crofts broken?—Four are broken.

3926. Then there are eight crofters and four whole crofts, is that the way of it?—Four whole crofts and four broken: twelve families.

3927. Do you remember when additional crofters came to the place?—No, it was themselves who were dividing the holding.

3928. Does that remark apply to the whole of you?—Yes, the increase of the township.

3929. Is it a common thing in this district for crofters to divide their holdings?—Yes, that was the habit.

3930. That is due to increase of numbers?—Yes.

3931. But is it not putting more people on the land than it will sustain?—Yes, quite so.

3932. Do you think that at present the township of Marrishadder is overcrowded?—Yes, very much.

3933. And the land is not kept under rotation?—It is too small.

3934. Would it be a great relief to you if you could get holdings elsewhere?—Yes, a great relief.

3935. Is it the fact that at present it is impossible for you to do well in your holdings?—No person can make his living out of them at present: they are so small and so run out.

3936. Did any of those whose holdings have been divided apply to the estate management for new holdings?—I am not aware.

3937. Mr Sutherland.—Is the land that they could take near them?—No.

Staffin, Skye. — William Nicolson.

3938. How many miles?—Between three and four miles. Floddigarry and Sartil are about six miles from us.

3939. Mr Macleod.—Were there any people put into your township before the period that you remember?—One man had our township first: then he kept a part of it for himself and let the rest to tenants.

3940. What man was that?—Martin Martin, Tote.

3941. Where did those people come from that he let the land to?—From different places.

3942. Were they put out of the places they came from?—Three from Borve, near Portree.

Alexander Macleod.

Alexander Macleod, Crofter, Cul-nan-cnoc, Kilmuir Estate (55)—(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

3943. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter in Cul-nan-cnoc?—Yes.

3944. What is your rent?—£7, 5s.

3945. What was the old rent?—£11, 5s. The holding is 5 acres 2 roods 2 poles arable, 3 roods 2 poles outrun, 434 township grazing, and hill pasture 3672 acres.

3946. Mr Sutherland.—Do they want new holdings at Cul-nan-cnoc?—Yes, they would that, if they could get better. It is a very bad place.

3947. Is there a better place near them?—Yes, plenty on the big tack.

3948. How far away is that?—About a mile.

3949. How many besides yourself do you think it would take?—I cannot tell how many.

3950. Would you take land yourself?—Yes, if I could get a better place than I have.

3951. Can you show the land that you refer to to the Commissioners?—Yes.

3952. Mr Macleod.—What is the big tack that you refer to?—Scorrybreck.

3953. What is the nearest township?—Tote.

3954. How many crofters are in Cul-nan-cnoc?—Eight crofts and ten families; and there are six cottars.

3955. Are there men in all the cottars' houses?—Yes, except two.

3956. That is four cottars. Do those four cottars want land?—I cannot say, but they are working land at all events as they get it from the crofters around them.

William Mackenzie.

William Mackenzie, Teacher, Valtos (41)—examined.

3957. The Chairman.—You are a crofter in Valtos?—I am a teacher.

3958. Have you not a holding?—I have a small part.

3959. Are you here representing the township?—Yes, I was appointed.

3960. How many crofters are in Valtos?—There are six crofts divided among eleven crofters.

3961. And how many cottars?—Five.

3962. Do they pay rent, any of them?—No; they give a little labour for the patches they get from the crofters.

3963. They live upon the crofters to a great extent?—Practically.

3964. Are the crofts there very small?—The crofts are ordinarily fair sized, but they are all divided now.

3965. And in your judgment would it be a great advantage to them if they could get self-sustaining holdings elsewhere?—It would.

3966. Then about the cottars. It would be an advantage, I suppose, if they could be taken away from there, and get holdings elsewhere?—Certainly.

3967. An advantage to the cottars, and a relief to the crofters?—That is so.

3968. There is no doubt about that?—No. One of the crofters is here.

3969. Is that Archibald Graham?—Yes.

Staffin, Skye. — William Mackenzie.

3970. How long have you been in Valtos?—Fourteen years.

3971. During all that time do you know of any croft that has been worked to a profit?—By the subdivision the lands have become so small, and the people do not seem to believe in allowing the land to rest.

3972. They cultivate it every year?—Yes.

3973. And take the substance out of it?—Yes.

3974. The whole of the arable land there is in need of a rest?—Completely exhausted.

3975. Do they get sea-ware there?—Yes.

3976. And they use it every year?—Yes.

3977. Do you know the district well?—Fairly well.

3978. You know the surrounding tacks?—Yes.

3979. Do you know where there is available land on these tacks?—Land at Scorrybreck.

3980. What part of Scorrybreck?—Upper and Lower Tote.

3981. You know the land there?—Yes.

3982. Is it, in your opinion, suitable for cultivation?—Yes.

3983. To a profit?—To a profit.

3984. Is it not a little difficult to get at?—Yes it is, but not more so than the land they are in possession of.

3985. Not more inaccessible than where they are?—No.

3986. How would they do at Scorrybreck,—would they go mostly by boat?—By boat.

3987. Are they accustomed to use boats where they are?—Yes.

3988. And do they do a good deal of their traffic in Valtos by means of boats?—It is all done by means of boats.

3989. Is there any road from the present township of Valtos to it?—There is a road being constructed at present, which, when it is finished, will go up as far as Tote.

3990. Intended for horse traffic?—Yes.

3991. How far is Tote from Valtos?—About two miles,—hardly that.

3992. In your opinion the land at Tote is much better and has much more substance in it than the land they would be leaving?—Certainly.

3993. From what you know of the people of Valtos, would they all, crofters and cottars, be willing to leave Valtos if they could get better holdings?—Some of them would, but it would not be easy for some weak families; for instance, one family might be able to go, and another which could not, might take the croft thus vacated.

3994. You would occupy the vacated crofts by those who were unable to remove?—Certainly.

3995. But would the land be worth cultivating?—Yes, when they would get more of it, and be able to give it a rotation.

3996. Would the Valtos tenants be able to go to Tote without pecuniary assistance?—Not without partial assistance.

3997. Would that have to be of a material or only a trifling amount?—Probably from a third to a half of what would be required to stock and build.

3998. Mr Munro.—What do you estimate a third or a half to be?—That depends on the size of the croft. Take the croft mostly spoken of, 12 acres arable with outrun: on the whole, such a croft as that would require, I should say, roughly speaking, about £150.

3999. And would the crofters be able to repay such a large sum as £150 by easy instalments?—They would not require that; they have a certain amount of stock already. It would take £150 in all.

4000. What amount of assistance would they require?—A third of that.

4001. From £50 to £75?—Just so.

4002. How many crofters could you settle in Tote now?—I could not say, there are plenty more places besides Tote.

4003. Mr Maccallum.—There are a large number of families in your township, so that it is very badly congested?—Yes.

4004. How did the subdivision arise?—Families breaking up.

4005. Not by families coming there, but by sons of crofters settling there?—Yes.

4006. Do you think these would have taken holdings elsewhere at the time, if there had been holdings available?—Oh, yes.

4007. They would have preferred that to the subdivision of the croft?—Yes.

4008. How do the cottars' families do for milk: have they a cow, for instance?—None of them.

4009. And the children are brought up without milk?—No milk.

4010. Therefore you think it would be a great benefit to these cottars to have a holding so that they could have milk for their children?—Yes.

4011. You think the children suffer a great deal?—Certainly.

4012. How much land have you got yourself?—Two and a half acres.

4013. Do you cultivate that to a profit yourself?—Yes.

4014. You make a profit out of the land which you occupy?—Yes.

4015. And you do not find that the climate is such that crops could not be raised?—No.

4016. You get good crops of your own?—I have only 2½ acres, and I give it a complete five year rotation.

4017. And you find the cultivation of it profitable?—Yes.

4018. Do you think the land in Tote is superior to the land you have?—Yes.

4019. Mr Sutherland.—In regard to the cultivation that has been referred to, I presume you carry on a spade cultivation?—Plough.

4020. Do you plough too?—Yes.

4021. As to the road you spoke of from Valtos to Tote, is there any prospect of this being carried on to Portree?—The people of the district were looking for that and petitioning for it. I know that if such a road were made, it would make a different place of this country altogether.

4022. You think it would be very desirable in view of forming new holdings along that road to Portree?—My estimate of the benefit to the people of such a road is that, even with the crofts raised 20 per cent., it would benefit them.

4023. Even though they were taxed to that extent, it would be more than compensated for. Have you a road to the north from Valtos?—Yes.

4024. Is it a good road?—This road.

4025. This road is continued to Valtos?—It went beyond here two miles until last year when a new road was made.

4026. A carriage road?—Yes.

4027. Do you find the absence of roads militating against the attendance of children at school?—Yes.

4028. You are aware that money was given specially for the purpose of making roads to schools?—Yes.

4029. Has your case been taken into consideration in allocating that money, do you know?—I don't know, indeed. We brought our case under the notice of the County Council.

4030. Mr Macleod.—You say that you have been a teacher at Valtos for the last fourteen years. Might I ask you, as one that has had special charge of the education in the district, how the intelligence of the people stands to-day, as compared with when you began to teach,—do you think that education has improved them intellectually?—Oh, yes.

4031. You think so?—In the case of the younger people.

4032. And you think that, with the education you have been able to impart to them, they would be able to use better modes of culture if they had larger holdings?—I believe they would.

4033. Mr H. V. Maccallum.—I should like to ask a question.

4034. The Chairman.—Are you appearing on behalf of the landlords?—Mr H. V. Maccallum. I am appearing on behalf of the Highland Property Defence Association.

Staffin, Skye.
William Mackenzie.

4035. The Chairman.—And the late proprietor was a member of it?—Mr H. V. Maccallum. He was.

4036. The Chairman.—What is your question. —Mr H. V. Maccallum. Does the witness consider that if there was a good harbour at Staffin there would be a considerable number of the crofters who would avail themselves of the fishing industry?—Witness. Yes, I believe they would; the fishing banks are very convenient.

4037–38. The Chairman.—Now do you think that if such a harbour were established, a number of people would be induced to take small holdings by the shore without much land, and depend upon the fishing industry for their livelihood?—I don't doubt it.

4039. You think that would be a popular thing among them?—It would.

4040. Would you have both classes there,—a certain class who would desire to live by the sea, and another class who would like self-subsisting holdings farther in? —Yes.

4041. That is your view?—Yes.

4042. What is the distance by road at present from Valtos to Portree?—I should say about 14 or 15 miles.

4043. What would be the distance from Tote to Portree by the road suggested by Mr Sutherland?— There is no road, the distance is about 30 miles.

4044. Suppose a new road made from Tote to Portree, and crofters settled there, what would the distance be?—11 or 12 miles.

4045. A good deal less than half the distance?— Yes.

4046. Mr Forsyth.—What important fishing banks are there near here, if you had a pier at Staffin?— Away out between here and Lewis, and between here and the Gairloch coast.

4047. The Shiant bank?—Yes.

4048. Any others?—The whole channel.

4049. If you had a road through direct to Portree it might become a place of considerable fishing importance in the future, might it not?—Yes.

4050. And develop the whole industry all around; with a good pier at Staffin, and a good road to Portree, there might be good white fishing here?—Oh, yes.

4051. The place is particularly suitable?—Very suitable.

4052. The Chairman.—Would it be an easy matter to erect a breakwater between the mainland and Staffin island?—I cannot speak to that. I desire to add one thing about the rent. I heard the rent stated once or twice. I would have a rent put on that would free the holding in forty or fifty years.

4053. You mean a purchase system?—Purchase rent.

4054. Mr Munro.—Might I ask you if the theory of agriculture is being taught in schools here?—Lately it has.

Archibald Graham.

ARCHIBALD GRAHAM, Cottar, Valtos (30).

4055. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter in Valtos? —A cottar.

4056. There are four cottars and ten families in Valtos?—Yes, that is so.

4057. How many crofters are there in Valtos?— Eleven, I think.

4058. You are anxious to get a new holding?— Yes.

4059. You heard the evidence given by the teacher with regard to Tote and Upper Tote?—Yes.

4060. Do you agree with it?—Yes.

4061. Have you any further information to give us? —No.

4062. If not, we will take you as concurring generally in the statements that have been made by the teacher and the other witnesses?—Nothing further to say.

Staffin, Skye.
Murdo Maclean.

MURDO MACLEAN, Crofter, Lealt.
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter).

4063. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter or a cottar? —A crofter.

4064. What is your rent?—£3, 15s.

4065. What was your old rent?—£6, 10s. I have half a croft.

4066. You heard all the previous evidence to-day, I think?—Yes.

4067. And do you concur in it?—Yes, some of it.

4068. Are you anxious to get a new holding away from your present croft, with better and more fertile land?—Yes, very desirous.

4069. And do you concur with what has been told us by various persons upon the subject of transfer of holding?—Yes, but each man will have his own story to tell.

4070. I would like to hear yours?—I am in a very poor, confined place. The land was cribbed from us bit by bit until what was left was not worth much. The first bit was taken from us on the south side of the river and given to an Englishman. There was not a penny of arrears due by anybody in the township, which had six crofters in it paying £7 each, and they got threatened of a reduction when this piece was taken from them. Then this end of the estate was sold by Lord Macdonald to Major Fraser, who took a third part of our township from us and added it to the farm of Lonfearn. We were then paying £5 each croft. After the Major had so reduced our holdings, he raised the rent to £13. Then there were six tenants in it, now there are seven, and two cottars. It is so small that we cannot live on it. If we got back what was taken from us it would help us largely.

4071. What you mainly intend to convey is this that while the land has been exhausted, the number of people has been increasing?—Their families are getting poorer at all events.

4072. And the cure for that is to put them into other holdings in your opinion?—I know of no better mode of improving their condition than to give them the good land which is in possession of tacksmen at present.

4073. Mr Macleod.—Who has the farm of Lonfearn at present?—Murdoch Nicolson.

William Macleod.

WILLIAM MACLEOD, Crofter, Clachan (57)—examined.

4074. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter in Clachan? —Yes.

4075. What is your rent?—£3, 15s.

4076. Your holding extends, I see, to 3 acres 3 roods 30 poles arable, 4 acres 18 poles outrun, 299 acres township grazing, and 3672 hill pasture. Where is there land available nearest to you?—Sartil and Floddigarry.

4077. Do you know Floddigarry well?—Yes.

4078. Is there much good land there that could be cultivated to profit?—Yes, big stretches, good pieces, but it is mostly grazing.

4079. But is a great deal of that grazing old arable? —A great part of it.

4080. Would that land you refer to accommodate a considerable number of crofters properly?—Yes, that is evidenced by the fact that one man at Floddigarry had no less than 80 milch cows.

4081. Had that land at Floddigarry previously been in the occupation of crofters?—I don't know that Floddigarry was, but Balmeanach was.

4082. And in whose possession is Balmeanach now? —Mr Ferguson, Monkstadt.

4083. Is it a part of Monkstadt?—Yes, about a year ago it was added to Monkstadt.

4084. Are there any cottars in Clachan?—Two.

4085. How many crofters?—Twelve, and on eight of these there are two families: four are whole.

4086. There are twenty crofters?—Twenty families paying rent.

Staffin, Skye. William Macleod.

4087. Was that owing to subdivision by the crofters among themselves?—They had to subdivide when there was no other place for them to go to.

4088. Then there is a great crowding together of crofters and cottars at Clachan?—Yes.

4089. And are the whole of them anxious to get away?—The land is not good; I would say it would be sufficient for eight crofters.

4090. That is to say, that out of the twenty-two inhabitants, crofters and cottars, eight could remain and fourteen would take new holdings?—Yes.

4091. Mr Macleod.—How far from Clachan is this land that you say is available for new holdings?—It marches with our township. Sartil is 2 miles from us.

Roderick Macinnes.

RODERICK MACINNES, Cottar, Digg (55)—examined.

4092. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter in Digg?—A cottar.

4093. Do you pay any rent?—No rent.

4094. Have you any stock?—Yes, a little.

4095. Tell us what it is?—Three cows, three stirks, and ten sheep.

4096. Have you a pony?—No.

4097. Or a share of one?—No.

4098. How do you winter these animals?—Buying here and there from the crofters, and buying tillage here and there.

4099. Where do you feed them in summer?—Paying for grazing that is vacant.

4100. To whom?—Crofters.

4101. Do you always pay for the grazing?—Yes, every year.

4102. Are you better off than some of the crofters?—I don't confess that I am worse than some of them.

4103. You have a good holding?—Not at all.

4104. Is it the case that you have three cows, three stirks, and ten sheep, and pay no rent?—Oh, yes; after I get my account of what it will cost me, I will be paying quite as much as they are. Two or three times I have asked land of the factor, and was quite able to pay for it, and could not get it. Then I bought land and paid money for it, and after doing that I cannot get it, and the land is worse.

4105. Did you get the money back?—No. When the late tenant of the hotel died here, I bought the tillage and planted it.

4106. Are you anxious to leave your present subject of occupation if you can get a larger holding?—Yes. I am very desirous of doing so, and long since I have been so.

4107. And you would be ready to stock that holding and put up the buildings?—If I got the land. I would endeavour to do so, but I would need assistance for houses.

4108. Mr Forsyth.—Are you a fisherman?—Yes, a sort of a fisherman.

4109. Have you a boat?—A small boat.

4110. What size keel?—About 16 feet. I have been for the past fifteen years fishing lobsters.

4111. It is by that you have made your living?—Yes.

4112. Could there not be a good deal of fishing done here with a pier?—They would not do very well at it.

4113. You would rather go to the land than to the sea, would you?—Yes, I am tired of the sea.

4114. But you have lived by the sea always, have you not?—Not quite. I live mostly on my neighbours.

4115. You appear to have thriven under that process. Would you rather give that up and go to land of your own to work?—Yes, very pleased to take a holding of my own.

4116. But then you know you would have to work entirely for yourself; would you be able to do that?—Yes. I have been working for myself since I was born.

4117. Mr Sutherland.—It may be my mistake, but I thought you said you bought the land. What do you mean by that?—There are three crofts here which were in possession of crofters before they were added to the hotel lands; the crofters were cleared out of them, and then when Macleod died recently here his heirs had right to this land. Then from the person who came as successor to these lands I bought the tillage. I have only the crop that is on the croft, and there is no house on the land. When the big house was being built, the stones of our house were taken for use, and I am now desirous of taking that land from the landlord.

Staffin, Skye. Roderick Macinnes.

4118. You believe, I suppose, that if you have accumulated a stock of three cows, three stirks, and ten sheep without any land, you would prosper very much better with some land?—That is my opinion.

4119. Where is the land that you think suitable?—We are just nicely situated for two lands; we are wedged in between Sartil on the one hand and Floddigarry on the other. There are fourteen cottar families in the township, and there are only ten crofts altogether, the tenth being in possession of Mr Stewart, Scorrybreck. Twelve years since, I had the fourth part of that croft, paying a rent to Mr Stewart, Scorrybreck. On the other nine crofts there are sixteen families, and we cannot be otherwise than ill-off under such circumstances.

4120. Mr Macleod.—You said that you had a stock of three cows, three stirks, and ten sheep. Is it long since you have had a stock equal to that?—I have had them for the past twelve years.

4121. And how much would you say on the average you have been paying for the wintering and summering of them to crofters every year?—It would not be easy for me to tell. I had the fourth part of a croft myself, and I was getting tillage here and there throughout the township. Perhaps I might buy part of a stack of corn from a neighbour who might be anxious to sell.

4122. How much did you pay Mr Stewart for the fourth part?—£2.

4123. £2 a year as long as you had it?—Yes.

4124. How many pounds do you think you would be paying besides for the corn you would buy?—£7 or £8.

4125. So that altogether you were paying £10 a year, one way or another, between rent and fodder for your stock?—Yes.

4126. Mr Maccallum.—You made the rather peculiar acknowledgment that you lived on your neighbours. What do you mean by that exactly?—Getting pieces of ground from them gratuitously, and perhaps giving them a day's work.

4127. But for the most part you paid for all you got?—By giving days' work.

4128. And therefore you did not live on their charity, but simply they gave the use of their land to you on condition of your giving them work in some cases, and money in others?—I was not getting the ground for nothing, but we were spoiling them all the same, even though we were not paying for it.

4129. The Chairman.—How long is it since you had the fourth part of that township croft?—Eleven or twelve years.

4130. Did you ever apply for that tenth croft to Mr Stewart of Scorrybreck?—It was one of the crofters of the township who took that croft and set the fourth on me.

4131. But you remember of it passing into the possession of Mr Stewart, Scorrybreck?—Yes, I don't remember the exact transaction; I know that he had a croft there these eleven or twelve years.

4132. Did you apply to get back that croft or a part of it?—No, never.

4133. It fell into his farm, did it?—It is in the middle of our township.

4134. Is it fenced round by Scorrybreck?—No.

4135. What does he do?—Setting it on us.

4136. It is a separate portion of the farm, a discontiguous part of it?—He sublets it; it is in the middle of our township, and does not march with the farm at all. He is the principal tenant, and he sets it on us; there is no house upon it.

4137. What rent does he ask for the land he sets upon you?—I don't know what the others may be paying, who are on it, but I pay £2 for the fourth part of it.

Staffin, Skye.

Lachlan Macqueen.

LACHLAN MACQUEEN, Crofter, Stenscholl (70)—examined.

4138. The Chairman.—Where is your holding?—At Stenscholl.

4139. Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A crofter.

4140. What rent do you pay?—£7, 15s.

4141. What was your old rent?—£12, 10s.

4142. How many crofters are in Stenscholl?—Twelve.

4143. How many cottars?—Ten.

4144. How many families are there?—There are fifteen with lands, and five crofts broken.

4145. You heard the previous evidence given to-day?—Yes.

4146. And do you concur with it?—Yes.

4147. Do you desire to make any addition to it?—Not much; our township grazing is spoilt by the neighbouring township cutting their peats on us.

4148. That is not a subject that is before us. Do you desire to get a new holding?—I am getting too old for that now.

4149. Do you represent the township of Stenscholl?—Yes.

4150. Do they wish new holdings?—Many of them would need it.

4151. And are they anxious to get it?—Yes, if they would get assistance.

4152. But do you say that none of them could flit without assistance?—Very few.

4153. Where is the other land that would be suitable in your opinion?—All round, the best land in the country.

4154. What are the names of the farms?—Sartil, Floddigarry, Duntulm, and Monkstadt.

4155. Mr Macleod.—How far is Stenscholl from those lands?—It marches with Sartil.

Malcolm Mackenzie.

MALCOLM MACKENZIE, Crofter, Maligar (54)—examined.

4156. The Chairman.—You come from Maligar?—Yes.

4157. Are you a crofter?—Yes.

4158. What is your rent?—£7.

4159. And the old rent?—£11, 10s.

4160. How many crofters are in Maligar?—Eleven, with eight crofts. Eleven families pay rent.

4161. How many cottars?—Only one cottar on the hill march.

4162. He pays no rent?—No.

4163. What was your father's name?—Alexander Mackenzie.

4164. Was he alive when the Crofters Commission were round?—Yes.

4165. I see your present holding contains 5 acres 1 rood 16 poles arable, 4 acres 2 roods 24 poles outrun, 687 acres township grazing, and 3672 hill pasture. You want to get a new holding, do you?—Yes.

4166. Do you say that these farms we have heard so much about to-day, Monkstadt, Duntulm, Floddigarry and Sartil are suitable places?—Yes, there is old arable there.

4167. And do you concur with the evidence you have heard upon these matters?—I have no great faith in begging and asking money.

4168. You prefer, if you got a new holding, to stock it, and put up the buildings yourself?—Yes.

4169. And you would be able to do that?—Yes.

4170. What size of holding would you be prepared to take?—Twenty-five acres of the old arable.

4171. And what stock?—Eight cows, two horses, and eighty sheep, all told.

4172. If you had a farm of that size, would you undertake to stock it, and build upon it without any assistance?—Yes.

4173. You are a man of independent disposition?—Yes, I would have good courage in taking a croft of that sort. I would put up small buildings to begin with, and improve them as I go along.

Saffin, Skye.

4174. You don't like to owe anybody anything?—That is it.

Malcolm Mackenzie.

4175. You are not owing the landlord anything?—No. The cottar that is on our township is wanting more land. He is a cousin of mine, and he wants 15 acres arable. He would find security for the stocking.

4176. What is the name of the cottar?—Donald Mackenzie; he would give security at any time if he would get such a holding.

4177. Is he here to-day?—No, he is in the south country to-day.

Alexander Macleod.

ALEXANDER MACLEOD, Crofter, Greraline (69)—examined.

4178. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

4179. What is your rent?—£7.

4180. What was it formerly?—I began in 1846 with £5, then it was increased until it reached £11.

4181. I see you have 6 acres 32 poles of arable, 1 acre 1 rood 35 poles of outrun, 357 acres of township grazing, and 3672 of hill pasture. You have heard all the evidence to-day?—Yes, or a part of it; I am somewhat deaf.

4182. Do you wish to make any addition to what has been said?—It is not the same opinion that every one has.

4183. But we would like to have your opinion?—My opinion is that the people should have a good share of land, though the sizes of the crofts should vary.

4184. Any more?—I am quite prepared to answer any question.

4185. But we are all, unless I am mistaken, very much of opinion that we have heard a full statement from the other witnesses already, and do not wish to ask you any more questions?—That is my opinion also, that very full evidence has been given.

4186. What is the number of crofts in Greraline?—Five crofts to-day, but there were six in it before.

4187. And how many crofters in the five crofts?—Six crofters' families paying rent.

4188. How many cottars?—Not one; but I have seen the township in the possession of three.

John Macdonald.

JOHN MACDONALD, Cottar, Baile-mhic-Cuithein (40)
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

4189. The Chairman.—Do you pay any rent?—No, I am paying rent to the township.

4190. What rent?—£1.

4191. What stock have you got?—Two cows, a two-year-old, and a stirk.

4192. Any pony?—No horse; 12 sheep.

4193. Have you a patch of potato ground?—No, I am getting a bit from others, about a quarter of a mile from my place.

4194. And you pay for that, I suppose?—Yes.

4195. Are you desirous of leaving your holding if you can get another one that you could cultivate to profit?—Yes.

4196. How many cottars are in Baile-mhic-Cuithein?—Four.

4197. And how many crofters?—Seven crofts.

4198. With how many families?—Eleven families.

4199. Mr Maccallum.—Have any of the other cottars stock like you?—Yes; another cottar has two cows.

4200. What is his name?—Alexander Stewart.

4201. Does he pay rent to the township?—Yes.

Malcolm Martin.

MALCOLM MARTIN, Crofter, Digg (40)—examined.

4202. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Digg?—Yes.

4203. What rent do you pay?—£6, 4s.

4204. What was your old rent?—£10, 5s, but it was £12, 15s. before that. The tacksman charged us that.

Staffin, Skye. Malcolm Martin.

4205. Your acreage is given as 4 acres 1 rood 26 poles arable, 2 acres 4 poles outrun, and 546 township grazing. You have come a long way, Mr Martin; what is it you wish particularly to tell us?—There are ten crofts in the township, and eighteen families on these crofts; and they are all broken, except two. There are eight cottars besides.

4206. The place is overcrowded, you mean?—Yes, quite; they are packed like herrings, and they must be shifted from there.

4207. Is the land exhausted?—Quite. I have not got a pound of meal for the past three years, except half a stone of meal.

4208. Is there a universal desire in the township to get relief by new holdings in suitable ground?—Yes. The township is small enough for five. We very much require to be shifted from that place at any rate.

4209. The Chairman.—We will come and see the ground.

John Mackenzie.

JOHN MACKENZIE, Factor, Kilmuir (42)—examined.

4210. The Chairman.—We said we would hear you to-day, Mr Mackenzie?—The statement that I am to offer is for the whole estate of Kilmuir, comprising a portion in the parish of Snizort, and the whole parish of Kilmuir. I beg to offer to the Commission a few observations regarding the Kilmuir estate, for which I am factor now for the last six years. 'The population 'of the estate is 3074, and the total area, comprising 'the whole of the parish of Kilmuir and that portion of 'Snizort parish north of Glen Hinisdale river, is about '45,000 acres. With reference to the division of this 'land there are 311 full crofts occupied by 331 individual 'names appearing in the rent roll. There are also 49 'divided crofts, occupied by 100 individuals, who are 'liable for rent to the proprietor. The increase in the 'number of names in the full crofts above the number of 'crofts is owing to a number of these being joint-tenants. 'The same remark applies to the divided crofts. The 'area of the estate at present under crofters is 24,332 'acres, of which there are about 2000 acres under 'cultivation. All the crofters, with very few exceptions, 'were dealt with by the Crofters Commission, about six 'years ago, and got fair rents fixed. The whole arrears 'dealt with then and since amounted to £7011, of 'which amount £2411 were ordered to be paid, 'cancelling £4600. I have a detailed statement show-'ing the fair rents, and the arrears (both commission 'and fair rent) due in each crofting township at 15th 'inst. There are thirty-five townships, and if you think 'the statement is too long to read now I will hand it in'

4211. If you please, just hand it in, and it will suffice:— Staffin, Skye. John Mackenzie.

KILMUIR ESTATE OFFICE, UIG, SKYE, N.B., 15*th April* 1893.

affin, Skye. — — ın ckenzie.

'As I stated before, there are 431 individuals on the 'rent roll, and of these only fifty-six are clear of arrears. 'There are eight large farms on the estate, occupied by 'seven tenants, with a total area of 19,715 acres, rented 'at £1790. There are eight other smaller holdings, 'such as inn, mills, &c., with an area of 881 acres, rented 'at £317, 9s. I have a Report by Mr Taylor on 'farms of £100 and upwards of rent, shall I be allowed 'to read it.'

4212. If you think it is necessary. But if you desire it to be evidence you will require to examine Mr Taylor himself. Any statement of that sort must come from the individual who prepared it.—It is signed by him.

4213. No doubt; but there may be questions put, and I think you had better retain the statement in the meantime?—Very good, I shall resume my own statement. 'There are not what may 'be called large farms on the Kilmuir estate, seeing the 'area of the largest is not above 4000 acres. In 'pointing out objections why any of these farms should 'not be cut down, I propose to ask Mr Taylor, land 'surveyor, Ebost, to appear before your Commission, 'and produce a statement prepared by him in which 'some of these objections are brought out. I may 'further state that while the crofters are in possession 'of 24,332 acres, they only pay on an average for same, 'rent of about 1s. 7d. per acre, while the large farmers 'pay about 1s. 10d. per acre. The crofters have under 'cultivation about 2000 acres, and the large farmers 'somewhat less than 400 acres. This is a clear indica-'tion that the latter are able to pay a higher rent for 'land which is under grass. I have had repeated con-'versations with the large farmers on this point, and 'they invariably stated that cultivation on their part 'was a necessity. The most of the land I know is 'fertile, and will compare favourably with any part of 'Skye, but the climate is so very unfavourable to 'cultivation in the West Highlands that even when 'there is a prospect of securing a fine crop of oats 'at the beginning of harvest that prospect is often 'blighted by soaking rains and wind storms. Some-'times the grain is thrashed off before being cut, or 'otherwise soaked with rain in the stooks until half 'rotten, and rarely is a crop secured without being 'more or less damaged in this manner. I am also of 'opinion that the withdrawal of the old arable land 'from the sheep farms would result in the upper 'portions not being of much value. In point of fact 'even as at present, the large farmers have to send 'their hoggs to the low country for wintering, for the 'purpose of allowing sufficient wintering for the stock 'at home. I would also point out the large values of 'stocks of sheep farms, and that stock is always taken 'over by the proprietor or the incoming tenant, at a 'figure much higher than that stock would fetch in the 'open market. If sheep farms are handed over to 'crofters, provision should be made for taking stocks 'also off the proprietor's hands, otherwise the proprietors 'would lose heavily, not only on stocks, but also on 'lands given over to crofters, who could not properly 'stock them at the time, and would consequently have 'to fall into arrears of rent. There is no stock so suit-'able for the land as that which is reared on it, and 'managed by a practical sheep farmer, and if that 'stock was once removed from the ground it is a question whether the same class of stock could ever be 'got up again by crofters. My point of argument is, 'that the existing superior class of sheep stock should 'be retained on the ground. Mr Baird, the late pro-'prietor, last year conceded large portions of the farm 'of Monkstadt and Sartil to the crofters. The crofters 'were willing to take the land, but not the sheep stock 'thereon, but the proprietor, wishing to meet the views 'of the Kilmuir tenants as far as possible, agreed to 'clear the stock of the ground. He had to pay to Mr 'Ferguson, the out-going tenant, who was then tenant 'of Monkstadt, for a restricted number of the sheep 'stock the sum of £770, as per valuation. It was 'found, however, that over sixty of those who took 'shares in the hill had not a hoof to put on the ground, 'and on this state of matters being represented to Mr 'Baird he agreed to give each of the latter three sheep 'with lambs, so as to give them a start. The sheep were 'to be paid in three yearly instalments, and to this 'arrangement the crofters agreed, no interest to be 'paid. But when the first instalment became due, 'they intimated that they could not meet the demand, 'and on this being brought under Mr Baird's notice he 'agreed to make a gift of the sheep to the crofters at 'a cost of over £400. If the sheep cleared off this 'ground had been sent to the market, the loss would 'probably have been between £200 and £300 of the '£770. The same result would, I have no doubt, apply 'to all other lands in Skye similarly granted. This 'and many other instances which might be cited proves 'that without money advances the crofters, as a whole, 'are unable to stock new holdings. I may further 'state regarding the number of changes that have taken 'place on this estate during the last 150 years, the 'townships shifting back and forwards, that in 1733 'and 1751 there were thirteen farms held by tacksmen 'which are now occupied by crofters. I have a copy 'of the records of Lord Macdonald's estate on the 'subject, and I may mention the names:—Bornaskitaig, 'Solitote, Connista, Upper Kendrom, Lower Kendrom, 'Balvicquien, Glenigle, Sourby, Garros, Stenscholl, 'Lealt, Garrafad, and Culnacnock.'

Staffin, Skye. — John Mackenzie.

4214. Does that conclude your statement?—Yes.

4215. That statement was prepared by yourself?—By myself solely.

4216. Are you of opinion that a number of the townships located in the vicinity of where we are sitting are congested?—Yes, in some cases they are; it is not altogether the fault of the landlord.

4217. I am not suggesting that; but, from whatever cause, a number of the townships round where we are sitting are congested?—To a certain extent.

4218. And the land is exhausted?—The land is exhausted in this manner, that it is not worked as we think it ought to be.

4219. Again, whatever the cause, de facto, the land is exhausted?—The land is practically ruined; the mode of cultivation has ruined the land entirely, in my opinion.

4220. It is impossible for the occupants of these subjects, the cottars and crofters, to obtain a living from the croft alone?—They could not obtain a living with this mode of cultivation, and I am not aware that there is a croft on the estate that would uphold a family without outside earnings.

4221. Are you of opinion, speaking of this locality, that crofts could be worked so as to support a man with his wife and family if the land was properly worked; or are you of opinion that even although the land were better worked than it is, and as well as it could be, it would fail to support them without extraneous assistance?—Even although it was well worked.

4222. What is your remedy for this undesirable state of matters?—The remedy is not very easy. Even supposing there were new holdings, there would require to be a selected class of tenants to work them on an improved system, and perhaps there would be a difficulty,—you might go to a township and select perhaps two or three that were practical men, and find that they would not go. I am only making the assertion that perhaps they would not be willing to do it.

4223. But what is your remedy for this state of matters?—I think in any case, whatever holdings they have, they should follow a system of rotation.

4224. But you admit that that would not cure the disease, it would only palliate it. What is your remedy?—The croft would require to be a very large one to support a tenant's family.

4225. What size of a croft would you indicate?—I would indicate, even with a croft of the size I am going to speak of, that they would even have to make some efforts in getting outside aid in one shape or another.

4226. What size of croft?—From £20 to £30 of rent.

4227. What area of arable do you give for, say, a rent of £20?—I would expect that out of a £20 croft the holder would be about £40 to the good, after paying the rent, for his own work to clothe and feed his family.

Staffin, Skye. — John Mackenzie.

4228. What is your area arable for such a croft?—I would require at least 30 acres arable.

4229. And what grazing?—About 150 sheep.

4230. And cattle?—Yes, about eight or nine and their followers.

4231. One horse or two?—One and a pony.

4232. What strength would you require to work that?—There would require to be a family of three or four to work it.

4233. Father and two sons?—Yes; but they would do other work as well, because, for some months of the year, the croft would not require their assistance.

4234. But I am assuming they are able to live by the holding; would you expect that a man with the aid of two sons could work that holding without hired aid?—I think he would.

4235. I suppose you concede that such holdings as you are describing could be got in the lands we have been hearing so much about?—Yes, but not many of them; there might be a few.

4236. Would not there be as many as would operate a considerable relief to the congested district?—I am not aware that it would remedy a congested district at all, not the one half of them.

4237. Then what is your cure for the disease, or do you say there is no cure?—I have been thinking over that very often, and I have come to the conclusion that I have just to keep silent upon the point.

4238. Because you have no suggestion to offer?—When making schemes on paper, and going over them days afterwards, I found they came far short of what I expected when I was making them.

4239. But you see we are appointed to inquire into this matter with a view to find a remedy, if remedy there be, and you are a practical man from whom we are delighted to receive assistance.—I should be very glad to give you all the assistance in my power.

4240. You say there are 311 full crofts?—Yes.

4241. Don't you think, taking all these farms, and leaving out of view for a moment the question of material damage, adequate room could be found for at least 100 of these crofters?—Yes, perhaps it could.

4242. Would that not operate a considerable relief to the congested district?—It would; but perhaps in a year or two the same district might become congested again.

4243. But perhaps not?—It has occurred in the past, and from the past we can judge what the future will be.

4244. You have dealt a good deal with the question of material damage, the effect that would be brought about upon the farms we have heard mentioned?—In a general way I did.

4245. You are aware of the terms of the remit to us?—I am.

4246. The terms of the remit are 'to inquire whether 'any, and if any, what land in the counties mentioned, 'now occupied for grazing, not in the occupation of 'crofters or other small tenants, is capable of being 'cultivated to profit or otherwise advantageously 'occupied by them?'—Yes.

4247. You see the question of material damage to holdings, which was so prominently before us in the Crofters Commission, is not made part of the terms of the remit?—I know.

4248. You are quite well aware of that?—I am quite well aware of it.

4249. You made reference, and quite fairly, to the arrears which have arisen. The present arrears amount to £3591, 14s. 8d., including Commission arrears and subsequent arrears?—Yes.

4250. Does it accord with your feeling that the failure of the crofters to pay the Commission arrears, and the growth of subsequent arrears, tend to prove the utter inadequacy of the holdings to enable the crofters to get along and pay even a fair rent? or do you take a different view?—I don't quite follow the question.

4251. You have before you £3591 of arrears, made up of Commission and subsequent arrears. Would these arrears tend, in your opinion, to show that the holdings the crofters have are utterly inadequate to enable them to get along and pay even a fair rent?—No, I take a different view of it.

Staffin, Skye. — John Mackenzie.

4252. What is your view?—My view is that a croft, say, of £5, might be rented fair enough, according to the holding; and yet, even supposing the crofter had his holding for nothing, it would not support his family. The proprietor expects to get a fair rent for the holding, but that does not imply that the holding is able to support a family.

4253. I see. If you had the power now, you would not plant crofters at all upon such holdings as are met here?—No, I would not with such small holdings.

4254. Now you were drawing a comparison a little while ago in your statement between the large farmer and the crofter tenant. You are aware that the landlord makes all improvements on the large farms?—Yes, he does, to a certain extent.

4255. To a material extent?—It does not require very much improvement; open drains and the like of that do not come to very much.

4256. So far as material improvement is needed for the large farm, is it not the fact that it is done by the landlord?—That is a matter of agreement between the tenant and the landlord.

4257. But is not it the general agreement that the landlord does it?—No; sometimes if the farmer makes improvements, at his out-going he gets the value of them.

4258. No doubt; but the original outlay for improvement is in the main made by the landlord?—According to the present leases, for the improvements that may be agreed upon, and done by the tenant, he gets compensation at his out-going.

4259. That is quite true; but are there not a number of material improvement, generally speaking, made by the landlord?—What kind of improvements?

4260. I would say all improvements.—It is a matter of agreement between the tenant and the landlord, very often under the Agricultural Holdings Act, where the tenant gets compensation for his improvements.

4261. Is it not a matter of notoriety to all those acquainted with agricultural affairs that the crofter makes his own improvements, and builds his own houses; whereas the large farmer in the general case makes no improvements, these being made by the landlord?—The large farmers do make improvements.

4262. Is not this the fact that the houses in large farms belong to the landlord?—Yes, it is.

4263. And the houses upon Skye crofts are built by the tenants?—Yes.

4264. Have you allowed for that distinction in the comparison you drew between the two subjects?—No, there is no comparison but that of rent.

4265. I think you are quite right to make the candid admission.—When a tenant enters upon a farm he is supposed to get the farm buildings in good tenantable condition.

4266. He gets it as a going concern?—Certainly.

4267. With arable land, and buildings and fences and everything?—Yes.

4268. And he proceeds to work it?—Yes.

4269. The crofter gets or does not get according to circumstances a very small piece of arable, and he proceeds to take in land and build his house?—That has been the case formerly.

4270. And especially in Skye; and is it not the case that in Skye there is not such a thing as a crofter's lease?—Not that I know of.

4271. Well, I must refer for a moment, to the matter already dealt with; have you no practical suggestion to offer to us as a remedy for what is admittedly on your own part an undesirable state of matters?—There is something that I have in my mind, though I am not sure if it would work; if the place were to be bought up by Government.

4272. Well?—And managed.

4273. As a Government farm?—Yes.

4274. The whole island?—Yes, the whole island; that is the only practical way I can see out of the difficulty. I only give that suggestion with reticence.

4275. But I suppose you agree, whether it would be adequate or not, that the opening up by a proper tribunal of considerable portions of the better arable and grazing lands of these farms to the crofters here would produce an enormous relief?—It would, but I am afraid that it would not work, unless there was Government intervention in the matter; my experience is that it would not work without strict rules and Government intervention in the manner in which it would be worked.

4276. Why not?—I am afraid it is too much for the estate officials to work the estate.

4277. Why? they are still crofters; they would be still under the Act of Parliament?—I know; but I think I have known the matters.

4278. But explain yourself a little more thoroughly?—I will explain the matter in this sort of way. I find, when an estate official tries to make an agreement about more land or something of that kind, it is a very difficult matter, and it is difficult for the factor to do it satisfactorily; and I found it invariably happened that when the Crofters Commission came they came in as a middleman, and they settled the matter; whether we were pleased or not, the matter had to end there. It is always thought that an estate factor can do more than he has the power to do, or that he is doing less than he ought to do; your lordship may know before now the difficulties an official has to contend with.

4279. Your view is that the intervention of legislation has the effect of crippling the action and authority of the estate management?—That is so.

4280. You are quite entitled to make that observation.

4281. Mr Sutherland.—You made the remark, I think, that the difficulty in giving land arose from the fact that the landlord had to take over the sheep stock already on the holding, or that the crofters would have to do it?—I indicated the heavy loss.

4282. And in the statement you have just read to us you said that the stock is taken over frequently at a higher rate than could be obtained in the open market?—Yes.

4283. How does that come about?—The stock is considerably more valuable than any stock that you could bring in to the land. If you brought in other stock in place of perhaps 2000 sheep, you would have a considerable loss; therefore the stock on the ground is worth a good deal more to the incoming tenant, and practically he could not get on without it.

4284. But I take it that valuations are made by experts in stock?—Yes.

4285. And is not that a circumstance that the expert would be likely to know?—Yes, that is taken into account. I do not consider that it is always fair; I have always contended that it was not fair, the way in which the valuations are taken, but still it is the custom of the country.

4286. The Chairman.—It is often unfair to the landlord?—Yes, and to the incoming tenant also, but it is a necessity; we cannot get out of it.

4287. Mr Sutherland.—You have got no deer forests on your estate, I understand?—No.

4288. But it sometimes happens that a sheep farm has been made into a deer forest?—Yes.

4289. The landlord takes over the stock in that case?—Well, I will tell you; whatever loss he may have on that, the landlord expects to regain by the increase of rents he gets. It is sometimes a tremendous gain that he gets.

4290. That is a great inducement to convert farms into forests?—Certainly. I know a place at Badenoch where a sheep farm was paying only £800, and it is now paying £5000 as a forest.

4291. Mr Sutherland.—The Chairman asked you a question in regard to congestion on population, and you admitted that it was an evil?—So it is.

4292. This congestion, you say, might occur again?—Yes.

4293. If the same conditions existed that existed in the past?—Yes, even now I believe that the places are getting congested.

4294. Congestion arises, as you are no doubt aware, from two agencies, the one, circumscribing the land available; and the other, the natural increase of mankind?—Certainly.

4295. Which of these could be removed?—It is a very difficult question, but I may perhaps explain it more fully to the Commission. I know that some here are pretty well acquainted with the explanation, but others perhaps are not. When there is a family on a holding, very often the sons go south, and the daughter may make up with some one and marry. Very often the mother has a great deal of influence with her daughter and her son-in-law, and he will have to get a place in the holding. When the eldest son comes back he is very much disappointed, he cannot be put out of his holding, and the result is, that instead of one tenant on the holding, you have three or four or five.

4296. Is there any tendency to subdivide upon the large holdings?—Yes.

4297. Has anyone ever subdivided Scorrybreck farm, or Monkstadt?—I don't know, indeed. If you put the same population on, I have no doubt there would be subdivision again.

4298. Just so, that is my point exactly. But the fact that there is only one of a population on an area of a thousand acres is not the operation of a natural law but the operation of an artificial law?—Oh, it would never amount with one tenant in such a large place as either of these farms.

4299. But you would expect that in any legislation, if legislation ever takes place upon this in future, that stringent rules should be made against subdivision?—Unless that was done, it would be of no use, in my opinion.

4300. Now I have seen — and I don't know whether you have — estates in which it was prevented?—Well, it is prohibited on all estates, I don't know anywhere it is not. But who will prevent it?

4301. Eviction would prevent it?—Eviction? Yes, and then there would be a great cry in the country.

4302. What I mean to point out is that eviction has been resorted to in order to collect rents which were afterwards proved to be wrong rents, and yet it was not resorted to in order to prevent subdivision. Could an estate or an official have a larger power in his hands than the evicting of a man and turning him out of his house?—That is rather an abstruse question which I don't see the use of going into. There is a strong feeling between a family and the married daughter, and it would require a very inhuman factor to interfere with family relations.

4303. I sympathise with you in that feeling, but I wish to point out that other arrangements which were not so beneficial to the people were carried out?—It would be an extreme point if the factor were to do that.

4304. I grant you that, but it has happened?—I am not aware that it has ever happened.

4305. I mean for rent?—Oh, for rent. There have been no evictions since I came to this estate.

4306. But you are aware of such?—From hearsay.

4307. As to the arrears, may I ask you if there are any arrears of rent due by large farmers?—Very little.

4308. Have they got reductions, in your estimation, equal to those of the crofters?—Well, I think they have, according to the way they were rented. I know, as a fact, that some of the farm rents were put up to a very high figure.

4309. In the same proportion as the crofters?—Much higher. Although they did get in some cases more reductions perhaps than the Crofters Commission gave, that would not suffice for the previous increase of rent.

4310. What, may I ask, was the percentage of reduction given by the Crofters Commission on the Kilmuir estate?—About 37½ per cent., but some crofters got over 60 per cent.

4311. Mr Macleod.—You gave us your authority for the area of the large farms on the estate: I did not catch your authority for the areas of the crofter holdings?—The Crofters Commission surveyor. That is according to the areas supplied to the Crofters Commission.

4312. Who did that work?—The same man.

4313. Mr Taylor?—Yes.

4314. You agreed with the most of the witnesses we have heard to-day that if it was thought expedient to form new holdings it would be necessary that the people should get assistance to stock them?—I am sure it would. There is nothing that cripples a man going into a new holding like restricted capital. I think between £200 and £300 would be little enough for them to start a new holding with.

4315. Of a loan?—Of a loan. They would have a better chance of repaying it, because the produce would come in at once.

4316. But your grand solution of this very difficult question is the nationalisation of the land?—To buy the land.

4317. That the Government should buy the land?—I am only giving that as my general opinion.

4318. One of the witnesses here to-day, a teacher from Valtos, expressed himself in favour of a system by which the rent should terminate in a period of years. Would you agree with him in that?—The Government might formulate a scheme of that kind.

4319. But you would not agree with it it the land were to remain in the landlord's hands?—I could not agree with it in that sort of way.

4320. If the Government owned the land you would not object to it?—I assume that the landlord who has paid for the land is entitled to work it in the same way in which he got it, unless there were to be an intervention of legislation.

4321. Then about the crofters' rents: the total crofter rental, I think you said, was £1896, 8s. 9d.?—The crofter rental.

4322. And they are due at the present moment £1403, 3s. 5d. of arrears on the fair rent, leaving out of view the arrears ordered to be paid by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

4323. That is to say that, up to the present moment, they are not due a year's rent?—On the average.

4324. Mr Munro.—You have favoured the Commission with an exceedingly clear statement, but I understood you to say a little ago, in answer to Mr Sutherland, that the average of arrears cancelled was about 37 per cent?—Not of arrears, but of reduction given on the rent.

4325. Now, don't you think that an attempt to exact such an excessive rent for a long period of years must have told on the position of the crofters, even up to the present time?—Yes, it might for a few years, but the last eight or nine years have been very unfavourable to crofters. The price of corn and oats and straw and of stock is not so favourable as when I came to the estate.

4326. I think you will allow that the long succession of oppression on the crofters, as represented by the attempt to exact more than the fair rent, must tell upon them to the present time—it is not easy getting over that?—Well, perhaps it is not a direct answer, but I know for a fact that crofts that were twelve years ago paying perhaps double the present rent were paying the crofter better than they are now.

4327. In answer to the Chairman I understood you to say that you deprecated the continued interference of the State between the landlord and the tenant?—Yes.

4328. I have not finished my question. You led us to understand that it would rather interfere with the influence that the factor would have over the tenants in subsequent dealings with them; is not that so?—I say it is much easier to work by the intervention of the Crofters Commission between the landlord and the tenants.

4329. To what do you attribute the strong feeling of discontent among the crofters?—When a thing does not pay a man it always makes him discontented.

4330. Mr Maccallum.—I think, Mr Mackenzie, there is a good deal of agreement between you and the witnesses that came before us to-day; you agree that the crofts just now are too small?—I do.

4331. And that was really the evidence that they all gave. But they pointed to this as a remedy, that it would be a relief if medium-sized holdings were available; do you not agree with them there too?—I quite understand it would be a relief, but I am afraid they might become congested again in a very short time, and there would be no remedy to prevent that.

4332. But as a matter of fact, are not the crofters themselves against subdivision?—Yes, I know they are very much against it, but, somehow, it does happen that one or two or three in the township must needs go on with it.

4333. But as a matter of fact they are very much against subdivision, and would they not be quite willing to agree to any restriction against it?—I think they should.

4334. And they would?—Well, I think the evil is very much seen now, and I think perhaps it would open their eyes to look to that matter in future. But I am afraid it would require some stringent law.

4335. Has the Crofters Act not provided against subdividing a croft?—It has.

4336. So that now the subdivision is not going on?—Well, in some cases, I am afraid it has gone on.

4337. There is a restriction there, however, against subdivision?—There is a restriction.

4338. That operates pretty successfully against subdivision?—It does operate to a certain extent, for if the proprietor proceeds against them they may lose their fixity of tenure; but to bring people into court is not always an agreeable task, not to speak of the heavy expense it would be.

4339. But if small holdings were available, don't you think there would be no danger of subdividing?—I am afraid there would always be the danger.

4340. Although there is such a strong feeling against it?—Yes, that is my experience.

4341. You have had no trouble in the management of middle-sized holdings, but I daresay you have not had much experience in regard to them?—Oh yes, middle-sized holdings are much more easily worked.

4342. The tenants are no trouble to the proprietor or factor?—Not much at all.

4343. And when any of them falls vacant there is a good demand for them?—A good demand.

4344. But then the large holdings have given a good deal of trouble?—A good deal of trouble: there is great difficulty in arranging for very large holdings.

4345. And a great loss arising to the proprietor by having to take the stock?—A great loss.

4346. Don't you think then it would be a profit to the proprietor if these medium-sized holdings were provided?—Yes, if they were of the value of £20, £30, £40, or £50; I think an estate would be much better to have holdings of that description. I am quite of that opinion, and I think the evidence will bear it out.

4347. And you think that large farmers just now are not profitably occupying their holdings?—Not at present, but two or three years ago they were.

4348. Was the price of wool pretty low even two years ago?—Yes, it was, but the price of stock was much higher.

4349. But don't the farmers depend more upon wool than upon stock?—Yes, that was the cause of lowering the rents so much.

4350. That the wool came down?—Yes.

4351. And has it been low for several years?—Yes.

4352. Then with regard to the arrears on the crofts just now, you are aware that they have experienced several bad seasons?—Yes, the last season was a very bad one, but they have been improving I know since the Commission was here fixing rents. I know that twenty or thirty new houses of good substantial character have been built, and the improvement was considerable up to last year.

4353. But last year was not an average year?—No, it was not.

4354. And you think that that has a good deal to do with their having fallen into arrear?—Yes.

4355. The Chairman.—Are you of opinion, Mr Mackenzie, that if a sufficiently stringent law were enacted to prevent the subdivision of those larger holdings, one of your principal difficulties in the way of the creation of these holdings would be removed?—It would.

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayrshire, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
Rev. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
JOHN MACLEOD, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

John Macpherson.

JOHN MACPHERSON, Glendale (58).
(Examined partly in English and partly through a Gaelic Interpreter.)

4356. The Chairman.—What is the fair rent of your holding?—£3.

4357. And what was your rent before the Crofters Commission visited Glendale?—£4, 4s.

4358. I see that your acreage is 4 acres 1 rood 35 poles arable, 2 acres 2 roods 37 poles outrun, 689 acres common pasture, including 116 taken from the farm of Waterstein in 1884, divided into 17 full shares, all of which were dealt with by the Crofters Commission in 1889. Before proceeding further, I think it right to narrate, for the benefit of those in this quarter of the island, the precise terms of the remit made to us. We are instructed to inquire whether any, and if any, what land—in the present case in the county of Inverness and the island of Skye—now occupied for the purposes of a deer forest, grouse moor, or other sporting purposes, or for grazing, not in the occupation of crofters or other small tenants, is capable of being cultivated to profit or otherwise advantageously occupied by crofters or other small tenants. Now, you see exactly what the point is we have to deal with in listening to the evidence that may be adduced. You have a statement, I think, to make. Is it in Gaelic?—In English. It is from the people in the district.

4359. And you represent Glendale?—Yes, as one.

4360. Do you represent the whole of Glendale?—No, there are other representatives as well as myself.

4361. Which part of Glendale do you particularly represent?—Upper and Lower Milivaigs.

4362. How many crofters are there there?—There are thirty-three crofters altogether.

4363. And how many cottars?—There are only two or three cottars altogether. I think there may be four.

4364. Now, would you kindly read your statement.

Unto the Honourable the Royal Commission, 1892.

The statement of the people of the crofting townships of Upper and Lower Milivaig, Borrodale, Hamaravirein, Lephin, Holmisdale, Fasach, Glasvein, Colbost, Skinidin, and Ramsaig, on the estate of the Rev. Hugh A. Macpherson; and of Ferrinviquire, Galtrigil, Borreraig, and Husabost, on the estate of Mr Nicol Martin, both in the parish of Duirinish.

Present Position of Townships.

All the above-mentioned townships suffer from congestion of population. The holdings are all nearly of the same size, and to put each township into anything like a comfortable position, two-thirds of the tenants would be required to be removed.

There are thus 181 crofters in the above townships, where only 66 would be able to live in tolerable comfort. The number of cottar families is not larger than a prudent people should be prepared to bear the burden of, so long as Providence leaves helpless widows and people labouring under infirmities on the mercy of their more fortunate neighbours, and we do not complain of this burden. At the same time, any cottar that is willing to take land has as much right to get it as any crofter.

This overcrowding of a small peasant tenantry on the poorest portions of the estate is a policy for which only the landlords are responsible, who, by clearing the native population from the fertile portions of the island, have created some of the largest sheep-runs in Scotland which are to be found to-day, huge wildernesses alongside of overcrowded crofting townships. As one illustration of this evil policy out of the mass, it may be mentioned that within the memory of some of us the two Milivaigs in Glendale were in possession of eight tenants each, who were very comfortable with their stock of horses, cattle, and sheep. To-day there are thirty-three tenants. This increase of tenants in the two Milivaigs, as well as in other townships in Glendale, was caused when the Bracadale evictions were carried out by Macleod of Macleod, to provide large farms for his factor, Mr Gibbon, and other southern capitalists. Those evictions by Macleod of his old own native tenants have made his estate in Bracadale practically a desert, and are responsible for the overcrowding of the estate of his neighbouring proprietors. As soon as Macleod overcrowded Glendale, he parted with the Glen, and his successors, as proprietors of Glendale, have to bear the odium of his cruel mismanagement.

AVAILABLE LANDS IN OUR DISTRICT.

Rev. Hugh A. Macpherson's Estate.

The following farms are on this estate, and in each of them there is suitable and available land, both arable and grazing, for the creation of new holdings, and the extension of existing crofting townships.

(1) Ramsaig, where there were twelve families when Macleod sold this estate, all of whom, with the exception of two, were subsequently evicted by Sir John Macpherson-Macleod, the new proprietor.

(2) Lowergill, where there were twelve tenants, all of whom were cleared.

(3) Dibidale and Ollisdale, where four tenants could live comfortably.

(4) Waterstein, which joins with the two Milivaigs, and where six tenants could live comfortably, all these are in the hands of the proprietor, besides the farm of Hamara, which is attached to the shooting lodge, and where there were three tenants, and which would be suitable for the enlargement of the neighbouring crofts.

As showing the disposition of the landlord, it may be mentioned that the two Milivaigs duly applied to the Crofters Commission for Waterstein as an extension of their townships; and when the case came before the Commission, the proprietor, instead of meeting the people in whole or in part, put every conceivable objection and difficulty in the way.

Mr Nicol Martin's Estate.

The following farm is on this estate, and available for the enlargement of existing crofting holdings.

Scorr, where there were six tenants fifty-five years ago.

Besides this, Mr Nicol Martin is tenant of the large farm of Claigean, which he rents at £600 from Macleod of Macleod. In this farm over 20 acres are cultivated, but there are over 200 acres of old arable land in it, and a considerable amount of land that crofters would reclaim, besides excellent pasture. These farms, if given to the people, would settle the land question on Mr Nicol Martin's estate.

As an illustration of Macleod of Macleod's policy of consolidation by eviction, we may mention that there are more crofters in Glendale alone—an area of about 15 square miles—than on the whole of Macleod of Macleod's property from Claigean to Soay, a distance of about 50 miles long, embracing sheep farms containing, some of them, between 50 and 100 square miles.

Our prayer and purpose is that these waste lands should, in the public interest, be opened up by Parliament, and restored to the people on fair and equitable terms.

Signed on behalf of the Crofters in the above-mentioned townships.

John Macpherson, Crofter, Lower Milivaig.
Neil Macpherson, Crofter, Upper Milivaig.
Roderick Campbell, Crofter, Borrodale.
John Campbell, Crofter, Hamara.
John Maclean, Crofter, Fasach.
Neil Mackay, Fisherman, Colbost.
Allan Stewart, Fisherman, Colbost.
Peter Macdonald, Crofter, Holmisdale.
Norman Ross, Crofter, Glasphein.

4365. Is your signature adhibited to that?—Yes.

4366. I take it you have mentioned all the old townships to which you invited our attention at present?—Yes; I mentioned the townships which are suitable for giving new holdings to crofters.

4367. And you have mentioned all the land of the kind that you are anxious we should inspect?—Yes.

4368. Have you any addition to make verbally to the written statement?—Yes, on other points.

4369. We shall be glad to hear what you have to say; but you know the terms of reference, and you quite understand the matter which brings us here, and to which, as far as possible, we must confine ourselves?—I know very well that there are too many people in Glendale.

4370. I think you have brought that out quite distinctly in the written statement?—Yes; and those few townships in Glendale would not serve them all. There are only four altogether—Waterstein, Ramasaig, Lowergill, Dibidale, and Hamara. These are all the townships in Glendale that could be given to crofters. But I think the people of Glendale should be migrated to Bracadale, where they were sent from forty-five years ago or more.

4371. Migrated to Bracadale?—Yes; even in the two Milivaigs; where I am there are only ten tenants who were brought up in Glendale; the other twenty-three were migrated from other parts of the Macleod estate to Glendale in 1845.

4372. Is it within your knowledge that there is land available in Bracadale for the purpose in view?—Yes; I have been through most of Bracadale.

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Macpherson.

4373. Do you know Bracadale very well?—Yes.

4374. And when you say that certain persons should be migrated to Bracadale, do you mean that there is land there which would be suitable for them?—I am quite sure of it.

4375. And an adequate extent of land—a sufficient amount of it?—I think more than what they would ask for.

4376. Both old arable and grazing?—Yes. But I believe there is more pasture in Bracadale and in the whole of Skye than there is of arable land, because the land of Skye never was cultivated right, for the people never got a chance to cultivate the land. The people were only machines in the hands of a proprietor, making a green spot here and there for grazing, and they never got time or hold of the land to cultivate it right; and even in Glendale—it is very queer how we are treated in the Highlands. I will challenge any landlord that was in Glendale if he has ever spent a shilling or a day of labour to improve the crofts or anything in the possession of crofters in Glendale. Therefore any substance or any good in the land of Glendale was put into the land by the people and not by the landlords. They have never spent a shilling on the land except on their own improvements,—such as lodges or the like of that.

4377. A point I am anxious to come to is this—Does it consist with your knowledge that there is suitable land in Bracadale for migrating a large number of families?—Yes, I think so.

4378. Mr Sutherland.—One question I should like to ask with regard to the desire of the people to take new holdings or enlarge their present holdings. You are perfectly satisfied, from your knowledge of the people, that they are very anxious to have enlargement of their holdings?—I have found them that from the beginning. A few, from want of power or want of means, may not be willing, as they do not see their way to do it; but the most of the people are willing.

4379. And what is your knowledge with regard to their ability to take such holdings?—I know that they are very poor, and that it is not by any fault of their own they have been made poor.

4380. But is there a large proportion, or a considerable proportion, that would be in a position to take a new holding?—Well, I believe there are some of them, and some would do part of it. But the Highlanders are very willing and able to work; the children are very kind to their parents; and if they will get hold of the land, I am not afraid that they would stock it in time.

4381. Generally speaking, that is your opinion?—That is my opinion, and I am sure of it. Of course, there are hard times among all classes. The chief complaint among the Highlanders is the want of land and the smallness of their holdings.

4382. I have no desire to go into some of the other matters that you refer to, except in order to clear up a point with regard to how they succeeded in the new holdings when they were transferred from Bracadale to Glendale. Did they get any assistance of any kind?—Never, that I heard of.

4383. And you think that if they were transferred to better land, under better arrangements, there would be still less need for helping them?—Yes. Once they got into that place, because Bracadale is a better place than Glendale.

4384. Another point. You state that the capabilities of Skye are not to be judged by the amount of old arable land we see. You say that there was no encouragement given to cultivate land in the olden times. And you think that the proportion of arable land could be increased?—To double what it is.

4385. As a rule, the smaller tenants, or crofters, as they are now called, were they always improving tenants in the Highlands?—I do not understand the question.

4386. Was it the crofters that made all the improvements in the land in the old times?—I think nearly the most, if not the whole of it; what is in Glendale at all events.

4387. I may refer to what was said by a gentleman who may be taken to be an authority, that when sheep farming was introduced into the Highlands, the area under agriculture went down. Do you agree with that view? He said that the introduction of sheep farming into the Highlands resulted in less land being cultivated than before. Do you agree with that?—Yes, because the sheep were put on all the arable land, and the people have not that land to cultivate. All the good land was taken from the poor people and put under sheep and under fog and heather.

4388. Mr Gordon.—What is the state of your crops here? Can you grow oats to make meal of in this country?—When we went to Milivaig (we were five years out of it), twenty-five years ago, I was making about 6 bolls of meal a year on the croft, and now I can do none, because the croft is too little, and it has been turned every year since, mostly. But now since I began to put it in rotation, it is better.

4389. I do not refer so much to your holding as to the nature of the country. Are the oats grown here of such quality as to make meal of, as a rule?—Yes, they are.

4390. Suppose now you were to give us some opinion about the size of a croft you would suggest?—That is a thing not easy going into. There are different kinds of land, and the size should be according to the place where the croft is made. There are some parts of Skye where I would rather have 2 acres than 3 in another place.

4391. But what I want to get at from you is whether you would prefer a croft of 2 acres with hill grazing, or a croft of 10 acres, or even a little larger, with hill grazing,—which would you think best for the country?—I know small holdings will never do. I think, to get the country into right order, that there should be two or three different sizes. There should be a size of £12 to £15, and as low as £5 or so, and that would give a chance to those who are poor. It would give courage to a man to be trying to get to the top of the pole—to the highest place.

4392. I do not want to tie you to any opinion, but when you speak of a 15-acre croft I should like to get from you what your idea is—whether it should be mainly agricultural—that is arable land, or mainly pastoral. £15 appears to me to be a big rent for a crofter to pay?—Yes.

4393. Would you expect to pay that rent from your arable land or from sheep?—It would be paid from all—between cattle, sheep, and the cultivation of the croft.

4394. How many cows would you suppose a man with £15 of rent to have?—I do not go as high as that, although I mentioned that it was in a mistake I said so. I only meant that there might be different sizes of crofts.

4395. That is to say, from a small croft up to a small farm?—But I think six or seven cows, and in a place where there was no other help than the land, a croft would require from 80 to 100 sheep and a horse.

4396. You tell us you have over a hundred crofters in your part of the country?—Yes.

4397. And you have room for sixty-six, I think you say?—Yes.

4398. Suppose you move the other forty crofters to Bracadale, would you not encroach upon the Bracadale people? Are there not more people there already that would require the land?—All the people in any country do not want to have land.

4399. But I am afraid if you go up to the extent of a hundred sheep, you would not find anything in Skye sufficient for the families?—There will be quite as much as the people will ask for; because all the people will not ask for land. There are different methods of living in Skye as well as in other places, and old people may not want the same as young people.

4400. Well, you have a beautiful country here for fishing, with good natural harbours. Is there a number of your countrymen who would take naturally to fishing on the new crofts?—I believe there is; but they never got the advantage of that, because we never got a harbour.

4401. But you have a beautiful harbour here made by Providence?—Yes. But it is very far from the fishing ground. In other places they have got harbours handy to the fishing grounds, and there is not a place here to hold the boats either.

4402. But there is no doubt that if you were to get a part of the population to adopt fishing that would be a great relief?—What I would like to be done is this: that the law of Great Britain should open a way to people to live in every way, and not in any one way; that they should not be forced or kept down in poverty all their life-time, and that they should be allowed to get on in every way as they are in other places. I have not the least doubt, if Skye was rightly served in land and in sea, the people of Skye would be as well off and as content as any people in Scotland.

4403. Mr Macleod.—You spoke about the proportion of those who would require to be taken out of Glendale to leave you comfortable as two-thirds of the present people?—Yes, if they were all going to live upon the land.

4404. Yes, if the holdings were to be self-supporting. Now, have you any idea of the proportion of them that would be able to stock new holdings?—Well, I believe that there is not many of them.

4405. Not many?—No.

4406. But you think there is a good proportion, who, if they got some assistance, would be able to help themselves to a certain degree?—Yes, and I do not see why they should not get it here as well as in other parts of the kingdom. The people of Skye were trying to improve the power and the wealth of Great Britain, as well as any other part, and why should they not get £150 for home as well as for going abroad.

4406*a*. Then you think they would have no difficulty, if they got enlarged holdings, in repaying any advances that might be made to them?—No. I have not the least wish that we should keep his own from any body; and this is what I want, I would keep the people from being beggars, so that they would be able to support themselves.

4407. Now the Glendale people, since you have known them, have had their condition improved in some degree. You spoke of your own rent having been reduced from £4, 4s. to £3?—Yes.

4408. Could you tell us whether there has been any improvement in the mode in which land has been cultivated, or any improvement in the people's houses since the passing of the Crofters Act?—Yes, there are nine or ten white houses now in Glendale since the Crofters Act passed, and they are improving their lands, but the most of them are waiting. Their holdings are so small that they are waiting to see if they are to get better ones.

4409. So that you think there would have been even a larger number of houses built, if it was not that the holdings are not worth putting a good house on?—Double. That is the only cause, and the houses were built by their children in the south and abroad, helping their fathers to do it.

4410. Now, about the cultivation of the land, I have no doubt you have had a considerable amount of experience. With regard to that, you have told us already that you believe that the cultivable area in Skye could be greatly enlarged?—Yes, I am sure of it.

4411. Then as to the cultivation in Glendale itself, are the most of the tenants there beginning to put some of their land under grass?—Most of them are.

4412. And you believe that that would go on to a larger extent if their holdings were larger?—Yes, it would. If I was getting a new holding just now, I would keep it as good as it is for ever by keeping it in rotation. There is land in Glendale that was cultivated for fifty and sixty years, never being a year under grass.

4413. Do they grow any turnips?—Yes.

4414. Mr Munro.—From the interesting statement which you have read, I understand that the burden of your complaint is, that at present you are too congested at Glendale, and would like to remove to some less

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Macpherson.

thickly peopled place, such as Bracadale?—Yes, and even Waterstein and these places. If we do not get land added to our holdings, we want to be removed.

4415. You have also told us that in doing so you would expect some assistance?—Yes.

4416. From whom, might I ask, would you expect assistance to come?—If we could get it from the Government it would be the best way to get it.

4417. Now, speaking roughly, to what extent would you expect assistance for such size of crofts as you have named, on the average?—If we had crofts stocked, we would not require very good houses until we should be able to build better ones, and then we would improve the houses ourselves. I do not want the people to go too deep in debt, but I am sure whatever amount they got, they would pay it back if they would unite together in doing so.

4418. I quite appreciate your desire to avoid debt, and I think it is very commendable; but have you ever considered how such a loan can be repaid if made to you, and in what form?—I believe, if I was going to a township, I would appoint a Committee of my neighbours, and I would guarantee all that I would take to the township, and then we would go and change stock, and I would have stock in security for all the money until it was paid.

4419. But when your forefathers were migrated to Glendale, they got no assistance to build their houses?—Nothing, and they have not got land either, they were machines making a green patch here and there, and then put to a new place.

4420. I suppose I am right in saying that you would prefer that they should be sent elsewhere in the island, rather than emigrating the people to other countries?—Much better, and much more honourable to our legislation.

4421. Mr Gordon put a question regarding the quality of the oats you produce, and regarding the produce of meal. Now, supposing you had an enlarged croft, do you think you could produce a better quality of grain?—Yes, but I believe that Skye will never make much profit by grain.

4422. But still you must grow some for the sake of the straw?—Yes, and then for cattle, for sheep, and horses also.

4423. The Chairman.—You mentioned a rent of £6 or £7. Would you tell me in a word what size of holding you would expect in return for a rent of that amount. In the first place, how much arable?—According to where the croft was. There is land up here of such a quality that I would rather have an acre of it than 3 acres elsewhere.

4424. But take the average case, the average rent within the area you have been pointing to?—Yes, but I do not like to interfere with rents at all.

4425. But you mentioned a rent. I am not asking you to interfere with the rents. My question is, giving the rent, what holding would you expect in return for it, how much arable, and how much grazing, or how much stock?—I think I mentioned the stock already.

4426. No, you did not mention the stock in answer to that specific question. You mentioned Ramasaig, Lowergill, Dibidale, and Waterstein. Suppose you had such a croft as you would like to have in one or other of these places for £7, what kind of holding would you expect to obtain?—I cannot answer that question right.

4427. You do not decline to answer it. But we know that you are a man of great experience and ability, and we should like to have the benefit of your experience in this evidence?—Any crofter that was going to make his living upon his croft would require to have from 15 to 20 acres of arable land, that is to say, to be kept in rotation

4428. Now, what stock?—Six cows and followers, and 60 or 70 sheep, and a horse, because there is always more hill pasture on these townships than arable land.

4429. But you think that with a rent of £6 or £7, and a holding of that size in arable and stock, it ought to be self-sustaining; you would expect it to be self-sustaining if you did justice to the holding?—Yes.

4430. And this is the kind of holding which you would like to see multiplied?—Yes.

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Macpherson.

4431. And you are of opinion that there is land suitable for a large number of such holdings?—I am sure of it.

4432. In the districts you have mentioned?—Well, there is not much land in Glendale.

4433. But in the districts you have mentioned?—Yes.

4434. Now, suppose an opportunity were afforded to all the crofters whom you represent to-day to transfer their holdings to such crofts as you have been describing, could they do so without assistance?—No sir, no.

4435. None of them?—Well, I do not know; but one or two might.

4436. But the great majority would require assistance?—Yes, mostly the whole of them.

4437. Could you do it yourself?—Hardly, not without help.

4438. The next question I am going to put has no reference to yourself, but to the general case. What extent of assistance, in your judgment, would your neighbours require?—Some £20, some £30, some £40 or £50, up to £100 I believe.

4439. Would £100 be the maximum?—I believe that there are a few that would ask a little more than that if they had none themselves. £100, I believe, would not do the whole.

4440. They might need £150?—I believe they would; and, as I have said already, I think it would be only right.

4441. That is the meaning you attach to words, which you used before, that you think that Government should open a way for people to live?—Yes.

4442. That is what you mean by that?—Yes.

4443. Mr John Robertson, Factor for Glendale.—I should like to ask where is the capital to come from?—From Government, Mr Robertson, and from friends too; any parties that it would come from in kindness. I know I would get it from friends without going to the Government at all.

4444. Do you know if the tenants in your district are in a position to take more land than they have at present?—I know that they never will get out of the difficulty they are in without more land, and it is the smallness of their holdings that has put them on the rock they are on at present.

4445. Then you depend solely on getting this money from the Government to enable you to take larger holdings?—Yes.

4446. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I should like to be allowed to ask one or two questions on behalf of my father, Macleod of Macleod. Do you know, Mr Macpherson, whether your father was a cottar in Holmisdale, and whether Macleod did not give you a croft at Milivaig?—I don't think my father was a cottar at Holmisdale.

4447–48. The Chairman.—How old were you when your father died?—I was fifteen years of age, but I mind well of being in Holmisdale, and I mind well of being removed from Milivaig to Holmisdale by the tacksman of Orbost; but Glendale was the property of Macleod of Macleod for all that, and they put the people of Orbost to Holmisdale where there was no cultivated land at all. In 1845 Macleod of Orbost owned the farm, and my father got possession of a croft there. There were only eight or nine of the people of Glendale put to Milivaig, but twenty-three were put on from other parts of the Macleod estate.

4449. Mr Reginald Macleod.—My question is, did Macleod or did not Macleod give you a croft in Milivaig?—Yes, he did.

4450. You have said that the rent you think a crofter could afford to pay, living comfortably and fairly, would be from £5 to £7; and you have stated that a croft, such as you desire, should contain from 60 to 70 sheep, 6 cows and their followers, and cover from 15 to 20 acres arable land?—Yes.

4451. Have you any idea what that amount of land is worth in the country if in the hands of an ordinary farmer?—My father and grandfather and great-grandfather were in Milivaig paying rent all their life-time.

Dunvegan, Skye. John Macpherson.

4452–53. I did not ask that question?—Yes; but I am going to add this, they have been paying rents for hundreds of years, and I pray the Commission that if the crofters would get more land, the rent should cease afterwards.

4454. The Chairman.—But there has been a direct question put, which you must endeavour to answer, adding whatever explanation you may think necessary. —Would you please repeat the question.

4455. Mr Reginald Macleod.—You have stated that the croft you deem sufficient for a crofter to occupy should be able to carry from 60 to 70 sheep, 6 cows and followers, and cover from 15 to 20 acres arable land; and you say that a crofter might be able to afford to pay from £5 to £7 for such a croft. I want to know what, in your opinion, is the current value in the country to a competent tacksman of that amount of land?—I want to go to the other side.

4456. The Chairman.—You must try to answer the question?—I don't understand him very well. (Question repeated in Gaelic.) I never considered that, because I am not so well up to large farms as I am to others; but I am sure of this, a landlord in Skye is not like a landlord in the south, who spends so much money upon the drains, dykes, and fences; the Skye landlords never spent a penny upon the land.

4457. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I do not want to interrupt, but I am not getting in the very least from you an answer to a plain question; if you cannot answer it, simply say so.

4458. The Chairman.—I understand this to be his answer that he cannot answer it, as he has never considered the matter.—The Witness. I have not considered it.

4459. Mr Reginald Macleod.—We shall produce evidence, Mr Chairman, to show that the proper rent in this country of the amount of land that Mr Macpherson says is necessary for a crofter to occupy would be at least three times what he says the crofter would be able to pay. I should like to ask another question. Mr Macpherson has said that the crofters—and I am very sorry to hear it—are, as a rule, not able to produce much capital towards building their houses, and he said that the amount of help required for each croft would be from £20 to £100, or even in some cases £150. Now, do you consider, Mr Macpherson, that you or any other crofter would be able to buy 70 sheep, 6 cows and followers, and to build a house and get the implements necessary to work 15 to 20 acres of land for the highest sum you have named?—We could add to that, the most of us. We are hard working men, and we are not going to stop at a point of that kind. Give us the land and we shall succeed.

4460. The question is, can you buy the stock that is said by yourself to be necessary to work a croft of the proper size?—I will buy the whole of it; if I cannot do it myself, I will get those that will help me.

4461. You told the Commission a short time ago that you could not buy stock?—I could do it by help of friends.

4462. The Chairman.—He did not say that he could not buy it. That was scarcely the meaning of his answer.

4463. Mr Reginald Macleod.—What amount of money, may I ask, is the amount that could not be found, irrespective of any advances by Government, by the generality of crofters that you are acquainted with? —It is very little money that they can give; but in the township that I belong to there are none who have not sheep or cattle, though no horse. We never had horses in the township.

4464. What would be the number of sheep and cattle that you yourself possess?—I have about 20 sheep.

4465. And how many cattle?—Three or four cows. I could not keep all that on the township.

4466. That seems a good stock for £3 of rent. But that apart. In addition to what you have, you would require to buy the balance. Have you calculated what it would really cost to purchase the balance of sheep and cattle that you would require, and to build a house?—No sir, I have not.

Dunvegan, Skye. John Macpherson,

4467. The Chairman.—I take it that all the crofters of whom you have been speaking have stock up to a certain extent?—Well, they have.

4468. Have they cattle and sheep stock?—Yes.

4469. And no horses?—No horses.

4470. So that if these crofters were transferred to other holdings, they would not require to purchase new stock from the beginning, but could add to the stock they already possess?—Yes.

4471. Some more and some less?—Yes. I should like to mention that the crofters have to sell their stirks when they are a year old. If they had grazing, and could keep that stock for three or four years, they would, instead of getting £3 for each, get £7. The stirks would not cost them as much for the other years as for the first year.

4472. Is there any holding in your district which consists of 20 acres arable or more?—Not one.

4473. And 60 to 70 sheep?—I do not think there are any in Glendale.

4474. Now, after you go above the size of the croft, —such a croft as you occupy yourself,—what is the next larger size of holding in the district? Is it a large farm or a small farm?—No; there are a few who are paying £7. Two or three in Glendale pay above £6 or £7.

4475. So that there is no grade between the small crofter and the large farmer? No intermediate size of holding?—Not one.

4476. Now, in your opinion, would it be a benefit to the country if intermediate holdings were introduced between the larger farms on the one hand and the crofts on the other?—Yes.

4477. Mr. Sutherland.—Have you ever calculated Mr. Macpherson, the rent that is paid by the large sheep farmer per acre, and the rent that is paid by the crofter per acre?—I never did, but I know there is a great difference.

4478. In what way is the difference?—We are paying much more.

4479. Not less but more?—Double in the most of cases.

4480. With regard to your purchasing power, or your power to pay interest on a loan, your present position is no standpoint to judge of what you would be able to do in an improved position with a larger holding?—No.

4481. You would be far better able to meet your obligations than you are at present on your small holdings?—Yes.

4482. Mr. Robertson, Factor.—Might I ask you what you are paying per acre at Milivaig?—I think it is 1s. 7d. or 1s. 8d., or something between—but I am not certain.

4483. Are you aware that you are only paying 1s. per acre for all the lands in Milivaig?—(No answer).

4484. The Chairman.—Are you aware what average rate per acre of arable and pasture—the land of Upper and Lower Milivaig is at present paying, or are you not aware?—I am not aware.

4485. And have not calculated?—No.

4486. Mr. Macleod.—You do not profess to be an authority on the value of land?—No.

NEIL MACPHERSON, Upper Milivaig, Glendale (46). Neil Macpherson
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

4487. The Chairman.—Where do you live?—At Upper Milivaig.

4488. I see that you hold 4 acres 1 rood arable, 13 acres 3 roods 5 poles grazing, and the same pasture as the last witness. Your fair rent is £3, 4s., the former rent having been £4?—Yes.

4489. You have heard the whole of John Macpherson's evidence?—Yes.

4490. And do you concur in it?—Yes, but I know there are classes of us who would take more land than others.

Dunvegan, Skye. Neil Macpherson.

4491. Now, just explain your answer a little more fully?—There are some of us who would take more land than others.

4492. You mean larger crofts?—Yes.

4493. Up to what rent?—I am not going to take anything to do with the rent.

4494. Up to what extent of arable, then, and what stock?—12 to 20 acres arable, 6 cows, 50 or 60 ewes, and 1 horse.

4495. That is the largest size of holding you have in view?—Yes.

4496. Now give us the arable and the stock of the smaller size of holding you have in view?—From 10 to 12 acres arable, 4 cows, 40 or 50 sheep, and a horse.

4497. That is still a size of holding that might be self-sustaining?—We would require to help ourselves otherwise than from the croft.

4498. In what way, by labour or fishing?—By fishing and anything else that would come in the way.

4499. Then you are of opinion that a croft of 10 to 12 acres arable, and 4 cows pasture, would not be enough to keep a man without outside assistance?—No.

4500. Are you of opinion that a croft of 12 to 20 acres arable, and 6 cows and 50 to 60 sheep, would be sufficient to keep a man without assistance?—Yes, with very little other assistance.

4501. Would he require some assistance in that latter case?—They would be comfortable, indeed; it is they that would be comfortable.

4502. Without assistance by labour or fishing?—Yes.

4503. Are these holdings you have described larger than any of the present holdings in Glendale?—Yes; there is one croft of the size of the smaller croft that I mentioned.

4504. But only one?—To my knowledge.

4505. Whose is that?—Roderick Campbell, Borodal.

4506. What rent does he pay?—£8 or £9, I think. —Mr Robertson. £9, 15s., but that man has 6 or 7 cows and a horse.

4507. The Chairman.—I find his area is 12 acres 1 rood 12 poles arable, 12 acres 3 roods 8 poles outrun, 4 acres common arable, and 262 acres common pasture; former rent £16, 5s. 3½d., fair rent £9, 15s. Now, do you know what stock Roderick Campbell had?—Six or 7 cows, a horse, and 24 sheep, but very bad hill pasture.

4508. Has he anything else?—That is all I know of.

4509. Has he no stirks?—I don't know.

4510. That, I think you said, is the only case of the kind?—That is the only case of the kind.

4511. Mr Robertson, Factor.—Can you tell me whether Roderick Campbell's management of his croft has been a success?—No, it is not easy for me to do that; the place is not worth the money, or anything like it.

Donald Campbell.

DONALD CAMPBELL, Farm Labourer, Hamara, Glendale (40)—examined.

4512. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No, I am a crofter's son. My father has the croft.

4513. What is his name?—John Campbell.

4514. Is it in Hamaraviren?—Yes.

4515. I see the area of the holding is 10 acres 3 roods 21 poles arable, 29 acres 2 roods 4 poles outrun, 148 acres of common grazing, former rent £11, fair rent £7. Do you reside with your father?—Yes.

4516. Do you carry on any trade of your own?—No.

4517. Do you and your father live by the holding?—Partly.

4518. And how otherwise?—My father has been a shoemaker till of late years, but he has stopped it for some years now.

4519. How many years?—Three or four.

4520. Do you help him at his trade?—I gave it up too.

4521. Did you help him at his trade?—Yes, sometimes.

4522. During these latter years have you lived by the holding?—Well, partly; the family had help to keep on the holding. Dunvegan, Skye.

4523. Do you mean from the south?—Yes. Donald Campbell.

4524. From brothers and sisters?—From brothers.

4525. How many brothers?—Three.

4526. All working in the south?—Until very recently. There is one of them abroad, and he sends a great deal of assistance to my father.

4527. And it is in that way he gets along?—Yes.

4528. What is it you wish to say to us in regard to new land?—That additional land should be given to the crofters; new holdings created.

4529. Where?—Where the land is available.

4530. Did you hear John Macpherson's evidence?—Yes.

4531. And do you concur with that evidence?—Most of it.

4532. Wherein do you differ from him?—The Interpreter. That is his way of saying he agrees with the whole.

4533. Some townships were mentioned by him, especially Ramasaig, Lorgill, Dibidale, and Waterstein. Do you know these townships?—Yes.

4534. Is there land on the sites of these townships suitable for the objects you have in view?—Well, it is suitable for the creation of a very few holdings only.

4535. Very few?—Very few.

4536. How many?—I would say from 16 to 20 crofters. No more.

4537. Then, where else would you go to extend the accommodation?—Just as Mr Macpherson said, migrate them to other parts of Skye, where the most land is.

4538. What other parts of Skye?—Bracadale and Minginish.

4539. Anywhere else?—Claigean and Feorlig.

4540. Where are these places?—All on Macleod's estate.

4541. Is there land on all these places?—Plenty of it.

4542. Suitable for the purpose?—Yes.

4543. Both arable and grazing?—Both arable and grazing, and the very best in Skye.

4544. Can you mention any other townships or sites?—Yes, all places in Skye, but I can hardly remember the names of the places.

4545. But I am speaking of this district?—There is Uignish, Orbost, Balmeanach, Glenmacaskill, Glen-Ose, Drynoch, Ebost, Glenbrittle, Rhuanduna, and all these places.

4546. Every one of them?—Every one of them on the Macleod estate.

4547. Are you personally anxious to get a new holding?—Very.

4548. And is your father?—Yes.

4549. Is he here to-day?—No.

4550. Not able to attend?—He is an old man, and unable to travel.

4551. Mr Forsyth.—Your father has ten acres of arable. Is it worked by rotation?—Yes.

4552. Do you sow grass seeds?—Yes.

4553. And leave the land down for some time—for more than one year?—For three years regularly.

4554. Is the land in good heart, and does it bear good crops?—The best I see thereabout.

4555. Does it yield a satisfactory return of oats?—It did not this last year, because it was a very bad harvest and a very bad year.

4556. But, on the whole, you are satisfied with the condition of the arable land?—Well, upon the whole, it was pretty fair.

4557. Are you sure that you would do better if you went to a new holding?—Yes.

4558. Is it because you require a larger one?—There is that in it; and, besides, the land would be more easily kept in good order when it is already in fair heart, some of it. It is strong, and could be easily kept in that condition, I think.

4559. You think you could keep new land in good heart by good rotation?—I think it is easier than in the case of land that has been excessively cultivated.

4560. Then you think your land is, after all, more or less worn out?—Too much.

4561. Can you give us any idea, in a fair year, of the return of oats from the seed—how many returns you will get?—I have seen us getting fully six or seven returns from one boll of oats, out of a piece of the best of our land.

4562. In a fair year?—In a good year.

4563. And when do you generally get your harvest in, taking one year with another?—Generally in the month of September, between that and the beginning of October. I have seen the harvest commencing in August.

4564. Mr Maccallum.—Are you afraid that if these large crofts were available the people would not be able to pay such a rent as is at present paid by the large tacksmen?—No, I am not.

4565. You think they would be able to cultivate these crofts to a profit?—I think they would.

4566. And be able to pay their rent?—According to what the farmers pay for it at present, I think the crofters would be able to cultivate it to a profit.

4567. We have had evidence that the crofters have fallen into arrears at present, and that some of them are cultivating to a loss. How do you account for that?—There is slackness in everything; there is slackness in the price of stock, and the seasons have been bad for crops for the last two or three years.

4568. And do you connect these arrears with the smallness of the holdings, which does not give the crofters work all the year round?—Yes, I do.

4569. And you think that, with intermediate holdings giving work all the year round, the crofters would not fall into arrears?—I don't think they would.

4570. The Chairman.—Have you worked as a ploughman on the mainland?—No, never.

4571. Have you worked as a ploughman anywhere?—Never.

4572. How did you come to learn about rotation?—I have been in the east country for several years as a shepherd.

4573. And you saw that rotation was a beneficial thing there?—Yes.

4574. And have you tried to introduce it here?—I have tried it on my own part.

4575. Has your example been followed to any extent?—Not my example; some of them began it before I tried it.

4576. But you find in your own case it has been very beneficial?—Yes, very.

4577. And you would not like to return to the old system?—No.

4578. Now, suppose you had a holding double the size of your present holding, viz., 11 or 12 acres arable and 50 to 60 acres of outrun, do you think you could work a holding of that size to profit?—Our present holding is not 12 acres.

4579. It is 10 acres 3 roods 21 poles, that is almost 11 acres?—You mean double that size?

4580. Yes.—Well, hardly, because the hill pasture is very bad, and we could not keep the necessary stock on it; although we had double the size of hill pasture we could only keep about 40 sheep.

4581. Your pasture is indifferent?—Indifferent.

4582. But suppose you had double the size of holding, and pasture of a much higher quality?—It would be enough.

4583. And would you expect in average years to work it to a profit?—Yes, if the land was in a good locality. I don't mean to say that Glendale is not a good locality; but if the holding as a whole was of good quality, the same as bits of it are, it would do.

4584. And you anticipate being able to live upon your holding?—Yes.

4585. Without outside assistance?—Without anything in the least.

4586. Could you give us any idea of the extent to which you have benefited by adopting the system of rotation; how much richer have you found yourself at the end of the season by adopting the system of rotation?—In the first instance, the labour is not spent upon it.

4587. Yes; that is saved?—The expenditure of labour is saved; and then the yield of crops is increased.

4588. Now, just give us an idea, if you can, to what extent. Is it a third better, or a half?—Well, compared with the time when the croft was wholly cultivated, the crops to-day are as profitable by having two-thirds, I should say, of the croft in cultivation.

4589. By adopting the system of rotation you get as much out of two-thirds of the holding as you used to get from the entire holding?—Yes, it is as profitable.

4590. Now is there any other benefit you can mention besides?—Well, I believe there are others; if I were to study the matter I believe I would recollect more.

4591. Mr Gordon.—You have better grass for your cows?—Yes, better grass for feeding, even out of the ground.

4592. More substance in it?—Yes.

4593. And therefore better stock?—Yes, and the produce of the cattle is better.

4594. You mean of the cows?—Yes, there is more milk and butter.

4595. I hope those who hear this evidence are attending to it, for it is of great importance.

4596. Mr Macleod.—You said that you had been a shepherd for some years?—Yes.

4597. And you therefore have a fair knowledge of sheep stock. What is your opinion with regard to the manner in which small tenants should hold their sheep stock; do you favour the system of having them in one common or club-stock, or in individual flocks; which is the better system?—For townships consisting of say half-a-dozen or eight, or even as high as ten crofters, I would approve of the club farm system; but where there are twenty or twenty-five or thirty crofters together, I think the separate system is the best.

4598. Why?—I will give you the only reason I see in it; the pasture is generally poor where there are so many crofters, and the stock could not be wintered on the pasture outside, and therefore everyone has to house his own up in the winter time to get them fed. That is the only reason.

4599. But don't you think that an arrangement could be made, even where there are twenty-five crofters, that the place should not be overstocked, and that, furthermore, the sheep should get the run of the arable ground in the winter-time?—Under the present system there are no fences nor dykes, nor anything; and, as soon as the sheep are in, the ground is eaten up at once. There would be nothing for young sheep to live on during the winter.

4600. The only reason you have against the club farm system, where there is a large number of crofters, is that the hill would be more eaten over?—Not the club farm, but having them separately. If there were fewer crofters, I would prefer the club farm system.

4601. Supposing there were twenty-five crofters in the locality, would not it do if they divided the pasture into two club farms?—Well, if they agreed; but when there are too many people in company together, I don't think they agree so well as a few.

4602. So that your ideal club farm would be one in which from ten to twelve crofters would be interested?—That would do.

4603. Now about the number of cows that are kept by crofters. You heard the evidence about four to six cows. Don't you think, if the quality of the animals were improved, a smaller number of cows would be more profitable and more prolific?—That would depend on the size of the holding.

4604. But suppose you had a holding that could, with the present class of stock, keep six cows, don't you think it would be better for the small tenant if he were to reduce the number and improve the quality of the stock?—That would depend on the rent. I heard the question asked what would be the rent and what would be the stock. Now, if the stock was reduced, the rent would have to be reduced.

Dunvegan, Skye.
Donald Campbell.

4605. I am not speaking on the question of rent at all, but as to the quality of the stock?—There is no doubt the stock would be better if it was reduced on a holding; there is no doubt of that.

4606. Mr Gordon.—Supposing you had ample winter pasture along with the crofts, would you not prefer the club stock to the individual holdings? Would it not be fairer to the poor man?—Yes, it would.

4607. And would you not expect that even twenty crofters might be agreeable to form an executive of, say, three or four of their number, to buy and sell, and transact all business in connection with the management of the sheep. Would not that be possible?—Oh yes.

4608. And, under these circumstances, would a club stock not do?—It might. Shall I be allowed to make a remark in connection with the rental mentioned by Mr John Macpherson and Mr Reginald Macleod?

4609. The Chairman.—What is it you have to say?—It is in regard to the fixing of Mr Macpherson's rent. Mr Macpherson stated the amount of souming upon a croft at a rent of £6 or £7. Mr Macleod stated that that rental was a third of the proper rent, or of the rent that the croft was worth. Now, Mr Macleod has been speaking from the landlord point of view, and it is an evident thing to the Crofters Commission, since ever they made their inquiry throughout the Highlands, that the landlord system is to exact, if possible, three rents out of a croft.

4610. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I should like to put a question in this way. I have not spoken from the landlord's point of view, because, as I am allowed by the courtesy of the Commission to address one or two questions to-day, I really wish to get merely the bare and actual state of the facts. I understand that you, and those who appear as crofter delegates, took the position that they want to pay a fair rent to the landlord—that they don't want to deprive the landlord of his property in any way, but wish to pay such a fair rent as the land can properly afford?—Exactly.

4611. Now, I should like to know this: If you were offered accommodation for extra cows and their followers, what would you yourself consider, speaking fairly, as you have done throughout your evidence, to be a fair and proper rent for any one to pay?—For how much?

4612. For each cow with her followers?—That would be according to the grazing and the place the cow was grazed upon; according to the quality of the soil she grazed upon.

4613. Give us the best idea you can; state it between two figures?—There are some grazings that I would consider dear at only 5s. for the cow and calf for the summer grazing.

4614. What would be the price in good land?—I know of cases where £2 is paid for the cow's keep.

4615. And you think that is fair, in certain circumstances?—I don't know whether it is fair or not, but I know it is paid.

4616. But I suppose if you were a landlord, and were getting £2 for a cow's grass, you would say that if that was the market value it would be quite fair that a crofter, or anybody else obtaining that accommodation, should pay the same?—Well, if it was the market value; but in the cases that I referred to of £2 being paid, it is not the market value, but the landlord value, I may say.

4617. You only wish to get the accommodation in return for what it is fairly worth in the country to whoever might be willing to take it?—I can hardly grip that, Mr Macleod.

4618. I will put it in this way. You desire to obtain ground to carry more cattle and sheep. The ground bearing that amount of cattle and sheep, in the hands of a tacksman, is fairly worth a given number of pounds. If that land is given to you, you do not desire to get it for less than it is actually worth?—It is fair rental that we ask. We don't wish to get the land for nothing. We never expected and never asked that.

4619. You are accustomed to dealing with sheep stock, having had experience in the east country. Do you consider that the sheep stock carried by the crofts in Glendale is equal to the sheep stock in the hands of tacksmen?—There are instances where the crofters' sheep are nearly as valuable, but in other cases they are not a third of the value.

Dunvegan, Skye.
Donald Campbell.

4620. So that if the sheep stocks now in the hands of tacksmen were placed in the hands of crofters the total value of the sheep stock would materially decrease?—No, I do not think so, because the crofters would get on to the good pasture where the tacksmen are to-day, and then the stock could be kept on the very same as they are at present.

4621. You have just now said it was impossible to manage a club farm when there were more than 8 or 10 crofters associated together. Is it possible to manage a multitude of crofts with 60, or 80, or 100 sheep in each, with the same advantage to the sheep stock, as if there were 1000 under each man?—Yes, if they were put under proper management, as Mr Gordon suggested.

4622. However, it is your opinion that at present the stock in the hands of crofters is often not worth more than a third of the tacksman's?—In very rare cases, where the pasture is nothing but what will keep the life in them during winter.

4623. The Chairman.—You used the words 'fair 'rental'; do you mean a rent fixed by an independent tribunal?—Yes.

4624. You don't mean a competitive rent?—No, by no means.

4625. Or what could be got in the district by private contract?—I don't mean that.

4626. Now, suppose holdings enlarged to the extent of enabling crofters to get a sheep stock of 50, 60, or 70 sheep, would the quality of the sheep be almost certain to improve?—To keep as well as it is to-day, fully.

4627. You think holdings of that size could have a sheep stock as valuable as the sheep stock of a large grazier?—I think they could be more so, because each crofter then could have his holding cultivated in a way that he would be able to winter and summer them better than the tacksmen do to-day; he would have his fields of turnips and so forth for the winter keep.

JOHN MACLEAN, Crofter, Fasach, Glendale (39)—examined.

John Maclean.

4628. The Chairman.—What is your present rent?—£6.

4629. And your old rent?—£8, 9s.

4631. Do you wish to make any addition to it?—Very little. I have been well pleased with the evidence I heard.

4632. It fully states your view?—There are some points, according to the acreage of land, arable and pasture, that I was thinking of. Take the place that we are in: it is a souming we have.

4633. What is your souming?—We keep 20 sheep.

4634. How many cows?—Four and a horse.

4635. You want to make some statement about the land; what is it?—A croft of double the size that I now possess, of the same kind of land, would hardly just keep the souming that we have got in a proper condition.

4636. But is your land worked out, or is it in good heart?—It has been worked out to the utmost; but I have given it a little chance three years back.

4637. In what way?—By rotation.

4638. Do you find that an advantage?—I have not reaped the advantage yet, but I will be beginning to do so next year or so.

4639. Suppose you had a new holding of the same size as your present holding, but with the land in good condition, would you expect to be able to keep the stock you have properly?—I think I would.

Dunvegan, Skye. John Maclean.

4640. Is there anything else you would like to bring under our notice?—No, nothing else.

4641. Mr Macleod—You say that the souming of your present croft is just double what could be properly kept on it?—Yes.

4642. Is that a common experience throughout Skye or throughout your district?—It is in the district and in the township that I am in.

4643. The souming there is very high?—Above the upkeep of the place.

4644. How do you account for that?—The whole pasture is very soft and cut through like moss, and broken up with cutting peats, and so on; and there are so many of them put together into one place—31 crofters in one place. The place is continually delved over, and the hill pasture is the worst about the place altogether. Supposing a man was to get double the size that he has of the same kind of land, it would benefit him just nothing.

4645. When you first went to your holding, was it capable, with its share of the hill pasture, of carrying the souming?—It is only ten years since I got a croft, but my father or my uncle was in it before, and that was the souming that was put on. I think it was made by the landlord when they took the place, not by the men themselves. They were continually trying to keep this on, but of course the half of it is not on.

4646. As a matter of fact, you have only got half the souming the place is said to carry?—Yes.

4647. Is that a common experience?—Yes.

4648. And it is your opinion that the souming was fixed too high from the very beginning?—Yes.

4649. Which, combined with the fact that there are so many tenants on a small area, makes the subject worse than ever?—Yes.

4650. You heard what was said by the previous witnesses with regard to the reclamation of land, and with regard to the question of club stock. Do you agree with what was said?—Yes, I would agree with the club stock.

4651. You are in favour of a club stock?—Yes.

4652. And do you think with Mr Macpherson that there are considerable areas of land that might be reclaimed that were never under crop?—Yes.

4653. You believe that?—Yes.

4654. I understand that you yourself desire a new and better holding?—Yes.

4655. And would you be prepared, in the event of your getting a fair sized holding, with reclaimable land, to reclaim it?—Yes.

4656. Now, with regard to the question of the assistance that would be required, what is your opinion about that?—Oh well, I believe some would need less and others would need more.

4657. Mr Robertson, Factor.—Would you tell me how many sheep you have in the souming?—I have just 13.

4658. What number of cows?—Four.

4659. You say that you agree as to the club farm?—Yes.

4660. Are you aware that at present many of the tenants have more than their souming?—I believe there are two exceptional cases in the township; but there are some who have none at all.

4661. Those who have more than their number get the benefit of those that have none?—Yes.

4662. Do you not think that is a good reason for putting the whole under a club stock?—Yes, I would advocate that myself.

4663. Then the sheep, when put into a joint stock, would have the run of the whole of the arable land in winter, would they not?—Yes, if it was not fenced; they have it in its present state.

4664. Is it not advisable that they should have it? Is it not an advantage to the sheep to have the run of the arable land during the winter?—Yes; but when a body is sowing grass seed, and when it is not fenced, it would be useless after the sheep had run through it all the winter.

4665. But if all sowed their arable land in rotation, would not that be an advantage to the stock?—Yes, but there are some who could not work their land in rotation.

Dunvegan, Skye. John Maclean.

4666. Why not?—They have so little of it. If they were to put seed in for two years, they would have nothing the third year to put potatoes in.

4667. One of the witnesses stated that since he commenced the rotation of cropping, he was enabled to produce as much crop from two-thirds of his land as he used to do from the whole croft before. Would you not follow the same system?—He has a larger croft.

4668. Still you could carry it out on the same principle?—Yes, I could do it, but there are different people in the township that could not do it.

4669. Have you been a successful farmer yourself?—Not very.

4670. The Chairman.—You say there are a number of crofters in your district whose holdings are too small to allow of the rotation system being followed?—Yes.

4671. How many will there be of that kind, roughly?—Well, as far as I can recollect, there are 20 half crofts.

4672. And in none of these would it be possible to follow rotation?—That is my opinion.

4673. Your area is 7 acres 2 roods 27 poles, what is the smallest size of arable that would allow of rotation?—Considering the way the crofters are working their land, they are sowing a heap of potatoes and turnips. A crofter in Fasach would just sow about 2 bushels of rye grass seed in his land every year, and giving it a fair turn, say for three years, it would run his croft almost out altogether without having any thing to return to potatoes and turnips in the fourth year.

4674. What is the size of holding you are thinking of?—Four or 3½ acres arable, that is a common holding in Fasach.

4675. A holding would need to be larger than that to allow of rotation?—Yes.

4676. Do you wish to add anything to what you have told me already?—I would just add this. I think after a crofter going into a new holding, and paying a rent for thirty years to the landlord, the rent ought to stop then. He has paid dear enough for the land.

4677. You mean thirty years on the old holding?—Yes, and on the new holding.

4678. You have been paying rent for thirty years in the holding you are in, you and your father?—Yes, for thirty-nine years.

4679. Is it your view that, if you had a new holding of the size you have indicated to us, 10 or 15 acres arable, or 20 as the case may be, with corresponding pasture, you should have it without any rent?—Yes, at the end of thirty years' paying rent for it.

4680. Thirty years in the new holding?—Yes.

4681. So that you are willing to pay rent for the next thirty years in the new holding?—Yes.

4682. And then the rent should cease?—Yes, the rent should cease, and the rates be paid.

4683. And do you mean that in such a case you would have an advance—a loan to carry on the new holding with?—Yes, for a start; but I would mean to pay up that with interest.

4684. In course of time?—Yes.

4685. Interest and capital?—Interest and capital.

4686. Mr Sutherland.—And in order to have such a prospect before you, you would be willing to pay an increased rent?—No.

4687. A higher rent than if you were only paying it as rent?—No.

4688. You think that with the rent that is at present taken from land you should, after thirty years, buy it?—Yes, buy it after thirty years; for land is almost selling to-day for twenty years' purchase.

4689. Have you heard of any case in which such a system has been carried out?—I think it is in Ireland.

4690. Is that view, may I ask, pretty generally entertained among people in your neighbourhood?—Among the most intelligent of them.

4691. One question with regard to what was asked of you. You were asked if you were a successful farmer, and I suppose it was your modesty that led you to admit that you were not?—He knew the question before I answered it. He was getting all the outlay of my croft, and that was not much.

Dunvegan, Skye.
John Maclean.

4692. Do you believe that any want of success that attended your farming was due to the size of your holding?—Well, it was, to the size of my holding. If I had a bigger holding, I would be far more successful in it. After spring was over, I had to leave home and earn my livelihood elsewhere; and after working spring and autumn, I had no return, buying seed and meal every year to put in. I have not made a boll of meal two years back.

4693. The Chairman.—Is it your view that after paying rent for thirty years the rent should cease, and the land should become your own without any payment to the landlord?—Yes, but paying rates.

4694. Rates to the public authorities?—Yes.

4695. Mr Macleod.—Where did your people come from? were you born in Fasach?—I was just nine weeks going to it. I came from Minginish or Bracadale.

4696. Are there many in the township of Fasach that came in the same way?—None but myself.

4697. Mr Maccallum.—In reference to your scheme of paying rent for thirty years, do you mean that Government should advance money to buy out the landlord at present, and that your future payments should be made to the Government?—Well, I believe that would fit us better.

4698. To buy out the landlord immediately, and pay the Government advance in thirty yearly instalments with interest?—Yes.

4699. Mr Munro.—Supposing that Government bought your croft and paid a fair value for it, would you be willing to repay the Government that money, principal and interest, extending over a period of thirty years?—Yes, on fair rent.

4700. But would you be willing to repay the sum paid for the croft, with interest, terminating after thirty payments?—I might not be able to do it in thirty years; but I would just pay it in thirty, forty, or thereabouts, a longer time according to the sum.

4701. What you aim at is that the Government should acquire your croft, and you would repay them, extending over a period of years, by instalments?—Yes.

4702. And then you become the absolute proprietor of your own croft?—Yes.

4703. The Chairman.—You would pay that interest for the Government loan in addition to the fair rent, making two payments in each year—(1) fair rent, and (2) interest for Government advance for thirty years?—Yes; but I would need five or six or seven years before beginning to pay the double instalment, to give me a fair start.

4704. But giving you that start, you would be willing to pay the two sums, fair rent and Government interest?—Yes.

4705. I see you have a curious name for your township, Fasach; what does that mean?—It means a place of no value, I think.

Neil Mackay.

NEIL MACKAY, Fisherman, Colbost, Glendale Estate (40)—examined.

4706. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—I am a crofter's son.

4707. What age is your father?—Close upon eighty years of age.

4708. What is his first name?—John.

4709. I see the holding contains 5 acres 1 rood 18 poles arable, 3 acres 2 roods 14 poles outrun, and one-twentieth share of 2354 common pasture; the old rent was £5, 0s. 6d., and the new rent is £3, 8s. You have heard all the evidence given here to-day?—Yes.

4710. And do you concur generally with that evidence?—Fully.

4711. It expresses your views pretty fully?—Pretty fully.

4712. I see you are described in the note given me as a fisherman. Do you carry on the fishing industry?—I devote half of my time to the crofting, and the other half to the fishing.

Dunvegan, Skye.
Neil Mackay.

4713. In what way do you carry on fishing? Do you go as a hired hand?—I go to the east country as a hired hand, and I have a small craft of my own—a share of it—at home.

4714. What keel?—Twenty-one feet or so.

4715. How many years have you been going to the East Coast as a hired hand?—About twenty years; but I have been seasons in.

4716. Off and on?—Off and on.

4717. You know the kind of holdings that many of the men on the East Coast have?—Yes.

4718. Small patches, and depending upon the sea for their livelihood?—I did not come across many of that kind.

4719. There are some, are there not, there?—Very few that I have seen.

4720. Would you be favourable to the formation of small holdings, patches of potato land and garden ground, near the sea-shore, where there was good fishing, the crofter being dependent for his livelihood upon the fishing and not upon the croft?—Certainly I would; but I would not to any great extent, because I have tried both myself, and I fully believe that I could not work more than 2 acres of land or thereabout and attend to the fishing.

4721. You could do that?—Of course it would be with great difficulty, because the fishing requires regular attendance, so to speak. But, during rough weather and so forth, when the boat could not go to sea, he would have spare time to attend to his small patch.

4722. A point I want to elucidate, if possible, is this. You would be in favour of a man who had to depend upon the sea for his livelihood rather than the case of a man who had to depend half upon the sea and half upon his croft; in other words, is it a good system, the system of a man who depends partly upon the sea and partly upon his holding?—No mistake he would be all the better of having a small patch of land, but it would not do for him to have much land.

4723. You would be in favour of a little land that would not take him away from the sea, but depending on the sea for his living?—Certainly I would.

4724. Would you also be in favour of other larger holdings which would take up the entire time of the crofter, and constitute his living?—Certainly.

4725. Both kinds of holdings?—Both kinds of holdings; but I think I would prefer the larger size.

4726. But are you of opinion that there are some who would prefer the other?—Yes, I am of opinion there are.

4727. And both kinds would be beneficial to the country-side?—I suppose so, as far as I can see.

4728. Do you desire to make any addition to what has passed already to-day?—I don't see very much to speak about; most of it has been taken up already. I shall be glad to give all the information I possess to the Commission.

Peter Macdonald.

PETER MACDONALD, Holmisdale, Glendale (65). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

4729. The Chairman.—I see your holding has 5 acres 3 roods 9 poles arable, 1 acre 1 rood 37 poles outrun, a share of 1018 acres common pasture, divided in 14⅔ shares. The old rent was £3, 18s. 2d., and the fair rent is £3?—Yes.

4730. You have heard the evidence about rotation?—Yes.

4731. Have you tried to follow it to any extent?—I was not understanding all that was said on that subject. My croft is so small that I could not work it in rotation.

4732. Do you desire to obtain, if it can be got, a new holding on better land?—Yes.

4733. And is there land available in the places mentioned by previous witnesses?—Not near me. In the places that have been mentioned there is land available for a few crofts.

Dunvegan, Skye. Peter Macdonald.

4734. Such a croft as you would wish to obtain?—Yes.

4735. Do you wish to make any further statement?—No, but there is plenty to say. The township in which I am is overcrowded.

4736. How many are there in your township?—Twenty-one families paying rent.

4737. Does that include cottars?—Inclusive of cottars.

4738. Are there cottars in your township?—Two old wives.

4739. They pay no rent?—No.

4740. Mr Macleod.—Were you born in the township?—No.

4741. Where did you come from?—From Upper Milivaig.

Norman Ross.

NORMAN ROSS, Crofter, Glasvein, Glendale (49). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

4742. The Chairman.—Your holding has 3 acres 10 poles arable, 1 acre 3 roods 36 poles outrun, and one-twelfth of 165 acres common pasture. The old rent was £4, the fair rent is £2, 6s.?—Yes.

4743. How many crofters are in your township?—Twelve.

4744. Any cottars?—None.

4745. I suppose you have heard all the evidence that has been given here to-day?—Yes.

4746. And do you concur in it?—Yes.

4747. Have you any additional statement to offer to us?—No.

4748. Does your township march with the township of Fasach?—Yes.

4749. But you have different grazing?—Yes.

4750. Mr Gordon.—What stock have you?—Five cows and a two-year-old.

4751. Any sheep?—None.

4752. How do you make a living?—In the south.

4753. You go south to work?—Yes.

4754. Have you been able to make any meal out of the oats grown in your township the last few years?—No, no meal; and I have to buy the seed every year wherewith to sow the land.

4755. Is that on account of the bad crop, or is it on account of eating it with horses and cattle?—No, there is no soil; it is bad land. There is no soil to yield a crop.

4756. You want a bigger holding?—Yes.

4757. Would you like a holding that would enable you to stay at home rather than go south?—Yes.

4758. The Chairman.—Is fishing carried on to any considerable extent in Glendale?—Not much. I myself have been at it 14 winters, and did not make much by it.

4759. Did you go to the east coast?—Yes, for upwards of 20 years.

4760. And during all that time you were not able to live by your holding?—No, not for a month of the year.

4761. So that your holding was only a home?—Just a home on which I could rear my family.

4762. And you drew your subsistence from the south or the east?—Yes.

4763. Is that common in Glendale?—Yes, the most of them live that way.

4764. And pay their rents from other sources?—Yes.

4765. Mr Macleod.—There is nothing to prevent the Glendale men taking to the sea at the present time if they so choose, and if the fishing was good enough?—No, there is nothing to prevent them, but there is not good fishing at all.

4766. You think they would be much better off if they had fair-sized holdings?—Yes.

Donald Macdonald.

DONALD MACDONALD, Crofter, Skinidin, Glendale Estate (55)—examined.

4767. The Chairman.—You hold a croft of 4 acres 32 poles arable, 12 acres 1 rood 32 poles outrun, and one-tenth of 1183 acres common pasture. Your former rent was £5, 1s. 6d., your present rent is £2, 12s.?—Yes. Dunvegan, Skye.

4768. You heard what was said about rotation?—Yes. Donald Macdonald.

4769. Are you able to follow any rotation on your own croft, or have you tried it?—It is too small; I could not try it.

4770. Are you anxious to obtain a new holding if you could get it?—Yes.

4771. With better land?—I would agree with Campbell and Maclean.

4772. You attended to their evidence?—Yes.

4773. Is it your view that there is land easily obtainable at no great distance from your present croft?—Yes.

4774. In some places that have been mentioned by previous witnesses?—Yes.

4775. Suppose you got such a holding, would you enter upon it without assistance?—If I would get satisfaction I would try.

4776. You see your way to try that?—Yes.

4777. Stocking it and putting up the necessary buildings?—I would try.

4778. You would, at all events, begin without asking for assistance?—If I could get my property sold where I am, I would do.

4779. If you had the value of your present holding, you think you could enter upon a new holding without further aid?—Yes.

4780. You don't want assistance, I suppose, if you can get on without it?—I would rather do without it, if I was able.

4781. Have you a family?—Yes.

4782. How many sons?—Three.

4783. All living at home?—They are young; the eldest is 16 years old.

4784. Mr Macleod.—How many crofters are in your own township?—Eighteen.

4785. How many cottars?—Four.

4786. Are the cottars men or old women?—Two men.

4787. Have those cottars got a representative here to-day?—I would speak for them.

4788. What is their view about things?—They would like to follow the rest.

4789. They would like to get holdings?—Yes.

4790. And I daresay it would be some relief to the crofters, who are presently in Skinidin, if those cottars were taken away?—Yes, a great relief; it is a burden on them.

4791. Mr Gordon.—Are you a tradesman of any kind?—I was working some trade, as a merchant, for a while.

4792. What do you do now for your living—your croft does not keep you?—Yes, I have a croft all the time.

4793. You don't make a living on your croft?—No, there is nobody in the township would do that.

4794. Do you know anybody who would?—Not one.

4795. Are you acquainted with working a croft?—Yes; I was working a croft all my days. I was in the south working, and at the fishing too—three seasons at the fishing.

4796. But you have never worked a bigger croft than you have?—No; my father did, I believe.

4797. Where was your father?—Minginish, in Bracadale.

4798. Had you a larger croft there?—He was grieve to the tacksman that was there.

4799. There was something said by several of the witnesses to-day about their ability to pay as big rents as the farmers pay for the land. Do you believe the crofters would pay as big rents?—I believe they are paying rents.

4800. But they are not paying rents now off their crofts: they pay them off work. Do you think that if you put a new township on a farm, and divide it for say 20 people, they could be able to pay as big rents as the tacksman is paying?—That is according to where the places would be.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Donald Macdonald.

4801. But I am afraid there are some of them have been making statements which would bear against you in future?—I would not wish that at all.

4802. I don't think you would, but I am afraid if you put in 20 people on a farm and gave them the extent of land they were speaking about, you rather over-estimate your ability to pay rent. You have your families to keep: is most of the meal used in your township bought?—Bought nearly every week of the year.

4803. And do you think you would be able to keep yourself in meal if you got a new township?—We would try it.

4804. But do you think the climate would enable you to overcome that difficulty?—We don't go about with climate: that might be shifted; it is not in our hands at all.

4805. You have never made up your mind as to what rent you would be able to pay, in fact?—No.

4806. Mr Sutherland.—Would it be very vital to your holding that you should grow upon it the oats to make your meal?—Certainly.

4807. Would it be necessary?—Yes, far better for us.

4808. And do you believe it could grow and ripen in this country?—Yes, it used to.

4809. Is it within your knowledge that the returns of oats that a former witness has stated, can be given in this district,—5 to 6 bolls in a good year?—He went very high; too high for our township, at any rate.

4810. What is the common return, then, do you think?—May be three times.

4811. If you sowed one boll you would get three?—I sowed four and bought two last year, and two this year, and did not sell anything.

4812. But it would be no disadvantage to you though you had to import the meal if you had to export the stock?—It would be without stock at all; that would not do either.

4813. I am supposing that you had stock in the new holding?—Stock would not pay in these days.

4814. It would not be a real necessity, in any case, that the oats should grow in Skye; if you had stock to sell, you could easily buy your oatmeal?—Yes, if prices could stand.

4815. Mr Robertson.—In addition to having a croft, I understand you are a merchant. You deal in meal and other things, don't you?—Yes.

4816. What number of sheep stock have you?—Two cows and one horse.

4817. How many sheep?—Ten, with lambs, last year.

4818. What is the souming of the township?—Fifteen sheep.

4819. Then you are not depending entirely on your croft?—No, I am not.

4820. You put up a very fine house this last year; might I ask how much it cost you?—I did not make up my mind about it yet.

4821. The Chairman.—But you can give us an idea?—Not in the meantime.

4822. It would cost £100?—Yes.

4823. Would you think that house a suitable house for a crofter with 20 acres of arable land and outrun in proportion?—Yes, it would be.

4824. And you think a house such as you have could be put up for about £100?—It would require more than £100.

4825. Have you been putting up that house at your own expense?—Yes, and my own labour too.

4826. Has it an upstairs and a downstairs?—Yes.

4827. How many apartments upstairs?—Three.

4828. Large enough to sleep in?—Yes.

4829. And how many downstairs?—Three.

4830. Six altogether?—Yes.

4831. Are there any outbuildings?—No.

4832. Is it a slated house with stone and lime and windows and so forth?—Yes.

4833. Has that house been put up out of the profits of your trade?—Well, I was in a very bad house before, and a very small house for a large family.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Donald Macdonald.

4834. And you had to build?—I asked Mr Robertson there, and he gave me leave to build it, and showed me the place.

4835. Has that house been erected since the passing of the Crofters Act in 1886?—Yes; it was built the year before last.

4836. Is there a lobster fishing industry about Glendale?—They are trying it.

4837. Do you take the lobsters from the fishermen?—Not in the meantime: they are sending them away themselves.

4838. Did you formerly take them?—I did at one time, but I lost by them.

4839. Did you never make anything by lobsters?—No, I lost on them.

4840. And now they are sent direct?—Yes, and they themselves lose sometimes by them too.

4841. Is there a decrease in the use of oatmeal in the township in favour of Indian meal and food of that kind?—They don't use except oatmeal and flour.

4842. Is there less oatmeal used than there used to be?—They use more now.

4843. Are you the only merchant in the township?—No, there is another one in the township.

4844. What is his name?—John Campbell.

Donald Macpherson.

DONALD MACPHERSON, Crofter, Lephin, Glendale (60). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

4845. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

4846. What rent do you pay?—10s.

4847. What was your former rent?—22s. 8d.

4848. Were you before the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

4849. I see from the books that your holding contains only 3 roods 29 poles arable, and 11 poles outrun with no pasture. Have you any stock?—I have 17 sheep altogether; 9 of these are hoggs.

4850. Have you a cow?—No.

4851. Where do you feed your sheep?—I feed them through the world.

4852. Do you pay anything for the feed of them?—No.

4853. Are your neighbours quite willing that you should feed your sheep on these terms?—Oh yes, it's themselves that are. I gave up the number to the Commission before.

4854. Is there anything special you wish to bring under our notice?—I was promised that I would get the first land that would be vacant, at the time of the former Commission, and I did not get it: a cottar was put in on that vacant land. The estate is complaining of arrears being on the crofters, and those who are clear of arrears won't get justice. I produce receipts to show that I am quite clear, and I can't get justice after all.

4855. Mr Macleod.—What is the name of your township?—Lephin.

4856. How many cottars are in Lephin?—Seven crofters and one cottar.

John Robertson.

JOHN ROBERTSON, Orbost, Factor for Glendale (70)—examined.

4857. The Chairman.—Do you wish to tender any information, Mr Robertson, with regard to these townships?—If you please.

4858. We shall be glad to hear it. Have you a statement to read?—Yes.

4859. You had better read it.—I just wish to refer to the statements made in reference to Lowergill, Ramasaig, Dibidal, and Ollisdal. I am not aware, in my time, of any crofters being in Ollisdal or Dibidal, but I knew of crofters being in Lowergill and Ramasaig. I understood the reason of their being removed from that, was, that they wished to be nearer the fishing industries, and some of them had removed at their own request. Others again that were left seem to have been in the centre of the farms, and, of course, the occupying of crofts in the centre of a township must be very injurious to the rest of the township, to the stock on the place.

nvegan, ye.

n bertson.

But I don't wish to dwell on these points, because I had nothing to do with the removal of any of the tenants from these townships. John Macpherson, one of the witnesses, referred to a croft of £6 or £7 as being a suitable croft for new holdings. Now, my experience is that a croft of that rent, and the extent of grazing that would follow, has not been so successful as a smaller croft along with fishing. I find that they have greater difficulty in meeting their demands. It takes up the crofter's time wholly, and his returns are not equal to keeping his family as they ought to be; whereas in a croft of £3 they don't depend on the croft, it is simply a home and a convenience to the family. From a small croft they have certain advantages, along with fishing and other industries, and the rent is much easier to pay than a croft of £6 or £7 rent. The extent of a croft that I would recommend is a much larger croft than that, one by which they could live without going to the fishing. The extent of such a croft I would suggest to be 20 acres of arable and from 200 to 250 acres of hill pasture. The difficulty about that is the capital; I estimate the capital required for such a croft at about £450, made up in this way. A dwelling-house suitable for a crofter would cost about £100 0 0
A suitable byre and barn would cost another 100 0 0

£200 0 0

That probably could be given on loan by the Government on the security of these houses. Then I estimate the probable stock that would be required for carrying on such a croft; the crofter would want at least two ponies to plough and cart, these would cost at least 36 0 0
He would also require 8 cows and calves, say 64 0 0
And about 80 sheep of all ages; these I estimate at 100 0 0
The carts and plough would cost, say . . 30 0 0
The harness and other little things . . 10 0 0
Seeds for croft 10 0 0

Total . . £450 0 0

Now the result would be as follows:—
The keep of two ponies for one year I estimate at £25 0 0
I estimate the rent of the croft at about . 20 0 0
Taxes—blacksmith's and carpenter's account 5 10 0
Seeds, for oats, potatoes, turnips, and grasses 10 0 0
Servant girl's wages and board wages to assist the crofter 20 0 0
Interest on £200 advanced on the house, and £250 on the stock, £450 at 5 per cent. 22 10 0

Annual Expenditure £103 0 0

The returns would be as follows:—
8 acres of oats, the value of the seed I estimate giving three returns . £24 0 0
I estimate the half of the potatoes to be sold 10 10 0
The remainder being used by the family.
The produce from the 8 cows, including stirks, I estimate thus:—
Milk and butter, and probably a cow or two to sell at the end of the year 64 0 0
Sheep, lambs, and wool . . 25 0 0
Poultry 5 0 0

128 10 0

Leaving £25 10 0
in favour of the crofter; but in addition to the above, the crofter will have fuel for his house, potatoes and vegetables for his family, worth, I estimate . . . 15 0 0

Showing a total balance of £40 0 0

in favour of the crofter, after paying all expenses. My experience among the crofters is, that in working for themselves they never estimate the value of the day's work. They simply go on, and if they have got a good return at the end of the year, they will be satisfied. But I think, in taking a croft of that extent, it is but right that these different items should be put down, with the view of knowing whether there was a likely chance of such a croft paying, and I have not the least doubt that if a croft were managed in the way described by one of the witnesses (I think Donald Campbell), it would pay. But giving such an extent of croft to any one crofter would not go far to reduce the congested state of the country, and I don't see why, in the present times, a great number of them should not be encouraged to migrate to the beautiful lands in the low lands of England at present lying waste. These lands are far better suited for cultivation; the returns they would give would be far better, and I have not the least doubt that Sir George Trevelyan would be very happy to give an immense quantity of his tracts all lying under grazing at present. The lands on the west coast of Skye will not produce the returns of the lands on the east coast, and the people suffer from that cause, not having sufficiently large returns to pay them for their labour. Dunvegan, Skye. John Robertson.

4860. There has been some reference made about the farm of Waterstein as a suitable place for crofters.—I don't think it is a suitable farm at all for being cut up into crofters' holdings.

4861. There was an assignment of land made from there already?—Yes, there was 300 acres given to the crofters from that farm, and the rest of the farm is at present under very valuable blackfaced sheep stock. That sheep stock would cost at least £1000. Now that would be a very large sum of money for the crofters to pay for stock; and for the proprietor to clear them off would mean a very great loss. It has been said that the usual valuations in the country for sheep stock are not fair to the proprietor. I differ from that view altogether. I know it is often said that the usual valuations of sheep are above the market value and unfair. This view I don't agree with, as I maintain that sheep bred on the farm should be above and very considerably above market value, and that the valuations are not unfair in this respect. To clear off sheep from a farm would be a very serious loss to the owner, and to restock it with strange sheep by the incoming tenant would also be a very serious loss. The valuations of sheep stock should be carefully and anxiously considered by the valuators, on behalf of those interested, and fairly adjusted; and for those reasons I don't think Waterstein would be a suitable place at all for taking over; it would be a very serious thing indeed.

4862. You are aware, I suppose, that there is an application for enlargement from Waterstein before the Crofters Commission at present?—Yes, I am aware of that.

4863. You are also aware, I suppose, Mr Robertson, of the terms of the remit under which we sit here?—I am quite aware of it.

4864. Are you of opinion, apart altogether from the number who could be accommodated, that there are lands in the districts specified by some of the previous witnesses which would be suitable for the purpose we have in view?—I think there are lands that would be suitable, if capital was advanced to the crofters to assist them in taking them.

4865. But leaving out of view the capital just now, you are of opinion that there are available lands for the object in view?—Well, there are lands that would be quite suitable for crofters, if they could take the whole of the township.

4866. If you could migrate the township?—If the township referred to could be taken wholly by the crofters.

4867. Quite so. That is land which could be cultivated to profit, or otherwise advantageously occupied?—Well, there is sufficient land for cultivation in connection with the township to give wintering for the stock; but I doubt if it could be profitably occupied otherwise.

4868. On what ground does your doubt mainly

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Robertson.

rest?—Well, the extent of the hill ground is so much greater than the arable land. It would take the whole arable land to grow sufficient food to winter the stock kept on the hill ground.

4869. Yes, but keeping in proportion the arable and grazing for the holdings we are having in view, I suppose there could be holdings formed which might reasonably be expected to be worked at a profit—certain holdings?—I believe that if the townships were taken up as a whole, they might be profitably managed with a small crofter class on them.

4870. Would you have graded holdings, or would you have the holdings nearly all of the same size; supposing the scheme gone into?—I think the crofters at present are not in a position to take very large holdings. I think such a holding as I referred to would be about the thing that ought to be adopted; but the difficulty is as to capital.

4871. What size of holding would you form in view of the crofters' ability to take it?—I have described the size that, I think, would suit the crofter; but I would, along with that, put as many crofters on the township as would occupy the whole of it, in equal proportion.

4872. But don't you think holdings might be formed rather smaller than you have indicated, and which the crofters might occupy without extraneous assistance?—I don't think they would; they would require outside assistance if you make them smaller.

4873. I suppose you agree, Mr Robertson, that the crofter townships in Glendale over which you have supervision are somewhat congested?—I do.

4874. And the holdings of many of them, at least, are too small, and the land is worked out?—Yes, they are too small.

4875. And it would, therefore, be a very desirable thing if, on reasonable terms and with reasonable prospects, they could get larger holdings?—Certainly.

4876. Do you agree with the present system of crofting in Glendale, by which a man has a holding for a home, and depends upon the south or the east for paying his rent? Is that a desirable, or is it a vicious system?—I don't know that it is a vicious system.

4877. Is it a system you would perpetuate in the future?—No.

4878. Why?—I think the holdings are too small.

4879. You, therefore, agree that a holding which will not admit of rotation of cropping is not a desirable holding?—I think the smallest holding could be cultivated by rotation.

4880. The smallest holding?—The very smallest.

4881. Three acres?—Even a garden can be cultivated by rotation.

4882. You heard some of the crofters say they could not cultivate by rotation, as they had to go on cropping to get grain?—Yes, but I heard another say that by following a rotation he was able to produce as much from two-thirds of his croft as he did formerly from the whole of the croft.

4883. Then, admitting that the congestion is great and the land exhausted, what is your remedy?—The only remedy is to migrate.

4884. I daresay you agree there are lands within the limits of this island to which crofters might be migrated?—Oh, I fancy so; but I doubt if it could be profitably done.

4885. Then, suppose it could not be profitably done, what is your remedy?—Well, I think that where land is to be had of that kind, the Government should buy it up from the proprietor.

4886. Is that your only remedy?—I think that is the only remedy. Government should buy up the townships, and let them to the crofters. One could hardly expect the landlord to do so,—to build houses on these properties.

4887. I suppose you are not an advocate of the system of competitive rents for holdings of which the rent has to be got outside the croft?—Not in congested districts.

4888. Or in any districts?—Well, on the east coast, where they have got different lands, the farms there are all let by competition.

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Robertson.

4889. Then are you in favour of competitive rents where the rent cannot be got out of the croft?—I am in favour of fair competition, but I don't think it would do at all where the districts are congested, because there are too many wanting land, and they will give more than its value.

4890. Then, not being in favour of competition, you are in favour of the system that is at present prevailing of fixing the rent by an independent tribunal?—I think that where you have crofters to deal with, it is the only system you can adopt.

4891. Now, are you in favour of fishermen's holdings, the fishermen depending on the sea for his livelihood?—I am in favour of giving them a small piece of land.

4892. A patch of land; not so much as to take him away from the sea?—About £3 of rent.

4893. Do you think that system could be extended in any considerable degree in this part of Skye?—I think, near the sea, it could.

4894. And do you think there are men who would be willing to adopt that system, living by the fishing industry, and having small patches of land, with a rent not exceeding £3?—Oh yes, I think so. You see they have a number of benefits from the small croft, where there is a family brought up.

4895. What are the benefits?—They have got potatoes, and fuel, and a little milk, perhaps, in summer, and poultry; that is a very great thing to have in addition to the fishing.

4896. I suppose you agree with the general current of the evidence to the effect that none, or almost none, of the Glendale crofters pay their rents out of their holdings?—Well, I don't think that they do.

4897. Would you kindly look at a scheme of charge and discharge made by Mr Mackintosh, the factor, on Lord Macdonald's estate?—I heard him give it.

4898. You heard him give his evidence?—Yes.

4899. Just look at the account then. Do you agree in the main with that account? I don't want to pin you to particular figures, but taking the thing generally?—It appears to be a very fair thing made up, but I don't think he has gone into it exhaustively.

4900. Do you think it is reliable?—I don't think he has gone into the expenditure properly, the expense attending a croft of that extent. For instance, he does not show any charge for buildings.

4901. Then in that respect the account is deficient?—Well, it has been omitted. If you carry out this plan, you must put additional expense in putting up buildings, which, at least, would cost £200.

4902. You mentioned the matter of Government advances for buildings. Would you be in favour of that?—I would.

4903. Are you of opinion that the security there would be a sufficient security?—I am.

4904. And a permanent security?—Quite so.

4905. Would you be in favour of such advances on any other part of the holding, the stock?—No, certainly not.

4906. What is your relation to the estate? Do you call yourself factor?—Well, I do not, but the people do. I call myself a farmer.

4907. To whom does the property belong?—To the Rev. Mr Macpherson. I reside on the farm of Orbost.

4908. You manage the property for the Rev. Mr Macpherson?—Yes.

4909. And have done so for a number of years?—Yes, for the last ten years.

4910. Would you describe yourself as agent for Mr Macpherson?—Well——

4911. I suppose, de facto, you are agent?—I am quite satisfied either way.

4912. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to the estimate you made for buildings, don't you think they are a little over-estimated, the buildings I mean that would be necessary for such a croft as you have described?—I don't think so. The house that I referred to in Donald

Macdonald's evidence is a house that a crofter ought to have, and I don't think it can be put up for less than £100.

4913. Then I think you have indicated an opinion that that was perhaps too large a house for a croft?—I don't think so.

4914. But, in the general case of crofters, don't you suppose that they would erect a considerable part of the building themselves?—This man admitted that he had, but all the same he said it cost him £100 over and above his own work, as I understood him. I don't think my estimate for outhouses is over the mark—'stable, 'byre, and barn, £100.'

4915. I think some of the witnesses indicated that they would be quite prepared to proceed at the first with houses that they might ultimately replace as they succeeded?—I don't think that would be advisable. We have had black houses long enough.

4916. But, as a matter of fact, are they not improving the black houses, since they got fixity of tenure?—Some are building new ones.

4917. And don't you think, with increased facilities, they would improve even more?—I have no doubt, if you give new holdings, as is contemplated, you ought to have respectable buildings on the crofts.

4918. To begin with?—To begin with. That is a very small estimate in building houses.

4919. But, as a matter of fact, is it not the case everywhere where new holdings are being erected, that they have to put up with inferior buildings to begin with?—These are by no means expensive that I have referred to. You cannot build even a black house for less than £20.

4920. £20 of cash, besides their own labour?—Yes, it would cost that at least.

4921. So you don't see your way to modify that figure?—I don't think I could. I have not the least doubt that the Government would be quite safe, if the houses were properly put up, in advancing money for the building.

4922. Had you in your mind, then, a sufficient security as well as a good house?—I had merely the houses as security.

4923. You simply had in your mind, then, the necessities of the new settler?—Yes; and if it is proposed to make a new crofter township, that is what I had in view.

4924. Then, with regard to your estimate of a proper holding, which I am quite prepared to admit does not differ materially from those we have had, except in the case that you have allowed a larger proportion of arable to the whole area, and I quite see the wisdom of that, you have stated 250 acres of hill pasture; how many sheep would that carry?—I put down 80 sheep, including all ages.

4925. And you think it would be an advantage, then, to have such a large proportion of that arable as 20 acres?—I think it is necessary for the cattle, and it would also enable the crofter to winter his sheep over the arable lands in winter.

4926. May I ask you if that is about the proportion of pasture to arable land upon the large farms at present, or is it over it?—Well, I think it is about it.

4927. So, then, if we suppose the case where a large farm is divided into smaller farms, you think the proportion is pretty well observed?—I think so.

4928. That is an important point. There is one further remark that I noticed. You stated your opinion regarding statements made by witnesses as to the selling off of the stock on the change of tenancy, I suppose?—By valuation.

4929. That it was and ought to be sold above the market price?—Certainly.

4930. Do you not think that is a statement that requires a little justification?—Certainly not.

4931. I did not fully gather the ground of that statement?—Stock bred on the place are of much more value than stock purchased outside and brought in.

4932. That would depend, of course, on the distance which they were brought?—It does not depend on that at all. It depends entirely on the difficulty in bringing strange sheep to lands, and keeping them alive on the ground.

4933. That would apply, I think, to the land where the conditions were different as to climate and altitude, &c.?—The loss is heavier with the west coast climate.

4934. But if they were only transferred from one part of Skye to the other, do you think it would injure them?—The stock will not remain on the ground they were not bred on without close herding.

4934*a*. Is that an element to be taken into account?—Yes, what we call acclimatising. In making up valuations we always allow a certain sum for acclimatising.

4935. So that they have a different value on the hill and in the market?—Certainly.

4936. That is practically what you meant?—It is.

4937. Mr Forsyth.—Have the rents of the tenants of Glendale been fixed mostly by the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

4938. Have they been paid?—Yes; they are a little in arrear, but they have been doing their best.

4939. Are their arrears on account of arrears ordered to be paid by the Commissioners?—They have some of these to pay yet.

4940. But, on the whole, the rents have been fairly paid?—Excepting one township. One township has not paid much of the arrears ordered to be paid.

4941. Which township is that?—The township of Skinidin.

4942. That is the only one you consider to be seriously behind at all?—Yes.

4943. Mr Gordon.—Would you mind telling us, Mr Robertson, what difference, per head, you would put upon sheep on the ground?—In the first place, in making up the valuations we have to take the cast sheep as the basis; then we allow a certain amount for the younger ages, and we then allow a certain sum for acclimatising. We then take the average price of the ewe lamb and the wedder lamb, and we put these all together and arrive at the final value of the sheep.

4944. And what would be the general result,—I don't mean a specific result but the general result,—how much more do you put on the sheep, 7s. or 8s. or 10s. above the market value?—It would be more than that if you take the younger ages into consideration. The sheep that we sell, and on which we base our valuation, are old sheep; they are exhausted; the younger sheep are much more valuable, and they remain on the ground.

4945. Quite so. But what would be the difference between the market value of, say, 2000 sheep of all ages—ewes, wedders, and hoggs, blackfaced?—From 17s. to £1.

4946. The difference between the market value and the value on the ground?—Yes.

4947. That is surely a high estimate. Now what is the number of stock upon this farm of Waterstein?—567.

4947*a*. All told?—All told.

4948. How many townships would lie contiguous to this hill?—Two. We have given 300 acres of the farm already.

4949. How many holdings would participate in the whole hill, supposing it was to be given over to them?—I don't think it is a suitable township to give over to crofters at all, for various reasons. It is the home farm of the property.

4950. Is there a mansion house on the property?—There is a lodge.

4951. And is there an arable farm attached to the lodge?—It is a very romantic, wild place, suitable for the proprietor in various ways, if he came to reside on the property.

4952. But he would not care perhaps for the sheep stock?—I am sure he would be better pleased to have it in his own hands.

4953. Well, suppose it was given over. There was some discussion and some questions asked here to-day in regard to the relative rents that could be paid by

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Robertson.

crofters and by tenants. What is your opinion as to that?—It varies a little.

4954. Do you think that if a farm was divided among crofters they would be able to pay the same rent as an only tenant?—If they were in a position to take the land, I think they would.

4955. There would be the same rent drawn from it, but would they be able to pay the same rents as the tenant?—The chief objection on the part of the proprietor to many crofters is that they destroy a good deal of the land from cutting peats and neglecting to lay down the sods; in this way the land is becoming of less value.

4956. But suppose you put a farm such as Waterstein under crofters, you would have to devote a considerable portion of it possibly for the keep of the cattle and the horses. You speak about two horses to each 20 acre croft: now, if you divide that, you would have possibly 20 or 30 horses to provide food for?—I am not quite sure of the extent.

4957. But take any farm of the same size?—Take the farm of Ramasaig. It would be more easily managed to give the whole township of Ramasaig to the crofters.

4958. What is the rent of Ramasaig just now?—It is not separate from the rest of the farms. There are only two crofters there, paying £7, 15s.

4959. What is the rent of the farm?—The rest of the farms are all under one holding.

4960. And if you were to devote the farm of Ramasaig to crofting purposes, do you think you would get the same rent for it as you are getting just now?—Possibly.

4961. In regard to the proprietor's interest in these buildings, you propose an expenditure of £200 in building under a rent charge. Do you understand that this rent charge would form the first charge on the property before your rent would become exigible?—I understand that.

4962. And do you think it would be safe for a landlord to bring in this forehanded claim?—That is another matter.

4963. That is a very serious matter?—If the building is put up at the expense of the Government, of course I understand that the interest would be payable by the crofter.

4964. But you proposed to have a rent charge of £22, 10s. for buildings and stock together?—Yes.

4965. But £10 of that would be the first charge, and come in before the rent?—I understand that, of course.

4966. Would that not place the landlord in an awkward position?—I think not.

4967. That £10 would have to be paid before he could get any rent?—Certainly, but he would have the security of the stock.

4968. The stock might disappear?—The stock could not disappear in one year.

4969. Well, I shall only ask one other question. What is your idea about a club farm? Would you propose or prefer to keep a grazing of that kind under a club farm, or in individual holdings?—I would have it a club farm, compulsorily.

4970. Mr Maccallum.—There are not in Skye many holdings of the kind you described—20 acres arable and 250 hill grazing?—No, this is a new suggestion altogether.

4971. And you think that the formation of such holdings as these would be for the advantage of the crofters?—I think if you could put the crofters in a position to take them, it would be an advantage to them.

4972. After that it would pay them?—That would depend very much on the crofter. I know that one of the witnesses here, if he had a farm like what I have described, would make it pay. I refer to Campbell.

4973. You are afraid they have not the experience just now for managing?—There is a great want of experience.

4974. But if they had the experience, the holdings would be made to pay?—The present generation will not: you would require to wait on the younger generation to get experience.

4975. But suppose these farms were treated properly, they would pay?—It depends, of course, on the prices that might be got for stock.

4976. And that would relieve the congestion considerably, if these holdings were formed. They are not very large: you could find a good number of them, could not you?—Well, there could be some found.

4977. Do you agree with Mr Macpherson that there are lands in Bracadale?—I thought the lands in Bracadale were all let.

4978. Oh yes, exactly; but suppose these were available?—I am not acquainted with that part of the country at all, except by report. The people speak highly of it.

4979. Would it not also be for the advantage of the proprietor that these holdings should be formed? In the meantime does he not suffer on account of the land being let to large farmers?—In what respect?

4980. That they asked reductions, and that when the leases are running out, he has to let the farms at a greatly reduced rent?—I am not aware that they got more reductions than the crofters have got.

4981. Are you aware that some of the large farms in Skye have come down 50 per cent.?—I am aware of that; but I am also aware that the farms throughout Skye were raised in rent 50 per cent., and the crofters' were not raised as a rule: they remained as they were before. I can give you a statement of one township (I have not got it here) of crofters, where in 1836 the rent was £12: now the rent is £5, 10s.

4982. Might it not be the case that the rent charged from the beginning on the crofts was too high? That when the rents were fixed, they were too high?—That I do not know. I suppose it was by competition in those days.

4983. But was there not a valuation in some cases?—I am not aware of any: the present Crofters Commission was the first, I think.

4984. Were the rents not fixed for them by a valuator appointed by the proprietor?—Quite possible.

4985. In 1810, for instance?—I am not aware.

4986. Did you quite acknowledge this: that when a large farm falls upon the proprietor, he is in a great difficulty with the stock: for instance, at the taking over of the stock, he has had to pay more than the market value of it?—He has a right to.

4987. He has a right to pay more than the market value?—Yes. The incoming tenant would pay more than the market value.

4988. That may be just enough. Does it not operate in this way, that it is very difficult to find a tenant for a large farm?—It has been, of late years.

4989. Very much so?—Yes.

4990. It is very difficult to get a tenant for a very large farm on account of the increased value of the stock, which he has to pay over and above the market value; that interferes, of course, with the letting?—You must take the stock of a township if you take it over for crofters. You cannot expect the proprietor or the owner to sell off the stock in the market.

4991. But we will suppose that there might be some interference on the part of the Government: there might be some help, for example, for settling the crofters, but I don't suppose you look for help in the letting of large farms, for instance?—No, anyone taking a large farm is supposed to take the stock.

4992. As a matter of fact, it is very difficult to let large farms?—There are none unlet that I am aware of.

4993. Glenbrittle, for instance, in Bracadale?—Yes, you are quite right; that is one.

4994. And throughout the whole country, don't you find many of them in the hands of the proprietors?—I am not aware of any.

4995. Do you know Knoydart?—No.

4996. I think the whole of Knoydart is in the hands of the proprietor. It is a matter of notoriety that that is the case, but, with regard to these small holdings, would there be any difficulty in letting them?—I think they could not be taken by the present crofters without help.

4997. But supposing they got help, they would be ready to undertake them?—Oh, ready enough.

4998. There is a great desire to take such holdings as these. Then you differ in opinion from Mr Macpherson in regard to Waterstein; you think that it could not be profitably occupied by crofters in small holdings?—I think it would be a pity to have it changed from what it is now. It is very much required as a home farm to rear certain animals that are required for the rest of the stocks.

4999. But leaving that out of account, is it such a place as could be profitably occupied by crofters?—Well, I don't know: it is a farm that should not be cut up, and the proprietor has gone to great expense in fencing and other improvements.

5000. But it is not under regular rotation of crop?—It is all under grass. It is only suitable for grazing.

5001. According to the remit made to us, we have to consider what lands, not under cultivation, would be suitable for such holdings as these. Are you prepared to say, for instance, that Waterstein would not be suitable?—I am prepared to say that the present proprietor will be very glad to sell the whole property to you, and you can put it under crofters or anything you like afterwards.

5002. I would like to have your opinion on that?—I have given my opinion: I don't think it is suitable for crofters.

5003. Why?—I have my own reasons for it, which I have explained as well as I can. It is required for the management of the property.

5004. The reason you give is that it is very suitable for something else, but was that the reason why it is not suitable for crofters?—I think the proprietor has a right to turn his land surely to the best account that he can.

5005. No doubt, but that is not the point?—If you want to take it over, of course it is a different thing.

5006. Well, passing from that, as you are not inclined to give a definite answer in regard to it: you acknowledge, however, that there is a valuable blackfaced stock upon it?—I do.

5007. And land that would carry a valuable blackfaced stock would surely be suitable for crofter grazing, would it not?—No doubt, if you are going to make grazing for them; but I think it would be a pity to turn it into cultivation.

5008. That may be; but unless the land is good it would not hold a valuable blackfaced stock?—It is very good land indeed.

5009. Too good for crofters, perhaps?—Well, very likely.

5010. Mr Macleod.—With regard to this farm of Waterstein, I understand that your objection to interfere with it is more on account of the interference with the amenity of the property rather than that it could not be profitably cultivated?—That is the chief reason.

5011. What stock did you say was on this farm at the present time?—About 600 sheep, rather less.

5012. Is that the regular stock, or is it lower or higher than it has been?—We keep it lower. We purchase about this time of the year a number of cattle from the tenants, and we have a suitable place for grazing these cattle: without that they would be unfit to go to the market.

5013. That is, along with the blackfaced stock you graze a number of cattle?—Yes.

5014. But the figure, as regards the sheep stock, is about what it has been all along?—Yes.

5015. Has it always been a blackfaced stock?—No; but since it came into the hands of the present proprietor it has. Previous to that it was let to the late Dr Nicol Martin, and he kept cattle on it.

5016. Did he get valuation for his cattle when he went out of the farm, or did he clear them off?—He took the cattle off, but the proprietor paid the valuation for the sheep that were brought there by Mr Macdonald, Tormore.

5017. Putting aside for a moment the question of the amenity of the house at Waterstein, you don't see any great difficulty in handing over that stock at valuation as a club farm, supposing there was a club farm formed there?—I think it is a farm that ought to be retained where it is. If you put crofters on it, you will cut up all the available grass lands, and the high lands are unfit for cultivation.

5018. But you said in your statement, with regard to what I may perhaps term your ideal croft, that that portion of it which would be cultivated by the crofter would provide wintering for his stock?—Yes; but it is a larger proportion than usual for the purpose. There is more arable land to be had in it, in proportion to the hill ground, than in most farms in the district.

5019. On Waterstein?—Yes.

5020. There is a larger proportion of arable land on Waterstein than there is to be found on other places?—I think so.*

5021. So that in that way it would be more profitable for the crofters' holdings that you have been speaking of to-day?—Yes; but you would destroy the value of the grazing.

5022. Now, there was a point that came up here to-day several times as well as elsewhere, with regard to the rents paid by crofters, and the rents paid by large farmers. What is your view: do you think that the crofter pays per acre a lower or a higher rate than the tacksman?—I think about the same rate.

5023. And I daresay you will also agree that the crofters' land is not better at any rate than the tacksman's?—I think it has been as good.

5024. But there is no great difference between the quality of the crofters' land and the land of the large farm?—Oh, well, you will get farms to vary very much.

5025. Taking it over the whole?—I don't think the crofters' land, on account of its being bad, was the cause of their being situated where they are. I think it was on account of it being near the sea.

5026. What I wish to know is, whether, speaking from your large experience, you can tell us whether the tacksman's or the crofters' land is the better at the present time?—The tacksman's land is in a better state for cropping than the land under the crofters.

5027. Just so, and the rent is about the same?—As far as my experience goes.

5028. And do you think there would be any difficulty in getting the small tenant to pay a rent equal to the tacksman's?—Oh, I think if they had the means they would pay the same rent.

5029. Mr Munro.—As one remedy for the congested state of many of the districts in Skye, I understood you, Mr Robertson, to suggest migration of the crofters to the more fertile lands of England?—I did.

5030. Might I ask whether you have made that suggestion with the approbation of the crofters themselves?—None of them.

5031. You do it on your own responsibility entirely?—Entirely.

5032. Would such a scheme meet with the approval of the landlords in Skye?—I think they would be very pleased.

5033. Do you think such a proposal would result favourably to the crofters themselves?—I do indeed. I passed through a great portion of the north of England last year, and there is a great extent of lands there lying waste, and much better suited for crofter occupation than the lands we have here.

5034. Then, if such a scheme were thought of, how would you propose to give effect to it?—Well, you proposed to give them a certain sum of money to carry them away to Manitoba. Why not give them the same means to enable them to migrate to England.

5035. We proposed nothing. But you suggest that they should get money aid to carry them to England. Now, don't you think that such assistance might be as profitably given in helping them to migrate in their own island?—If it could be done; but the lands in the island will not give the same return that can be got from these lands in England.

* With reference to this answer Mr Robertson has since written—'This I now find is a mistake, a large portion of the 'low ground being marshy and unfit for cultivation'

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Robertson.

5036. Supposing the landlords in England were unwilling to receive the crofters? you wish to get rid of them, and they may be unwilling to receive them?—Oh no, we don't wish to get rid of them.

5037. I am glad to hear it.—I merely make the suggestion as being better than the idea of settling them in this land with its poor climate.

5038. I understand you to suggest that they could be removed with advantage to themselves, and benefit to the island of Skye?—I hold that opinion.

5039. You also hinted that it might be a favourable scheme for the Government to acquire the lands of Skye, and to let them out in portions to the crofters?—In townships.

5040. Have you ever considered what would be a fair basis of purchase of land in Skye?—Yes, I have considered that too.

5041. On a fair rent what would you consider a fair purchase?—From eighteen to twenty years for crofters' townships.

5042. Now, supposing that lands were acquired in that way and given to the crofters, do you consider that the crofter could pay up principal and interest spread over a number of years, say from thirty-five to forty years?—I think if you gave them a start they would.

5043. So that all that is wanted towards the prosperity of the crofter is that he should be settled down upon the land under fair conditions?—With capital.

5044. Of course, I am assuming that?—Yes.

5045. The Chairman.—What counties in England did you particularly refer to in making the suggestion you did?—I referred to Yorkshire, Northumberland.

5046. Any counties farther south?—And Lancashire. I have not been through any other.

5047. Would you mention what parishes in these counties?—I cannot give you the particulars, or the names of the places.

5048. Could you give me the name of any estate?—No; I merely point out that the lands are there.

5049. But you could take us to them and show us them?—I could.

5050. On whose estates are they?—I cannot say.

5051. I want the latitude and longitude then?—Sir George Trevelyan has most extensive properties, most of them in his own hands, and he himself or his forefathers, I understand, evicted all the tenants that were on it.

5052. You understand upon what ground?—I think the Duke of Argyll said so.

5053. I suppose you admit that the land called Waterstein is within the limit of the terms of reference?—I suppose all lands in Skye are.

5054. No, all lands in Skye are not. But you admit, I daresay, that the lands of Waterstein are within the limits of the terms of reference?—I understood that you had power to view any lands in Skye that you thought suitable for settling crofters on.

5055. But we have no cognisance of crofters' lands at all—crofters' grazing lands or arable. I must repeat a question which has already been put in more forms than one. I think in the earlier stage of your examination you said that the farm of Waterstein was unsuited for various reasons. Would you just epitomise these reasons as briefly as possible?—In the first place, we look upon it as the home farm of the property. In the second place, we keep a selected class of ewes on that farm, from which we rear very select tups—young tups for the rest of the lands in the possession of the proprietor.

5056. Any other reason?—We have also used this farm for grazing the stock purchased from tenants about this time of the year; and without the grazing lands the stock would be unfit to go to the market. Also that the crofters for the portion they got, paid no rent for six years. Another reason is that there is a rabbit warren on the high land of Waterstein.

5057. Any other reasons?—Those are the chief reasons; also that the proprietor went to an expense of £500 or £600 in fencing the property in 1883 or 1884.

5058. In your mind these are the main reasons?—These are the main reasons.

5059. Does any Glendale crofter present desire to suggest a question to be put to Mr Robertson?

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Robertson.

5060. Mr John Macpherson.—First of all, I was here, about a fortnight ago, before the Crofters Commission, and Mr Robertson then said that there were 773 sheep on Waterstein; to-day he said there were only 576.—The Witness. One of the assessors is present, perhaps he will bear out my statement that I said 576.

5061. Mr Watson.—The number stated by Mr Robertson to the Crofters Commission was 576.

5062. Mr Macpherson.—Is that the number he and his shepherd gave?—Mr Watson. Yes, that is the number. His shepherd gave the figures in detail.

5063. Mr Macpherson.—Would any human being, such as you have seen to-day from Glendale, be more valuable in your view than rams, Mr Robertson?

5064. The Chairman.—I disallow that question.

5065. Mr Macpherson.—Was Waterstein ever a home farm before your days?—It has always been; it never has been in the hands of the crofters.

5066. And what is Hamara?—There is only a park there.

5067. The Chairman.—We will see the ground for ourselves.

JOHN MACLEOD, Crofter, Harlosh (54). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

John Macleod

5068. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

5069. What is your rent?—£3, 3s.

5070. What was the old rent?—£4, 4s.

5071. Are you a joint-tenant?—Yes.

5072. I see the holding contains 6 acres 1 rood 12 poles arable, and 18 acres 1 rood outrun, with $\frac{1}{26}$th share of 55 acres common pasture, and 1180 of grazing common to Greep, Roag, and Harlosh. Do you wish to make a statement to us?—Yes. It is as follows:—

Statement of the crofter townships of Roag, Herebost, Roskhill, and Harlosh, on the estate of Macleod of Macleod, in the parish of Duirinish.

These townships are overcrowded, on poor, miserable holdings that are far too small. They are occupied as follows:—

	Name of Township.	No. of Crofters.	No. of Cottars.	Hill Grazings common to the Three Townships.
1	Roag and Herebost, -	36	11	1180 acres of inferior hill grazing among 88 families, equal to a little over 13 acres to each family.
2	Roskhill, - - -	8	0
3	Harlosh, - - -	27	6
		71	17	88 Families.

What the people require to improve their condition is to lift most of them out of their present holdings and plant them on the large farms on larger holdings. Suitable and available lands are to be found in our neighbourhood for carrying out this proposal in the farms under-mentioned.

Feorlig.

The rent of this land was £200; it is held by an absentee tacksman, Mr Scobie, who holds immense farms in Sutherlandshire. It carries 1200 sheep, 50 head cattle, and 4 horses. It is the identical kind of farm to subdivide. (1) An old township, called Crosernish, where there were five tenants, was cleared by

Dunvegan, Skye.
John Macleod.

Macleod of Macleod for Mr Gibbon, his factor, and they were thrown upon Harlosh; (2) Glen Feorlig was cleared of nine tenants, and shows stretches of old arable land where the plough could draw a furrow for about half a mile.

Balmeanach Farm.

Rent, £105. In it there were old tenant townships that were cleared, such as (1) Groban, from where there were four families evicted without being a penny in arrears. One of the tenants, Murdo Macrae, after keeping his own family in home-grown meal, and having wintered his stock of cattle, took 6 sacks of oats out of the place when he was evicted at the Whitsunday term, after having done all the tillage as formerly; (2) Shaigary, where there were two families evicted.

Ose Farm.

Tenants could be migrated to Glen Ullinish, where there is plenty old arable land. Besides, there are 19 crofters on Ose Farm in very miserable circumstances through smallness of their holdings, and being able to keep only one cow each and no sheep. There is enough grazing in their neighbourhood to put them into proper condition, if given to them.

Ebost Farm.

This farm rents at £250. The tenant to-day cultivates only about 24 acres of this farm. The following old townships are in this farm, to which new tenants could be profitably put:—(1) Colbost, where tenants were before, and where there is plenty of arable land which was not cultivated for 50 years; (2) Glen Ostle, where there is a lot of old arable land, and where new tenants could be comfortably placed; (3) Glen Colbost, where five tenants once lived, but were evicted over forty years ago; each of them had at the time 5 or 6 cows, besides younger beasts, a horse, and flocks of sheep. Delegate John Macdonald knew every one of them. They were sent down, with several others, to Glendale to be made into fishermen, a calling of which they were absolutely ignorant.

Glenvicaskill and Glenose Farm.

This farm is presently occupied by the Laird of Skeabost. Delegate John Macdonald remembers five tenants being in Glenose; each of them have had, at the time of their eviction, eight cows, a horse, and about forty sheep. They were evicted into Glendale to be made into fishermen. Glenvicaskill is admirably suited for new holdings. Delegate John Macdonald remembers the clearing of this glen by Macleod and his factor. The old tenants were in splendid circumstances.

Orbost Farm.

New tenants could be placed in the following parts of this farm:—(1) Forse, where there were tenants before, but were evicted; (2) Brandersaig, which was also formerly occupied; (3) Varkasaig and Idrigil, where tenants were before.

Uiginish Farm.

This farm is in the hands of the Macleod himself. On the outskirts of it is the old cleared township of Ostle, where three were before, and which is admirably suited for new holdings.

Claggan Farm.

Rent about £600. On this farm were the old townships of Lowavaig, Nishabost, Orlarach, Swordale, Totachoger, and Bay. Besides the Claggan home farm, all these places were cleared over fifty years ago, and made into a sheep farm. It is exceedingly suitable for small holdings. Not to speak of the above-mentioned farms, there is enough land in Bracadale in the three farms of Glenbrittle, Talisker, and Drynoch on the Macleod estate, to provide for the whole of the people of the parishes of Duirinish and Bracadale; and it is our desire to see these lands given to the people, and the people put back to these lands from which they were evicted in former times.

It is evident, from the present circumstances of the tenants of Vatten, a farm that was broken up eight years ago, and given to crofters, that if the large farms were broken, crofters would work them to a profit.

(Signed) JOHN MACLEOD, Harlosh.
JOHN MACPHIE, Harlosh.
JOHN his × mark. MACDONALD, Roskhill.
MALCOLM MACLEOD, Harlosh.

5073. Who prepared that statement?—A meeting of crofters.

5074. Who wrote it out?—Roderick John Campbell, Roskhill.

5075. It had better be signed by him and by yourself.

5075*a*. Mr Macleod.—How many crofters are in the township you represent?—Twenty-seven.

5076. And cottars, six?—Yes.

5077. What is the average size of the holdings?—They are all very small.

5077*a*. And is there a considerable number of the crofters and cottars in the township prepared to take new holdings if they were put at their disposal?—Yes.

5078. Would they require assistance to stock such holdings and to erect the buildings?—They would be the better of it; but I believe that if they got the land they themselves would pretty well stock it.

5079. You heard to-day an estimate as to the cost of out-buildings. Do you think it would cost a large sum to put up the necessary buildings?—It would not cost the sum that I heard.

5080. What do you think it would cost?—I believe £20 would suffice well enough as they would do all the labour themselves.

5081. That is to begin with?—Yes. They would put up the buildings themselves; they have put up good houses already on our township, on the patches they are now in possession of.

5082. Did they get any assistance?—Nothing.

5083. Could you tell us whether the tenants in your township have been improving their mode of cultivation within recent years?—They have no room to cultivate different from what they used to, but they are making the best of it.

5084. They have no land under rotation?—No; nor room for the purpose. Their present holdings being so small they require to have them all tilled in order to provide wintering for their cattle.

5085. Do they contemplate putting the land under rotation if they get larger holdings?—Yes, they would readily do that.

5086. Would you say what is your impression as to the relative rents paid by small tenants and by tacksmen; which is paying most per acre?—The crofter pays more per acre—twice or three times as much.

5086*a*. Mr Maccallum.—I notice an important statement at the end of your paper here, where it is said,—'It is evident, from the present circumstances of the 'tenants of Vatten, a farm that was broken up eight 'years ago, and given to crofters, that if the large farms 'were broken, crofters would work them to a profit.' Can you tell us about the breaking up of this farm, and the circumstances of the people when they entered, as compared with their circumstances now?—The landlord gave the crofters the farm of Vatten, and they found security for the stock that was on it at the time. One of the Vatten tenants is here, and he can tell better about it.

Dunvegan, Skye.
John Macleod.

5087. What is his name?—Murdo Montgomery.

5088. We may get it from Donald Ferguson?—Yes, he is here too.

5089. They had not the money for purchasing the stock when they entered?—No.

5090. But they found security for it?—Yes.

5091. And have they been able since then to pay the stock?—I understand they have managed it.

5092. Can you tell us as to the present condition of the stock, whether it has improved or otherwise?—I believe the stock is quite as good now as it was then; but I refer to one of the Vatten tenants who is here.

5093. Mr Gordon.—You say that the small tenants are paying twice or three times as much for the land as the large tenants. Is it off the ground that you are paying that rent, or from your own personal labour?—We take it from the earnings of our labour.

5094. You could not say that the small tenants would be able to pay their rents without labour?—They cannot pay at all the rents of their present holdings.

5095. They are paying more for house rent than for land?—Quite so.

5096. The Chairman.—You say that crofters pay three times as much as large farmers. On what is that answer based?—I know the township in which I live pays at that rate.

5097. Well, now, compare the rent of that township with some farm that you know, and show us how it is three times as much as the farm rent?—It is quite visible on the tack of Feorlig, which is near us. There is fine open land there.

5098. How do you say that your township rents are three times as much as that of Feorlig?—I come to that conclusion, because the lands of that farm are fine good land, and we are very much confined into a park.

5099. Is that your sole reason?—Yes; I have no other way of getting at it.

5100. Mr Reginald Macleod.—You have said that you pay £3, 3s. of rent. What stock do you keep on your croft?—Two cows; that is the souming of it.

5101. Any sheep?—No.

5101*a*. And you have a certain acreage of arable land?—Six acres 1 rood 12 poles.

5102. Do you think that a large farm with 6 acres of arable would keep two cows and have a considerable outrun for the payment of £1, 1s.?—In my opinion the sheep farmer is not paying so much as we do, as the grazing of six Cheviot ewes is equivalent to that of one cow. The souming of Feorlig is 258 cows, and at the present rent that would only make 15s. 6d. for each cow.

5103. Passing to another point, what do you know about evictions that you allege to have taken place on the Macleod estate? Hearsay is nothing. What do you know personally?—I don't remember anything; but I remember the people being sent away from Glenose and Glenvicaskill.

5104. You yourself remember them being sent away?—Yes.

5105. Do you know anything of the lands to which they went in Glendale?—No; they were sent to Lowergill and Ramasaig, and I don't know anything about these places.

5106. Would you be surprised to hear that instead of these people having been evicted from good lands and sent to bad, the lands to which they were sent were better than those from which they came?—No; my belief is that they were sent from good land to worse land.

5107. That is contrary to the fact.

5108. The Chairman.—You used the word 'sent': in what sense does that apply?

5109. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I think it cannot be said that a man is 'evicted' when he is taken from one part of the estate and placed on another.

5110. The Chairman.—Did they go of their own consent, or were they sent forcibly?

5111. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I understand not forcibly, but by agreement with the landlord. To Witness.—You have said you were very much crowded, and you have given figures as to the number of crofters and cottars in the different townships. How did the cottars get established on these crofts?—So far as the cottars in my own township are concerned, they have been there as far back as I recollect.

Dunvegan, Skye.
John Macleod.

5112. Are they not the sons of crofters who have preferred to settle at home on their father's croft rather than go farther afield?—No, not one of them is of that class.

5113. They have been there all your life and knowledge?—Yes.

5114. Can any of the crofters or cottars in your township stock a holding such as was described by Mr John Macpherson and other witnesses earlier in the day?—The crofters could, but the cottars could not.

5115. Have the crofters got means or stock, have they got money in the bank? I am very glad if they have; but have they, as a matter of fact, got money in the bank, or is it stock that they already possess to put on these lands?—Some of them would stock the new holdings with what stock they possess, and others with moneys which they have in bank. If they get the land, there need be no fear but they will stock it.

5116. Then crofts in your district must be very profitable if the crofters have been able to save money and place it in bank?—Whatever way they came to have the money, if they get the land they will stock it, and they will make good use of it.

5117. You have alluded to Vatten, which Macleod broke up some seven or eight years ago, in order to benefit the best of the crofters in the district. Are you aware that those selected crofters, who were the most competent in the district, had not means to stock the land, and that in some instances the proprietor himself, in his anxiety to carry out this experiment, advanced them or became security for the money himself?—The tenants who took Vatten in that way were not a bit better off than the rest of the tenants in the township from which they were taken, as the most of them were in arrears when they got Vatten.

5118. I ask if you are aware of these facts?—I know that they had no money when they got the stock, and that they could not get the stock without finding security; and they themselves are saying now that the stock is cleared, that they have paid it all.

MALCOLM MACLEOD, Crofter, Harlosh (60)—examined. Malcolm Macleod.

5119. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Harlosh?—Yes.

5120. I find from the Blue Book that your holding has 5 acres 34 poles arable, 13 acres 3 roods 9 poles outrun, and a share of 56 acres common pasture, divided into 26 shares; also a share of 1180 acres hill pasture, common to the three townships of Greep, Roag, and Harlosh. The rent was formerly £2, 19s. and is now £2, 12s. Do you know of land in the neighbourhood of your holding, which, in your opinion, would be suitable for new holdings?—Yes.

5121. Where is that land?—Feorlig.

5122. Is that a farm?—Yes.

5123. Who occupies the farm?—Mr Scobie.

5124. Does he reside on the farm?—No.

5125. Is there a dwelling-house on the farm?—Yes.

5126. Does anybody live there?—The shepherds live there.

5127. But he himself, I understand, lives in the county of Sutherland?—Yes.

5128. How long has he had this farm?—About forty-one years.

5129. On a succession of leases?—Yes; his father was there before him.

5130. Is there land there that would accommodate a number of crofters?—Yes, a good number.

5131. On holdings of what size?—14 to 20 acres arable.

5132. And a corresponding grazing?—Yes, along with it.

5133. And is the old arable there good?—Yes, very good.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Malcolm Macleod.

5134. Do you know about rotation of crops?—Oh yes, I am well acquainted with the like of that.

5135. Do you cultivate your present holding by rotation?—Yes.

5136. Then if you got into a new holding, you would be able to carry out that system more efficiently with a large extent of ground?—I would rather the ground than the fishing.

5137. (Question repeated).—Yes, I would.

5138. What stock would you think it right to have on a holding of 14 acres arable?—Four cows, a horse, and 20 sheep.

5139. Are you favourable to the club farm system?—It would need to be club stock.

5140. You would be in favour of making the club farm system compulsory upon the crofters?—Yes.

5141. And do you think there is such a feeling towards it that there would be a general consent to the adoption of that system?—Yes, quite.

5142. Is it the current belief of the crofters that it would be more profitable to them?—Yes, it would.

5143. Do you know about the Grazings Act passed recently?—Yes.

5144. Has it been adopted to any extent in this district?—No.

5145. Has there been any meeting of crofters to consider it?—No.

5146. Have none of you got a copy of the Act?—No.

5147. Mr Sutherland.—How far is your present holding from the place where you think new holdings could be advantageously formed?—It is not twenty yards.

5148. Mr Macleod.—Is Feorlig the only place where there is arable land on the farm of Feorlig?—There are other townships, small places.

5149. Can you give their names?—Glen-Eoghainn, Brechganish, Caroy, Crosornish, Balmore.

5150. These are all on Feorlig?—Yes.

5151. And you would be prepared to point out those townships if we came to look at them?—Yes.

5152. Mr J. T. Mackenzie, Factor for Macleod of Macleod.—You said that a croft with 4 cows, 20 sheep, and 1 horse was according to your idea of what the size of the croft should be. Now, what rent would you be inclined to pay for such a croft?—I have nothing to do with the rent.

5153. But you will have to pay the rent?—Oh, yes, to be sure: but the Commission is there.

5154. Would you give £20 for it?—I will say nothing about the rent.

5155. But you must answer the question.—I will not answer your questions. I have nothing to do with it.

5156. What rent would you be inclined to give?—I have nothing to say as to the rent. There are Commissioners going round, and let them look at it. I want a fair rent.

5157. Would you give £10 for the croft?—Ten pounds?

5158. Would you give £5 for it?—I would give a fair rent for it.

5159. Would you give £5?—That will do! a fair rent.

5160. I want to compare his reply with the statement of the previous witness, who said that their lands were much dearer than the amounts paid by the farmers; and I want to bring out the answer to these two points. If he says what he will give for the croft that he has quoted the stock for, I will then say what the rent of the ground now is.

5161. The Chairman.—Will you kindly ask further?

5162. Mr J. T. Mackenzie.—I am afraid I cannot elicit any satisfactory reply.

hn Macphie.

JOHN MACPHIE, Crofter, Harlosh (64).

5163. The Chairman.—I see you have a croft of 6 acres 1 rood 29 poles arable, and 3 acres 3 roods 37 poles outrun, with pasturage the same as the previous witness. Your former rent was £4 and your fair rent is £2, 8s. Do you desire a new holding?—Yes.

Dunvegan Skye.

John Macphie.

5164. Where would you have it?—In Feorlig.

5165. You heard the previous witness's statement with regard to the farm?—Yes, and I concur in it.

5166. Do you know of other lands besides Feorlig which would be suitable for new holdings?—The only other land I know is the lands of Crosornish and Balmore.

5167. Any more?—Yes, there are other lands up the way of Bracadale.

5168. Do you know the old township of Dun-an-eil-thirich?—Yes, I know it well.

5169. Is there a crofter township there?—Yes, and very much overcrowded.

5170. Any other places besides Crosornish and Balmore and Feorlig?—I don't know any other lands near our present township. Where we are at present, we have to keep the cattle on tether for want of room.

John Macdonald.

JOHN MACDONALD, Tailor and Crofter, Roskhill (66).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

5171. The Chairman.—Has your rent been fixed by the Crofters Commission?—Not yet.

5172. What rent are you paying at present?—39s.

5173. Mr Macintyre looked at your holding recently?—Yes.

5174. Can you tell us the size of your holding?—It is a small bit of peaty, boggy land which was given to me, and which was never tilled until I got it, but which I brought into cultivation myself; and if it had not been bad I would not have got it. I built a house on it.

5175. You say it was given to you: when was that?—Thirty-seven years ago.

5176. Where had you come from?—Bracadale. I could not get leave to stay at Bracadale, because I married.

5177. You desire to get a new holding?—I have a big family, and strong young lads growing up, and would be prepared to take a new croft like others.

5178. Where do you say there is available land?—Between Bracadale, Minginish, and Duirinish there is plenty of land.

5179. Do you carry on business as a tailor?—Yes, I do.

5180. And do you pay your rent from your trade?—Yes, by my trade, I have always been paying it. I paid it regularly, except for a few years; we got into arrears lately, and we got summoned.

5181. How far is your place from Harlosh?—About 2 miles or 1¾ miles. The two places are marching: only Vatten is between us.

5182. Can you give us the names of any other places besides those that have already been mentioned, where there were small tenants in past years?—Is it in Bracadale or Duirinish you wish to know?

5183. In Duirinish?—Not that I know.

5184. Mr Reginald Macleod.—You have a large family growing up, I think you said, wanting crofts: is that so?—The family as they grew up had to leave home because they could not get a holding in their native country; but they are quite ready to come back, and take new holdings whenever they can get them.

5185. Is it your opinion that it is desirable for this country, or for any other, that there should be a habit on the part of the sons of people of any rank to think that they should necessarily and rightly obtain crofts or holdings, or whatever it may be?—I think it would be a very good thing for the country that our sons should be provided with holdings at home.

5186. Are you aware that the sons of persons who are in a somewhat richer position than most crofters have been obliged to seek their fortunes in a wider field?—Very little thanks to them for that: they are just hunting for wealth.

5187. Would it not be desirable too for the crofters' sons to 'hunt for wealth'?—There are a number of crofters' children coming into wealth in their journeyings through the world as well as the children of the upper classes.

5188. If, however, you, and others like you, always kept your children at home, do you not admit and agree that the island, as we are a very prolific race, would soon become too small for us all?—The island is wide, and it will take a long time for the population to outgrow the available space. There is a great deal of vacant land to be peopled all through Minginish and Rhuanduna and these places.

Lachlan Mackay.

LACHLAN MACKAY, Kilmuir, Dunvegan (40)—examined.

5189. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

5190. Has your township any other name than Kilmuir?—No.

5191. Were you before the Crofters Commission?—No.

5192. What rent do you pay?—£1, 17s.

5193. You are close to the church here?—Yes, about 500 yards east from where we sit.

5194. Did Mr Macintyre deal with your case?—No, the township never applied to the Commission.

5195. Are you desirous of obtaining a new holding?—Yes.

5196. Why?—Because the place I am in is inadequate for me to maintain myself and bring up a family. I have about two acres arable.

5197. And what outrun?—My share would run about six or seven acres.

5198. It is a township outrun?—Yes.

5199. How many are in the township?—The township is divided into 38 crofts and 6 half crofts.

5200. Is that in addition to the 38?—Yes, but the half crofts have no hill pasture.

5201. Are there any cottars?—Seven cottars.

5202. Do they pay any rent?—No. There are in all 56 different houses.

5203. Are the rents much the same as your own?—Yes, very much the same. Some of them run a little over £2.

5204. They run from 30s. to 50s.?—Yes, about that.

5205. Is it an old township?—It has been formed within the last sixty years, I think. People came from Claigean sixty or seventy years ago.

5206. How did they leave Claigean?—It went under sheep at that time.

5207. Did they leave holdings of a larger size than they got in Kilmuir?—Oh yes, I believe so.

5208. Has your rent, so far as your recollection goes, always been the same?—I have only been here four years.

5209. Where did you come from?—I am not a native of the island: I came here by marriage, and got possesson of my father-in-law's croft.

5210. You know nothing of the history of the place?—Yes, I have been learning a good deal from old residents that have been removed from Claigean.

5211. But you know nothing of your own knowledge?—Nothing of my own knowledge.

5212. Is the land in your township exhausted?—It is, very much.

5213. Are the holdings, every one of them, too small?—They are.

5214. Would it be a great advantage if a number of the people could be removed to other and larger holdings?—It would.

5215. Leaving a certain number upon the township of Kilmuir?—Yes.

5216. What size of holding would you make upon the township of Kilmuir?—I would leave it to about 10 crofters.

5217. Then you would remove about 46 crofters and cottars to other holdings?—Yes.

5218. Where would you put them to?—To Claigean.

5219. Is that a suitable place?—Very suitable indeed.

5220. Old arable land?—Old arable, and very fertile.

5221. How is it occupied at present; is it a farm?—It is a sheep farm.

Dunvegan, Skye. — Lachlan Mackay.

5222. In whose possession?—Rented by Nicol Martin, who is resident on the west side of the loch.

5223. Does he rent it alone, or along with other ground?—He rents it alone.

5224. What is the size of it?—There have been seven different villages where crofters formerly were.

5225. On Claigean?—On Claigean.

5226. Can you give me the names of these villages?—Yes.

5227. You heard them mentioned already?—I got the names,—I know the places personally.

5228. Let us hear the names?—Totahor, Swordal, Corlarach, Duart, Nisabost, Claigean, Bay Head.

5229. Are all these sites of old townships upon the farm of Claigean?—Yes.

5230. And form a part of this grazing?—Yes.

5231. Would they, in your judgment, be suitable for holdings in the present day?—Yes.

5232. Large enough to enable the crofter occupying to subsist by the holding?—Yes.

5233. What experience of land had you before coming to Kilmuir?—I had a lot in my own country. I belong to Sutherlandshire.

5234. What part of Sutherland?—The west coast.

5235. What quarter?—The head of Loch-Inchard.

5236. Was your father a crofter there?—Yes.

5237. Is he there still?—My mother is still there.

5238. What rent does she pay?—£4. It is at Achresgill at the head of the loch near the Duke of Westminster's forest of Reay.

5239. You were brought up as a crofter?—I was, in my early days.

5240. Were you employed in the deer forest?—No, never. I have done something in farming and shepherding; and I have been abroad in the Government service for twelve years.

5241. What service?—Police service.

5242. Where?—Hongkong. I went at the age of twenty-three years, and retired in 1887.

5243. You are a man of intelligence, Mackay. Suppose you got a holding of the kind you refer to on Claigean or another part of the land mentioned, would you undertake to make it pay in average years?—I would, at a rental of about £10 to £15.

5244. You would enter upon a holding with a rent of £10 to £15, and expect to make it pay, with fair chances?—Yes.

5245. And could you stock it yourself, and put up buildings?—Yes, at very little cost.

5246. And you would not wish to be indebted to any body?—No.

5247. Would you say that the township of Kilmuir is so congested that it is impossible for the people to get on comfortably?—It is.

5248. Does any body in Kilmuir live by his holding?—Not one.

5249. How do they live?—A few of them work on the estate, and others are kept by their friends in different parts of the country. The rent is small, and it is just a home for them.

5250. The relatives elsewhere send them money?—Yes, those who are not able to work.

5251. And you say that but for that they could not get along?—No.

5252. You say there are seven cottars?—Yes.

5253. Are these cottars a considerable burden upon the crofters?—Oh no. Some of them are on the poors' roll, having houses outside the limits of the township. Others are inside, with a small patch but no hill grazing.

5254. You don't live by your holding yourself?—No.

5255. How do you live?—I have a pension of £25 a year, and I work every day.

5256. At labour?—Labour.

5257. On the estate?—Sometimes on the estate, sometimes on other places.

5258. Do you get constant work?—I have had pretty constant work for the last two years, but not every day.

5259. I suppose I may take it, however, that you are the best off man in the township?—No. I have no assistance but myself. A good many of them have assistance from outside, and they had a better start than I had. If I had more land I would have a chance of getting on.

Dunvegan, Skye. Lachlan Mackay.

5260. You would like very much to get a larger holding?—I would.

5261. And, as you said already, you would undertake to make it pay you, if it could pay at all?—I would.

5262. Mr Sutherland.—I would like to ask you a question. You have no fear of the population increasing beyond the average, have you?—No, I think the reverse. They are a great deal under the average they ought to be.

5263. Do you know the average per acre or per mile in the island of Skye?—No.

5264. Can you give me any idea of what it is per acre in the township of Kilmuir?—Kilmuir is not much more than a mile square, 700 acres.

5265. How many people are there? Compare it with Claigean farm. Is there a great difference in the population of the two areas?—Oh yes.

5266. You do not think that Claigean is overpopulated, do you?—No.

5267. And, keeping that in view, it is a strong argument in favour of forming new townships, is it not?—It is.

5268. And from the opportunity you have had of observing the people here since you came, you have no doubt they would be successful in such a holding?—They would. I would like to bring before your notice that the estimate of Mr Robertson for building houses is too much by more than half.

5269. The Chairman.—Well, give us your own opinion of it?—A good house could be built for a crofter, a very comfortable house, for £40. The barn, byre, and stable for about £20. £60 would be a good start for a man to begin a new establishment for a 15 acre croft.

5270. Do you mean a stone house with slated roof?—Yes; but I would put the black thatch on to start with. I would make it very comfortable inside, with stone and lime for the walls.

5271. Mr Macleod.—With regard to the buildings, if new holdings were formed, you think that a thatched house could be made very comfortable?—Yes, very comfortable indeed.

5272. And there would be nothing to hinder them putting on slate when they made a sufficient profit to put slate on the house?—No.

5273. And that if a man got £50 or £60 of a loan for the buildings, he might do very well?—Yes, and I don't think it necessary that a man should even fill the stock right away when he went in.

5274. Why?—If he was getting the land at a fair rent, say, if he had half the stock for the first year, he would get on very fast with one horse and four cows, and ten or twelve sheep: he would very soon increase it, if he was a hard working man, and pay his rent besides.

5275. You think he would be able to pay the rent, although he only half stocked the place to begin with?—Yes.

5276. Because the cattle would have better feeding, and would turn out better?—Yes, and he would have his chance of working otherwise.

5277. Have you any knowledge of the fishing since you came here?—I have.

5278. Had you any knowledge of it before you came here?—I had. I have fished every place on the east coast, from Stornoway to Lowestoft in England.

5279. And there is nothing to prevent the people taking to the sea at the present time, if they were inclined that way?—No; Claigean is the most suitable place on the west of Skye for fishing from. It is near the fishing ground, and there is a splendid harbour.

5280. The difficulty hereabouts is that it is too far from the fishing ground?—Yes.

5281. But if there were tenants put on Claigean, they would be nearer the fishing ground?—Yes, they would.

5282. Mr Gordon.—Do you think there is a proportion of the population who would be willing to settle down in Claigean as fishers?—Yes.

Dunvegan Skye. Lachlan Mackay.

5283. You would have no difficulty in getting as many as would fill a small township?—No.

5284. You specified a rent of £10. What would be your maximum stock when you were fully stocked?—In my country, under the Duke of Sutherland, the idea was that they kept a Highland cow and five sheep for every £1, but in Skye it is dearer. They did not keep so many crosses.

5285. Have you been accustomed to club farming, or seen it?—I have seen it.

5286. And do you approve of club farming?—I do; if it is properly managed, they get on very well.

5287. Some of the other witnesses before you referred to Claigean as a crofting ground. How many families would you suppose could be comfortably located, with a £10 rent, on Claigean?—Forty odd.

5288. What is the present rent of Claigean?—I think about £700.

5289. That would make only £400 instead of £700?—Well, I think £400 would be quite enough for the Claigean farm.

5290. You don't think the crofters could pay as much as the sheep farmer does?—I know the farm is not paying at the present rent.

5291. You think £400 would be plenty of rent for it?—Yes.

5292. But suppose the proprietor can get £600 or £700, what would you say to that?—Well, I think the crofters, if it was going to competition, could pay as much as the sheep farmer, and make it pay too.

5293. It may be that £400 is enough for the crofters to pay, but would it be fair for the proprietor to have to take that when he can get much more?—It would not be fair if he can get more for it.

5294. That is your idea of the value of it to crofters—forty holdings at £10 a piece?—Yes.

5295. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I understand you don't contemplate that it is right to do any injustice to the landlord to occupy his land against his will at a reduced rent?—No.

5296. And, therefore, if the landlord is able for any given farm—say Claigean—to obtain a given rent—say £600 or £700 a year—you think that if that were given to crofters they ought to be bound to pay the same?—Yes, I do.

5297. You yourself, I think, are a stranger altogether here?—I am.

5298. I should think, from what you said, that most landlords would be very glad to see you tenant of a reasonable holding, because, from the life you have led, you would be able to make it succeed; but do you think that a man who comes as a stranger to a country has any claim, moral or otherwise, to be placed by a higher power upon lands, if it should be against the landlord's wish?—I think I have a claim on any place under the crown of Britain.

5299. By force?—No, by legal and lawful right, if I clear my way.

5300. It is one thing to do it voluntarily, and another thing by force?—I don't mean that.

5301. I should like a word about the seven townships, which, you say, were cleared upon Claigean. I have reason to believe that those townships were not settlements of crofters at all, but were tenancies of tacksmen who had around them, at a distant period from now, a group of farm labourers who had a little land to assist them, and as part of their wages. Is that not the case?—Well, in some cases it may have been so, but not in all—not in Corlarach and Duart. It might have been so in Bay and parts of Claigean.

5302. I understand the whole of Claigean farm has been under one tacksman for a great deal longer than the memory of man. You are unable to contradict that from your own knowledge or inquiry?—I have had a statement from an old man that was born there 80 years ago, John Macneill.

5303. Was he not a tenant of one of the tacksmen enjoying, no doubt, a portion of land for the purpose of raising potatoes, and grazing a cow?—Yes.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Lachlan Mackay.

5304. You have said it would cost £40 to build a house, and £20 to build a barn and stables. What have you estimated it would cost to stock the £10 holding?—I did not estimate anything as to stock.

5305. Would you mind doing so?—A man going there from a different district would have some of his own.

5306. Take yourself, for instance; what stock would you propose to put on?—I would put on 8 cows with their followers.

5307. What number of sheep would you expect to put on the holding?—Between 40 and 50.

5308. Do you think that £1 per annum is a high or low rent for a cow with her followers?—I think it is very fair.

5309. I am taking what I understand to be a very fair rent. Taking that as at £1, that would be £7 for the cow and followers, would only leave £3 out of the £10 for 40 or 50 sheep, besides, presumably, a horse and the arable ground. Surely that is not a fair rent?—That is my estimation.

5310. That is to say, you would expect grazing for 40 or 50 sheep, and a horse, and arable land of 15 acres, for £3? I just want to get your answer in black and white. You have said that you could pay what is a fair rent, even while the holding was only partially stocked—only half stocked was your phrase?—Yes, smaller rents than £10.

5311. I think we have been trying to get at your views with regard to a £10 rent, because is it not your opinion that a smaller rent than £10 would not enable a crofter to live upon the croft?—Not thoroughly.

5312. If there was a large number of crofters scattered through the island, all of them, or most of them, unable to live without labour, would not the labour market be overstocked, and the crofters be unable to find occupation?—I don't think that.

5313. A question was asked and an answer given as to the acreage and the proportion of population to the acre. I should like also to elucidate this point, the proportion of population to wealth. Men don't live on acres, but they live on the produce of acres. Have you any idea what the population of Skye is, as compared with its wealth?—No.

5314. Well, I may inform you that the population of Skye is about 17,000, and the value of the island in the Valuation Roll is certainly not much over £30,000; consequently there would be a value of 32s. or 33s. per head, which is probably a fifth or a sixth of the value found in any ordinary county. You are not able to go into that, perhaps?—Not at present.

5315. Mr Sutherland.—Are you of opinion that the value of Skye might be very largely increased with the value of labour on the land?—It would.

5316. The Chairman.—You took a limit of rent. Suppose for the holding you have been describing, your rent was assessed at £15, would you undertake to work such a holding and endeavour to pay the rent?—I would.

Murdoch Montgomery.

MURDOCH MONTGOMERY, Crofter, Vatten (58).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

5317. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter or a cottar?—A crofter.

5318. I see your holding is 9 acres 1 rood 37 poles arable, no outrun, and a share of 1190 acres, occupied by eight tenants as a club farm. The former rent was £8, 15s., and the fair rent £7, 14s.?—Yes.

5319. Do you wish to make any special statement with regard to the township of Vatten?—I have nothing further to say. I was not aware that I was coming here to speak at all.

5320. You and your neighbours were settled there six or eight years ago?—Yes.

5321. How have you been getting along?—It is coming on we are, much better than where we were.

5322. Where were you?—I was in Greep, Roag.

5323. Did Macleod make any advances to you?—He gave me no advance.

5324. Mr Macleod.—When you were at Greep you had a certain amount of stock there?—I had two cows, a stirk, and a calf when I went to Vatten.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Murdoch Montgomery.

5325. How did you manage to get the means to take the share in the club farm?—It was very difficult, but I had a friend, and between himself and Mr Macdonald, the factor at the time, they went security for me.

5326. Might I ask if you have been able to meet the advance?—Yes. Two or three years ago I was clear of the bank for the sheep and the house.

5327. Are your neighbours in the same happy position?—I cannot say, but I believe the most of them are.

5328. Do you think the club farm system is a good one?—Well, in a way I would say it is the best mode of keeping sheep.

5329. And in what way would you say it was not?—It might be desirable occasionally to take a sheep out of the stock, in the event of sickness being in the house or that; and in the case of a club stock one cannot do that.

5330. But there would be no difficulty in making an arrangement by which that could be done?—There would be no difficulty.

5331. You have no more serious objection to the club farm system than that?—No, that is my difficulty; but I think that having the sheep in common as a joint stock would make the stock better. We would be able to keep proper tups.

5332. Have you got any opinion as to what number of crofters could conveniently be about the same club stock?—I think that eight would be quite sufficient; the same as we are ourselves in our township.

5333. How often do they have a meeting with regard to the management of the stock?—I cannot say; at clipping time and at dipping time we meet, and then again at the time of dividing the income from the sheep.

5334. And is it one man that you have as manager, or two or three?—It is worse than that with us; we have not any particular manager at all, and that is not a good state of matters.

5335. Don't you know places in Skye where they do have a meeting every year and appoint a manager?—I believe there are such townships.

5336. And you think you would be the better of that?—Yes, doubtless.

5337. If you met once a year and appointed one or two of your number to look after things?—Yes.

5338. Then with regard to the rent of this farm of Vatten when you got it, did you get it at the rent that the tacksman paid before?—I cannot say, we did not get the place as it was in possession of the tacksman. There was one thing done that was not pleasing to me; I don't know whether it was the landlord or the factor who did it. We were compelled to take the stock at valuation, and a good bit of the place which was considered indispensable for the proper feeding of the stock in the tacksman's time was taken from us and added to Mr Scobie's farm of Feorlig; they were apparently under the impression that our sheep could live any where. I don't know whom to blame for this.

5339. But you cannot tell how the tacksman's rent compares with the rent that you are paying?—I cannot say, because the tenant of Vatten House pays to Macleod yet, and there is another man who has land in the place, and he also pays to Macleod. I don't know how Mr Scobie held it.

5340. Now about the stock, what objection had you to take over the stock at valuation, was it not better for you to get the stock on the ground rather than buy in a stock?—We had no objection to taking the stock at valuation, we think it suited us to take over the stock on the ground better than to get in a stock.

5341–42. The objection that you had to what was done was not to taking over the stock at valuation, but to cutting off this piece of the farm and adding it to Mr Scobie's?—Yes; at the time we were wanting Vatten to be Vatten, and Feorlig to be Feorlig, and we are in hope that it will be so yet.

5343. Mr Maccallum.—You say that a part of the land was attached to Feorlig. Did Mr Scobie also take part of the stock?—I cannot say, because the stock of Feorlig and Vatten were joint at the time.

Dunvegan, Skye. — Murdoch Montgomery.

5344. Vatten was not held as a separate holding?—No.

5345. How did you get the houses built, had you to build houses?—Yes, certainly.

5346. Were the tenants generally able to build houses themselves without advances?—They did it all without any assistance.

5347. Are these houses suitable for their holdings?—They are built according to the instructions of the factor; he told us to build houses with two gables, and thatched.

5348. And you think them suitable and comfortable?—Yes; any ordinary man could stay in them with comfort.

5349. What would the dwelling-house have cost?—I myself laboured at the building of my own house.

5350. But leaving that out of account, how much had you to lay out in money?—I got another man to help me, and I paid him £5.

5351. And what other outlays in connection with it?—I got £2 or £3 worth of lime, and I bought the timber for the roof in Dunvegan here.

5352. What did that come to?—I am not sure whether that was 8s. or 10s. a couple, six couples say.

5353. Any more expenses in connection with it?—Carting sand, but that was my own work.

5354. These are about all the outlays you had?—I floored it above and below, which would cost me about £3 or £4 besides. The house is 7 feet high, and the walls 37 feet long, and there was a byre, a barn, and a stable.

5355. You gave your own labour for putting up these also?—Yes.

5356. What do you think your outlay for these would be, leaving out of account your own work?—The amount was very trifling altogether, apart from my own labour; but the most of the expense was my own work. The £5 which I gave to that man who was assisting me was all that I paid for any extra labour.

5357. Then, you say that the tenants generally had to get an advance, in order to pay for their stock, and I suppose also for building their houses?—They got no money assistance for the building of houses.

5358. They had money of their own for that purpose?—We had to endeavour to put them up without assistance, and we succeeded. We got a little for the houses we left behind us.

5359. But the money for the stock was got from the bank, was it?—Yes.

5360. And you had to pay bank interest?—Yes.

5361. And the whole of the tenants have profited, you think, by this change to Vatten?—Yes, I think it was to our profit, but our holdings are too small after all. I think that if I had as much again as I have I would be the better for it. I could keep my family about me.

5362. Compare your rent with what is paid by the large farmers in the neighbourhood, do you think it is lower or higher?—I cannot tell that.

5363. You say that you have laboured under some disadvantage in this experiment that managers were not appointed?—I believe that to have been the case.

5364. But, after all, you have succeeded in paying the advances and your rent?—Yes, that is the case. But I had a family here helping me. I could not have done that at the beginning without the assistance of my family.

5365. Mr Gordon.—What number of sheep have you?—250 we had to take over from Mr Scobie when we entered.

5366. That is 30 sheep a-piece?—Yes.

5367. How many cows have you?—Four cows and a horse.

5368. And you pay £7, 14s. of rent; it is very creditable to you that you have been able to pay up the advance of stock, but was it off the croft itself that you paid it?—Am I not stating that my family were assisting me. But I think if I had had two crofts instead of one I would have succeeded quite as well, if not better.

5369. At present you do not manage to live entirely from the produce of your croft; do you work yourself, or get money from your family?—We are not at present able to support ourselves entirely out of the croft; the family are away.

Dunvegan, Skye. — Murdoch Montgomery.

5370. You are still getting money from your family, or making it yourself?—I am still getting money from them. I have three daughters at service, and they always assist me at the term. I had a son who came home for the spring work, and he is away the night before last.

5371. Away back to work in the south?—Yes. But if I had plenty of land, the fellow would not need to go back and forward spending his money.

5372. You think that if you had twice the size of croft, you and your son would be able to stay permanently upon it?—I think I could.

5373. And to pay £14 of rent?—Yes, and that would encourage the boy to stop along with me. It is bad to spend the money coming home to help me, and going away again.

5374. Where was he working, on the railway?—He used to go to the east coast fishing, and when he left that he went to Edinburgh, and was working there till the spring time at a brewery.

5375. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I wanted to bring out a little more closely the statement you made with regard to the security of the money that you obtained from the bank. The question was asked, whether Macleod had become security, and you said no. Was it not the case that Mr Alexander Macdonald, so far as you know, became security?—I know it is Angus Macleod, an uncle of mine, who was in the bill along with me, and always when I got it to be renewed, it was my own name and Angus Macleod.

5376. Was it not by Macleod's assistance through his factor that you obtained the advance?—I never knew anything about that.

5377. Then I think it is only right that you should be aware of it now. Are you aware that the rent of the farm before you got it was very much larger than you and your colleagues pay now?—I believe that, but the third of the farm is from us now.

5378. We are dealing with the farm of Vatten only; we are not talking of Feorlig?—There are between twenty-seven and thirty people from Harlosh cutting peats on Vatten to-day.

5379. I did not talk about peats at all. I was asking you about the rent of Vatten before you got it and afterwards. Are you aware that the rent of Vatten, as you have it, was about £120, and that it is now £70; and that reduction was made by Macleod before it was made by the Commissioners?—But am I not telling that the third part of Vatten was taken from us and added to Feorlig.

5380. The Chairman.—Answer the question, and then make any explanation you desire. Is this your answer, that the old rent of £120 was reduced to £70, but you desire to add that you did not get the whole farm, but only two-thirds of it. Is that what you want to say?—Yes, I know that was the case. But Vatten House, which belongs to Vatten, is not on our ground. Mr Porteous, the tenant of Vatten House, has three acres of our land too.

5381-2. Mr Reginald Macleod.—Mr Porteous pays £10 a year, and the old rent was £130 a year, including the house. Therefore the rent without the house was £120, and you now pay £70? Then old Mr Chisholm was paying £4 to Mr Scobie, and he is now paying to Macleod. I will not labour the point, my lord, because what I want to get at is that they have the rent as it was fixed by Macleod on his own initiative, without the Commission, at what the Commission ultimately decided to be a fair rent.

5383. The Chairman.—Quite so. The only point to be cleared up is this (to Witness), do you say that you got less land than had been previously included in the farm of Vatten?—Yes, certainly.

5384. How much less?—Ewen Chisholm has from £3, 15s. to £4 of it.

5385. Is that all the difference?—Mr Scobie has

Dunvegan, Skye.

Murdoch Montgomery.

another piece given him that was the best part of Vatten.

5386. What was the extent of it?—I understand that the annual value of what was given to Mr Scobie was £3.

5387. Did you practically get the same amount of land that had previously been rented at £120?—We got it all except the piece that was given to Mr Scobie, and what is in possession of Mr Chisholm and Mr Porteous.

5388. And what is the size of that?—There is a good piece, but I cannot say what the extent of it is.

5389. Mr Reginald Macleod.—The point may be very simply put in this way, that Mr Scobie, the tenant of the farm, got a reduction of £120 for being deprived of the land for which the seven crofters now pay £70.

5390. The Chairman.—The same area?

5391. Mr Reginald Macleod.—The same area. (To Witness.)—You will admit, Mr Montgomery, that Macleod, in making this arrangement before the Crofters Commission came to Skye, was consulting, to the best of his ability, the interests of the crofters concerned?—That was our own view, but it was surprising us very much that that piece was taken from us and added to Mr Scobie who had enough already.

5392. I am almost tempted to ask—Did you ever know a crofter who was contented? Is your stock in as good condition as when you came in?—Yes, I believe it is quite as good, and even better.

5393. What have you done for tups?—We buy them.

5394. Buy them yourself?—Yes. But when we were taking over the stock we got none of the tups; they were kept from us.

5395. They were on Mr Scobie's farm, and he, for the first few years, used to lend you these tups, I understand?—We were paying 10s. a piece for the use of them.

5396. And you ceased to use them, and bought others for yourselves?——

5397. We shall have other evidence on that point. You do not depend wholly on the farm but I think you do some carting or outside labour; is that so, Mr Montgomery?—Yes, doubtless; I support myself in that way, besides the croft.

5398. From whom mainly do you get the carting?—I am repairing roads; that is the most of the carting I do.

5399. Then, if there were a very much larger number of crofters in your position requiring labour outside their crofts, there would be less labour to be got, and carting would be scarcer, would it not?—The work is too scarce as it is.

5400. Mr Macleod.—As a matter of fact, Mr Montgomery, you do not know what reduction Mr Scobie got on his rent; do you know, of your own knowledge?—No, not very well; but I know that some of the tacksmen have their farms down to half what they were paying, and are still complaining that the rent is high.

5401. Mr Sutherland.—Is there a farm-house on Vatten?—Yes, Vatten House.

5402. Is it a large house?—A good lump of a house.

5403. Have they got that house now in their holdings?—No, that is what I complain of.

5404. So that the house, which was a very large part of the valuation, they did not get at all?—No, did not get at all.

5405. The Chairman.—Did you and your friends consider it a great advantage to get a transfer to Vatten when you went there originally?—We were very needy to leave the place where we were.

5406. Did you get a better place?—Yes.

5407. Were you all very willing to go there?—Yes. It was not against our will that Macleod sent us there at all.

5408. And you were very willing to pay the rents which he fixed eight years ago?—Yes.

5409. Are you satisfied now that, notwithstanding any disadvantages that may attach to the place, it was an improvement on your condition to get these holdings at Vatten?—Yes, there is nothing to complain of, but that the place is too small for us.*

Dunvegan, Skye.

Murdo Montgomery. John Taylor.

JOHN TAYLOR, Ebost (40)—examined.

5410. The Chairman.—You are the tenant of the farm of Ebost?—Yes.

5411. What rent do you pay?—£180.

5412. What is the area of it?—2,600 acres.

5413. Arable and pasture?—Yes.

5414. How much arable?—Slightly under 40 acres.

5415. How much over all do you pay per acre?—I pay 4s. 6d. per ewe.

5416. Do you hold under lease?—I do.

5417. For nineteen years?—Fourteen years.

5418. Expiring when?—Four years hence.

5419. It has a remaining currency of four years?—Yes.

5420. You have another occupation; you act as a surveyor sometimes?—I do.

5421. And you did a great deal of work when the Crofters Commission came here in 1887 in surveying crofts?—Yes.

5422. Mr Reginald Macleod.—You surveyed these lands before they were given to the present tenants?—It was I who subdivided the farm.

5423. In what condition did you find the lands when you surveyed them for that purpose?—It was very good grazing ground—the portion below the road, in particular.

5424. Did that part bear evidence of having been taken in and drained for cultivation at a previous period?—It did.

5425. Are you aware that it was done by Macleod himself some forty or forty-five years ago?—I was not.

5426. You, I suppose, have seen the lands since the occupation of the present tenants?—I have not seen much of them.

5427. Are you able to say, from any observations you have had an opportunity of making, whether the lands are in an equally good condition—whether they are capable of yielding the same crops that they would have done seven years ago?—I cannot give a distinct answer as to that particular portion.

5428. You are aware that some holdings have been divided amongst tenants of a larger character, but still there are small tenants near your own farm; are you of opinion that the land under their cultivation has deteriorated or not?—It has not improved.

5429. Has it deteriorated?—I think it has.

5430. Do you think that the general character of cultivation adopted by the crofters throughout the country is less likely to maintain the fertility of the land than that adopted by the tacksman?—I think so. I think that the crofters admit, in their own evidence, that the land deteriorates under their usage.

5431. The Chairman.—Never mind what they admit; you are asked what you know?—My opinion is that land is very much better cultivated by tacksmen than by crofter tenants.

5432. Mr Reginald Macleod.—Is that because they do not attend to a rotation of cropping as a general rule?—As a general rule they do.

5433. And do they manure their land?—They do not treat it in a very workman-like fashion at all.

* A proof of the foregoing evidence was sent to Montgomery for revision. It was returned on 9th August 1893, accompanied by the following note:—

Vatten, 9th August 1893.

We the undersigned tenants of Vatten do hereby certify that the evidence given by Murdo Montgomery to the Royal Commission at Dunvegan is absolutely true.

(Signed) Widow JAMES FERGUSON, No. 3 Vatten.
NORMAN MACLEAN, No. 1 Vatten.
DONALD MACLEAN, No. 2 Vatten.
DONALD FERGUSON, No. 8 Vatten.
Widow NEIL MACDONALD, No. 6 Vatten.
ALEXANDER MACLEAN, No. 4 Vatten.
NEIL MACLEOD, No. 7 Vatten.

5434. Turning from the land to stock, are you able to say, from your own knowledge, that the Vatten stock has deteriorated since it was taken over?—My opinion is that it has.

5435. Can you give any reason for it?—Well, it was crossed. I think blackfaced hoggs were brought in, and they have crossed the sheep which are not now in the same position as under Mr Scobie.

5436. So that if both farms were valued now, they having been precisely the same seven years ago, the one stock held by Mr Scobie would fetch more per head than the stock held by the crofters on Vatten?—Distinctly.

5437. That is quite enough on that point; I should like if you can tell me the dates of the harvest in this country, is it very late?—A late and a wet harvest.

5438. The grain is frequently secured in bad condition?—Bad condition and inferior grain.

5439. So, would you say that, as far as cultivation is concerned, it is impossible, however hard crofters work (and we all admit they work very hard on many occasions), you think they could not get as good a return for their labour by cultivating land here as they could in other parts of Scotland?—No, I don't think they can.

5440. Consequently it is not a desirable thing to foster the cultivation of land for the purpose of growing crops, except so far as is necessary to feed cattle in winter?—Quite so.

5441. What would you say would be the ordinary number of returns for seed sown in a well worked farm in Skye; can you give me any instance in your own knowledge?—I daresay tacksmen will get perhaps a return of about five.

5442. Then you would think seven returns, which was mentioned by one of the witnesses this morning, is altogether unusual?—I don't think crofters will exceed three.

5443. You think a good crofter's average would be 3?—I should think so.

5444. As to the prices of the stock sold off the tacksman's farm and off an ordinary crofter's holding, should you expect there would be any very great difference in the prices realised in the market for stirks?—Very large.

5444*a*. What amount of difference?—A tacksman's should be worth about double, as a rule.

5445. Double, taking them year in and year out?—I should think so.

5446. Consequently, if the whole of the ground were put into the hands of small tenants, the character of the stock would deteriorate, and become, judging by the past, of very inferior value?—The stock in their possession at present is inferior to that in the possession of tacksmen.

5446*a*. The Chairman.—Had you instructions from Macleod of Macleod before you proceeded to lot out these holdings?—It was by Macleod's instructions that I went there.

5447. From whom did you get the instructions?—From Mr Alexander Macdonald, Portree.

5448. What were the terms of his instructions?—To go to Vatten with him and mark off the farm of Vatten into eight crofter holdings, and if possible to try and give the crofters what they themselves considered equal divisions of the ground.

5449. You were to find accommodation for eight crofters.—For eight crofters.

5449*a*. That was the instruction you were to act upon, without reference to the nature of the land?—The land was there, we could not alter the quantity.

5450. But you could alter the number you put upon it?—We were confined to eight.

5451. And you were to find room for eight?—Quite so.

5452. That was without reference, then, to whether each holding would be sufficient to enable the crofter to subsist upon it?—I rather think there had been just eight applicants at the time, and the thing had been well considered, and the ground was thought well suited for eight.

5453. How do you know that—are you aware of that to your own knowledge?—Yes.

5454. In what way?—Mr Macdonald and I had frequent conversations about it before it was marked off at all.

5455. Had you conversations about the number of holdings?—The number of tenants.

5456. And you went to find room for eight tenants?—For eight tenants.

5457. What area had you got to operate upon?—I really forget at the present moment.

5458. Try and remember?—The area was mentioned before the Crofters Commission.

5459. 1100 acres?—I think it would be about that.

5460. How much arable to each?—I think they had some 10 or 12 acres. That must be in the Commissioners' Blue Book likewise.

5461. And corresponding grazing?—Corresponding grazing.

5462. None of these holdings were sufficient to enable the crofter to subsist upon his holding?—I am not aware of that, quite.

5463. I would like you to address yourself to that point?—It has been said here to-day that 5 to 6 acres is sufficient.

5464. Did you consider the question at the time whether it would enable the crofter to subsist upon his holding?—That was the intention.

5465. You thought when you laid out the holdings that the crofter could live by his holding?—Yes, if the croft was properly worked and farmed.

5466. You are aware that that has not resulted as a matter of fact?—I am rather inclined to think it has, if they have paid up the stock already.

5467. But have not you heard a good deal of the evidence that they have been giving?—If they entered the croft with nothing, and have now paid up the stock, I think they have done remarkably well.

5468. With outside assistance?—I don't know that they said so.

5469. The last man examined said that he had got family assistance, and spoke of a son in Edinburgh?—Perhaps he is an exception.

5470. But do you know that he is an exception?—I don't know: but I expect if the others had got assistance they would have told it.

5471. You are aware that the holdings in this district generally do not enable the crofter to subsist by his holding?—I believe that is so.

5472. Do you approve of the system?—No, I can't say that I do.

5473. Then you would alter it if you could?—Well, if it was possible to improve them.

5474. In what way would you do so; would it be by giving them larger holdings?—Either that or smaller ones.

5475. Some fishermen's holdings and some large crofters' holdings?—Quite so.

5476. Are you of opinion that there is land in this district which would be suitable for self-subsisting holdings?—There might be: is it agricultural or grazing land that you mean?

5477. I mean with a stretch of arable, and corresponding grazing: are you of opinion that you could form such holdings on some of the lands in the district?—My experience is that the arable land is rather limited for the amount of grazing land.

5478. But could you not find good arable which, with corresponding grazing, would enable the crofter to live?—Yes.

5479. Don't you think that the gradual and careful extension of such holdings would be to the benefit of the crofters?—I don't know: I think the smaller the rent the less chance of going into arrears.

5480. The smaller the holding the better for the crofter?—That came out in Mr Mackintosh's evidence.

5481. Never mind Mr Mackintosh. Is your doctrine that the smaller the holding the better for the holder?—In some cases; it depends very much on the family.

5482. Then you are in favour of holdings where a man cannot live by his croft but has to get extraneous assistance?—I am in favour of that for fishermen.

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Taylor.

5483. Don't you think it would be an advantage to Skye if there were graded holdings, varying in size from a fisherman's croft to a large croft?—I think it would.

5484. And you think you could form such holdings in this district; there is land?—There is, in parts: but the question comes to be, would it injure the letting value of the remaining land around.

5485. But leaving out of view the value of the remainder, could not such holdings be formed in considerable numbers?—There might be.

5486. Now you were asked some questions about deterioration of stock in holdings occupied by crofters. Suppose holdings of the kind I have indicated to be formed, would not the stock of the crofter be considerably better than it is at present?—I don't know; it would depend very much on how it was managed.

5487. Assume it to be managed with a fair degree of intelligence and industry?—From past experience, the crofter does not make a good grower of stock.

5488. You don't think he could be trusted to grow a stirk?—I should not like to have him as manager, at any rate.

5489. Don't you think crofters endeavour, to the best of their knowledge, to improve their position and to improve the breed of stock?—I have no doubt they do, but they lack the knowledge.

5490. But you think it is attainable?—Possibly.

5491. Would not it be more readily attainable in a holding of a larger size than they have at present?—I don't know that; I think a small farm can be as well managed as a big one.

5492. You would squeeze the crofter into the small holding?—My opinion is, that if they cannot manage a small holding it is not likely they will manage a large one.

5493. But don't you think it may be impossible to manage a small holding from inability to cultivate by means of rotation?—I don't think the size has got anything to do with rotation. Any size of holding can be cultivated by rotation.

5494. Possibly we do not all share that view. What was the rent of Vatten before Macleod subdivided it into holdings?—£120, I believe.

5495. And what rent did you fix upon the crofters?—£80.

5496. Did they get the same land or less land than the farm?—They got the same land except one little piece, perhaps about 5 acres, I think.

5497. Was the house upon it?—No house.

5498. They did not get Vatten House?—No: that was occupied at the time the crofts were divided.

5499. What extent of land was round the house?—Three acres, I think, but I am not quite certain.

5500. How many acres altogether did they lose or did they not receive?—They lost this little piece near the high road, and a croft that a man down there had in possession at the time. I think he was a sub-tenant of Mr Scobie's.

5501. What value would you attach to that?—Perhaps £5 for the lot, or less.

5502. What would the house let at?—The house of itself is worth about £5, I think.

5503. Do you say they got the land, subject to these qualifications, at a considerable reduction when they got it at £70?—Yes, I do.

5504. Mr Sutherland.—You have stated that the stock of the crofters now is not so good as the stock of the neighbouring farm?—I said so.

5505. Could you tell us if their stock is better than when they went to Vatten?—It is worse, in my opinion.

5506. It is worse than the stock they had before they went there?—I think I have already said so.

5507. The stock they had on their old crofts: is the stock they now have on Vatten better?—I did not know their old stock at all.

5508. Have you reason to suppose it is better or worse?—I should think it is better. The stock was on the ground when they went there.

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Taylor.

5509. But the stock they have now at Vatten is better than the stock they had before they got Vatten?—I should think so, because the former was a crofter's and the present is a tacksman's.

5510. So that, as the holding increased, the stock improved?—Not at all; the improvement is not due to that.

5511. Is it your opinion that the stock they have now will go back to the state of the stock they had before they went to Vatten?—It depends very much on how they use it.

5512. But then the point is,—has their stock not improved as their holding has enlarged?—I don't gather what you mean at all. I thought I had explained it. The stock they have now is the stock they got upon the increased holding from the tenant when they entered.

5513. Is that stock they have now a better stock than they had on their own holdings?—Certainly, it is the stock that the late tacksman had.

5514. So they have a better stock now than they had on their old holdings?—Certainly, if they keep it at that.

5515. As the holding enlarged, the stock got better?—No, I say the stock is getting worse now.

5516. The comparisons you made between the returns that were given by a tacksman and by a crofter were based upon the state in which the crofts now are?—Based upon actual results.

5517. On the results of the present small holdings?—Actual results.

5518. There may be a very different result if the holdings are to be enlarged?—No, I don't see it at all.

5519. A certain enlargement of holding was given to these crofters now in Vatten. By your own admission they are now better off than before?—I would imagine they may be.

5520. They have improved as their holdings were enlarged?—You would attribute it to that I suppose.

5521. Is it not natural to attribute it to that?—Well, possibly it is.

5522. So that you admit, as a general principle, that, as you enlarge the holding, their condition will get better?—That is the idea: that is why they get larger holdings, I think.

5523. But do you deny that? Is it controverted by the experience you have had yourself?—It is not a common thing: you don't find many proprietors giving crofters larger holdings.

5524. We had the case of Glen-Haultin, and the same result followed there. They all admitted they were better off than before. It is not a solitary case?—They are rather rare, I think.

5525. Mr Maccallum.—I notice a statement of yours, that a tacksman's stirks fetch twice the price of the crofters' stirks. Now, is it on account of the want of skill in the management of the crofters that that comes about?—It is owing to the difference in the breed of the cattle.

5526. They have a different breed altogether?—A distinct breed altogether.

5527. A crofter breed and a tacksman breed?—Quite different.

5528. Now, they attribute the comparatively low price they get for their stirks to this, that the souming of their crofts is too high. Do you concur with that?—The soumings of the crofts vary very much. I have no doubt some are too high and others perhaps too low.

5529. But you agree with this, that, generally speaking, the souming is too high, and that the crofters' grazings are overstocked?—I don't know. I find that in a great many cases crofters can sell fodder and straw: that shows that they are not overstocked.

5530. Might not that be for paying the rent?—It is simply because they cannot consume it.

5531. May not these be some who are too poor to keep up stock?—I am talking of those who have got the souming on their croft.

5532. Have they the full souming and selling corn and straw?—Yes

5533. You said that you thought the Vatten experiment was a success. You meant these to be self-sustaining holdings, and you think they have been self-sustaining?—My opinion is, that if the people entered there rather poor, and if they have been able to pay for the stock now, it has been a success.

5534. And do you think the crofters are quite capable of learning how to use the land properly?—Possibly they are, some of them I daresay.

5535. Don't you think, taking the thing in a general way, they are all quite intelligent, and able to learn if they had an opportunity?—I don't know, I cannot speak to them all. A lot of them cannot speak English, and I don't speak Gaelic.

5536. And you take a very low view of their intelligence?—Certainly not, I do the very reverse.

5537. Then they must be capable of learning. We know, first of all, they have a very great desire to get upon the land; we know that they are very anxious to succeed, and they are intelligent; why then should they not succeed, with a little help, in the way of instruction, for instance?—Who is going to instruct them, might I ask?

5538. For instance, the County Council take to do with instruction?—Well, if they are taken under the wing of the County Council they may be more successful.

5539. Now, you say that if they are not able to manage a small holding they would not be able to cultivate a larger holding?—I don't think so.

5540. And you say that it is just simply because of their want of skill that they are not able to manage their present holdings?—Principally.

5541. Are they able, for instance, to get ploughs and horses with their small holdings?—Some have and some have not.

5542. Don't those that have horses cultivate better than those who have not horses?—They ought to in any case.

5543. Well, but do they?—I should think they do, it is natural that they should.

5544. Then here is the difficulty. You were referring to small holdings, and you thought they might be cultivated just as well as larger holdings. But had you in view that they had not horses to cultivate with on the small holdings?—A great many of them have.

5545. But small holdings that cannot keep a horse, and that have not a horse in their souming, how are they to cultivate scientifically?—There are lots of crofts in Skye a horse would be no use in.

5546. But are there not many places that are ill cultivated on account of not having horses and modern implements?—I should think so, plenty are not able to buy a horse.

5547. And is not that the reason for bad cultivation, the want of a horse?—It is not the fault of the soil that the horse is not there.

5548. No one said that, but do not the crofters find a difficulty in cultivating their holdings, because the croft will not keep a horse?—I should think they must.

5549. So that it is more difficult to culivate properly a small holding than a large one?—There will be more manual labour on it certainly.

5550. Which will not pay so well?—But you will always find that there is a large population in Skye that could not take a large holding, and that a certain amount of manual labour will always exist.

5551. But, as a matter of fact, the want of horses is the great reason why these crofts are not cultivated as they should be, and the smallness of the holding?—I don't know: perhaps an industrious man with manual labour would make a neater and better job than a man with a horse and a bad plough.

5552. But it would not pay so well, would it? Is the soil so good that it would pay?—I do not think the land in Skye is meant for cultivation at all, that is my opinion.

5553. Do the tacksmen cultivate it?—As little as possible. They don't cultivate it to a profit.

5554. Now, with regard to the farmers' stock, you think that at present their stock is very valuable, and that if it were given to crofters on small holdings the stock would not be so valuable: the stock would deteriorate under small holders, you think?—That is my opinion.

5555. But look at this point. When the small holders cultivated the ground properly, would not that improve the grazing?—When they did cultivate it properly.

5556. Yes, as we suppose they will do. Would not that increase the value of the grazing?—That is a matter of supposition.

5557. If the old arable land were cultivated properly, would not the grazing be better than it is at present under fog?—The older the grazing is, of course, the worse it gets, you have got to turn it up occasionally.

5558. And would there not be better wintering for the stock if the old arable were cultivated?—It would not get worse.

5559. Would it not get a great deal better by cultivation?—Not in every case. There are a great many places where, if you tried to cultivate, you would only lay the rocks bare, you had better leave it as it is.

5560. What is the covering, is it a covering of moss?—Yes.

5561. Are not you aware that the crofters, when they worked it, put soil upon the rocks?—I have heard of such a thing being done.

5562. Now, with regard to the rent of Vatten. They got no house upon it?—There was just the house belonging to the place.

5563. But did they get the house?—No, they did not.

5564. Now let us suppose this, that it were advertised to let as a separate holding, without the old house. Do you think it would have fetched a higher rent than was laid upon these crofters?—Likely an arrangement would be come to in a matter of the sort between the landlord and his tenant.

5565. I want your own opinion, as a skilled man and a man of experience. Supposing it were offered without a house, would it have fetched a higher rent than what was imposed upon the crofters?—I don't know that it would; but at the same time, if the proprietor was to build a house, and if he reduced the rent £40 per annum, I think the tenant could afford to pay interest on the building without being a loser.

5566. But would not these small tenants themselves, if they had got the improvement made for them, be quite as able to pay a rent?—I don't know anything about their ability.

5567. But, however, you think that without some improvement it would not very readily let?—What kind of improvement?

5568. A house, for instance, to be built upon it?—Supposing a house to be built at a cost of, say £400, if the tenant paid 7 per cent. interest on the money, that would only be £28, whereas the rent was reduced £40.

5569. But don't you find that other places are falling in rent as well as that particular place?—I think it is general.

5570. And even a larger reduction than that?—Not in very many cases. I think the Crofters Commission average was rather above that.

5571. We have been hearing that the reductions which the large farmers have got is even larger, in the case of the larger farmers?—Well, I daresay they would require that, because their rents were increased when the crofters' rents were reduced.

5572. So that, after all the reduction they got, you think they paid a competitive rent for this farm, don't you?—The usual way is to advertise the farm when it is out of lease.

5573. But you are a skilled man; do you think this was as high as a competitive rent,—the rent that was imposed upon the crofters?—It was a rent fixed by me, and the crofters were willing to pay it.

5574. But you think it is just as much as it would fetch in the market?—No, I think certainly not. I daresay if Macleod had put it into the market, he would have got the old rent.

5575. So you fixed it lower than the real value of it?—We fixed it at what we thought the ground was worth; but that is not a competitive rent at all.

5576. But you told me some time ago that it would be very difficult to let it at all without a house?—No, I did not say anything of the kind.

5577. Then you think it would have been easily let without a house?—It would depend very much upon who took it. If a tenant took it who did not require a house, then it would be easily enough let.

5578. But just tell me definitely whether you think it would be let at a higher or a lower rate if it were offered without a house in the market at the time?—Further, the tenant that had it when they were there made no use of the house, and lived in another house. It is quite possible that the same thing might have been repeated. It might have been let to a man who had another farm, and a house to live in already.

5579. You don't think it likely?—Quite likely.

5580. Was the farmer that had it willing to take it at the old rent?—I don't know anything about that.

5581. You don't know whether he was asking a reduction or not?—I cannot say at all.

5582. But you think it would be dear enough if it were to be continued as part of Scobie's farm?—We thought it dear enough for the crofters at £80.

5583. And as part of a large farm, dear enough?—It was not valued at £80.

5584. But do you think it was?—Well, apparently not; it was £120 previously.

5585. But rents are changing; what is your own opinion, really, at the time whether it was a fair rent as part of a large holding then?—Well, I suppose the tenant must have considered it so.

5586. And you think he was quite content to go on paying £120?—I don't know if he was content or not.

5587. But do you think it would be a profit for him to have it at £120?—I really cannot say.

5588. But you are a valuator; surely you must have some opinion as to that. Would it be a profit?—Well, one man will make a profit out of a place where another man will make a loss.

5589. But I am asking the value of it to a man of ordinary intelligence?—We regard the value of it as £80.

5590. That is the real value of it to a farmer or to crofters?—That is the value we fixed upon it for crofting purposes.

5591. And would you regard that as too low if it were to be part of a farm? Would a farmer give more for it?—The farmer was giving more.

5592. But would he be content to give more, and should he give more?—I don't know if he was content to pay the high rent or not.

5593. But would it be a greater value than £80 to the farmer, yes or no?—It was worth £120 to the farmer, I hold, because he was paying the rent for it.

5594. That is your only reason for supposing it,—because he was paying it?—The man who paid the rent would be the best judge.

5595. No. I should think the valuator should be. Then you are quite prepared to value it to crofters, but you are not prepared to value it to a farmer?—I am quite prepared to value it to a farmer.

5596. Very well, what do you think the value of it at the time to a farmer was?—We reduced it £40 to the crofters, and I suppose had it been in the market to a farmer, it would very likely have been reduced in the same way.

5597. Mr Macleod.—You are not a native of Skye, Mr Taylor?—No.

5598. How long is it since you have come to this island?—Some nine or ten years.

5599. And you think that during these nine or ten years you have made yourself thoroughly acquainted with the whole situation so far as it relates to the question of holding land?—I don't know that I have.

5600. You have, however, been employed considerably in regard to the surveying of land?—Yes, both in Skye and the other islands.

5601. Were you employed by the proprietors in this district?—Yes.

5602. And you have a farm, have you not, upon the estate of the property whose tenants we have been hearing here to-day?—I have.

5603. Would you consider your own farm let at a fair rent, if I might put that question as a means of getting at the value?—I can make a comparison with the evidence that has been given to-day, if you like.

5604. I will be glad to hear anything that you have to say?—The Glendale crofters, in their evidence to-day, said that a fair rent for the croft that will carry 6 cows, 1 horse, and 70 sheep is from £5 to £7. If you convert the cows and the horse into sheep—there is a certain proportion, you will understand—you will find it is something like 150 sheep, for which they are willing to pay £5 to £7. That is a little less than 1s. per sheep.

5605. Yes?—Well, I pay 4s. 6d., so you can compare the two. Yet they are quite willing to take Macleod's farms at the present rent.

5606. You pay 4s. 6d. per head for your stock?—Yes. These are the farms that they are willing to give the same rent for now.

5607. May I ask what is the total of your ewe stock?—It varies from 700 to 800.

5608. And for that you pay a rent of——?—£180.

5609. And do you consider that your farm is better or worse than the average?—I think it is a good average farm.

5610. Then you mentioned 40 acres of arable?—I believe the exact number is 38.

5611. That refers probably to the extent that you are cropping?—I brought in about the half of that since I went there, and fenced it.

5612. That 38 acres does not refer to the old arable land?—No, just what I keep under rotation.

5613. Naturally there will be a number of small townships upon the farm of Ebost?—There are two townships on it now.

5614. May I ask the names of these townships?—Garrymore and Ebost.

5615. Is it at Ebost that the farm-house is?—Yes.

5616. About this question of the rental of Vatten. Was not this Vatten part of Mr Scobie's farm just under the one tack?—Yes, I think it was.

5617. And entered as one total in the Valuation Roll?—I think so.

5618. How did you discover that there was £120 or £130 paid for it by the tacksman if he was paying a lump sum?—They were let separately.

5619. I thought you said just now they were let as one subject?—They were let separately, even before Mr Scobie went there. I am informed by the estate management that the rent was £120.

5620. But we don't want anything but a direct statement. You don't know, of your own knowledge?—In speaking to us so positively of the rent as £120 or £130, you, as a matter of fact, did not know what the rent really was?—I am told by Macleod's representatives that the rent was £120.

5621. You did not say that before?—I have no reason to doubt his word.

5622. But you have no direct knowledge?—I think that is pretty direct.

5623. You don't know yourself?—I know nothing about it: I don't act for the estate.

5624. And in fixing this rent of £80 you thought you fixed a fair valuation for the crofters?—That was our intention at the time.

5625. The Chairman.—I wish to correct your statement. The valuation of Vatten House,—William F. Porteous, I think, is the name of the tenant,—is put down as £12?—That is house and land. The tenant is here; he will be able to say.

5626. The house and land, £12?—Yes.

5627. How many acres of land?—Three or four; the best land in the farm, I think it is.

5628. Mr Myles Macinnes.—What is the highest price that, as an average, the tacksmen got for their stot stirks: you say they were getting double what the crofters got?—I am sorry to say that the highest price is a very small one just now, perhaps about £5.

5629. Are you aware that some of the crofters still get £5?—I am not aware of it.

5630. What is the next highest price for tacksmen's cattle that you know of?—I think they are going from £4 to £7, good ones.

5631. Are you not aware of any crofters' in Skye that are sold for £9 or £10?—I don't think they will fetch more than 50s. You may have one prize bullock yourself which is worth more than the average.

5632. You say you pay rent at the rate of 4s. 6d. per ewe. I would like to know if your farm is fully stocked according to the number of ewes kept on similar ground by crofters?—My farm was advertised in the paper to carry 800 ewes, and the rent is £180; and it is a mere matter of calculation to see that it amounts to 4s. 6d.

5633. How many ewes does it keep?—There are 700 on the farm now.

5634. How many acres do you give for every ewe?—There are 2600 acres on the farm, and there are 800 sheep advertised by Macleod that it is to carry: so you can calculate it.

5635. I cannot go into the calculation now?—It is just about 3¼ acres to each sheep.

5636. But you are aware that some crofters have about half that?—I know some are overstocked, but a great number would have none at all.

[Adjourned.]

SEVENTH SITTING.

DUNVEGAN, SKYE, MAY 6, 1893.

Present:—

David Brand, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
Angus Sutherland, Esq., M.P.
James Noel Muller Forsyth, Esq.
George Gordon, Esq.
Rev. Malcolm Maccallum.
John Macleod, Esq.
Henry Munro, Esq.
William Mackenzie, Esq., Secretary.

Macleod of Macleod (80)—examined.

5637. The Chairman.—Macleod, have you any statement to place before the Commission?—I had intended, my lord, to address this Commission in the form of a speech, but I found there were so many points to be adverted to, that I thought it better to put my observations in the form of a statement, which I beg leave to read:—

As the Royal Commissioners, recently appointed, have been authorised to examine farms and forests in the Highlands of Scotland, I think it is important they should know how my land was held in ancient times, and I therefore put in writing, for their information, a brief statement derived from papers in my possession, showing the tenure of the land on the estates belonging to the chief of the Macleod family upwards of 200 years ago. These estates consisted of the six baronies of Duirinish, Waternish, Bracadale, and Minginish, in the Isle of Skye; the Herries (now called Harris), and Glenelg, on the mainland, all in the county of Inverness. On the 27th of July 1724, after the long minority of Norman Macleod, 19th Baron of that ilk, there was commenced a 'judicial inquiry' as to the rentals of these six baronies, each tenant stating on oath the particulars of the rent he or his predecessor had paid from the year 1664. The result of this inquiry showed that the whole of the lands in these six baronies had been let to single tenants in good-sized farms. Of these there were in Duirinish, 19; Waternish, 18; Bracadale, 15; Minginish, 17; the Herries, 22; Glenelg, 27. The tenants had leases of 19 years, and paid partly in money (Scots) and partly in kind. The stock consisted almost entirely of cattle. Oats and bere were largely grown for their winter use, giving employment to a number of workpeople on each farm. These workpeople, many of them brought to the island from the south, were paid partly in money and meal, and partly by having allotments of ground for growing potatoes and oats for their own use. In course of time, however, it was found that sheep paid better than cattle. The result was less work for the farm labourers, and many of them were obliged to leave. Some of those who remained became virtually sub-tenants, and got work where they could. The change was unfortunate for them but really unavoidable, and was, in fact, precisely what has since occurred in England, where farm labourers have been thrown out of work and have sought employment elsewhere, just as the sub-tenants on Highland farms were compelled to do in days gone by. These occurrences took place before my time, but I do not believe that any of these sub-tenants were evicted as Mr Duncan Mackinnon's statement at Struan might lead people to suppose. But even if they were pressed to leave, it seems quite likely that the tacksmen thought they were entitled to send away their farm servants when they had no work for them to do. In all probability summonses were used in those days, as they are now, to enforce the fulfilment of obligations. I find that in the present day Highlanders keep their sporrans very tightly closed when rent is asked for, and that it is necessary to threaten the intervention of the law even in cases where 'fair rents' have been fixed by very high authority. In most other countries when a man engages to pay rent and fails to do it, he is turned out without pity or remorse. I have often observed it myself. In the Highlands here we have I hope more humanity. I have myself scored out the arrears in hundreds of cases when I knew the tenant was too poor to pay; but when I have reason to believe that he can pay, but won't, I appeal to the law to aid me, and I must say that I do not think it is the province of this Commission to listen to charges against the management of this estate, brought forward by men who are not personally interested, but whose vocation it appears to be to set class against class, and to stir up ill-will and bad passions.

5638. Do you think, Macleod, that that sentence, as to the province of the Commission, is in good taste?—That is merely an opinion that occurred to me, but I would withdraw it. A great man once said, 'If you go forth upon a mission to demoralise the people by teaching them to make the property of their neighbours the object of their covetous desires, it does not require superhuman gifts to find a number of followers or adherents for a doctrine such as that.' That great man to whom I refer was Mr Gladstone.

5639. Macleod, do you think that quotation is a quotation that should be submitted to us? Do you suggest that we are on a mission to demoralise the people?—Oh no, I did not think so, indeed: I was thinking of certain persons who go about the country here demoralising the people.

5640. I think the quotation is a little unfortunate, as addressed to us.—It is a quotation from Mr Gladstone, and I thought it came in very a propos as regards those who go about this country here trying to raise up evil passions; but what shall I do, sir? I can withdraw it if you like. Statements are often now made in abuse of myself which are entirely untrue, and which I will not condescend to notice. Many statements of that sort have been made against me at Struan and other places, and I distinctly deny the truth of those statements; but, as I say, I will not condescend to notice them.

I now return to my narrative. During a period of

Dunvegan, Skye.
Macleod of Macleod.

my grandfather's life, between the years 1772 and 1800 no change occurred in the tenure of land, but towards the end of the century large divisions of the family estates were sold. The whole barony of Herries in 1779; the whole barony of Waternish in 1797; in Bracadale, Loch Snizort side, and Lynedale in 1781; in Duirinish, Glendale, Husabost, Colbost, Skiniden, and Orbost in 1799; and, finally, Glenelg in 1810. I cannot of my own knowledge give after these periods the details of changes of tenancy or tenure that may have subsequently occurred, but up to the time of those sales there were no tenants in those six baronies (except in Glenelg from the year 1792) who could be called crofters as that appellation is understood in the present day. The farms were all tacks, and the tacksmen of a superior class occupying good houses and noted for Highland hospitality.

I have now described how the land was held to the end of the 18th century; but there was, as is well known, a large population who lived as cottars on these farms, occupying small houses, but no land. It has been often asserted that these people held crofts and lived in comfort. It has even been alleged by persons who can know nothing of the matter that happiness and contentment prevailed, and that in the course of time these supposed crofters were deprived of the land which they cultivated, and on which they were said to live in the midst of plenty. But I can find no evidence of this either in written or unwritten records. The general condition of the country during the whole of the period from the earliest year I have mentioned up to the end of the 18th century, and even later, may be thus described. A large population forced to live within their own circle, and having very little communication with the outer world. The men built their own black houses of stones and turf, some worked as drystone masons, others as weavers, tailors, and shoemakers, the women spinning and knitting, all the clothes (what a contrast to the present day!) being made at home. For unskilled labour, I believe there was very little demand, except, perhaps, for peats in spring and field-work in autumn. I have been told, and I believe, that some of the cottars on the different farms were allowed to turn over on what was called 'half-foot' patches of land; and what favours this view is, that in all sorts of out-of-the-way places pieces of ground are still to be seen which have been cultivated in lazy bed form, worked, no doubt, by the 'caschrom' or crooked spade. The kind of crop usually grown was either bere or the small black oats, both more hardy than the large seed now used, but yielding less meal. There were mills in many central points, so that those who had corn could get it ground; but I fear the general population, consisting of the cottar class, had little corn to grind, and that they must have suffered at times great privation, especially in winter and spring. We have to remember that there was no regular work for cottars and no means of locomotion to find it, no roads anywhere, no carriages of any kind. In 1773, Dr Johnson rode a pony over a rough mountain path to reach his destination; and in 1810 my mother, on her first visit to Skye, landed from an open boat at Vatten, and rode over the moor to Dunvegan. That shows the state of things in those days. The raising of a regiment by my grandfather about the year 1780 was the first considerable outlet or opening for the young men of Skye. There was, I believe, some very natural reluctance to leave home for foreign service; but they enlisted under favourable circumstances, their chief being in command, and the rest of the officers men they knew as the tacksmen of the farms. These recruits became first-rate soldiers, and distinguished themselves greatly, as is well known. But military ardour has not descended to the present generation of Highlanders, although the service is more attractive now than it was in those early days. I think this is much to be regretted. The next opening for employment was the business of kelp-making, for many years a source of income for the proprietor and of employment for the people; and it was this industry which led to the first establishment of crofter townships on the Macleod estates still remaining unsold. In the year 1811, the farms of Fernilea, Carbost, and Merkadale, in Minginish, were divided into crofts, and the same was done in the farms of Harlosh, Roag, and Kilmuir in the Barony of Duirinish. Kelp-making continued up to the year 1833, and although not yielding in the latter years such large profits as at first, was still useful in bringing money into the country, and giving work to the people. Between the years 1811 and 1826 my father expended, in making roads and bridges on the estate, upwards of £20,000, £12,000 of which was out of his own pocket. It may easily be conceived how the country was opened up by this important outlay, and how it prepared the way to enable the people to take advantage of the advent of steamers which some years later, and always more and more, brought the Isle of Skye into communication with the rest of the world.

Dunvegan, Skye.
Macleod of Macleod.

In the year 1835, when I inherited the Macleod estates, I thought they might be made more valuable than they then were, and for 12 years I resided mostly at Dunvegan superintending various works. I took several farms into my own hands, and employed a very large number of men in making roads, building fences, and reclaiming and draining land, arable as well as moor. I hoped, by growing turnips and other roots extensively, to winter our lambs at home, and save them from death by braxy. At that time the wages for unskilled labour were for men 1s. a day, for women 6d., and as there were plenty of people glad to work on those terms, my experiments were carried out under the most favourable circumstances for testing the soil and climate of Skye. But the soil and climate of Skye do not lend themselves to success in agricultural pursuits. Wheat never ripened; oats were often harvested late, the grain always inferior to what had been sown; turnips generally very good, but land too wet to be fed off properly. I had borrowed a considerable sum of money under the Drainage Act, and spent it in hill drainage. Even that was not successful, as it dried up the grasses, so necessary for sheep in spring. Looking back, I am sorry to say that nearly all the money I laid out on the land was money lost. Then at last came the terrible potato famine of 1847–8, from which all classes suffered so seriously, a whole population being brought literally to starvation point. The people appear now to have forgotten all about it; and let us hope such a misfortune may never again occur. I naturally remember well the scenes I then witnessed; and all the more because, as they were my people, it was my duty to assist them, and thus the famine, so far as I was concerned, severed my personal connection with the Macleod estates for many years, and changed the whole course of my life, I think it may be allowed to me, in view of ignorant statements in regard to my alleged want of interest in my people, to refer to the sacrifices I thought it right to make when the whole population were starving, and there was no one but myself to help them. I shall now refer to the experiments I have myself made in breaking up sheep farms and dividing them into crofter holdings. I have done this on three occasions. The first was in 1845. It had always been my wish to encourage deep-sea fishing, and when in that year the lease of the farm of Glendale expired, I considered that a favourable opportunity had presented itself. Glendale had been sold in 1799, but a considerable portion of it had been bought back by my father, and at the time of his death was let at a rent of £525. I had the land valued and divided into crofts, forming the townships of Upper and Lower Milivaig, Holmisdale, Ramasaig, and Lowergill; the whole of these lands, with the exception of Lowergill, being near the Bay of Pooltiel, and in close proximity to the Minch. As this property is no longer mine, having been sold after the famine, I am unwilling to make any lengthened observations on the result of the experiment, but I think, as regards the crofting, it was very unsuccessful, and, in fact, a mistake. The crofts were mostly small, because the people were poor and could not stock larger ones. The fishing has not indeed realised my hopes and expectations, but it is gratifying to know that a profitable industry has been developed which provides remunerative employment for a considerable number of people. As regards population it will have been observed that the delegate from Glendale complained much yesterday of congestions. I desire to point out that this congestion has entirely arisen since the year 1845, when I gave every cottar on the farm a croft. The second farm on which I placed crofters was Ullinish, in Bracadale. It is let in common to five tenants, one of whom has two shares. Being men of considerable means, they were able, on entering, to build good houses for themselves, and to purchase, with some assistance from me, the stock of excellent Cheviot sheep bred on the farm and left by the previous tenant. I have a high opinion of these tenants. They have had this farm for eight years, but I am afraid they have not done as well as I had hoped. The rent of £200, which they accepted as fair and moderate, was soon reduced to £150, and in the last year they asked for a further reduction to £100, finally expressing a wish to give up the lands altogether. I had advanced about £1000 at the beginning to give them a helping hand, and hoped this sum would have been gradually repaid, but it has only been very little reduced. The times have certainly been very bad, but I think a single skilled farmer with some capital would have done better than these tenants, both for himself and me. The last conversion of a farm into crofts was carried out in order to relieve congestion in the township of Roag by the transfer of eight of the tenants to the neighbouring lands of Vatten. I had the arable land carefully laid out by a competent authority into eight equal crofts of about 10 acres each. In the hope of obviating any future dissatisfaction, the new tenants were required to examine those crofts themselves. They did so, and then drew lots. These precautions were, however, of no avail. One of the tenants was dissatisfied, and appealed to the Crofter Commissioners, who, while agreeing that the gross rent was fair, put the lots at different values. Thinking they were mistaken, I appealed four years ago on behalf of two of the tenants; but the Commission has been unable, from press of work elsewhere, to decide the appeal, and I have therefore withdrawn it. These tenants ought to do well. Besides their arable land, well fenced by me, they have a large extent of hill pasture. They were assisted by myself and others to purchase the sheep stock. The rent of £70 I consider under the real value of the farm. I cannot, however, say that I have any hope of them. Like all other crofters, they exhaust the land, and sheep deteriorate in their hands. There are already considerable arrears, and the object I had in view in relieving congestion at Roag has been unfortunately defeated, the vacant crofts being immediately filled by other claimants, so I did, in that respect, no good. I should here mention that besides the crofters who occupy Ullinish and Vatten, I have in these last few years converted cottars into crofters by allotting land to them in the following localities:—In Bracadale—Struanmore, 18 tenants; Garrymore, 5 tenants; Ose, 10 tenants. In Duirinish—Roskhill, 8 tenants. With respect to all my crofter townships, great and small, numbering 15, it will be found that nothing can be more unsatisfactory than the agricultural condition of the land and the treatment it receives. Whether there are 10 acres or 2 the arable land of the croft is scourged by consecutive crops of corn. It is always full of weeds, with the result that one boll of oats seldom yields more than two or at most three of inferior grain. (See the crofter evidence before Lord Napier's Commission.) I am talking generally of the crofters here in this country: there may be exceptions,—I believe there are exceptions; there are certain men who understand rotation, but they are very very few. The land cannot be said to receive any proper manure at all; sea-ware is the principal stimulant in use: it brings a crop of potatoes, but it leaves no permanent manure in the soil; and when it is completely exhausted, there comes the cry for 'more land.' Then there is the universal but objectionable custom that as soon as the corn is cut and carried, the whole of the cattle have the run of the township, so that no crofter can have any permanent fence to protect turnips, cabbages, or sown grasses. I am perhaps going too much into detail.

5641. Oh no, it is very important.—As the declared object of the Royal Commission is to consider the extension of the crofter system, and to report if it can be advantageously extended, I presume the general idea in contemplation is to convert the present crofters and cottars on the estate into small farms. This, however, can only be accomplished by seizing and appropriating the large farms as leases fall in. But let us inquire first how the owner of the estate would fare. It is an undisputed fact that the best of the arable land which the crofters covet (not excepting that already occupied by them) has been reclaimed either by the proprietor himself or by his tacksmen tenants. My father and I laid out many thousand pounds in the reclamation and fencing of moorland on several of the farms. Would it be just to take these arable lands in which we have invested so much money out of our management, and let it to people we might not approve of at rents fixed by a Commission with fixity of tenure?

There is another grave question. I cannot quite say, but it can be easily ascertained, what the owners of these estates have spent in the erection of farm-houses and steadings, in stone dykes, and in the making of main and district roads. These outlays were so much money invested, and if small holdings were to displace farms, it would be lost, as a Commission would value the land alone.

But the most serious loss of all would be in the sheep stocks. The extension of the crofter system would, of course, drive away all the tacksmen farmers, and their capital along with them. But I am bound under all my leases to take over at valuation the respective sheep stocks, the result of careful breeding, each sheep stock being well known at the character market at Inverness. It is, of course, thoroughly understood in this country—I do not know, my lord, whether you are aware of the circumstances connected with the farms, but you will allow me to state that an incoming tenant has to pay a large difference between the value of a made stock and the market price of the same if forcibly sold in block. Well, my lord, am I to bear that enormous loss? If the Government are desirous of trying further experiments with my land, and if they choose to listen to the suggestions of agitators who are most virtuous and liberal when other people's property is in question (I am speaking, sir, of those who are going about now persuading the people to do this, that, and the other), let these experiments be made at the national risk and not at mine. Let the land be bought at the expense of the nation, if the nation is foolish enough to invest public money in such a scheme. I should certainly be sorry to lose what my family has possessed for nearly seven hundred years; but if inexorable fate wills it I must submit.

Let us now consider what would be the probable result of these propositions, if adopted, to the crofters themselves. I think it must be generally admitted that this island cannot boast much either as to its soil or its climate, there being very little good land and an unfair allowance of rain, and yet this poor country is at this moment in the keenest competition with the richest soils and best of climates in the whole world in precisely the only articles we can produce. Of corn it is idle to talk, as meal can be bought much cheaper than it can be grown, and we only grow it for the cattle in winter. Beef, mutton, and wool are our only saleable products, but they must be good to be saleable. It is contrary to all experience that the tenants of a small holding can breed good sheep or cattle. A single bad year is almost ruinous to him. If he has nothing to sell how can he live? How get even the bare necessaries of life, to say nothing about tobacco and tea, which have become almost necessaries now? The question is whether the occupier of a small holding can fulfil his various obligations, and maintain himself and family. Take into account on the one hand the rent (if any), the rates, the interest on money borrowed, and the labour of the tenant and his family, calculated on the present wages of labour, which fortunately are very good at present, and on the other hand the produce, depending on uncertain climate, inferior soil, and agricultural inexperience, I can have no hesitation in expressing the opinion—I give my opinion only, of course—that the result would be, in fact, disastrous as well to the tenant himself as to the country generally.

There is another question which seriously affects the inquiry of this Commission, and to which I should like to direct their attention. The burdens on land have become very heavy. Previous to the passing of the Scotch Poor Law Act in 1845, the people maintained their own poor. I have often admired their self-denial and kindness to each other. These feelings, however, are now much changed, and in largely-peopled districts the rates for the poor have become immensely high, amounting this year in Duirinish to 4s. in the £1. In England it is held that the parish which has benefited by the labour of a man when he is young and strong should keep him when he is old and ailing. In Skye the strong workman goes to Glasgow or Peterhead or elsewhere in summer, and, returning to Skye as he does in winter, he never loses his settlement at home. Supposing any addition is made to the present small holdings, the bulk of the population would have pauper claims on their native parish (quite properly); and I am sure, when proprietors and large farmers disappear, the burdens of poor-rate, school-rate, road and county rates, will be more than the land can bear. While on this topic I must advert to the advice given by outside agitators, as I am afraid I must call them, who counsel the whole of the people, young as well as old, to decline all offers of assistance to better their condition by leaving this poor country for a better. I regret the advice, for it must lead to congestion, and in a bad year to appeals for charity, perhaps at no very distant day. Why should every member of a family remain at home? My three sons were sent away from their home to battle with the world. Why should the Government be asked—I use a very colloquial term, but I don't know whether I could better it—to molly-coddle specially our Highlanders, and treat them exceptionally? They are by nature a fine, independent, intelligent set of people. I know the people well, and I know that is a fair description of them. They have been well educated, and can hold their own wherever they go. Is it not pitiable that they demean themselves by asking the Government for land which belongs to other people, and not only that, but they think they must have, besides, money to build houses and to stock the ground. Who is to guarantee that if they get all these things they may not fail, and come in increasing numbers for doles of charity? Such things have happened before, and may happen again. I have never sought, and shall never seek, to influence men to leave this country; but I protest against an outside organised effort to prejudice the minds of the people against what is at all events inevitable for a great many, for you cannot provide for them all.

I think I ought, before I conclude what I am afraid has been a very lengthy statement, to make a few remarks on the question of supervision—that of the proprietor having been very much weakened by the action of the Crofters Commission, that of course it has been impossible to avoid. The habits of the people favour an increase of population. The number of cottars' houses on many crofts is evidence of this tendency. Nothing was easier or more common than to build a black-house, or to convert a byre into a dwelling: on my property that has often occurred. Such changes have been of late years held in check by estate rules and regulations, but it is impossible even now to prevent the accumulation of several families in any house where the necessary accommodation could be added. From this point of view the proposed extension of the crofter system cannot be regarded without the most serious misgiving.

I finish this paper by stating that in my experience good-sized farms, if managed well and at a fair and reasonable rent, will pay the holder. Small holdings will not, in my opinion, and if the crofter system is extended along with fixity of tenure and it fails, as I believe it will, the step can never be retraced.

(Signed) MACLEOD OF MACLEOD.

May 2, 1893.

I have signed this, my lord, and I shall hand it in with the alterations that you have indicated your wish to have.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Macleod of Macleod.

5642. Thank you. Does any Commissioner desire to put any questions on the paper read?

5643. Mr Sutherland.—I understand, Macleod, that your opinion regarding the crofter system is that it has been a failure, generally speaking?—Yes.

5644. Who do you consider is responsible for the crofting system?—I am not aware that any one is responsible. The people act upon old customs, and these old customs I consider prejudicial.

5645. Do you consider that the people who are now called crofters were at all times free agents as to what they might do themselves?—Oh, surely.

5646. They were not limited in any way by any other person?—No.

5647. Or law or institution?—No.

5648. You think not?—I think not.

5649. Then how do you account for the desire they have to get back upon the land, at the present time? How do you account for the fact that they wish to get back upon the land and cannot do so? I am directing my question as to their being free agents.—Yes, exactly. I employ my land in the manner that I think is best for myself; and necessarily if my land is let in large farms, I cannot give it to the crofters.

5650. Quite so. So then their free action in this matter is limited in several ways?—It is limited in this way, that there is no land that they can have.

5651. And you have no reason to suppose, have you, that the same influences were not at work in times past?—This property has always been let in large farms, and therefore the crofters—at least the cottars—could not get the land, and in that respect they have always been limited.

5652. Quite so. So that they cannot, therefore, be held to be responsible for the system that at present obtains with regard to the distribution of the land?—Well, I have no doubt that the cottars have always been limited, and in that respect they have not been able to do better than they have done.

5653. And that bears on the question of the responsibility of the parties who are responsible for the present state of things?—Well, undoubtedly, if a proprietor employs his land in letting it as it has always been let in large farms, it necessarily restricts people who desire, but cannot get, more land than they have.

5654. So that any responsibility the people called crofters may have is a very limited one,—are you prepared to admit that?—Limited by the amount of land they have.

5655. And by the institutions and laws of the country?—As long as private property in land exists, the man who possesses that property does the best he can by it.

5656. I think you will admit that in forming these holdings the crofter was very far from being a free agent?—He was certainly not a free agent so far as he could not get land he would have been very glad to get.

5657. I don't wish to enter into matters of history, except in so far as it was contained in your statement. Might I ask you to state generally what your opinion is as regards the position the ancient Highland clansmen occupied?—If you mean when he had any right to land, I say decidedly that he never had.

5658. That he never had. Now I have got here a statement which I will ask you for a moment to listen to. I am not saying that it is definite, but I wish to point out to you the belief that the people always had, and that this feeling they have regarding the land is not a recent one instigated by agitators. This is the Report of Lord Napier's Commission, and they give a quotation from the Earl of Selkirk, who wrote in the year 1805. He said, talking of the Highland people, 'They well know of how little avail was a piece of 'parchment and a lump of wax, under the old system 'of the Highlands. They reproach their landlord with 'ingratitude, and remind him that but for their fathers

'he would have no estate. The permanent possession 'which they have always retained of their paternal 'farms they consider only as their just right for the 'share they had borne in the general defence, and can 'see no difference between the title of the chief and 'their own.' I simply point out that that was the expression conveyed by Lord Selkirk of the opinions of the people in the year 1805; and I direct it against the general agument you used about the people being influenced by outside agitators.—Of course, the people here may have considered, and I daresay do, that they had some feudal right or claim; but I can go back for more than 200 years to show that the land was used precisely in the manner I have described; that is to say, that the cottars or crofters, or sub-tenants rather, I should say, were always in possession of certain lands, and generally very small ones; very small portions, allotments merely.

5659. Well, I have no wish to press the question beyond the point that you, being a Highland chief, would be able to give us some information regarding the relations that existed between the chief and the clansmen in old times,—I have no doubt you have such information?—I really could not answer you: I think it is very possible that there may be such an opinion amongst the people, but it must descend from very ancient days.

5660. But you are aware, no doubt, that the legislation that has been already passed is founded upon historical reasons?—Do you mean with reference to the fixing of rents?

5661. Particularly as to fixity of tenure?—I really do not know what the object of the legislature was in interfering between me and my crofters; I can only regret it very sincerely, for I think it is very bad for them as well as for me.

5662. You also made an interesting statement regarding a regiment that was raised in the Island of Skye. I am not aware that the conditions of enlistment were the same in the Island of Skye as they were in the other parts of the country, but you will be able to inform me. I quote shortly from the report of Lord Napier's Commission:—'It is difficult to deny that a 'Macdonald, a Macleod, a Mackenzie, a Mackay, or a 'Cameron, who gave his son to his landlord eighty 'years ago to fill up the ranks of a Highland regiment, 'did morally acquire tenure in his holding more sacred 'than the stipulations of a written covenant.' This is one of the general arguments of a historical nature upon which Parliament granted security of tenure. Were there any such stipulations, may I ask, upon this estate?—I am not aware of them.

5663. A word or two with regard to the taking over of stock. You asked a question whether you were to be subjected to the loss of taking over this stock?—Precisely.

5664. But would you not admit that that is not a compact that is enforced by law or imposed by law?—Well, it is the custom of the country. I am bound by my leases to take the stock over at valuation. The stock, we must remember, is a stock made for a particular place, and it is important for the holder of the farm that he should have a stock which will remain on the ground and have a name. Well, if you change that stock and take it away, it loses its character; and therefore the incoming tenant will pay a considerable sum more than the market value of the stock, in order to have that sheep stock on the ground. Well, if a place is divided into crofts, of course those sheep must be sold off at market price, and the difference is very considerable. Many people state it at a half.

5665. I quite understand the position and the difficulty of it; but what I wished to point out was that it is not by legal enactment, though I admit that a lease is just as binding upon you?—It would affect me the same.

5666. It is not the act of the legislature?—Oh, no.

5667. Then I gather that your opinion is that if the Government is going to interfere further between landlord and tenant in the Highlands, they should do so by acquiring the land once and for all?—I see no other way: they cannot ask me to sacrifice sums of money in building houses and in providing stock for people. I have endeavoured to do so in two cases, as I have mentioned, but I could not do so farther.

Dunvegan, Skye.
Macleod of Macleod.

5668. In other words, you think that it would be necessary to nationalise the land before proceeding to do so?—Well, I have said that I should be very sorry if it was done: but, of course, what the legislature determine upon must be carried out.

5669. But you think that would be a better basis for further proceedings by the legislature,—looking at it from the landlord's point of view?—Well, I should be very sorry: but if it must be, it must be.

5670. Now, a word or two upon emigration. I think you stated that outside organised agitation was carried on against emigration. I presume you have heard of the scheme of giving £150,000 for emigrating people to Manitoba?—I have.

5671. Are you aware who the parties were who advocated that system of emigration?—No, I am not.

5672. Would you be surprised to know that it was a commercial company in London?—Yes; but if it had the object of enabling people who are in congestion here to remove to a better country, would it signify who had started the scheme?

5673. Certainly not; but I am directing the question to your statement that it was outside organised agitation that prevented the people going. My point is that it was outside organised agitation that advocated emigration?—Well, but I am afraid there are persons here who do advise the people here on no account to leave the country. As I pointed out, I don't wish the people to leave the country, except those who ought not to remain, and who are perfectly able to go. Why do bees swarm? They swarm because they cannot all live in the same hive. Why should everybody here remain, old and young, and everybody, when there is a better country for them to go to?

5674. I presume there are very few people who do so. But with regard to this organised agitation against emigration, you and I, and a great number more, no doubt, are of one mind as regards the fact of emigration being at a certain point necessary, but we differ as to the time when the necessity arises, and the means by which it ought to be done, because you expressed the opinion that you did not wish emigration per se?—I don't wish people here to emigrate, except with their perfect goodwill.

5675. Thank you: that is all.

5676. Mr Forsyth.—With reference to the taking over of sheep from your tenants by valuation, according to the custom of the country, did you not make your agreement with your tenants in the belief that your possession of your land would remain unaltered by any fresh legislation?—Undoubtedly.

5677. And certainly that you would feel, should legislation alter or in any way modify the ownership of land, you would thereby be injured by fresh legislation?—Immensely.

5678. Mr Maccallum.—I don't wish to trouble you, Macleod, except with a very few questions, and I put them simply for this reason, because of the importance that you attach to your opinions, on account of the position which you hold. I may assume that you take a great interest in this question, the question before the Commission, both as proprietor of the lands and as chief of the clan?—I have been 58 years in possession of this property, and naturally I feel a very great interest in all the people here; and the opinion I have given is really in consideration as well of my own position as of the position of the people here.

5679. And you think that the true chief is father of the clan?—Undoubtedly.

5680. That is the meaning of clan, that the chief has duties as head of a family?—Yes, I accept all those duties.

5681. And that the true chief always acts in a fatherly way towards his people?—I am not aware of any unkind action.

5682. I don't mean at all to insinuate that. But because of your position, therefore, you keep yourself in touch with the feelings and sentiments of the people?—I hope so.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Macleod of Macleod.

5683. And do not delegate your functions to a factor?—The factor has instructions from me, and acts upon them, and I know that he does so.

5684. Then, as you are cognisant of their position and their sentiments, I suppose you will admit that there is a strong desire on their part to be resettled on the land in medium-sized holdings?—Pray, sir, don't say 're-settled,' because they were never settled there at all. That is a delusion that a great many people adopt now, where they say that they want to be 're-settled'; it is no such thing; they never, on this estate (I only speak of this estate), they never were settled there before.

5685. I do not wish to enter into the historical question, because we have very little to do with that, I think, as a Commission, and it would take a long time to enter into it. You admit, however, that there is a strong and genuine desire on the part of the people there to be settled?—They have a great desire now to obtain more land.

5686. And you being in touch with them, and their chief, don't you think that everything should be done to enable this desire to be gratified?—I am of opinion, as I have expressed in the statement, that these people would ultimately come into a very unhappy position. Look at Glendale, which I settled in the year 1845. The people there are in a state of congestion, as was stated to you yesterday. Don't you think that if you fill this whole island with crofters, those people would rapidly increase in numbers, and would ultimately be obliged really to go away from this country altogether, many of them?

5687. Yes, but they hold here that they would succeed on medium-sized holdings, and they also say that they have no desire to sub-divide: they are against sub-division, and do they not also hold that this congestion has arisen from people being taken to their townships from other parts?—Not so. You found upon what they say at Glendale. But at Glendale, as I say in my statement, the people have increased, since the year 1845, to such an extent that they are now congested; and I firmly believe that they would be similarly congested elsewhere, and perhaps in a short time, if the crofting system were adopted.

5688. We have heard a good deal of evidence, and you are aware that there is a good deal of evidence before the Napier Commission, to the effect that the congestion arose from this that I referred to, from their being lifted from other parts and placed in these townships?—But I deny that altogether. I gave a croft to every man in that farm. There is one part of it to which others went, and that was Lowergill, a very fine glen and a splendid grazing: there was not a man on the farm of Glendale who could have taken in one of these £12 lots.

5689. Might I ask why you think they would not succeed on fair-sized holdings. You say you hold a high opinion of their intelligence, their ability to work, and willingness to learn. How would they not succeed?—Because I think that in this country, in its present condition, competition with other nations would prevent the possibility of their making anything out of the land. I don't say that there are not, perhaps, a few—well, there must be very few—who are so hard-working and so industrious that they might succeed; but I think really it would be only by getting wages away from their own croft.

5690. It is gratifying to find that experiments were made by yourself in this direction, and that, for instance, land was given to the cottars at Struanmore. Now, we had evidence with regard to that, and they stated that it was a great mercy that they got land. Now, don't you think, further, that in view of those statements, your experiment was a success?—I do not.

5691. They are well pleased themselves, are they not,—they said so?—They owe an immense amount of rent.

5692. At Struanmore?—At Struanmore.

5693. However, I remember a statement made by the delegate appointed by themselves, that they found it a great advantage to have got the land?—What occurred was this. When the tenant of that farm died, those poor people came as labourers into my hands: they had allotments, and they came as labourers into my hands. I thought that a cow was a very important thing for a man to have. Those people had no cow. I therefore gave them land to enable each man to have a cow, and they have benefited so far: but they are not contented; they want to have an extension of land.

5694. Yes, they want to have more land?—More land.

5695. But they are satisfied that the cattle they got have been of great advantage to them?—Certainly it has.

5696. They admit that?—Oh, yes.

5697. And they think that if they had got more, and if they would now get more, they would be still more satisfied?—But how can we give them more; unless we break up the neighbouring farm, which I hold to be a mistake.

5698. Then with regard to the position which you take up on the historical point, which I do not wish to enter upon largely at all, except with reference to this particular thing which we see with our eyes. In visiting the townships which the crofters allege to have been crofting townships, we find not only evidence of cultivation, but we find stack-yards. Would servants, if they were simply servants, have such large stack-yards as we see, for instance, in these old ruins?—They might have, undoubtedly; they were allowed, many of them perhaps an acre and a half, or two, or perhaps three occasionally. A good servant would be allowed a large allotment. But might not those large stack-yards that you mention—I am not speaking from my own knowledge, but only suggesting that they might—have been the stack-yards of the large tenants or tacksmen.

5699. Well, we saw them just in the neighbourhood of the dwellings, just beside the dwelling-house, and signs of comfortable houses also: we noticed fairly good-sized houses?—They all had fair-sized houses; I don't think they were ever stone and lime there, but what we call black houses.

5700. Then with regard to the fear which you have of the rates getting up. Have not the rates got up rather since the big farms came to be the fashion?—Oh dear, no. Why, the farms have been the same size ever since I can remember; they go back, in fact, more than two hundred years.

5701. However, a high pauper rate exists alongside with the large farming system?—Yes, but it would be much higher with the other.

5702. Would they not help each other from the kindly feeling which they have towards each other?—I am afraid, and I am sorry to say it, that there is not now the same kindly feeling that there used to be.

5703. Then with regard to the great loss which you think might accrue to the landlord if small holdings were made,—do not the landlords find a good deal of trouble with their large farms just now?—Rents are not so high as they were, but in no other respect.

5704. Are they not asking reductions?—Certainly.

5705. Constantly?—Well, last year was, I suppose, the worst year for the Highlands that we ever had, and, of course, if the prices of cattle and sheep are so low that the people can hardly get anything for them, naturally the tenant comes to the landlord to ask for assistance.

5706. I don't wish to put this question with regard to your own particular estate: but is it not the fact that some landlords are giving reductions to their large farmers which do not appear in the valuation roll?—I am not aware. My reductions do appear in the valuation roll.

5707. Yes, all reductions granted to them appear in the valuation roll?—Yes, mine do. Perhaps you will allow me to say something about a farm which is in my own hands, Glenbrittle. No doubt a good many years ago this farm was rented much higher, but I may mention that that farm, which remains in my hands, pays me very well. I receive from that farm a larger sum than I could get from a tenant, which shows that although the years are so bad as they have been the last year or two, still you can make a large farm pay.

5708. And do you think, then, that in these years the large farmers are occupying their lands to profit?—I think so; but the rent must be reduced in bad years. I don't mean to say that in the case of a man who has a lease of 14 or 19 years,—he takes the average, and therefore the rent always remains the same unless in a very exceptional year; but, on the whole, I think that a large farmer can pay where a small one could not. And the evil in the case of small holdings is this, that they cannot hold on. A bad year really injures them to such an extent that they cease to be able to go on at all: they cannot pay.

5709. Is there not a general agreement that the large farms have not been paying for several years back?—Oh, they have been paying their rent.

5710. They might have been paying their rent, but have they been paying it out of profits?—Oh, surely; I believe so. I judge from my own case; I have been carrying on at a certain rent, at a profit.

5711. And do you think that your large farmers, for instance, are content with the rents that they have just now,—that they think they have good bargains? I don't want to press the question?—I really hardly can answer that.

5712. The Chairman.—That point is not before us.

5713. Mr Maccallum.—I do not wish to press it. The point is, that it appears to me that there is a general complaint among large farmers that they are not able to farm to profit with the present low price of wool.—Undoubtedly, the low prices affect people immensely. But then a tenant farmer always hopes the prices will improve: last year was a very bad one, but next year may be a very good one, who knows?

5714. Then you speak of agitators trying to persuade the people in the Highlands to ask for land that belongs to other people. But don't you think that the chief holds the land in trust for the people?—No, I don't think so.

5715. That he has no duty to perform, through having got land and being head of the clan?—Well, I believe that I perform all the duties that the chief owes to his people; but when they come to me and ask me for lands which have been in the hands of large tenants for hundreds of years, and when they say that they could make them pay in the present times when everything is against them in the shape of the price of produce, then, I say, they are mistaken; and I think it would be a very unkind act on my part to encourage them. I don't know where in the world they would find money to do it. I think it would be very unwise and very unpaternal to accept their propositions, and I do not think it would be advantageous to them to have these crofts.

5716. Then, as to the hardship which you seem to think it is that the people should be settled on the lands,—that it would be virtually taking the land from the chiefs; have not many of the chiefs sold their land?—Certainly.

5717. And would not that be a much greater matter of regret than that the lands should be peopled; is it not much more regrettable, from the chieftain's point of view, to sell them than to have his lands peopled?—I don't want to sell; and if the Government decides that they are going to cover these lands here with crofters—which I think a very foolish scheme—they had better take my land at once.

5718. But the chiefs had not such a very strong love for their land that they did not sell it?—They sold it because they could not help themselves. They sold it because they wanted the money, and could not get on without it. Remember, sir, how matters were. I don't know whether you know the Island of Harris. My grandfather sold Harris, because he had been left in difficult circumstances. That island, which has since been sold for £250,000, was, at the end of last century, sold for £15,000.

5719. Mr Macleod.—I have one or two questions to ask, but if you feel at all fatigued, or if you feel that you have already answered sufficiently, I will not press them.—Oh, not at all: I am quite ready and willing to reply.

Dunvegan, Skye. — Macleod of Macleod.

5720. It is more as a matter of history; I wish to ask whether your view of the old position of the Highland clansman is that he was simply a cottar?—I believe he was simply a cottar.

5721. Simply a cottar; and that all the halo of romance that has grown up around him in the minds of the people has been entirely mistaken; he was simply a farm labourer?—There were two sets of people: there were the labourers who were employed upon the different farms, and there were cottars who had no land. I don't know what halo there might be, except that the chief naturally considered his people as persons in whom he took an interest. Moreover, I daresay you know the people were really very valuable for the defence of the country, and they were, so to speak, under the chief, who was very glad to have a number; unfortunately now it is not so.

5722. Then you think, where the ancient Highland clansman was not a cottar, he was kept as a fighting man?—Well, I don't say that, because he was not called upon to fight; except upon occasions when the nation required his services.

5723. Not that the chief required him to defend his land?—Well, I believe it often happened in those days,—but that is really very ancient history,—that there were clan fights. I could show you a good many cairns on this estate where battles were fought between the Macdonalds and the Macleods, and where sometimes we were victorious, and at other times sustained defeat. I think it is very likely that in those days the chief looked upon his men as very valuable people.

5724. Then it is not because these cottars and labourers paid no rent directly to the chief that you say that they had no claim to the land?—In those days it was quite customary for a man to leave one part of the country and go to another. They were perfectly free to do what they pleased. That is, of course, when a vacancy occurred where they thought they could better themselves—but I am talking of really very old days.

5725. You must confess that you raised the historical aspect of this question yourself?—Oh, surely. I wish you to know everything I can tell you.

5726. Then, seeing that the ancient Highland clansman was either a farm labourer or a cottar, I take it that the chiefs purchased their lands from the State, and that they did not have it by conquest on the part of themselves or their clansmen?—Well, with regard to these estates I may say this. Somebody, the other day, questioned whether I had any right to these estates. These estates really came into my family through a marriage: an ancestor of mine married the daughter of a Norwegian knight who possessed them—I am talking now of several hundred years ago—and it was thus they came into the family.

5727. Then, as I understand it, the tenure that you presently hold under is the feudal tenure?—I hold by charter from the Crown.

5728. And do you think that that tenure always obtained in the Highlands, at least within historical times?—Well, I know this, that in olden times there was an ancestor of mine, called Rory More, who felt so independent on the matter of property, that he refused to acknowledge the King of Scotland; upon which these estates were confiscated, but nobody ventured to come here to take them!

5729. Then it was held by the tenure of Rory More in those days?—By the tenure of Rory More.

5730. Mr Munro.—Macleod, you have favoured the Commission with an exceedingly interesting, and, from your point of view, very able statement. Now there are one or two questions that I have to put to you, rather to amplify the information you have given us; but if you are in the slightest degree tired, I will refrain from putting them?—Not the least.

5731. You have started the subject of land purchase, and in doing so you are certainly within your rights. Now, might I ask if you have ever considered what might be deemed fair terms of purchase, if such a project were entertained; and before you answer the question, I may remind you that one of the witnesses here, yesterday, stated that he considered from eighteen to twenty years' purchase would be a fair basis of settlement?—I think he was entirely mistaken in making such a statement. Some years ago, when rents were higher, I could have had forty years' purchase for land here.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Macleod of Macleod.

5732. I quite agree with you; but, taking into consideration the past history of the land question, and the present and what you may call the future of it, do you not consider that even eighteen to twenty years' purchase would be rather an extravagant rate of purchase to pay at present?—I have not considered that subject, but I certainly should be very unwilling to give my property at eighteen years' purchase.

5733. But supposing, now, that the crofter were put in possession of a croft, and that he were asked to pay up the principal sum paid for the croft, with interest, spread over a long period of years, do you consider that he would be likely to accomplish the liquidation of the debt?—Well, I think not.

5734. You think not?—No. I have advanced money to crofters here, and I don't get it back again. Eight years have elapsed, and my £1000 lent is very little reduced.

5735. Do you not consider that it would be a strong incentive to any man to make an effort to pay off such a debt if he had the prospect of becoming absolute owner of it himself, on the expiry of a certain period?—There might be an exception or two, but I cannot think that our Highlanders, as a rule, would ever accomplish such a result, considering that we are placed in a most unfortunate position as regards the value of produce.

5736. Then you consider the crofting system, under almost any conditions, hopeless?—I do; honestly, I do.

5737. You stated, in the course of your paper, that there was a tendency to molly-coddle the crofter, and that he rather sought charity. Is that your opinion?—Well, almost every year there have been—principally, I think, from the Lews, but from this country also—claims sent in by the clergymen of the parish and others, intimating that destitution prevails. Why, it happens almost every year that there is some claim made, and I regret very much that it should continue to be so, because I don't wish our Highlanders, who are fine independent people, to go to the people of England and always seek for some money, or some grain, or some assistance. I think it is discreditable to them.

5738. I quite agree with you. The question has been repeatedly put to witnesses before this Commission whether they, in any degree, expected or sought for charity, and they warmly repudiated the suggestion. Do you consider they were sincere?—Certainly, I think they would say so; but would circumstances admit of their doing otherwise? As I understand it, they have always told this Commission here that they have not got the means of building houses, and they are quite correct. With few exceptions, they are unable to do that, and they are now applying to the Government for assistance. I cannot see how in the world they can take crofts, unless they get assistance to do it.

5739. What they stated to the Commission was, that it was not charity they wanted but fairplay.—That is true: charity, I daresay, they don't want, but can they help appealing for charity?

5740. The Chairman.—What do you say is the value of your land under farms, as compared with the value of land under crofters at present?—Is it the total amount that I have obtained from farms, against the total amount I obtain from crofts?

5741. Take it so.

5742. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I think what your Lordship wishes to know is, whether in any given farm or given piece of land Macleod thinks he could get more from a large tenant or from crofters.

5743. The Chairman.—That is a subsequent question.—Witness. The question is, what I get from farms and what I get from crofters.

5744. Per acre, or in a general way?—It is somewhat difficult to answer that question. For example, there are the Cuillin Hills, in the farm of Glenbrittle: I suppose in the stony places they are not worth a halfpenny an acre.

5745. Would you say that you have scarcely the materials before you to enable you to answer that question?—I think I should like to consider it.

5746. Very well. My next question is this. Suppose one or more of your farms to be put under crofters, would you expect to derive as much from crofters on self-sustaining holdings as from the large farm from which they were formed?—Well, I don't set myself at all against crofters taking farms; but I should look to their paying me as much as a farmer-tenant would pay me. But I think very few of them have the skill.

5747. Leaving the skill out of view?—Yes.

5748. Do you think you might fairly ask such a rent, say from six crofters occupying a large farm (leaving the buildings out of view), as you had asked from the sole tenant?—Well, I think it would be somewhat hard upon a proprietor to expect that he would take less from one man than he would from another.

5749. And you think you might ask as much from the six as you had from the one?—I think so.

5750. I understand you to concede that the present crofting system—the system of small crofts—on your estate is in an undesirable condition?—I think so, sir.

5751. How would you remedy the present undesirable state of matters, leaving recent legislation and prospective proposals out of view?—That is very hard to say; I can give no remedy.

5752. You can give no remedy?—I can suggest no remedy. I would say this that a question of that sort must be left to be dealt with as it would be dealt with in other countries. I can suggest no remedy.

5753. But you observe—I do not wish to press you unduly—you observe your admission of the existence of a very undesirable state of matters upon your estate, therefore a system to be remedied, if a legitimate remedy can be obtained. Are you able to suggest such a remedy?—Well, I am not. The crofters here have certain customs which you cannot break through, and which you could not break through, without a very large outlay of money.

5754. Now, leaving out of view any claim which you might have—and I am not raising any question upon that—don't you think that an extension of the crofters' system to larger holdings would operate as a remedy to a certain degree?—I think that there are so many objections—increase of population, uncertainty of times, difficulties of competition—I do not think that it would ever answer.

5755. Then you think it is preferable to allow the present state of matters to continue rather than adopt a system of larger holdings?—Well, my lord, I think that any of our people here would do better with the crofts they have, which do not require a great deal of labour upon their part, coupled with the wages, which, now-a-days, are certainly fair. With those wages I believe they would live better, and that they do live better than they would if they had crofts which obliged them to devote their whole time to the cultivation of land, and prevented their getting a more remunerative labour elsewhere.

5756. In other words, you think this present undesirable system is preferable to the extension of their holdings?—I see no better system than the present. I cannot see that there would be any improvement in placing those men upon larger holdings, looking at all the circumstances that I have alluded to in my statement.

5757. Do you think it reasonable to exact a rent from a man which, confessedly, he does not derive from his holding?—I think that you can hardly separate the two. A labourer in England has a small allotment; our people have a large allotment, so to speak. That man in England who has his allotment pays for it out of his labour, which he has to give elsewhere. These people are in exactly that position.

5758. You are in favour of that course?—Well, I see

Dunvegan, Skye.

Macleod of Macleod.

no other. You know the Crofters Commission have settled that the crofters here ought to pay for a certain amount of land a certain sum. Well, let them pay it as they can. It is land which they have taken. The rent must be paid, at least it ought to be paid.

5759. I am not sure if I have made my question quite intelligible. Do you think it right to exact a rent from a man which, confessedly, he does not derive from his holding?—I really think that if a man has some land and a house he ought to pay the rent.

5760. Quite so. That is an answer. Now, I have been requested to put this question to you, and I have no objection to do so, although it is one I had no desire to enter into. I have been desired to ask you whether you removed from Bracadale to Glendale certain crofters, in view of the sale of the Glendale estate?—No; certainly not, certainly not. The Glendale estate was sold after the famine, and it was sold by my creditors, and I could not avoid its being sold; deeply did I grieve that it ever had to be sold. I am very much obliged to you, my lord, for asking that question.

5761. Now I wish to invite your attention to certain documents, which purport to be original documents, dated in 1792–93, exactly a hundred years ago. They were printed in the Scottish Highlander of Inverness, on the 15th of March 1888, and through that channel they reached the public. First, the instructions to a sheriff officer in executing the several summonses of removal, at the instance of Colonel Macleod of Macleod and his factor against his tenants. The second document is a form of an execution of summons of removing, Colonel Macleod of Macleod and his factor against his tenants, 1792; and the third document is a list of tenants to be removed from Macleod's estate at Whitsunday 1792; and then follows a list of the baronies, being the baronies of Duirinish, Waternish, Bracadale, and Minginish. These documents purport to set forth proceedings for removal by the Macleod of the day taken before the Sheriff of Inverness. Part of these removals were removals of yearly tenants. Another part was removal of persons holding under leases for terms of years in respect of military services by members of the families. The first class of proceedings would appear to have terminated before the Sheriff of the County; the latter class of proceedings seem to have found their way to the Court of Session, where a decree of removing, applicable to 1793 instead of 1792, was pronounced by Lord Swinton, one of the Lords Ordinary of the day. Do you know anything of these documents?—Nothing. I never heard before what you state. I know that in 1792 the leases of farms came to an end, but I know nothing about removals, and I am not aware that what you have read just now does indicate that there were removals. There might have been summonses but no removals, because it was very often the custom to issue a summons as a threat in order to obtain payment.

5762. And do you say that if these proceedings did take place they did not result in removals, but only resulted in enforcing payment of the rent?—That is what I imagine. It has been always the case. As I say in my statement, they have rather a dislike in this country to pay rent, even when they have got the money, and we are obliged to appeal to the law. I do not say that generally, but there are some with whom that is necessary. I know nothing of any of what people call 'evictions' upon this estate.

5763. If such documents exist, you dispute their historical accuracy?—I dispute it so far. I never heard of this statement, but I dispute the accuracy of the inference that may be drawn from the fact of there having been summonses of removal.

5764. How do you account for the feeling which prevails so largely, of a wish on the part of crofters to be re-settled in lands from which they imagine they have been evicted?—My lord, I dispute altogether that question of eviction resettlement.

5765. Pardon me. My question is—how do you account for the existence of the feeling?—Oh, the existence of the feeling.

5766. Is it a delusion?—It is a delusion, but that it exists with some I have very little doubt, and I have observed in various parts of the country that it is asserted and asserted again by people who, I think, can know nothing whatever on the subject.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Macleod of Macleod.

5767. But we find that feeling existing among the people here?—Oh, I daresay. It is conveyed by persons who have certain objects in view.

5768. And do you think it has no historical basis?—I think not, so far as I can tell.

5769. Mr Reginald Macleod.—Upon that point, my lord, that you raised, might I ask if there is any evidence quoted in the Scottish Highlander, to the effect that these decrees, although granted, had been actually extracted?

5770. The Chairman.—Perhaps you will kindly allow me to finish my questions.

5771. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I beg your pardon. I thought it was a propos of your previous questions.

5772. The Chairman.—You occupy the farm of Glenbrittle yourself?—Witness. Yes.

5773. In the statement you made, did you debit the farm which you say you occupy to profit with a rent?—I charge myself with the rent, which appears in the County Roll, and that rent is higher than I have as yet been able to get from a tenant. But the reason of that is that it requires so very large a sum of money to stock the farm that there are very few tenants who have been able to take it. That is the difficulty, or else I would be very glad to let the farm; and in smaller-sized farms, as they were in fact before.

5774. If you are willing to answer, I would put the question to you also, at what rate you borrowed the money for drainage?—I think it was 6½ per cent., spread over a certain number of years.

5775. Mr Gordon.—Was it under the Enclosure Commissioners?—Yes, under the Drainage Act.

5776. The Chairman.—And I suppose I may take it, it was repaid?—It was repaid.

5777. Mr Sutherland.—May I ask if it was repaid by annual instalments covering principal and interest?—Yes.

5778. And it became extinguished in how many years?—Twenty-five, I suppose. It was extinguished, and I was very glad when it was so.

5779. The Chairman.—May I ask you this question also, Macleod. Do you disapprove of the Crofters Act?—Very much.

5780. The Chairman (to Mr Reginald Macleod).—Now, Mr Macleod, you suggested a question.

5781. Mr Reginald Macleod.—I asked whether there was any statement in the Scottish Highlander newspaper to the effect that these decrees upon which they found were actually extracted, without which they could not have been put in force?

5782. The Chairman.—What they state is this, that no less than 150 families, or about 900 souls, were evicted by legal process from the Macleod's estates, but I accept the statement which has been made by Macleod himself in answer to the question.

5783. Mr Gordon.—I have just one or two questions to ask you. In calculating the profits of Glenbrittle farm, you would first charge yourself with the rent entered in the Valuation Roll?—I do.

5784. Well, in answer to the Chairman, you stated that you naturally expected the same rent would be paid to you by crofters as by the tacksman, in the event of the farm being given over?—I did.

5785. Do you expect,—would you naturally expect,—that if such a farm as Claigean was given over to crofters? That farm was mentioned by several of the witnesses yesterday, and in answer to a question put by me one very intelligent witness proposed to allocate it to 40 holdings. Now, suppose these 40 people with their families were placed on the farm of Claigean under a condition of matters that would render them and their families self-supporting; do you expect that these 40 families, after supporting themselves, would be able to pay as much rent for the farm as the present tenant pays?—Certainly not.

5786. Now, would you mind, if you have it in your mind, telling us how much less they would pay—would they be able to pay much more than half?—I should think perhaps more than a half, but not much; but the evil that I should anticipate would be that in some years they would not pay at all.

5787. But, even supposing a valuator was to go upon the ground to fix the rent of these forty families, and his instructions were that he was to fix the rent at such a sum as would leave them in the position of being self-supporting, do you think that that man would put on £580, spread over these 40 families, or would it not be more likely to be at the rate, which the witness stated, of £10 each, making £400?—It would depend, of course, on the crofts,—I suppose some of the crofts would be more valuable than others.

5788. Well, I am taking them on an average?—At an average of £10, that would make £400. I think it would be less than that probably. I think the difference between the present rent and the crofters' rent would be considerably less than that. For the farm of Vatten, which I let to small tenants, the tacksman had been paying £130, and I let it at £70. But then that was an experiment that I wished to make to ascertain whether they could live upon it, and now, of course, they are there in arrear like everybody else.

5789. But your opinion is that the crofters would not be able, after maintaining their families, to pay as much rent for the farm as the present tacksman pays?—I certainly think that that is so. There is one subject, my lord, that I should like to mention, and that is that I am happy to say that the people here now live a great deal more comfortably than they used to do. I am glad of it, because it is satisfactory that they should be more comfortable than they used to be. But, of course, that being so, they cannot possibly afford to pay the rent that they used to do, and live as they do now. For example, I daresay your lordship may have observed that their clothing is very good and comfortable and so forth, and the women indulge, as I would wish they should, in good bonnets and comfortable things, and the like. I think that all that tells against the possibility of their being able really to keep themselves with the necessaries of life so well in the hereafter as they have hitherto done. They have been contented, in short, with the absolute necessaries of life, and really perhaps on a very poor scale; now they certainly live very much better, and I rejoice that it is so.

5790. The Chairman.—Have there been a number of new houses built by the crofters within recent years?—There are a few.

5791. Now, do not you think the building of these houses, and the general increase in comfort, is in some degree at least due to the security of tenure which they have under the Crofters Act?—Well, I do not think I can quite admit that. I think that it arises from the higher wages they get for labour.

5792. You think these houses would have been built if the Act had not become law?—Yes, I think so.

5793. You think so?—Yes.

5794. And you think therefore the present advantageous condition in which they are, in so far as it is an improvement on the past, is in no degree due to recent legislation?—Well, I confess I do not think that the fixing of fair rents, and the granting of fixity of tenure, have been, or will be of any advantage to the people. The Crofters Commission was sent here in order to fix fair rents, and I have nothing in the world to say about that, except that I think the fixing of fair rents does tie the people to the land in a manner that, I think, is prejudicial to themselves. I think, moreover, that where you fix fair rents, the rents may perhaps become quite unfair in the course of the following year, so that it is extremely difficult to go and deal with such a law as has been established by the Government. I do not object to it myself the least in the world, but still I think there are those objections which I have mentioned. You asked me, and therefore I have answered.

5795. Quite so; I am very much obliged to you for your answer.

5796. Mr Sutherland.—One question, if you please, with regard to this point of the comparison of value of the area devoted to crofters and large farmers respectively. You state as your general opinion, I understand, that the large farmer pays more per acre for the ground occupied by him than the crofter does?—Well, I did not answer that question, because I do not feel quite sure about it.

Dunvegan, Skye. — Macleod of Macleod.

5797. What I wish to know is, that your impression is not at the present moment an authoritative one?—No.

5798. It is founded on general impressions?—Yes.

5799. Mr Macpherson, a witness before us yesterday, stated that he believed that the crofters paid more?—I am certain that is not so.

5800. So that his statement might probably also rest upon a general impression?—Yes.

5801. In fact the point is not to be taken as decided yet?—No.

5802. Mr John Macpherson.—May I ask a question, my lord.

5803. The Chairman.—What is the question?

5804. Mr Macpherson.—Are there more people in Skye to-day than there were fifty years ago?

5805. The Chairman.—You say in Skye, but the witness is only giving evidence in regard to his own estate.

5806. Mr Macpherson.—Well, I will ask if there are more people in Glendale than there were fifty years ago?

5807. The Chairman.—The question is, are there more people in Glendale at present than there were fifty years ago?—Witness. I believe there are, and I think Mr Macpherson himself stated that they were in a congested state.

5808. Mr Macpherson.—Macleod of Macleod, may I ask how many families of outsiders you sent to Glendale in 1845?—Very well, John, but did I not send them to a place that none of them could take otherwise. I sent them to Lowergill. You were only seven years old at the time when I gave your father a croft there. I remember that perfectly well. You tell me that there are more people—for I do not know it myself—you tell me that there are more people in that country than there used to be. How is that? It is just that the population has increased.

5809. I would like to know how many families you sent to Glendale in 1845 from other parts of the estate?—What has that to do with the increase of population since the year 1845?

5810. The Chairman.—The question put is this—did you send families to Glendale in 1845, and if so, how many?—I sent families to Glendale in 1845 to a place called Lowergill, and so anxious was I about the fishery for the people that I took from Captain Macdonald's estate men who were good fishermen, in order that they might give fishing a fair trial, and I placed them in another vacant place called Ramasaig.

5811. Well, the other branch of the question is, how many families did you send?—That I cannot say exactly; I should think about fourteen or fifteen.

5812. Mr Macpherson.—How many families to Upper Millovaig alone?—I think four or five.

5813. I will prove that there were fifteen—which would be more profitable to the country at large and also to the revenue—a number of well-to-do crofters in Claggan, or one man?—I think most decidedly one man, John.

ALEXANDER MACKENZIE, Boreraig (58).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

5814. The Chairman.—Your holding, I see, extends to 4 acres 2 roods 33 poles of arable, 4 acres 1 rood 34 poles of outrun, a share of 167 acres township pasture divided into tenths, and a share of 793 acres hill grazing divided by 32⅛. The former rent was £5, and the fair rent is £3, 5s. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

5815. With the view of abbreviating the proceedings, we propose to take your statement as for the whole three Husabost tenants, whose names we have got, and to examine you alone. Do you consent to that?—I have no authority to speak, except for Boreraig.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Alexander Mackenzie.

5816. Will you kindly read the statement?—

Unto the Honourable the Royal Commission, 1892.

The statement of the people of the crofting township of Boreraig, on the estate of Mr Nicol Martin, in the parish of Duirinish.

Present population of the township.

The above-mentioned township suffers from congestion of population. To put the township into anything like a comfortable position, two-thirds of its tenants would be required to be removed.

NUMBER OF CROFTERS, COTTARS, &c., IN TOWNSHIP OF BORERAIG.

Number of Crofters.	Cottars.	Number of Crofters it would keep comfortably.

The late proprietor has enlarged the home-farm, Husabost, by curtailing the township of Boreraig. Mr Nicol Martin, the new proprietor, has also the large farm of Claigean, which he rents at £600 from Macleod of Macleod. In this farm over 20 acres are under cultivation, but there are over 200 acres of old arable land in it, and a considerable amount of land that crofters would reclaim, besides excellent pasture. This farm, if given to the people, would settle the land question for a good many of the people on Mr Nicol Martin's estate.

5817. Where are the lands to which you think certain of the tenants in question might be transferred?—Claigean and the entire parish of Bracadale.

5818. You heard the evidence, or a portion of the evidence, yesterday?—I heard a good portion of it.

5819. And does it convey your views upon the matter generally?—There are some parts of it that I was not agreeing with.

5820. But does it convey your views generally?—Yes, for the most part.

5821. Do you wish to make any addition to this statement?—There is one thing that I do not agree with, and that was the sum that was stated as the cost of erecting crofters' houses.

5822. What do you wish to say upon that?—I think any man who had to build a house, say on a 15 acre croft, could build a comfortable enough house for £30.

5823. Do you wish to make any other statement?—Nothing else.

5824. Mr Nicol Martin.—Do you claim the parks at Boreraig as belonging to the township of Boreraig, as you have said in your statement?—They want these parks back.

5825. Had they ever the parks in the state they are in to-day?—Not in the state they are in to-day.

5826. Have not those parks been all drained and trenched at the expense of my uncle, who was the late proprietor?—Yes, when the crofters were put out.

5827. What crofters were put out of these parks?—Four were put out, and where they were cutting their peats the parks are now laid out.

5828. So the parks are just made out of peaty ground?—The most part of them.

NEIL MACKINNON, Cottar, Ferrinvicquire (58)—examined.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Neil Mackinnon.

5829. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No, I am a cottar.

5830. Do you pay rent?—No.

5831. How much land have you?—Not the breadth of my foot.

5832. Have you any stock?—I have one cow.

5833. Where does it feed?—On the hill.

5834. Whose hill?—On the crofters' hill.

5835. And do you pay anything for that?—Yes.

5836. What do you pay?—A very small sum; it is the price of the grass, 6s.

5837. Are there other cottars at Ferrinvicquire?—Not one.

5838. You are the only one?—I am the only one.

5839. How long have you been there?—I was born there.

5840. You wish another holding?—Yes.

5841. Where do you think it could be obtained?—Anywhere within my reach. There is not much agricultural ground in Mr Martin's estate, I would say, except a place for three or four at Scorr.

5842. You think there is land there for three or four?—For three or four I would think; there is a good deal of hill pasture, but there is no arable ground.

5843. Do you wish to make any further statement?—No, I agree with the previous witness.

5844. You would take a holding if you got the offer of one?—Yes, willingly.

5845. How large?—I would say from £5 to £10.

5846. Of rent?—Yes.

5847. You think you could make a rent of £10?—Yes.

5848. With average chances?—Yes.

5849. And without assistance?—Without assistance.

5850. Mr Nicol Martin (Proprietor of Ferrinvicquire).—I should like to know this. You say there is ground which is suitable for three tenants on Scorr?—Yes.

5851. Are there any three who could pay for the stock, the present stock on the hill?—Well, I do not know as to that stock, but I know that there are three, and more than three I believe, who could pay for a good-sized croft.

5852. I quite agree; but if part of the place is taken, the rest is useless for me. You know that. So I want to know if there are any three that could pay for the stock on the hill ground just now?—I cannot say for that.

5853. The Chairman.—You mean your own stock?

5854. Mr Martin.—I mean my own stock presently on the hill ground. He says it is a place fit for three, and I want to know if there are any three who could take it?

5855. The Chairman.—What is your answer to the question?—I say that I do not know.

5856. Mr Martin.—You heard yesterday evidence given here that for 100 sheep, 6 cows, and 1 horse, a fair rent would be about £5 or £6?—That was equal to the man that said it would cost £450 to start a crofter.

5857. I am not talking of what it would cost. I ask if a croft with the stock I have named would be fairly rented at £5 or £6. You do not consider it too dear, I am sure?—No, I do not consider it too dear.

5858. Do you consider it what you would call a fair rent?—Well, I will leave the fixing of the rent to better judges.

5859. You have an opinion, surely—when you want land you know the value of it. There is no man who wants land but surely can give an opinion?—But do you think the country is going to take my opinion of the price of land?

5860. No, I am not asking the country to take it, but I will take it?—There are better judges than I or maybe you, Mr Martin.

5861. I would like you to answer the question whether that would be a fair rent? Do you think it is about the thing?—Well, I believe it is on the cheap side, I would say.

Dunvegan, Skye. — Neil Mackinnon.

5862. I quite agree with you myself. Now, at £5, that would be about 7½d. per sheep. Now, on Scorr I have just now between 500 and 600 sheep, which would make a rent of about £17, 10s. for Scorr. Would you consider that a fair rent for the hill?—I am not a valuator.

5863. Well, I have erected fences, as you know?—I know.

5864. You know that the people of the township marked the march where I should put up the fence, and you also know that they promised to pay half the interest on the cost?—I had nothing to do with that; I was in no way connected with that.

5865. But I suppose you got instructions to come here to-day?—Nothing in regard to the fences.

5866. Well, it is a fact all the same?—Oh, I don't deny the fact.

5867. I asked if you knew that I erected a fence between my crofters and myself?—You did.

5868. I ask if you know that they promised to pay half the interest on that fence as far as it went along their land?—I took no interest in that subject; I had nothing to do with it myself.

5869. The Chairman.—Do you know that they promised to make that payment, or do you not know?—No.

5870. You do not know?—No.

5871. Very well, that is enough?—I do not say but that it is true for all that.

5872. Personally you had nothing to do with it?—No.

5873. Mr Martin.—But he is here for the people, and that is why I put it. (To Witness.) Do you consider £17, 10s. a fair rent for Scorr, while I pay £26 a year for the interest of the fences? Do you consider it fair that I should let Scorr for £17, 10s. to crofters and pay £26 myself for the fencing of that ground?—Do you fix the rent?

5874. I fix it according to the statement of delegates here yesterday, and I only ask if you would consider it a fair thing?—Well, I heard of 30 or 40 sheep, and 5 or 6 cows, and a horse for £6 or £7.

5875. Well, at £6 or £7 it will not make more than I say, £17 or so. Would you think that I could possibly give my hill ground for £17, while I have to pay £26, 10s. of interest for the fencing of that ground?—Oh, I cannot say, but I believe———

5876. The Chairman.—What were you going to say you believe?—I believe by his statement he could not do that. It would be at the rate he mentions all expenses.

5877. You would not expect him to take a rent of £17, 10s. in respect of a property which was fenced at a yearly interest of £26?—No, it would be impossible, I think.

5878. Mr Martin.—I want you also to answer me this one question. Would you think it fair that I should take from my tenants a rent of 7½d. per sheep while I pay to another proprietor for the grazing over 5s. per sheep?—I would think not.

Donald Maclean.

DONALD MACLEAN, Crofter, Galtrigill—examined.

5879. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

5880. I see your holding extends to 2 acres 3 poles arable, 2 acres 3 roods 14 poles outrun, and grazing the same as the last witness. Your former rent was £3, 10s., and your fair rent is £2, 2s.?—Yes.

5881. Did you hear the evidence yesterday?—Yes.

5882. And does it generally set forth your views?—Yes.

5883. Would you like to make any addition to it?—There is a written statement here.

5884. Kindly read that statement.

Unto the Honourable Royal Commission 1892.

The statement of the people of the crofting township of Galtrigill, on the estate of Mr Nicol Martin, in the parish of Duirinish.

The above named township is too thickly populated. To put the township into an orderly and comfortable position, one-half of its crofters ought to be removed. Dunvegan, Skye. — Donald Maclean.

NUMBER OF CROFTERS, COTTARS, &c., IN TOWNSHIP OF GALTRIGILL.

No. of Crofters.	No. of Cottars.	No. of Crofters it would keep comfortably.

A former proprietor, Mr Malcolm Nicolson, has curtailed the township of Galtrigill by depriving the crofters of two-thirds of the township for a sheep-run, which is used by the now proprietor, Mr Nicol Martin, for the same purpose. By adding the deprived part to Galtrigill, after the migration, the remaining crofters will be in a more comfortable position. On Mr Nicol Martin's estate there is only land for about one-third of its crofters, but there is plenty of land on Macleod of Macleod's estate which we would be glad to get.

5885. Mr Nicol Martin.—Would you promise to pay a fair rent for this hill that you want—I understand you ask for the hill of Galtrigill?—Certainly, we promise to pay a fair rent.

5886. When did you yourself get your present croft?—About ten or eleven years ago.

5887. At May 1882, was it not?—(No answer).

5888. Did you not, at that time, write a statement saying that you would pay a yearly rent of £3, 10s. for that croft, and send it up by Mr William Macneil, postmaster?—It might be true enough.

5889. That is not an answer; did you?—I believe I did.

5890. Is it not a fact that from 1882 till November 1888 you only paid in all £1, 10s. 3d.?—It is a fact.

5891. Can I judge, then, from that fact that the hill ground will be paid in the same way?—I did not come here to speak for myself personally. I came here to represent the people of the township, and I cannot say much about them as regards that question.

5892. Mr Sutherland.—Did the Crofters Commission find that that amount of £3, 10s. was too high?—They did.

5893. And they reduced it to £2, 2s.?—That is right.

5894. And you did not pay it because you were unable to do it, having too high a rent to pay?—It was not for being too high altogether, but I was not very successful in the fishing. I was fishing on the East Coast, and I was forced to come home. My wife was unwell for a year or two, and I could not pay the rent at that time.

5895. So it is out of the fishing you were paying the rent, and not out of the holding?—Certainly out of the fishing; I could not pay it out of the croft.

5898. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

5899. Would you kindly read it?

Statement on behalf of the crofters of Edinbane, on the Greshornish estate.

We, the crofters of Edinbane, on the Greshornish estate, beg to make the following statement regarding the sheep-tack on this estate. The tack was formed over forty years ago, and three townships were cleared for that purpose, namely, Coishletter, from which ten families were evicted; Lower Glen, Greshornish, from which six families were evicted; and Dubeck, from which five families were evicted. Several of the evicted families were placed in Edinbane, which had already been sufficiently occupied, thus causing the present congestion. The township was also curtailed by taking from it the districts of Kerrol and Blackhill, on the latter of which were placed cottars. This curtailment was made without any reduction of rent. While we consider the above-mentioned sheep farm as suitable for crofts, we would state that without a loan of money we would be unable to stock them or build houses on them in the event of them being formed.

Kenneth Macaskill, 18 and 19 Edinbane (70). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

5901. The Chairman.—Is yours a joint-tenancy in name of Kenneth and Donald Macaskill?—Yes.

5902. Then I see you hold half a croft, the area being 8 acres 3 roods 31 poles arable, 6 acres 1 rood 1 pole outrun, common pasture 2110 acres, divided into 28 shares. The former rent £12, now reduced to £8, 10s.?—Yes.

5903. Have you a written statement?—No, I am from the same township as the previous witness.

5904. Would you sign the statement given in by Shaw?—Yes.

5905. What has become of the place called Caroll? is it occupied now?—The innkeeper has one-half.

5906. What is the name of the innkeeper?—Neil Campbell.

5907. Do you know what rent Neil Campbell pays?—I could not say, indeed.

5908. Who has got the other half?—John Macdonald.

5909. Who is John Macdonald?—He was a servant of Mr Macleod.

5910. Then do you wish to say anything further?—A widow has another piece of it.

5911. What is the name of the widow; is it Mrs Mackay?—Yes.

5912. Then who has got Blackhill?—The poor people that were on Greshornish and Coishletter are settled there. They are cottars entirely.

5913. Mr Macleod.—How long is it since the farm of Greshornish was cleared?—Forty years since Coishletter was cleared. I cannot tell how long since the rest of the estate was cleared, for I was born and brought up at Husabost, and I am now paying a rent to five landlords.

5914. Mr Shaw.—It is thirty-eight years since Coishletter was cleared.

[Mr John Robertson, Orbost, transmitted the following statements with reference to Edinbane and Coishletter:—

Edinbane.

5914A. This township contains about 200 acres arable and 2000 acres hill pasture.

There are 28 crofts in the township, the rent of which was, in 1836, £280, 4s. 6d. It was reduced in 1866 to £218, 1s., and in 1889 by the Crofters Commission and proprietor to £160.

Dunvegan Skye.

Kenneth Macaskill.

The crofters have got a joint stock of sheep in number of all classes near to 600, and it has been managed as a club farm from 1866 to the present date. A shepherd has charge of the sheep, and there are two managers appointed annually to make all sales and pay all expenses in connection with the farm; and at Martinmas of each year the profits are divided amongst the crofters. The result of this club farm management for the past twenty-six years has been satisfactory, and I am of opinion that all crofter townships should be managed in this way, and made compulsory, and a limited number of dogs only allowed to be kept in the township.

The sheep are all under one mark, and there are rules and regulations for the management.

The souming of cattle is four cows for each croft and two for each half croft, but a number of the crofters keep horses, for which there is no grass; and though the owners pay to the joint stock a small sum for their grazing, I think that for each horse kept on a croft the souming should be reduced to two cows and one horse, instead of four cows, as the large number of cows and horses kept on the grazings are destroying the sheep run and injuring the sheep stock.

Considering the extent of arable land and hill pasture attached to the crofts, and which enables them to keep many cattle, I certainly think they are in a fairly satisfactory position, and probably better than with additional lands that they could not stock nor pay the additional rent.

John Robertson.

Orbost, 5th May 1893.

Coishletter.

This township contains about 60 acres arable and 2000 acres hill pasture.

The rent is £95 per annum; the arable land is required for hay or corn to feed the cattle kept on Coishletter and Greshornish; the parks of Greshornish and the green lands on this farm being of a very limited quantity, and not sufficient for the small herd of cattle kept on Greshornish, without the assistance of the crop grown on Coishletter.

Besides, there is a large and valuable stock of sheep on Coishletter, numbering some 600 sheep of all classes, and I am satisfied none of the crofters on Edinbane could take over these sheep by valuation, as is the custom over all Skye.

I maintain that no township should be divided. If given at all to the crofters, it should be wholly given, and the stock of sheep should be taken over by valuation in the usual way.

I know it is said that the valuations of sheep are usually above the market value and unfair. I maintain sheep bred on the farm should be above, and very considerably above market value, and that the valuations are not unfair in this respect. To clear off sheep from a farm would be a very serious loss to the owner, and to restock the farm with strange sheep would be a greater loss to the incoming tenant or tenants.

My experience is that valuations are carefully and anxiously considered for all interested.

John Robertson.]

former rent of your holding was £3, 10s., and the fair rent is £2, 15s. Have you a written statement?—No.

5916. Do you wish to get a new holding?—Yes.

5917. Where?—It would be natural to say that we would expect to be re-settled where we and our fathers and grandfathers were.

5918. Where was that?—Trumpan More, in Waternish.

5919. Are there any other old townships thereabout?—Yes.

5920. What are their names?—Unish, Lower Hallistra, Bay.

5921. Any more?—There are only small townships in which there were two or three tenants each, Forsa Chreggan and Forsa Brieb. That is all.

5922. You think the lands where these townships were placed are suitable for new holdings?—Yes.

5923. How many crofters are in Dunhallin?—Twenty-three were settled there when we were put there first.

5924. When was that?—Twenty-eight years ago.

5925. How many are there now?—Three of these crofts became vacant, and were given to tenants who do not come under the Crofters Act.

5926. How many families are there now under the Crofters Act?—Twenty, I think.

5927. How many cottars?—Not many cottars; eight or nine women were on the Poors Roll. They are not altogether in our township. Some of them are in the township below us, Hallin Park, but all those women cut their peats on our pasture.

5928. Is the township congested?—Yes, there are three times more than there ought to be.

5929. And is the land exhausted?—Yes, so much so that we have not got anything out of the ground for the past two years; it would not sow itself back.

5930. Then would your idea be to take away two-thirds of the people and leave the remaining third?—It would need that.

5931. Mr Forsyth.—Can you build and pay for stock if you get a holding?—No, we are run out; we are come to poverty.

5932. You would need assistance?—Yes.

Donald M. Macleod.

DONALD M. MACLEOD, Geary, Waternish (21)—examined.

5933. The Chairman.—Do you appear here instead of your father?—I appear for the township along with two other delegates.

5934. But have you a croft yourself?—No, I appear for my father.

5935. What is your father's name?—Alexander Macleod.

5936. What is his age?—I am not very sure, 46 or 47, at any rate.

5937. Why is he not here; is he away from home?—No, but he is unwell.

5938. I see his holding extends to 3 acres 1 rood 33 poles arable, 1 acre 3 roods 22 poles outrun; 298 acres common pasture, divided into shares; and 277 acres hill pasture; also 21 acres between crofts and shore. What is it you want to say?—I have a statement.

5939. Kindly read it.

In the township of Geary there are three crofters and two cottars. The holdings are very small, and the condition of the people is miserable indeed; owing to the township being situated on a high elevation of rocks, seaware, which is used for manure, is almost impossible to get. Hence, by overcropping and want of manure, the small patches they possess are next to being useless.

In 1664 the township contained only 10 crofters, paying an annual rental of £15, 16s. 6d. Though the Land Court reduced the rental by 40 per cent., the present rent is four times or nearly five times the rental in 1664. Twenty-two crofters and two cottars are willing to migrate to Trumpan or Unish, or to any of the desolate townships on the estate formerly occupied by crofters. A few of them could stock their new holdings, but the most of them could not. If the Government will grant pecuniary assistance, I confidently assert the instalments would be regularly paid. A crofter, in my opinion, would require 15 acres arable land to make a living out of it. The most part of the Waternish estate consists of good arable land, but any part worth having of it is in the hands of the proprietor, and under sheep, or used for sporting purposes, while the poor people are huddled together on the bare rocks, and left to live or perish.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Donald Macleod.

These are the names of desolate townships:—

Unish, cleared 47 years ago, then containing 24 families.

Scorehoran, which contained 18 families, not sure of date of clearance.

Forsabrieb, which contained 6 families.

Rasherburgh, which contained 4 families.

Ascrib Islands, which contained 8 families.

Isle Isay, which contained 18 families.

Besides these there are Trumpan Beg and Trumpan Mor, Halistra, Fasach, and Frien Parks, which not long ago contained a numerous and contented tenantry, but the exact number I have not been able to ascertain. These facts are all on the authority of old men who remember the time perfectly well. The ruined homesteads, yet visible, are the most eloquent witnesses to the devastations wrought in these days.

There are some young married men in this township of Geary who would gladly take land should they get it. As the land is there, why shouldn't they? If the land was compulsorily distributed among the people, Waternish would keep its entire population without a soul moving out of it. Presently, they earn their living by labouring in the south, and also at the fishing. The present state of the Highlands is a disgrace to civilisation, and ought not to be tolerated. As far as Waternish is concerned, I have amply demonstrated the fact that—

> 'The sons of warriors are despised,
> Their fields are ploughed no more,
> On every hill are sheep and deer,
> Where heroes dwelt before.'

Signed on behalf of 32 crofters,

DONALD M. MACLEOD.

5940. Did you write that out yourself?—Yes.

5941. And it represents the views of those on whose behalf you appear?—Exactly.

5942. Captain Macdonald.—Do you ever do any fishing in your quarter?—Certainly.

5943. Have you been fishing this year?—I have.

5944. How long?—I have been out and in all winter fishing, some days out and some days in. I cannot give you the exact number of days, as weather permitted.

5945. What amount of fish did you take to each boat?—I did not weigh it.

5946. Did you sell it without weighing it?—Some of it the family consumed, and some of it was sold.

5947. I wish to know if you sold any?—Yes, the long line fishing was sold.

5948. How much?—Something between £2 and £3, but I cannot give you the exact figure, say £2, 10s.

5949. In what space of time did you make that?—About six weeks.

5950. Was there any quantity of fish sold by the people in the township?—There has been, and there is every year a quantity of fish sold; if there were not, the people would starve for all the land is doing.

5951. Anybody would starve who is idle. About the townships you spoke of—Unish, and Scorehoran, and Forsabrieb—were the people removed from there against their will?—They were removed, as far as I have been able to ascertain, against their will; compulsorily evicted.

5952. On what authority do you state that?—On the authority of one man certainly.

5953. Are there any of them here?—There was a man that has been in Trumpan, Mr Ferguson.

5954. Are any of those that were at Unish, or at Scorr, on Forsabreib, here?—I believe there is. (Mr

Dunvegan, Skye. Donald M. Macleod.

Shaw.—I am one.) I was speaking to one of them the other evening, but he could not walk. Were the evidence taken at Stein he would appear, but fourteen miles is too much for a man of eighty years to travel, so I have been deputed to give this statement, and I believe it is a fact.

5955. When were the crofters sent to Unish?—I am not aware.

5956. When were these crofters placed in Unish?—I cannot say, but they were placed there by your father, Major Macdonald.

5957. Do you know if there were any crofters in Unish previous to the time at which my father planted crofters there?—I do not know.

5958. Did you ever hear that there were any?—I never asked. I asked about the time they were removed from Unish.

5959. Do you know if the crofters from Gillen were removed against their will from Scorr now on Gillen?—I cannot say, but if they were not we will take it back of our own free will. We will take Scorr back. It is a desolate place anyhow.

5960. Were you at Scorr?—I was.

5961. Had your father lands there at Scorr?—No. The townships are desolate, and they can be seen by the Commissioners there, the ruined tenements which are a disgrace to the system.

5962. The Chairman.—Please wait a moment. Is your township of Geary largely a fishing township?—No, it cannot be; for I explain in the written statement that it is situated on a high elevation of rock, which bars them from fishing regularly.

5963. But you go to the fishing a good deal yourself?—Fishing or labouring, whatever I can get; I am a Jack of all trades.

5964. Do any others in the township go to the fishing besides yourself?—Yes.

5965. How many?—The whole male population that are fit to fish. They are half fishermen and half crofters.

5966. And do they pay their rents out of the land or out of the sea?—Out of the sea mostly.

5967. Could they live if it were not for the sea?—They could not by any means.

5968. Are their holdings too small?—Certainly they are.

5969. Is the land exhausted?—It is.

5970. Would some persons there, who take to fishing partly, be willing to settle as fishermen, and derive their livelihood from the sea entirely?—We would prefer the land; we want to see the estate populated first, and then the surplus population can fish.

5971. You want self-sustaining holdings?—Yes.

5972. And to give up the sea?—Well, I do not know; I do not think that the Legislature would compel us to give up the sea.

5973. But I mean give up the sea, in the sense that you did not require to go to the sea for a livelihood?—That is what we want, to get a livelihood out of the land.

5974. Where is there accommodation within easy distance for all the crofters of the township?—Waternish could maintain its population without a soul moving out of it—the present population, if the land was fairly distributed.

5975. Arable and grazing?—Arable and grazing.

5976. Do you know it well?—Yes, I have travelled it all over.

5977. I think you said there are two crofters on the township?—That is a fact.

5978. Mr Sutherland.—Have you lived in Geary all your lifetime; been brought up there?—I was.

5979. So you know the whole country well?—Yes, I know the whole country perfectly well.

5980. You said that fishing was carried on there, too, on a large extent?—That is so.

5981. How many boats are there?—The boats are small.

5982. How many?—Four.

5983. Can you tell me the size of the boats, length of keel?—Twenty-two feet of a keel.

5984. And you have also stated that the country round about there is precipitous, the shore?—Yes. Dunvegan, Skye.

5985. Have you any beach at all near you?—No, just the small landing places that we make ourselves; and we are often in danger of our lives going out,—in fact, with a north wind we cannot go out at all. Donald M. Macleod.

5986. So you are at a very great disadvantage there?—Yes, we are at a very great disadvantage.

5987. What is done with the fish you sell?—Some of them send it south.

5988. You smoke it first, and then send it south?—We dry it first and send it south. Some of them sell to local curers.

5989. Do you get any market at all for fish?—We get 5½d. for cod and 7½d. for ling.

5990. Where is that fish sent?—To Glasgow, to the southern markets.

5991. What do you pay for freight?—I cannot say exactly, about £1 a ton.

5992. You very seldom have a ton to send?—Not from one boat.

5993. The rates are higher, are they not, if you only send a fraction of a ton?—I believe that is a fact.

5994. Have you ever known the fish sent to the south not pay the carriage?—I cannot answer the question.

5995. If you had a market for your fish near you, you could dispose of it to a greater advantage?—Yes.

5996. But at present you have not got that market, and you have not got the access to the sea?—No. With your Lordship's permission I may be allowed to state that we have no ready communication to this township. The District Committee wished to construct a road, but they were vetoed by Captain Macdonald from doing so, on what grounds I cannot say.

5997. The Chairman.—A road from where to where?—From the schoolhouse down to Knockbreck, through the township of Geary to the other end.

5998. How far is that?—About a mile and a half.

5999. A road through what kind of land?—Our own land, the crofters arable land.

6000. Arable or grazing do you mean?—Arable. Part of it is grazing.

6001. Did you unanimously resolve to make that road if allowed?—Yes, and we have been agitating for a considerable time now for it.

6002. Did you apply to the landlord?—Yes, often.

6003. In writing?—By deputation.

6004. And what answer did you receive?—He replied that if we would promise that we would not agitate for more land he would allow the road to go through the village.

6005. Did you hear him give that answer?—No. I have been told by the deputation, and I have reported the deputation's answer to the public prints, to the Oban Times; some of the Commissioners might have noticed it.

6006. Never mind that. Was that report brought back by the deputation to the township generally?—Yes, it was.

6007. Did you hear the report when it was brought back?—I did.

6008. How do children get at present from the township of Geary to the school?—They cannot get very well at all, and there are great complaints about the irregularity of the attendance, and School Board persecutions.

6009. Prosecutions you mean, not persecutions?—Persecutions I may be allowed to say.

6010. Pardon me. Is that the only school for the township of Geary?—It is the only school.

6011. How many children are in the habit of attending in good weather?—Well, I cannot tell you the exact number, but there are thirty-four families in the township, and about three scholars from each family on an average.

6012. There will be from 80 to 100?—About 100 or nearly 100.

6013. Tell me this. Do you say, speaking seriously, that the irregularity of attendance is in some degree due to the want of a road?—I emphatically maintain that.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Donald M. Macleod.

6014. Were you at that school when you were young?—I was.

6015. And you had no road?—No.

6016. Were you also at school in the south?—No, never.

6017. But were you in employment in the south?—I have been labouring in the south.

6018. Did the township undertake to maintain that road entirely at its own expense, or did they ask the landlord to pay for it in part?—The District Committee was going to construct it, and we got a Government grant for the road, but still he would not withdraw his opposition.

6019. What was the amount of the grant?—£3000 was granted for county roads, and a special condition was that the Geary road was proceeded with. We have the authority of the Secretary for Scotland for that.

6020. My colleague tells me that a special sum was allocated for the construction of this road. Do you know the amount of it?—I am not aware of the amount, but the road has not been constructed yet.

6021. For the reason that you have stated?—I do not know if the opposition is withdrawn now. The proprietor is there himself, and he can tell you whether he withdrew his opposition.

6022. Mr Sutherland.—I was asking you some questions about the fishing, because the point was raised; otherwise I would not have troubled you. But with regard to the fishing, I take it that generally you think it is a good thing that the rent of the land should be paid out of the fishing?—Certainly not.

6023. You do not think it just?—Not by any means.

6024. You think that every herring should hang by its own head?—Yes, certainly.

6025. That the amount that is payable by the land ought to be taken out of the land?—It ought, certainly.

6026. And you think that if the people of your township had an opportunity of forming new holdings in the place you have mentioned they would do so, paying the rent regularly under the conditions that possibly you may have heard yesterday?—I was not present yesterday; but I may mention that there are little or no arrears in this township on the Commission's fair rent, which shows that if the people had enlarged holdings they would do their best to pay.

6027. Mr Macleod.—In your statement you said that in 1664 the township contained only ten crofters, paying an annual amount of £15, 15s. 6d. What authority have you for this statement?—I have as my authority the pamphlet by Skeabost, entitled The Past and Present Condition of the Skye Crofters.

6028. Mr Gordon.—You have said that the people do not pay their rents out of their crops. Were not the rents fixed as fair rents by the Crofters Commission?—That is so.

6029. Well, I do not suppose that after living on the croft you would have much to spare; but you must have benefited by the use of your croft to the extent of having your cows' keep and getting milk; and if you had not the croft you would have to do without some useful things which you now possess?—Which useful things?

6030. Milk, butter, and poultry?—What milk can one cow give?

6031. Have you only one cow?—That is all.

6032. Have you any sheep?—None. We have no grazing.

6033. But then you speak for the whole township?—The souming is two cows.

6034. It is not fair, is it, to say that you get no good out of the croft?—I never said that.

6035. You say you do not pay the rent out of the croft?—No, we do not; we pay it by the fishing and by labour.

6036. But suppose you sell all the butter and milk from your cow, would that not pay the rent?—It would not pay a fraction of the rent.

6037. And you would get something for your stirk if you sold it?—But what is he going to get for his own labour?

Dunvegan, Skye.

Donald M Macleod.

6038. I quite agree with you that the whole produce of the croft might not be much after paying for your labour; but still the rent was considered a fair rent by the Crofters Commission?—Yes, we will pay that rent. There is little or no arrears on the township.

6039. The Chairman.—It is only fair to say, Captain Macdonald, with reference to these latter matters which I have brought out myself, that if you desire to put further questions to the witness you have an opportunity of doing so.

6040. Captain Macdonald.—I have only to state, my lord, that what he said was a deliberate falsehood as regards my saying that they would not get the road if they asked for more land. I never said anything of the sort to any deputation.

6041. The Chairman.—Would you kindly tell us what you did say?

6042. Captain Macdonald.—I just remarked,—'You are asking for land from one end of the township 'to the other, cutting through the centre of your arable 'land, while you say the arable ground is already too 'small.' That is all I said.

6043. The Chairman.—It would be better, I think, if you tender yourself as a witness, and give evidence yourself, rather than contradict the witnesses as they come forward; we will give you an opportunity of making any statement you desire with reference to this matter.

6044. Captain Macdonald.—Very well.

6045. Mr Myles Macinnes.—I should like to have an opportunity of saying, as one of the councillors who had to do with Captain Macdonald, that he actually refused to give us the road, and we had actually to apply to Sir George Trevelyan. We sent a deputation from Portree, and then he agreed to give a footpath.

6046. Captain Macdonald.—Nothing of the sort; I refuse to give the road still.

6047. Mr Macinnes.—I understood you agreed to give a footpath.

6048. Captain Macdonald.—I have done that all along.

JOHN MARTIN, Jun., Geary, Waternish (39)—examined.

John Martin

6049. The Chairman.—I see from the Blue-Book that your holding extends to 5 acres 34 poles arable, 1 acre 3 roods 35 poles outrun, 298 acres common pasture, and 277 acres hill pasture, as before; the old rent was £4, 5s. 6d., and the present amount £2, 18s. Have you a written statement?—No, I am supporting that statement of Macleod's.

6050. You concur in the statement given in by Macleod?—Yes.

6051. And I suppose it pretty fully sets forth the views of the township with regard to additional land and new crofts?—Yes.

6052. Do you know about the proposal to make a road from Geary to the schoolhouse?—Yes.

6053. What do you know about it?—We were wanting that road the last twenty years.

6054. Were you one of the deputation?—No. There were five of a deputation sent up to him last winter.

6055. Who did the deputation consist of?—Donald Bain, Alexander Beaton, Malcolm Mackinnon, Murdo Macswan, and Donald Campbell, jun.

6056. Did you hear what they reported when they came back; did they say what they had to say in your hearing?—Yes.

6057. What did they say?—They said he told them if they would not ask for more land, they could start to the work to-morrow: if they would not ask more land, they could go on with the work at once.

6058. He wanted to make it a condition of his allowing the road to be made, that they should not ask for more land?—Yes.

6059. Was that a road to the end of the township or through the township?—Through the township.

6060. And were you prepared to make it without assistance from him?—Yes, the County Council was going to make it.

6061. Without any aid from the landlord?—Yes.

6062. When did the deputation last wait upon Captain Macdonald?—About January of this year.

6063. Do you wish to add anything to what has been said about vacant lands available for new crofts, or do you think the statement made already sufficiently explained the views of the township and your own views?—I support everything that was said in the statement: it is true.

6064. And you think it is sufficiently full and complete?—I think so.

6065. Captain Macdonald.—What amount of fishing was done in the township this year—cod and ling?—I calculate it gave from £2 to £2, 9s. or £2, 11s. or £2, 16s. to each man.

6066. To each man in the township?—To each man in the township.

6067. What time would they take to make that?—From five to six weeks, or from four to six weeks.

6068. What is the largest quantity of fish you have known to go from Geary at any time by steamer?—The largest quantity of cod and ling—from the three townships of Gillen, and Geary, and Knockbreck—was 11 tons, and that is a long time ago; Captain Macdonald was the curer at that time.

6069. That was cod and ling fish?—Yes.

6070. And what is the largest quantity of herring that you have known sent by steamer to Glasgow from the people of the township?—That is more than I could say.

6071. I want to know from you what is the largest amount of herring sent in any one year that you know of, from the township to Glasgow by steamer?—This year there was not a hundred herring; last year there was not half a barrel.

6072. I do not want to know what it was this year or last year. I want to know what was the largest quantity sent at any time?—I know perfectly well there were over 200 barrels some years since, but there was Waternish and Duirinish putting in, and it was all put in in name of Geary.

6073. Were there people coming from Duirinish to fish in Geary?—Yes.

6074. Well, it says a good deal for Geary that they would come from Duirinish to fish there. But what is the largest quantity that you have known sent by the township of Geary alone?—I mind when there were seven boats out of Geary, but there are only four now. I have been fishing for the last twenty-four years, and the highest take I should say would be about forty barrels per boat. That is only for a year or two.

6075. Forty barrels per boat, and how many boats?—There were seven at that time.

6076. That is 280 barrels?—But that was only for a year or two. The only saving port that we had in a north-east gale of wind was Port-a'-chirein, and you know what came of it,—Port-a'-chirein in Scorrhoran: you shut it up with stones, and that was the only place that we had to save our lives in a north-easterly storm. Many is the day since it was closed up that I was very nearly swamped coming in in a gale. There was no other place in Waternish that I could save my life except that; and it was closed, so that a seagull could not shove her head into it.

6077. There is a port at Scorrhoran, and there has been from time immemorial, which every one has had liberty to go to when the weather is boisterous?—Where is it?

6078. Where it has been from time immemorial—at the storehouse at Scorrhoran?—There are people here who were living at Scorrhoran, when there were men at Scorrhoran, and they will not say that. I have lived at Geary since ever I was born, and I have been a fisherman for the last twenty-four years, and have been fishing every winter out of Geary during that time, and I know the best port as well as the worst one, for many is the stormy night that I have come ashore in.

6079. The Chairman.—Was the fishing good last year?—No.

6080. Neither white fish nor herring?—No.

Dunvegan, Skye. John Martin.

6081. Was it good the year before?—No.

6082. Was it good three years ago?—It is seven years since we had anything worth speaking about at all; we have not been making a living during the last seven years.

6083. Do you say that for the last seven years there has been no profitable fishing at Geary?—No, indeed. It would not pay the lines, and it would not pay the gear or anything like it. And more than that, we have over 300 feet of plumb rocks to go down every night and day, and then we have to draw up the boats maybe two or three times a day to be out of reach of the waves.

6084. Do you go away as a hired hand elsewhere when the fishing is not good at home?—Yes.

6085. Where do you go to?—I have been all over Scotland.

6086. Where were you last year?—In England, at Shields.

6087. Is it common for the grown-up men in the township to go away as hired hands?—Yes. They are away already for this year.

6088. Mr Sutherland.—Can you tell us when you had the 11 tons of white fish gathered from all the townships?—Twenty-four years ago.

6089. And had you anything like that since?—Nothing like it. We had seven tons some years, but five was the highest that I remember, and there were three townships making that.

6090. How long does the fishing last?—The white fishing will only last about a month or six weeks, owing to the want of bait mostly.

6091. So that anything you can get from the fishing only extends over these few weeks?—That is all.

6092. You made a remarkable statement with regard to a harbour; was there any reason ascribed for having done that? Did the landlord say why he closed up this harbour in this way?—No.

6093. Tell us in a little more detail how it was done?—Oh, I cannot say how it was done, only that he got men and filled it up. He paid the men for the work, and they filled up the port that saved our lives.

6094. Were you in the habit of using this harbour?—I was; I was going out different times when I could not earn a copper in the township. I could go out there and may be earn a shilling to myself and my family.

6095. But were the others using it also?—Yes, everyone in the three townships.

6096. Would you use it in preference to the harbour you have now?—Yes, in coarse weather.

6097. So that you have used it as a harbour of refuge?—Yes, when the wind came from the north-east we used it for safety.

6098. Mr Maccallum.—Have you been getting any help from the proprietor in prosecuting the fishing? Has he given you any help or encouragement in the way of getting boats?—He does not help us in any way.

6099. And I suppose it was not to help the fishing that that harbour was closed?—No, it was not to help the fishing; it seems so.

6100. Mr Munro.—Did you ever ask Captain Macdonald what his reason was for closing up this harbour against you?—Not me alone, but I think they are in the house who did ask him. I myself never asked him.

6101. Can you tell us what reason he assigned to them for closing it up?—He said they were passing through his grazing in Scorr; they were tramping his grazing.

6102. That was the reason for closing up the harbour?—That was the only excuse.

6103. Then were your lives put in peril through the closing of this harbour?—Certainly they were, and mine was.

6104. You have given us some interesting information regarding the fishing of Geary, and I understand it might be made productive with proper facilities. Now, if you had light railways in Skye would that help you to develop the fishing?—Oh, yes; it would help. We would get the first market daily.

Dunvegan Skye. John Martin.

6105. And proper harbour accommodation?—Only that carriage is very dear going to London.

6106. Mr Gordon.—What is the price of a ton of dried cod or ling when you sell it?—Sometimes we get 13s. a ton.

6107. The cwt.?—Ay, the cwt.

6108. £13 a ton?—Yes. Sometimes 12s. and sometimes 18s. the cwt.

6109. What will the expenses be of that?—There is a good deal of expense and a good deal of labour. They have to cure it and dry it, and get salt from Glasgow which costs them £3 a ton; it will cost £1 per ton to get the fish to Glasgow.

6110. Mr Macleod.—You said that this year there were sold of cod and ling during the five or six weeks fish to the value of between £2, 8s. and £2, 11s. to each man. Could you give us any idea of how much it cost you to catch that value of fish?—It cost me more than the double of that 6111. It cost you more than the value of the fish in boat and gear?—In boat and gear.

6112. Not to say anything of your own labour?—No, it cost me more than the value of it.

6113. Captain Macdonald.—I wish to ask you with regard to this port, if it is on your own shore or on the shore of lands belonging to me?—Belonging to you.

6114. So this port which you refer to was there previous to tenants occupying Scorr whom my father sent there?—I think it was, but there are older men than myself here; at least they helped to make it.

6115. Did I give the tenants of Geary any addition to their land after I got the lands into my own hands?—Yes, you gave them a bit of ground where the cows were drowned—a bit of boggy ground that cows and beasts could not live on.

6116. Would you take more of that boggy ground?—No; there is no more of it in Waternish.

6117. What extent did you get of this boggy ground?—I have lost a cow in it last year.

6118. The Chairman.—What is the extent of it? Attend to the question, if you please.—It will be about 15 or 20 acres, hardly so much.

6119. Captain Macdonald.—I have a statement here, my lord, by Mr Taylor, the surveyor, who measured it, and he makes it 212 acres.

6120. The Chairman.—You had better take that from Mr Taylor himself; you can call him as a witness, if you deem it necessary; we must confine ourselves to the evidence of this witness in the meantime.

6121. The Witness.—We have not that amount altogether.

6122. The Chairman.—Did you give some evidence before the Crofters Commission about this harbour?—Yes.

6123. I think that was in 1889?—Yes.

6124. Now, was there a path from your township and other townships to a harbour on Captain Macdonald's lands?—Yes.

6125. Was there anything done to that path?—Yes, it was broken up so that no human being could cross it.

6126. It was practically shut up?—Yes. He cut it fair through the middle so as no human being or four-footed beast could cross it.

6127. Is there no access by road to that harbour now?—Yes; there is a private road that he uses for himself; likely none of the crofters would be allowed to use it.

6128. But is there any access for the crofters unless by that private road?—There is another kind of footpath besides that.

John Macaskill.

JOHN MACASKILL, Geary, Waternish (35)—examined.

6129. The Chairman.—I see your holding is 4 acres 1 rood 3 poles arable, 3 acres 34 poles outrun, and pasture the same as before. The old rent was £3, and the fair rent £1, 18s.?—Yes.

6130. Do you hold as a joint-tenant with your mother?—Yes. Dunvegan, Skye. John Macaskill.

6131. Are you desirous of obtaining a new holding?—Yes.

6132. And can you show us land available for the purpose when we go to the ground?—Yes. If not we will speak about it again. There is plenty of land there if the crofters could get it.

6133. And the sites of old townships?—Yes.

6134. Do you wish to add anything to the statements that have been made already on behalf of the township?—I wish to support it; it is quite true.

6135. You concur in the evidence?—Yes.

6136. Do you wish to make any additional statement, or do you think your case is sufficiently presented by what has been already submitted to us?—As far as I remember it was mentioned in the statement, the townships that are empty just now, which were once peopled, that is Unish, Trumpan Mor, Trumpan Beag, Halistra, Losait, Achabeag, Scorrhoran, Trian, Forsabrieb, and Forsachreggan.

6137. We have got all these places down; they have been already mentioned.—All these places are fit enough for crofters yet, if they were put there.

6138. That is what has been said, and what we will look to when we go to the ground. We are anxious to get on, and probably you may be satisfied with what has already been stated on behalf of the township?—Yes; but I wish to explain to you that this port, which was closed by the proprietor, was the only saving place we had in bad weather, especially in a north-east wind, a wind from north to north-east. This was the only shelter we had, and I have seen myself from five to twelve boats beached there when they could not get ashore any other place; and I have often seen our nets out at anchor there about 200 yards from the shore where we used to beach our boats, and we could not get out to them; and if we got out we could not get in again, since that port was closed.

6139. Do you remember the date of the closing?—It was in 1886 or 1888, I am not sure which.

6140. Do you know what circumstances led to the closing?—No, except that he was trying to keep the fishermen away from Scorrhoran.

6141. Why?—He holds that they were tramping his lands by going to the shore, and there was a road going to that place.

6142. Did you see the closing take place?—Yes; I did not see them filling it with big stones, but I visited the place again and saw it.

6143. You could not get into it?—Not at all. There are big stones as big as the pulpit, rolled in with big bars; and worse than that, we reported in the newspaper that it was closed, and Captain Macdonald holds out that he never closed the port. This was three times worse, because it was a shelter to every fisherman round northward or eastward of us; it was their only saving place when they came from Lord Macdonald's estate, and from Uig and from Bernisdale. They used to beach their boats there as well as ourselves, and if they were here to-day they would bear witness as well as I.

6144. Has the port been rendered quite useless by this process?—Oh, yes. Perhaps there will be some sea-weed growing on the stones, that is all I know about it; and we are prevented from cutting the sea-ware as it is. That is what we have against him, but perhaps we were wrong ourselves when we made the application for fair rent. It is in the Act, as far as I can go through it, that the Commissioners had power to give us the privilege of cutting sea-ware and rushes for thatching our houses, and heather for making ropes to keep on the thatch.

6145. Mr Munro.—With reference to the closing of this harbour, did it ever occur to you to complain to the authorities?—We applied to the Commissioners at the time when they were about other farms.

6146. But did it never occur to you to submit your case to the Board of Trade or the Trinity House?—No.

6147. Captain Macdonald.—I merely want to state that I never denied shutting this port.

6148. The Chairman.—The statement would come in more effectively, and in better order, if you offer yourself as a witness afterwards. You can speak to that when you put yourself forward to make any statement you think desirable. (To Witness.) Did you hear what the previous witness said with regard to the closing up of a road?—Is it the road to this port, or to the township of Geary?

Dunvegan, Skye. John Macaskill.

6149. I mean the road to the port. Do you know about that?—Yes, I have heard something.

6150. Do you know about it yourself?—Yes.

6151. What do you know about it?—I know there was a road. I don't know how it was made, but there was a road going down to this place, Scorrhoran, or anyhow to the top of the rocks, and I think it was the Captain himself who made the road down to Scorrhoran. But there was a road to the top of the rocks long ago, and everybody had the privilege to go on that road, and then the Captain cut this old road,—he just cut it right across, made it deep, 3 or 4 feet by 2½ broad or so. He cut this road here, and he made a new road at the back of it again, and keeps this road for himself as a private road.

Peter Macnab.

PETER MACNAB, Gillen, Waternish (72)—examined.

6152. The Chairman.—I see your holding has 5 acres 3 roods 9 poles arable, 3 acres 2 roods outrun; 97 acres common pasture, divided into 11 shares; and 317 acres hill pasture, divided into 22 shares. Do you represent the township of Gillen?—Yes.

6153. How many crofters are in Gillen?—Eleven.

6154. Any cottars?—No.

6155. You have heard all the previous evidence?—Yes.

6156. Do you concur in it?—What was it that was said?

6157. I think we will not trouble you any more. You have not a written statement, have you?—No. We were thinking if we could get Scorr we would try it.

Alexander Macleod.

ALEXANDER MACLEOD, Gillen, Waternish (68)—examined.

6158. The Chairman.—I see your holding has 5 acres 2 roods 14 poles arable, 2 acres 16 poles outrun, and pasture the same as the last witness. The former rent was £5, 10s., and the fair rent is £2, 15s. Did you hear the previous evidence?—Yes.

6159. Does it express your views on the matter?—Yes.

6160. How many families of crofters are in Gillen?—There were eleven families in it.

6161. How many are there now?—There are some of them who are not for more land: six of them are for more land.

6162. How many are there altogether in Gillen, that is my question?—Nine. The Captain himself has one of the crofts; and one of the members of the township, who was in possession of half a croft, got a whole croft in addition from the Captain.

6163. Are there any cottars?—No.

6164. You say that of the crofters six desire to have new holdings?—Yes.

6165. And do you think there is available land within easy access?—Yes.

6166. What is the name of the place?—Scorehoran, beside us.

Donald Macswan.

DONALD MACSWAN, Knockbreck, Waternish (48). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

6167. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes. I see your croft has 2 acres 37 poles arable, 1 acre 1 rood 18 poles outrun; common pasture 298, hill pasture 277, and 21 acres between crofts and shore, with 52 acres 2 roods 26 poles divided into 6 shares. Your former rent was £2, 9s, your fair rent £1, 5s. What is it you wish to tell us about this matter; you have heard the previous evidence?—Yes.

6168. And do you concur in it, or do you not?—I support all I heard to-day. Dunvegan, Skye.

6169. Is it your opinion that there is available land within easy distance of where you are? The land that is available for our purpose is not very near us, but there is plenty of land for all that; it is not far away. Donald Macswan.

6170. How far?—The other side of the hill.

6171. What is the distance?—2 or 2½ or 3 miles.

6171*a*. Mr Macleod.—How many crofters are there in the township?—Seven.

6172. How many cottars?—Only two old women.

6173. How many of those desire new holdings?—When my father came there were only two.

6174. (Question repeated).—They are all wanting land.

6175. The whole seven?—Yes.

6176. How many could live comfortably, do you think, in Knockbreck—how many families?—It would be little enough for two, I think.

6177. Did the families go there, or were they put there?—They were put there.

6178. From where?—From all parts; from the other side.

6179. The other side of the hill?—When my father came there there were only two; he was the third.

6180. Where did he come from?—From Hallin Park.

JOHN MACLEOD, Knockbreck, Waternish (49)—examined. John Macleod

6181. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

6182. I see you hold a croft of 2 acres 2 roods 26 poles arable, and 1 acre 28 poles outrun, with pasture the same as the last witness. The former rent was £2, 19s., and the fair rent is £1, 18s.?—Yes.

6183. Are you anxious to obtain a new holding?—Yes.

6184. And is there available land near?—Yes.

DONALD MACKINNON, Halistra, Waternish (60). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.) Donald Mackinnon.

6185. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

6186. In Halistra?—I am in Upper Halistra now.

6187. I see your holding is 5 acres 2 roods 27 poles arable, and 3 acres 14 poles outrun, no common pasture. The former rent of £7, 10s. was reduced to £3, 15s.?—Yes.

6188. How many crofters have you in Halistra?—There are nine.

6189. And are there any cottars?—There are two old women on the poor's roll.

6190. Do you agree with the evidence we have heard already?—Yes.

6191. Do you wish to make any additional statement?—No. We are so scarce of cattle that we have to keep our cattle on tether.

6192. What cattle have you?—Two cows; but I am allowed to have five on my holding, though it will only support one in good condition. We keep two on tether.

6193. How happens it that you have no pasture?—We never got it since the land was taken from my father. My father and grandfather had hill pasture.

6194. It was taken from your father, and have you not had any pasture at all since then?—No; we were shut off from the pasture by a dyke.

6195. When did that happen?—It is about fifty-four years since it was taken from us.

6196. Have you applied for pasture since?—Yes, and we could not get it. The landlord promised us repeatedly, but he did not give it to us.

6197. Who was the landlord?—Captain Macdonald himself. We have applied to the Commission for the pasture.

6198. But the application is not disposed of?—No. There is just a dyke and the roadway between us and pasture that we are asking for.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Donald Mackinnon.

6199. Does not the pasture belong to a farm now, or form part of a farm?—It is in the hands of the landlord himself; he has sheep and cattle on it.

6200. And what is the name of the place?—Halistra.

6201. Is there a Halistra farm in the hands of the landlord?—No, it was just called Upper Halistra.

6202. And it is worked as a grazing in the hands of the proprietor?—Yes.

6203. Allan Macdonald, jun., is described as the tenant in the Valuation Roll, and the rent is £65.

John Finlayson.

JOHN FINLAYSON, Hallin Park, Waternish—examined.

6204. The Chairman.—I see your croft has 6 acres 7 poles arable, 3 acres 2 roods 39 poles outrun, no pasture; the former rent was £9, and the fair rent is £4 10s. Have you been attending to the evidence to-day?—Yes.

6205. And do you agree with it?—Quite.

6206. You are ill off for grazing, I think?—Just the same as Mr Mackinnon here.

6207. Did you lose the grazing fifty-four years ago?—Yes.

6208. But would you like some now?—Yes.

6209. Are you anxious to get a new holding?—We put in application for that two years ago.

6210. That is for enlargement?—Yes.

6211. Is your desire to get an enlarged holding, or a new holding altogether?—We desire to get an enlargement of holding, just grazing.

6212. If you had that, would you be satisfied?—Yes.

6213. You don't want to leave,—to flit?—No, except it would better me. If it would better me I would flit very fast, after my labour for thirty-two years. We put in an application for 350 acres a few years ago, but it has not been disposed of yet.

6214. It is before Mr Macintyre, I think?—Yes.

6215. How many crofters are in Hallin Park?—Eleven altogether, but only five of them applied for more land.

6216. Are there any cottars in Hallin Park?—There are two paupers.

6217. How many crofters would the township of Hallin Park accommodate?—I could not say; the land has been so much turned, over and over, since the memory of man.

6218. You don't think it is good for anything?—It might be good for something, but not for much.

6219. Are all the crofters anxious to get away from it?—I know nothing except about the five.

6220. Are they all anxious?—They are all anxious to get grazing for their cattle.

6221. They wish to stay where they are if they got additional grazing for their cattle?—They told me nothing else, I think.

6222. Is there fishing where you are?—Yes.

6223. Good fishing?—At times.

6224. Do you go to the fishing?—Not now, I am getting too old and stiff.

6225. But did you go?—Yes.

6226. How long is it since you went out to the fishing?—It is a good while since I was at the fishing.

6227. How far are you from the fishing grounds where your croft is?—About 3 miles.

6228. And when you went to the fishing, what size of boat did you use?—About 22 feet keel.

6229. How many boats are there in your township at present?—There are not many now; they are all laid up for want of fish. There were only three or four fishing last winter.

6230. How many boats are there just now in the township in the habit of being taken out?—I could not say; five or six I suppose, but they are not fishing.

6231. What sort of fishing had you last year?—Very poor; but I was not at it myself.

Dunvegan Skye.

Donald Beaton.

DONALD BEATON, Stein, Waternish (56). (Examined partly in English and partly in Gaelic through an Interpreter).

6232. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No, a cottar.

6233. Do you pay any rent?—No rent; we rent a house in Stein.

6234. Who is 'we'?—There are eight of us who are wanting land near the shore—cottars and fishermen.

6235. Are there any crofters in Stein at all?—Oh, yes, there are crofters above Stein all the way, but we had no crofts; we only pay rent for the houses near the shore.

6236. You pay a house rent?—We pay £4, 12s. 6d. every year for house rent.

6237. To whom do you pay it?—To Mrs M'Innes in Edinburgh, who is still the owner of the houses.

6238. It belonged to the British Fisheries Society, did it?—Yes.

6239. Does each person pay that, or is that the whole rent?—It is the whole rent for the room I had; the others pay the same.

6240. Then of the eight people, each pays £4, 12s. 6d.?—No; only six, I think, stop in Stein who pay rent.

6241. Do you all pay the same rent?—Yes, but two of us out of Stein have a house to themselves.

6242. Are you all anxious to get a piece of land?—Near the shore, which would be handy for fishing.

6243. You want a fishing croft?—Yes.

6244. A small patch of land where you could build a house, and put up a boat?—Yes; between £3 and £4 of land.

6245. Your idea is to live by the sea?—Yes.

6246. Not by the land?—Not by the land. I had land before, and I lost it.

6247. How did you lose it?—By the Commissioners.

6248. Do you know anything about the Grazings Act?—There is a petition from our village.

John Macswan.

JOHN MACSWAN, Stein, Waternish—examined.

6249. The Chairman—Are you a cottar in Stein?—I am not living in Stein. I am living a little bit from it, not very far.

6250. What is the name of your place?—Brae-Lusta.

6251. You are a cottar?—Yes.

6252. Do you pay any rent?—No.

6253. Have you any land?—No.

6254. Would you like to get some?—Yes.

6255. Is there suitable land near you?—Yes, there is a bit suitable land near us that would answer for the eight of us, and to get £3 or £4 worth.

6256. There are eight of you altogether?—Yes.

6257. You are in much the same position as Donald Beaton?—Much about the same. I make my living by fishing.

6258. And is the holding you have in view a holding by the sea, to enable you to fish more easily, or a crofted land?—I would like to have £3 or £4 worth of land.

6259. You want a holding with a rent of £3 or £4?—Yes.

6260. Then, in that case, I suppose you would live by the sea?—Partly by the sea, and partly by the croft.

6261. Have you any cattle?—No.

6262. Or sheep?—No.

6263. I forgot to ask Beaton, has he any stock?—No.

6264. Have any of you stock?—Some of us have a little.

6265. Do you live close to each other?—Not very far from one another.

6266. We have received the following letter from certain tenants on Captain Macdonald's estate:—

LUSTA, 5*th May* 1893.

MY LORDS.—We, the undersigned for Captain Macdonald's, Waternish, do now wish to make application for more land, and we trust you will take our case into consideration, suppose it is too late, and if in your power take evidence from one or two of us.

Dunvegan, Skye. John Macswan.

(Signed) Ronald Macphie.
" Donald Campbell.
" Donald Macphie.
" John Beaton.
" William Macleod.
" John Macleod.

6267. Are any of these applicants here?—

Ronald Macphie, Lusta, Waternish, (55). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Ronald Macphie.

6268. The Chairman.—We should have been glad to get your name before, and we won't exclude you from giving your evidence now, but we propose to take your evidence as representing the whole of Lusta, are you agreeable to that?—Yes.

6269. Are you a joint-tenant?—Yes, with Donald Macphie.

6270. The arable land is 6 acres 16 poles, the outrun is 57 acres 2 roods 30 poles, the pasture 1802 acres, divided by 19¼. The former rent was £12, 5s. 6d., and the fair rent is £6, 10s. How many crofters are in Lusta?—Thirty-four or thirty-eight, I am not sure.

6271. Are there any cottars?—Yes, I think there are about eight cottars between Stein and Lusta.

6272. Is the township of Lusta congested—is it crowded?—Yes, very much. I am only taking interest on behalf of the six in Lusta who want to leave the place.

6273. Give us the names of the six?—They are in the letter I handed to you.

6274. Do all these, including yourself, wish to get new holdings?—Yes.

6275. What kind of holdings have you in view?—A croft in which I could keep about six cows and a horse and fifty sheep.

6276. And is that the view of the other five men whom you represent?—Yes.

6277. Is there land suitable in the vicinity?—Yes, marching with us.

6278. Then you could easily show us the land when we visit the place?—Yes.

6279. Can you give us its name?—Bay.

6280. How is the land occupied at present?—It is part of Claggan farm, in the hands of Mr Nicol Martin.

6281. Do any of the crofters in Lusta go to the fishing?—Yes.

6282. How many?—A great number of them.

6283. Most of them?—I believe most of them are going to the fishing.

6284. Is it in that way they are able to pay their rents?—Yes, indeed; and if it is not that it is not out of the ground. It is out of the fishing they take their feeding as well.

6285. How many boats are in Lusta?—Eight or nine.

6286. What keel?—Twenty-two feet.

6287. Have you a boat?—Yes.

6288. Have you a share of a boat?—Yes.

6289. What share?—A quarter.

6290. Are you the skipper?—Yes.

6291. Where did you go to the fishing last year?—I was in Portknockie last year, but I was hurt there and had to return.

6292. Now, during the last five or six years, has the fishing been good or bad, or one year good and another bad?—It was not very good.

6293. How much did you make by fishing last year yourself?—Nothing last year.

6294. Or the year before?—Very little.

6295. How much?—It would not pay the expense that we were at.

6296. What was the expense?—Considerable amount of expense in lines and nets.

Dunvegan, Skye.

6297. How much?—£14 or £15 some years, some other years down to £10, and other years again up to £20.

Ronald Macphie.

6298. Now, kindly understand before going away, that I take you as representing the whole of the six tenants whose names I read out, and I don't propose to examine any more. I think you have made a full statement, and we will come and see the land when we are in the vicinity.

Isabella Campbell, The Glebe, Duirinish (50). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

Isabella Campbell.

6299. The Chairman.—Is your house upon the Macleod estate?—On the glebe; on the foreshore of the glebe.

6300. How long have you been living there?—Eleven years.

6301. And paying no rent, I suppose?—Yes.

6302. What rent?—15s.

6303. To whom do you pay it?—Between the stones of the house and the bit of potato ground, to the minister. I pay the rent in work.

6304. The potato ground is not on the foreshore?—Yes, last year we got only four creels of potatoes out of it.

6305 You want another holding?—Yes. I desire very much to have a bit of ground, should it only be as much as would feed a cow.

6306. How much rent would you be able to give?—Any fair rent.

6307. Mr Maccallum.—Does the minister actually exact the rent?—I pay it in work.

6308. And he insists on your working for the privilege you have?—Oh yes, he does.

6309. The Chairman.—How many days' work do you give in a year for 15s.?—I am not sure of the exact number of days that I give, but I am helping him in work as he requires it of me.

6310. What kind of work?—All sorts of outdoor work, and field work.

6311. Does he keep up the house for you, does he keep it in repair?—No, I do.

6312. Are you a married woman?—No. I have two sisters who are at service.

6313. And how long have you been living near the minister?—Eleven years.

6314. Mr Macleod.—The minister is not proposing to remove you, is he?—Yes, he is threatening to remove us, and says that no one has any business to be living on the glebe at all. I am not telling a lie on him, he told me that himself.

Captain Allan Macdonald of Waternish (70)—examined.

Captain Allan Macdonald.

6315. The Chairman.—Do you wish, Captain Macdonald, to make any statement?—I merely wish to deny the statement about the port.

6316. Do you wish to make any general statement with regard to your estate? we shall be glad to hear it?—I am not prepared to make any statement at present, I will deny that about the port.

6317. You remember there was a witness examined, a youth of twenty, his name was Donald Macleod, I think, and you made a strong statement as to his veracity. Do you adhere to that statement?—I do.

6318. What do you say was the deliberate falsehood he uttered?—He stated, as far as I understood, that I would not agree to the road that was wanted there, unless they would withdraw the claim for more land. I never made such a statement.

6319. What do you say was the statement you made?—I said that it was rather a remarkable thing that they should wish to reduce their arable land by making a road from one end of the township to the other, when they were applying for more land.

Dunvegan, Skye, — Captain Allan Macdonald.

6320. Don't you think it was a natural thing for them to wish to have a road, even at the expense of some part of their arable?—I did not think so, considering they thought it too small as it was.

6321. Don't you think it was of more advantage to them to have a road to the school than to be without it?—Well, they have a footpath, and I have no objection to the footpath being improved.

6322. They were not seeking to take your land: it was land in their own occupation they were wanting to make the road through?—But it was to be made with public money, which made it a public road, and took it out of my hands.

6323. But they had no road?—But if the road was made with public money, of course, that land would be lost to me.

6324. Was that your objection?—That was one objection. Many years ago I asked them if they would make a road, and I would get it maintained for them, and they would not do it.

6325. But when they applied to you to have the road made, or to be allowed to make the road, why should you have refused them?—Because they put it on the footing that they wanted this road to enable the children to attend school.

6326. Was not that a good footing?—It was, but then I thought a footpath would answer the same purpose.

6327. Don't you think they might fairly be made the judges of that?—I think I would be quite as capable of judging as they are.

6328. What access have children from Geary to the school just now?—A footpath in the district.

6329. But is that a sufficient road?—Well, there has been a school there for fifty or sixty years back, and that has been the road, and there was no complaint or application made for any other.

6330. Do you say there is no ground of complaint for the want of a road?—I heard of none up to the present.

6331. But do you say that no good ground of complaint exists for the want of a road?—Well, they have been offered what I think is quite sufficient.

6332. Namely?—The footpath improved and footbridges put on it, to enable the children to get to the school.

6333. Is there a footpath at present?—Only a very rough kind of footpath.

6334. Not a good footpath for children in winter?—No, but it could be very much improved.

6335. But don't you think the proper improvement was to have a road made in the form they desired?—Well, it would take away a lot of the arable land.

6336. But if they were willing to give it?—They complain of the place being too small already.

6337. No doubt their holdings are small: but don't you think they might fairly be left to judge whether they would give this arable in order to get the benefit of the road?—No, I think not: I could judge as wisely as they. Where there is a good fishing station, I think the less land they have the better.

6338. Of course, they would have less land if they had this road made?—But they don't expect that, as they have applied for more land.

6339. Are you of opinion that the question whether there ought to be a proper road to this school or not is one that rests with you solely and not with them?—I don't know that it is.

6340. With whom do you say it rests?—I don't see that land should be taken from anyone without compensation being given.

6341. Then you think you are in a position to refuse to allow this road to be made unless you are compensated?—I should like to be compensated.

6342. You think you are entitled to refuse to allow this road to be made unless you are compensated: Is that your view?—That is my view.

6343. Against whom do you take it you would have a claim for compensation?—Well, if it was made at the public expense, I would expect it to be paid by the public.

6344. Against whom would your right of action for compensation lie?—Against those who contributed towards the road.

6345. You mean the crofters?—The County Council, I fancy.

6346. Then do you think that if you gave your consent to the formation of this road, you would have a good action against the County Council for compensation: is that your view?—Certainly, if I did not acquiesce in it.

6347. Of course, if you consented and acquiesced, that would be a very different matter. At the time when they applied to you for leave to make the road, had they made an application to you for more land?—They did not apply to me for more land.

6348. Not at all?—No. (A voice 'Yes.') They did not apply to me at that time. I gave them more land previous to that,—what one of the delegates here calls bog.

6349. But was there not an application before you at the time when this question of the road came up, and your consent was asked,—an application for more land?—I understand that application was to the Commission.

6350. But, of course, they had applied to you first of all and been refused?—I don't think so.

6351. That is the provision of the Act?—I am not very positive about that.

6352. May it be the case that at the time when this matter of the road came up, they had applied to you for more land and been refused?—Well, I cannot remember that,—whether they applied to me or to the Commission.

6353. Suppose that statement to be made, are you able to contradict it?—I daresay I could contradict it if I only thought the matter out for some time. I may have some data at home.

6354. When was it that they applied to you for leave to make this road?—I cannot say positively.

6355. What year?—I think about two years ago.

6356. It is right to tell you that, according to our records, the application for more land was served upon you in December 1891,—that is about two years ago?—Well, I forget the circumstances, my lord.

6357. You may take that from me as the correct date. So that at the time when they applied to you for leave to make the road, there was an application for more land; may I take it so?—According to that.

6358. Was the matter of this application for more land an element in your mind in deciding to refuse consent to the making of the road?—Certainly not; never.

6359. Did you, at the time when you refused the consent, say anything to them about their application for more land?—I simply said that it was an extraordinary thing that they should want to reduce their arable land by making a road through the crofts from one end of the township to the other, while they were asking for more land.

6360. Then did you refuse your consent in their interest?—I refused my consent before then.

6361. In their interest?—Before then.

6362. Was it in their interest, because they had too little arable already, and you did not want it further cut down?—I refused it because there was no compensation given.

6363. Mr Sutherland.—You stated that the witness Macleod here told a deliberate falsehood. Now you have stated that he made a mis-statement. You fully appreciate the difference between the two charges,—you know what is implied in accusing a man of committing a falsehood?—I said that the statement was a falsehood.

6364. But you know the difference between a mis-statement and a falsehood. The one implies that the witness knew that he was stating what was wrong, while in the other case he might be stating it in ignorance of the real state of the case. You appreciate the difference, no doubt?—There is a difference, if put in that way.

6365. Did you wish to imply, on the part of the witness, an intention to tell the Commission what was wrong, knowing it to be wrong?—I knew perfectly well that the witness could not tell whether the statement was true or false as he did not form one of the deputation.

6366. But a deliberate falsehood implies a great deal more. What I wish to point out to you is that I think you might withdraw that statement and substitute mis-statement for it?—Well, if it is any satisfaction.

Dunvegan, Skye. Captain Allan Macdonald.

6367. It is not a satisfaction, it is a question for the Commission.—It was either wrong on his part, or wrong on the part of those who made the statement to him, for it is not true.

6368. Do I take it from you that you are willing to withdraw or modify the expression, that he told a deliberate falsehood to the Commission?—I am not aware that I said he told a deliberate falsehood. I said the statement made by him was a deliberate falsehood, whether it originated with him or the deputation I don't know.

6369. But it was in relation to his testimony?—If he got it from the deputation, it was.

6370. It is a matter for us entirely: do you wish to modify or withdraw the expression?—I simply want to say that it is not correct.

6371. You substitute that for 'deliberate falsehood'?—(No answer).

6372. Mr Maccallum.—Just one question with regard to the roads. Don't you think that these crofters ought to be the best judges themselves as to whether the road would benefit them or not?—I daresay they are, and I daresay these crofters would imagine there would be a benefit to them if they got a large slice of my land. But still if they got it without compensation given to me I would be the loser.

6373. But the land was in their occupation, and they were paying for it?—But if the road were made by public money it would become a public road.

6374. You wish to get compensation and rent also for the land? You were getting rent for it as it was, and you wish to get compensation over and above that?—Certainly not. If I get compensation for the land I have no further right to it.

6375. Supposing you got compensation, would you reduce their rents? If this place were to be used as a public road, would you allow a reduction on the common rent?—I do not see that I would have anything to do with it after that.

6376. Would you not be paid for it twice in that way if you got the full value of the land, the fair rent and also compensation for permitting it to be used as a public road? Would not that be getting paid for it twice over?—The Commission come round every seven years and value land. They have fixed the rent at so much now, and in the course of two or three years hence they will revalue it again, when they would naturally consider the damage done by this road through the crofts.

6377. And do you really anticipate that if this road were made the crofts would not be so valuable, and the Commission would probably take down the rents, because there was a road through the township; is that your deliberate opinion?—I certainly think so.

6378. That they would get a reduction at the next fixing of the rents?—Yes, I think so.

6379. Although they were unanimously of opinion that this road would benefit them?—Their opinion cannot be very strong about it, for I tell you that many years ago I offered to maintain this road, and see it maintained if they would make it; and they would not.

6380. Now, don't you think that is a way to foment discontent, when there is interference with them in carrying out what they consider improvements? You interfere with them in this improvement which they wish carried out; do you think that would tend now to a feeling of content and good feeling between proprietor and tenant?—I do not think so.

6381. And, of course, you would not like yourself any person or any authority interfering between you and any improvement that you wished to make on your own lands?—No.

6382. But you would not like them to have any power to improve the amenity of their crofts?—Well, I don't like to give my land away for nothing.

6383. You seem to object to this road being made because public money was to be applied to it; what grievance was that to you?—It then became public property; it was no more my land than it would be the land of any member of the public.

6384. But it was to improve the whole place; the intention of the public money was to improve the amenity of the whole place, and to improve your property?—As far as my experience of these things goes, there were no such roads permitted when we were road trustees; all roads of that kind were made by the people who required them. They are looked upon in the light of private roads—any roads made within the township—just in the same way that the roads which lead to my house I have to make and maintain at my own expense. I do not see why the crofters should be paid out of the public funds to maintain theirs, while I have to pay privately for mine out of my own pocket.

6385. May it not be looked at in this way, that you are putting yourself above the constituted authority. The District Committee, for instance, is the authority that has to do with the purpose to which public funds are to be applied. Don't you put yourself in opposition to the properly constituted authority by saying that you won't allow that road?—I don't think so.

6386. Did they not decide that it would be advantageous to have this road, and you obstructed the carrying out of that desire on their part?—But I think I am the best judge with regard to the management of my own property.

6387. You put yourself above the constituted authority therefore,—yes or no? You are a better judge?—I think so.

6388. Then, with regard to the actual use of this road, is it a fact that they have to take provisions from the village of Stein it may be to Geary occasionally?—I suppose they have, but there is a public road from the village of Stein to the boundary of Geary.—(A voice 'No').

6389. But assuming there is, are they not put to great inconvenience by not making this road on what they could take it to their homes?—It does not appear so.

6390. But does it not appear so when they ask it?—Yes.

6391. How do you think they are to carry these provisions—big things that cannot be carried on their backs—without a road, along a footpath?—There is no objection to their making a road; I object to the public making a road. If they require a road I do not object to their making it.

6392. But it is public money that you would not allow to be so used?—I object to the public making a road.

6393. May I ask, then, did you apply for compensation?—No.

6394. You did not put that before?—Yes; I stated so by letter.

6395. An actual application for compensation?—I did not make an application for compensation, but I stated in my letter to the agents for the District Committee that I thought it was wrong to take lands in that way without compensation.

6396. Mr Macleod.—You said, I think, that you had no objection to them making a footpath?—Yes.

6397. You have always been quite willing that they should make a footpath?—Quite willing.

6398. And you were quite willing that they should even apply some public money to that purpose?—Yes.

6399. You have also, I presume, been a road trustee?—I have.

6400. I daresay you are aware of the provisions of the Roads and Bridges Act, which prohibit the use of public money for footpaths?—I don't think there is any prohibition now.

6401. Oh, yes?—Well it is applied in places—it was so, but I don't think it is now.

6402. I may explain that the reason why it has been necessary to give a special grant to the Highland counties at the present time for footpaths, is because it is not in the power of the County Councils or the District Committees to spend money upon footpaths; there must be a road constructed that would carry a wheeled vehicle. The only object that I can possibly have in putting any question to you is that public communication might be improved; and I would just mention that fact, that it is out of the power of the public authorities to spend the money on footpaths, although they could make a road.—Yes, but there has been a grant made since which enables them to make footpaths.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Captain Allan Macdonald.

6403. And you are quite willing now that that foot-path should be made?—I have always been willing.

6404. I have no doubt it has suggested itself to your mind that if the amenities of the crofts were improved it might have the effect of increasing the value of the holdings, and therefore increasing the rent; don't you think that would occur?—I don't think there is any tendency that way.

6405. You don't think that a croft in Geary would be worth more if there was a road to it than it is at the present time when there is no road?—Not a road from one end of the township to the other, cutting through the arable land and reducing the agricultural value of each croft.

6406. It might be a convenience to them?—It might be a convenience, but it might also be a loss in corn and potatoes.

6407. But if it was a convenience, would it not be of money value?—To some it might be, but not to others.

6408. You take an interest in the fishing industry there?—Yes.

6409. And it would, no doubt, be more convenient for them to have this road for carrying the fish away?—Oh, no; they never would use the road for carrying the fish. The steamer calls there regularly for fish.

6410. Mr Gordon.—I see that this township of Geary, including Gillen, extends almost in an unbroken line for about two miles?—Yes, about that.

6411. Now, from the south end of Gillen, is there at present a road possible for carts to the township of Stein?—Yes; and there is besides a public road from the boundary of Geary and Knockbreck.

6412. Then there is a road from Stein to Knockbreck?—Yes.

6413. Can a cart go all that distance?—A cart can go to Knockbreck, to the bounds of it.

6414. Beyond Knockbreck there appear to be something like twenty or thirty houses shown on the map, to the north end of Geary?—More than that number.

6415. Do these people use meal at all?—I believe they do.

6416. How do they get it there; do they take it by boat, or by road, or on their backs?—It is taken by carts to the boundary, and from there to their dwellings.

6417. Surely it would be an improvement to the township to have a road made that would carry it to their doors?—Oh, yes, but a disadvantage in other respects by cutting up their crofts.

6418. There is nothing we look upon as being of greater importance for the country, after the improvement carried out in the earlier part of this century of making turnpike roads, than to get a railway; and I may say, as a man accustomed to land in the east country, that we never consider it any objection to taking any lands that may be necessary for making a road?—Mine is but a very small property, with a very large number of crofters on it; and if they are all going to have roads through their townships, it would take away an immense quantity of land. There are 119 crofter families I think.

6419. But this is the most populous part of the property, and a road there that would be quite sufficient for that township need not be more than 12 feet wide. That would only take away an acre or two, the whole length of it?—But the very fact of their not making a road when it was offered to them shows that they were not very anxious about it.

6420. But if you state your objection upon what I may call commercial principles, then I must say I don't see that there is much in it?—I don't know. I do not see my way to agree to give any land away without compensation.

6421. Mr Munro.—A rather startling statement was made here to-day by a fisherman from Geary to the effect that you closed up a harbour there, and that thereby their fishing facilities were prejudiced, and their lives put in peril. Is that the case?—Not the case; no.

6422. Did you close up the harbour against their using it?—I never interfered with the harbour in any way.

6423. Did you close up a natural harbour there at Scorrhoran—Port-a'-chirein?—The time that my father sent the crofters to Scorè they made this port, and when they removed from there to Port-o'-Gillen, it was not any longer required, and I shut it up.

Dunvegan, Skye.

Captain Allan Macdonald.

6424. You shut up the harbour of Port-a'-chirein?—Yes, the bit of shore cleared by the crofters when there. There are two townships between Geary and this port.

6425. What was your reason for closing up the harbour?—I did not want to make it a public place, because it was the best part of my grazing and wintering, and it is quite away from Geary or any other crofter township, as you will see from the map.

6426. But you will allow, I suppose, that the fishermen themselves are the best judges as to the harbour that suits them best?—Yes; but there is a harbour there now which anyone can use in stress of weather.

6427. But they themselves say that the harbour which you shut up is the one that suits them best?—But there are men quite as capable of judging as they. For many many years there was no harbour there; and the old harbour at Scorrhoran still exists.

6428. Did you contribute anything in the shape of labour or money to the making of the harbour at Port-a'-chirein?—Well, I have; but the pier was originally made by the Destitution Committee at the time of the destitution in Skye to give employment to the crofters in Scorrhoran.

6429. And what right had you to destroy a harbour which was made by the Destitution Committee?—No; I am talking of the other harbour. Port-a'-chirein harbour I have nothing to do with.

6430. It was a natural harbour?—No, it was made by the crofters my father placed there; and when they removed there was no further use for it, and it was shut up.

6431. You allow that you shut up the harbour?—Yes.

6432. A harbour which the crofters made?—It was no harbour at all; it was just some large stones cleared away on the shore, where the people pulled up their boats. It was no natural harbour at all. The gentlemen of the Commission can see the place when they are there.

6433. But surely you must allow that the fishermen themselves are the best judges as to what harbour suits them?—There are no fishermen there.

6434. The men who appeared here to-day said that their fishing interests were prejudiced?—You can see as to that when you go down.

6435. Then that statement is inaccurate, is it?—You can see what it is worth when you go there.

6436. Are you not aware that any fisherman or any mariner has a perfect right to run into any harbour in defence of his property or his life?—I tell you that there is a harbour within 150 or 200 yards of this where they can run in. Do you imagine that the Destitution Committee would have selected this latter harbour to build a pier there if they thought the other was the better harbour?

6437. I am not in a position to answer that question, but the people themselves have appeared here to-day, and have protested very strongly against this action of yours.—I can say no more until the Commission will see the place, when they will be able to judge for themselves.

JOHN TAYLOR, Land Surveyor, Ebost—examined. John Taylor.

6438. The Chairman.—I understand that you desire to appear before us to-day and submit a statement with reference to the farms on the Kilmuir Estate?—Yes.

9439. Has that statement been prepared by yourself?—Yes, and it is signed by me.

6440. Kindly read it.

Kilmuir Estate.

Detailed contents of the various farms on the Estate of Kilmuir, in the Island of Skye, as at present occupied.

The undernoted areas are not guaranteed to be absolutely correct, but a close approximation taken from the

Dunvegan, Skye.

John Taylor.

6-inch Ordnance Survey Plans, and sufficiently correct for all practical purposes. Islands attached to any of the farms are not included in the areas given.

Name of Farm.	Arable.	Old Arable.	Green Pasture.	Reclaimed from Loch.	Hill Pasture.	Total.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
Duntulm, -	30	89	232	...	3306	3657

Cuidreach, -	50	30	57	...	2296	2433
Total,	293	989	1365	255	15,930	18,832

None of the farms on the estate, with perhaps the exception of Monkstadt, has a sufficiency of arable land in proportion to hill grazing, this being particularly the case with the farms of Sartle and Cuidrach. I do not, on the other hand, consider any of the hill pasture suitable for profitable cultivation. I am of opinion that none of those farms could be profitably occupied by crofters; the main reason being that on the six farms containing 18,832 acres there are only 293 acres of arable, or 1½ acres arable to each 100 acres grazing, which is not a suitable proportion even according to the crofters own views as expressed in their evidence at Portree and Struan.

Probably some more land on three of the farms could be cultivated, but not profitably, and certainly not in such quantities as to make a proportion suitable to the grazing land; and I may here mention that I consider every 100 acres of hill grazing would require at least 6 acres of arable land. That will be found to correspond with the statement given in to the Commission by Lord Macdonald's factor and me.

It will be observed that 900 or 1000 acres of land on those farms was formerly under cultivation, a very large proportion of which was on the farm of Monkstadt. A very cursory examination of the ground, however, will, I think, suffice to show that this land is not such as could be profitably cultivated, and points to this as having been at one time a congested district: otherwise such worthless land would never have been brought under cultivation, as the return for labouring such land must have been very meagre.

(Signed) JOHN TAYLOR,
Land Surveyor.

EBOST, SKYE,
24th April 1893.

N.B.—The fact that crofters or sub-tenants were in possession of certain land 50 or 100 years ago does not go far to prove that the land can at present be profitably cultivated, rather the reverse.

(Initialed) J. T.

6441. That statement is correct?—That is my statement.

6442. And you say it is correct?—I say it is correct.

6443. Were these figures the result of survey by yourself?—They are taken, as I have explained, from the 6-inch Ordnance Plans.

6444. Mr Sutherland.—May I ask by what method you arrived at the proportion between arable and pasture land, in the estimate you have made?—It is to be seen upon the ground.

6445. What are the marks by which you would know it on the ground?—Cultivated land is easily distinguished from pasture land.

6446. You mean land that has been cultivated before?—Yes.

6447. But are you not of opinion that some land that was cultivated before may be best suited for pasture and others for cultivation?—I am under the impression that a great deal of land has been cultivated formerly that would have been better under grazing all along.

Dunvegan Skye.

John Tay

6448. On the other hand, don't you think some land that was never before under cultivation might be now brought under cultivation?—Possibly; but I think upon the large farms you will find that the best land is under crofters now.

6449. And I think you have admitted that Monkstadt is the best farm upon the Kilmuir estate?—I do not think I said so.

6450. Is it not the highest rented?—Possibly the highest rented is not always the best.

6451. And has it not the greatest proportion of old arable land upon it of any other farm?—It has.

6452. That is what makes it valuable, is it not?—I don't know that.

6453. How do you reconcile the two statements?—Which statements?

6454. That you prove land to be good land by its being under cultivation now?—I think not.

6455. You said the best land was now under cultivation?—There are only 110 acres in Monkstadt under cultivation now: that is not a great proportion out of 3000.

6456. How much of that do you think is suitable for cultivation?—I said the best of it is now under cultivation. Formerly there was between 900 and 1000 acres under cultivation: it is for the Commission to say whether that land is suitable for cultivation or not.

6457. You gave your opinion. This survey of yours is not an independent survey,—it is made from sources to which we have access ourselves?—I have been over the whole of the estate, and inspected all the farms minutely.

6458. Mr Macleod.—I want to know your qualifications with regard to surveying. Are you a surveyor or a sheep farmer?—I am both.

6459. You stated yesterday, I think, that your experience of surveying was confined to surveying crofter holdings in this and other islands?—I was brought up in the office where Mr Gordon is now, by his predecessor, Mr Macbean.

6460. You are a bred surveyor?—I am a bred surveyor.

6461. But, of course, the extents of land stated by you in this report are taken from the Ordnance Survey Map?—They are.

6462. They are not actually surveyed?—No.

JOHN MACPHERSON, Glendale—recalled.

John Macphers

6463. The Chairman.—I am informed that you consider that a statement made by you here yesterday was somewhat misunderstood by the Commission, and that you wish to be allowed to amend it. I am not aware that any statement you made was misunderstood. To what statement do you refer?—Yesterday I mentioned two kinds of crofters: crofters at £6 to begin with and crofters at £10 to £15. I would like the two to be tried in Skye. By the former I meant crofters in a place where there was land of no use, as there is to be seen in Skye, though the same land in some places would be worth £12. I thought, by what was said yesterday by the Macleod of Macleod and Mr Reginald Macleod and the Commissioners, that they took me up wrong in thinking that I was taking the £6 croft as the regular kind of crofts throughout Skye. But I have mentioned the two.

6464. Mr Maccallum.—That is, you did not expect to get a 20 acre arable croft, with suitable stock, for £6?—No, not of proper land.

6465. Mr Gordon.—What you meant was a certain number of stock,—that is what you had in your mind?—Yes.

6466. It might be 6 acres in one place, while 3 acres would do in another?—Yes.

DONALD NICOLSON, Crofter, Torrin (40) —examined.

6467. The Chairman.—You are a crofter at Torrin?—I have half a croft—half of No. 7.

6468. I see your acreage is 4 acres 1 rood 20 poles arable, 1 rood 27 poles outrun, and 4370 acres grazing divided into eighteen shares; the old rent was £5, 16s. and the fair rent is £4, 5s. Have you a written statement?—Yes, I have it here.

6469. Kindly read it.—'Torrin is divided into eighteen crofts, and they are all subdivided except five; seven are in two halves, and six of them are in four halves. There are thirty-three families of crofters and eight families of cottars in the township, and if the crofters are to get more land the people of Torrin cannot miss getting their share of it, as they are surrounded by sheep farms. The farm of Corry is marching with the township of which we want a strip of the pasture at once; and the farm of Kilbride we want the three parks that are marching with the township. The third park, known as Robert's park, was taken from the township about thirty years ago. The farm of Kilbride and Killichro, connected as it is at present, is very suitable for crofters' holdings. There were crofters in Kilbride, before—ten crofts, and they were removed about sixty-seven or sixty-eight years ago, to make a sheep-run for the parish minister. Suisnish and Boreraig farms are very good for crofters. Both places were occupied by crofters before, but they were removed about forty or forty-one years ago to make a sheep-run of it (there were twelve crofts in Suisnish and ten in Boreraig). On the west side of the township is the farm of Kirkibost, and very suitable for crofters. There were twelve crofts in the township of Keppoch, and the people were cleared off it about thirty-seven or forty years ago, and it was added to the farm. Feaulin and Arinacreige were cleared at the same time. The last-named place belonged to the township of Torrin at one time, and the march dyke is quite visible yet. From Rhunerranich, a bit north from Broadford Pier, to the Point of Strathaird, a distance of about fifteen miles, the mark of cultivation is visible, and there is not a crofter township in the distance except Torrin. Elgol is on the west point of Strathaird. This statement is written by one of the delegates for the township.

'TORRIN, May 9, 1893.'

6470. Is the statement signed?—Yes.

6471. Now, going back to the farm of Corry which you mentioned, tell us again the particular part of the farm which you specified in your statement as suitable for crofters?—All the farm is suitable for crofters. Broadford, Skye.

6472. I thought you mentioned a particular part of it?—That is the part in Kilbride; it is marching with the grazing of the Torrin township. Donald Nicolson.

6473. How many parks do you mention there?—Three.

6474. Are these under grass at present?—Under grass.

6475. And they march with your township of Torrin?—Yes. One of them was taken from the township of Torrin—the third park.

6476. You don't know the extent of them?—No.

6477. Can you tell us the extent of the farm altogether?—No.

6478. Or the rent?—No.

6479. You don't know the rent?—No.

6480. Who occupies the farm of Corry at present?—It is one Mr Murchison.

6481. You mentioned also the farm of Kilbride and Killichro?—Yes.

6482. I think you said there was land there suitable for occupation?—Yes.

6483. What kind of land is it—grazing land?—Arable and pasture land.

6484. Do you mean old arable, or land under cultivation?—There is part of it under cultivation just now.

6485. And the rest is grazing?—Yes, for sheep and cattle.

6486. And how many fields did you specify there?—There were ten crofts there before.

6487. But I think you specified some fields as what you had in view for enlargement of holding?—No; I did not specify that, except the three parks. They are suitable for cultivation; they were cultivated before.

6488. You also mentioned the township of Kirkibost: does it march with your township?—Yes, on the west side.

6489. And you say there is also tolerably good land there?—Yes.

6490. Do you mean grazing land or arable land, or both?—There is both.

6491. Both land under cultivation and land under sheep?—Yes.

6492. Are the old townships of Feaulin and Arinacreige on the farm of Kirkibost?—Yes.

6493. And they were formerly under crofters?—Yes, there was a crofter at Arinacreige and one at Feaulin.

6494. One in each?—One in each. At the time they were cleared there were three in each, but of course they sprang out of the same family.

6495. Are we right in taking the statement you have made as respecting the general feeling of the township of Torrin?—Certainly.

6496. You appear for the whole township?—Yes, along with two other delegates.

6497. Along with Mackenzie and Mackinnon?—Yes.

6498. Is it the wish of the Torrin people mainly to get additional grazing, or do they desire to get both arable and grazing?—Well, those who have plenty as they are wish to remain and get more grazing added to the township, more pasture land.

6499. But what I mean is, is the complaint of the township mainly for want of grazing, or do they feel that the arable they have is too narrow?—Certainly it is too narrow when one croft is divided into four. They run from 7 to 9 or 10 acres, and when that is divided into four parts, there is no arable land for four families.

6500. You say there are eight cottars in the township?—Yes.

6501. Do any of these pay a rent?—Well, they were charged 5s. for rent, but I don't know whether they paid it. I know some of them have paid it.

6502. To whom did they pay?—To the landlord.

6503. Have these cottars any stock?—No; I am not aware of them having any. They might have a sheep or two, some of them.

Broadford, Skye.

Donald Nicolson.

6504. But they have no cattle?—No; well, I think, one of them has a cow.

6505. And they have potato patches, I suppose, which they get from the crofters?—Yes.

6506. And do work for them occasionally?—I don't know whether they work for it or not.

6507. Is there any fishing done about Torrin?—Yes.

6508. At Loch Slapin?—Yes.

6509. A good deal?—Yes, there has been a good deal of fishing for the last four or five years.

6510. Has each crofter there a boat, or the share of a boat?—The most of them.

6511. Do they go far afield to fish, or do they mostly fish round about their own township?—Round about the lochs—Loch Eishort, Loch Scavaig, and Loch Slapin.

6512. Do any Torrin crofters go away as hired hands to the fishing?—They used to go away, but the fishing was so slack in Ireland and the east coast for two years back that they do not go now.

6513. They have not been going for some time?—No, they were doing nothing there.

6514. Would you tell us what stock you have got?—Myself individually?

6515. Yourself individually.—I have 3 cows, 1 pony, 2 hoggs, and 1 sheep in common with the township.

6516. How many sheep altogether may there be held in common?—850 ewes, 270 hoggs.

6517. Any more?—And 20 tups.

6518. Is that a club stock?—Yes.

6519. Managed by a committee—a few appointed for the purpose?—Yes. There are three appointed every year to regulate it.

6520. Are you one of the three?—Well, I happened to be last year, and am still to the term.

6521. How long have you been carrying on this sheep farm as a club farm?—A good many years back; I cannot say exactly.

6522. But you are of opinion, I take it, that it is to the advantage of the Torrin crofters that it should be so managed?—Certainly.

6523. And you would be in favour of the extension of the club system to other townships?—Yes.

6524. Now just explain to the Commissioners where the advantage of it is, in your judgment?—There is an advantage; if people were to get more land and everybody looking after his own sheep, that would spoil it; everybody would be shoving in his own sheep, and the man with a strong family would——

6525. Have more sheep than the weaker man?—Yes, one must be at home, and as usual a man with a young family would have to go away and earn money somewhere else, and there would be nobody to look after the sheep, and he would lose them. If he had them at the beginning of the year he would come home and maybe never see them.

6526. For all that number of stock do you keep any set of books showing the stock belonging to each crofter?—They keep a kind of pass-book just for the year.

6527. And the people are satisfied with the management?—Yes; it is themselves that do it, and they must be satisfied.

6528. Is there any other club-farm near you, near Torrin?—No; Heast is the only other club-farm that I am aware of in the parish.

6529. It is a farm, is it?—It is a club-farm, the same as the township of Torrin.

6530. Mr Shaw Stewart. How do you manage about a shepherd for the club-farm; do you get one of yourselves or an outsider?—No, we keep two shepherds.

6531. Paying them regular wages?—Paying them yearly wages. Of course one of them is not an experienced shepherd.

6532. If such land as you were talking about were got, do you think that many of the people of Torrin would leave the place they are in now and go and occupy it?—Yes, some of them would.

6533. And others would prefer to remain behind?—Yes.

6534. Is there other land besides what you mentioned to the Chairman some time ago that is suitable for the purpose of making new holdings?—Yes, every farm is.

6535. Are you of opinion that wherever a large farm exists at present, crofters could also subsist by the soil?—Certainly.

6536. You see no reason why they should not?—No, because crofters were there before in every place.

6537. And under modern conditions you would have no fear either that they would occupy the land with as much advantage to themselves and others as the present farmers do; are you of that opinion?—Well, I cannot say that.

6538. But you think it would be a very great benefit to the people who are more congested?—Certainly, to get more land; that is what they want, and they have much need of it.

6539. Mr Gordon.—You say that one of these townships, Kilbride, was cleared about sixty years ago?—More than sixty-seven or sixty-eight years ago.

6540. And the townships of Suisnish and Boreraig, when were they cleared?—In 1840 or 1841.

6541. Were they cleared with the people's consent, or against their will?—Against their will.

6542. Was that so in Boreraig?—I think some of them. They were going about to get the people to go away to Australia. Some of them signed and others remained; and those who remained were shifted to other parts of the estate.

6543. But it is the case, is it not, that part of the people at Boreraig moved of their own account?—I am not aware of that.

6544. Is the land at Boreraig as good as at Suisnish?—No.

6545. How many crofts would you put down on Boreraig?—About three or four crofts, I should think, would be plenty for it.

6546. And how many in Suisnish?—You could not put more than five in Suisnish.

6547. Would you propose to keep these two townships together as one holding for the pasture?—I believe they would agree better to get it separately.

6548. How many sheep would you expect to keep on the hill?—One hundred sheep at least.

6549. To each township?—To each crofter.

6550. That would be 800 sheep altogether?—Yes, between Boreraig and Suisnish.

6551. Would that not be rather many, don't you think?—I don't know; not if they were selected, cheviots and blackfaced.

6552. How many sheep will there be on it just now?—I am not exactly sure; I think there should be 500 in each place.

6553. You would increase them from 500 to 800, and how many cattle would you put on?—Not more than 4 cows and 2 followers and 1 pony.

6554. That would mean for the eight crofts 48 cattle and 8 horses, with 800 sheep, where you have only 500 sheep at present?—Not at all.

6555. What do you make it to be?—I should think there will be about 500 sheep in each place, Boreraig and Suisnish.

6556. How many would you put on in Kilbride?—Just about the same number, about 500 blackfaced sheep.

6557. Do you think they would keep 500 and 300, that is 800 sheep, and all these horses and cattle on the two smaller places?—I think so; they have a good hill pasture.

6558. There is no green land, though, except the two townships?—No, but the crofts might not be so big. There were twelve crofts in Suisnish before.

6559. No doubt. In framing the arrangement in your own mind, do you propose that the crofters should subsist entirely upon their crofts, or that they should go away and work?—For part of the oadford, ye. — onald Nicol- son.

year they should go away and work; and they would fish, too, whenever they got the chance.

6560. But you don't mean to say that they could subsist on their crofts without fishing or working?—Maybe some of them would do it, others could not: I am sure about that.

6561. But they would require to go away and work, or to fish, before they could pay as much rent as a tacksman would pay?—Oh yes; it would not pay the crofters so well as one man.

6562. Mr Macleod.—How many crofts did you say were in Torrin—full crofts?—Five.

6563. How many families are there altogether?—Thirty-three crofters' families and eight cottars.

6564. That makes forty-one altogether?—There is a family of paupers.

6565. There are forty-one crofters on eighteen crofts?—Yes. Some of the cottars are not on the crofts.

6566. They are living on the township?—Yes.

6567. Then do you think that if the surplus of the families above the eighteen were migrated from there, the Torrin crofters—that is, the remainder—would be able to live comfortably?—Well, I think they would by reducing some of their stock.

6568. What portion of their stock?—The horses at first.

6569. What is the number of horses that are allowed for each?—There are two horses in each croft, and six cows.

6570. And you would reduce the number of horses to what?—To one for each croft.

6571. And the cows to what?—I would reduce them to four cows and a follower or two, and more sheep.

6572. Does any portion of your hill grazing march with the deer forest?—Yes, the west side of the township.

6573. And are you troubled with the deer coming down upon the hill grazing on to your arable ground from there?—Yes, they are coming on to the corn and eating it.

6574. Has there been any attempt made to keep them back?—There was a kind of fence erected two years ago.

6575. And is it not effective?—No, they can jump over it any time they like.

6577. So that it is not within your knowledge whether these five crofts above the road have received compensation for the damage done or not?—Well, I know that one of them, Mrs Mackinnon, No. 5, got compensation some time ago. I don't know whether she is still receiving it or not, but I know others did not get anything.

6578. Were the deer down last year?—They are down every year.

6579. And do you think that they could be kept up if there was a proper fence erected?—Certainly; if a proper fence was erected they would never get in.

6580. Then about club stock: you have always been able to get along amicably with regard to the arrangements for it?—Yes.

6581. You are one of the managers yourself, and perhaps you could tell us about it?—Yes, but I was not at home last year; my neighbours put me in my place during the time I was away.

6582. But you have sufficient knowledge possibly to give the Commission some information as to whether you think that a larger sheep stock, say in the township of Torrin, could be managed by such a small committee as three managers?—Yes.

6583. Do you think a larger stock could?—Yes, certainly.

6584. Well, suppose for a moment that the sheep stock on Torrin were doubled and the number of families remained the same, do you think there would be any difficulty arising from the large number who would be about the management?—No difficulty whatever; they would just manage it the same as they are doing just now—the very same way.

Broadford, Skye. — Donald Nicol- son.

6585. So that you don't think any difficulty would arise in that direction?—No.

6586. Mr Maccallum.—Are they Highland cattle you have?—Yes.

6587. Are they very much inferior, the cattle of the township to the cattle kept by the tacksman?—No.

6588. Not much inferior?—They are very near as good, and some better.

6589. Would it be quite inaccurate to say that the tacksman's cattle were twice as valuable?—Oh, they are not twice as valuable.

6590. Then as to the prices you get for them. Do you get for your stirks as good a price as the tacksmen do?—Well, maybe not; sometimes a few of the crofters would get more for a stirk.

6591. Get more than the tacksman?—But not on the average.

6592. Can you give me any idea now what is the difference, comparing your own township with the price the tacksmen get generally, is it very much lower than the price the tacksmen get for their stirks?—Well, indeed, I cannot answer the question very well, for I never saw a tacksman hereabout selling stirks.

6593. Don't they rear stirks?—Yes, but they don't sell them when they are a year old; they sell them at two years old and three years old.

6594. But you have seen your stirks and you have seen the stirks that are reared by tacksmen: are the stirks that are reared in your township much inferior to the stirks reared by the tacksmen?—Not very much.

6595. Since the passing of the Crofters Act have the crofters made improvements on houses?—Yes.

6596. How many houses have been improved since that time?—I think there are eight new houses built in Torrin since the passing of the Crofters Act. There were two built before that, making ten altogether. One of them is not roofed yet, and three of them are felt houses.

6597. With regard to the two that were built before the passing of the Crofters Act, did they get help from the proprietor?—No, not that I am aware of.

6598. And since the passing of the Act, I take it that they have got no help?—Not a farthing.

6599. Then with regard to the other houses, have they been improved—renewed in any way—those who have kept old houses?—No.

6600. They are just very much as they used to be?—Very much as they used to be. Everybody that can build a new house is trying to do it.

6601. Now with regard to your management of the land, is there any improvement in the method of cultivating the land since the passing of the Act?—Well, I cannot say there is much. Of course everybody is trying to improve the best way he can every year.

6602. You do not notice much improvement in their method of cultivation. Do they sow grass?—Yes, most of them do.

6603. Were they in the habit of doing that before the passing of the Crofters Act?—Some of them; but most of them do it now.

6604. So that in that case there is an improvement?—There is an improvement.

6605. Do you think that there is a marked improvement?—There is; there is a marked improvement in the building of the new houses.

6606. But in the cultivation of the land?—Yes.

6607. Then have they brought in any new land—have they brought under cultivation any new land, say from pasture?—In the township of Torrin they used to have grass pasture on each side of the township, and from old times they used to go to another place every year.

Broadford, Skye.

Donald Nicolson.

6608. What have they done now with regard to that: have they simply ploughed it, or have they removed the stones?—Of course they are clearing it and trenching it and ploughing it too.

6609. So that they are gradually in this way improving the pasture?—Of course they are.

6610. Then is it your opinion that if there were only eighteen crofters in the township they would be tolerably comfortable?—Certainly they will, by getting additional pasture to the township.

6611. Even eighteen would need additional pasture?—Yes. When the Crofters Commission were going round here they lost a good strip of the hill pasture: it was given to another township in the parish, and of course they would require a good bit of pasturage instead of that.

6612. Supposing they had their old pasture back would there be sufficient for the eighteen crofters?—I cannot say that. I don't think it would. I think there are about 500 acres.

6613. Well, if they got a good addition to the hill pastures, with the arable which they have at present, would the crofts then be self-supporting? would the people be able to get a living out of the croft?—Well, I think they should do it if they had them properly stocked, and the ponies were removed and the cattle, as I said before, I think they should.

6614. Would the others be willing to remove and leave eighteen there; would they be workable?—Well, that is what I cannot say.

6615. Is there a number of them?—I know there are some of them quite willing to remove if they get a good croft.

6616. Would you yourself remove if you got a suitable croft?—Yes, I would, if I got it in a suitable place near the sea; but I would not wish to go far from the sea, it is a great help to poor men.

6617. I suppose that those who have built new houses would like to remain after they have made these improvements?—Very likely.

6618. Mr Munro.—From the statement which you have submitted to us I gather that the great want with you and your neighbours is the acquisition of more land?—Certainly.

6619. And if you got more land no doubt you would be more comfortable?—Yes.

6620. Could you pursue a proper system of rotation if you got into a larger extent of land?—Certainly.

6621. You do not cultivate your land just now as you think it ought to be cultivated?—Of course we have been working it every year for the last eighty years. It yields no crop, for we work it every year.

6622. Now supposing the opportunity were offered to you and your neighbours of acquiring more land, how could you enter into possession of it? could you without any outside assistance take the land and stock it?—If we could get the land we would stock it the best way we could.

6623. Could you build your own houses too without any outside assistance?—We would try it, if we would get the land.

6624. Is it possible for a crofter with an increased croft, say from 15 to 25 acres, to maintain himself without any extra help in the way of labour or otherwise?—To maintain themselves?

6625. Yes, without any outside help in the way of labour or fishing?—I don't think they would pay the return of the grain in this part of the country with this stock, supposing they were working with a rotation.

6626. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You said just now you would be willing to remove to a better croft, but it must be near the sea?—Yes.

6627. Why do you say that?—Because I would not like to go far from the sea.

6628. Yes, but why?—Because I could go fishing to the loch or the place where I would be.

6629. Then you would rather have a croft near the sea where you could eke out some livelihood from the fishing as well, than a croft inland?—Not at all; it may be I could do both at times.

6630. Fishing and looking after the croft?—Yes.

6631. If you were near the sea?—The same as they are doing at present in the township.

6632. But you could not do that if you were inland?—Certainly, they are doing it just now.

6633. Some distance from the sea, I mean?—Well, when a body is some distance from the sea he cannot attend so well.

6634. But do you think a croft near the sea where there is fishing to be done at odd times would pay better than a croft inland, where the man working the croft could not get to any fishing to help him?—Yes, of course.

6635. That is your own view?—That is my own view.

6636. Do you think that is a general view among crofters generally?—I cannot say about others.

6637. You would make some money if you had the fishing as well as a croft?—Certainly.

6638. Mr Munro.—But have you ever known a crofter pursue the occupation of fishing and manage his croft properly at the same time?—Certainly, they are doing it at the township where I am in. There is plenty good fishing in the loch; herring fishing.

6639. And they still manage the crofts satisfactorily?—Yes.

6640. Mr Alexander Macdonald, Factor for Sir William Mackinnon.—You are a deer forester yourself, one of Mr. Winans's men?—Yes.

6641. You mentioned part of Kirkibost as a grateful addition to the Torrin people?—I said nothing of the kind.

6642. You said Kirkibost, did not you?—Yes.

6643. That is on Strathaird?—I say it is suitable for one crofter.

6644. Are these places, Feaulin and Arinacreige, that you Torrin people want, part of Sir William Mackinnon's estate of Strath, or on entirely different property?—Yes, but Arinacreige was Lord Macdonald's property about seventy-two years ago.

6645. The Chairman.—And was it sold by him to Macalister?—I cannot say: there was an agreement between them. It was taken from the Torrin township, and given to the Strath estate.

6646. Mr Alexander Macdonald.—Lord Macdonald and Macalister had an arbitration about it, and Lord Macdonald lost the arbitration, but he got a bit on the other side.

6647. The Chairman.—Then it was sold to Sir William Mackinnon?—Yes.

6648. Mr Alexander Macdonald.—Could I ask him, does he know anything about the Tenth Commandment?

6649. The Chairman.—No.

6650. Mr Mackintosh, Factor for Lord Macdonald.—How near to Kilbride House are the parks you say are fit for cultivation, and would be suitable as an addition to Torrin?—I should say about fifty yards.

6651. Do they not surround Kilbride House?—No.

6652. Is the part of Corry farm you spoke of so often as marching with Torrin fit for cultivation?—No, but for hill pasture.

6653. Is any of the arable land at Kilbride you described as fit for cultivation part of the glebe of Strathaird?—Not that I am aware of.

6654. Were the 270 hoggs at Torrin wintered at home?—Yes.

6655. Do you not consider it a very good sign of the pasture land at Torrin if you are able to winter 270 hoggs at home along with the stock you have on the ground?—We never send them to winter, never since the last eighty years.

6656. But is it not a good sign of the land that you are able to winter them at home?—Well, we are wintering them at home every year.

6657. Do you know what the cost of wintering hoggs in the mainland is?—Well, I know some of it.

6658. Had you ever any experience of it?—They roadford, kye.

onald Nicol-son.

cost from 5s. to 7s.; and about 3s. 6d. in Aberdeenshire.

6659. From 5s. to 7s., and you are able to winter 270 hoggs at home; and do you know what the gross rental of Torrin is? The fair rent of Torrin is £136, 14s.: and you have also got 850 ewes?—Yes.

6660. The Chairman.—What is your question, Mr. Mackintosh?

6661. Mr Mackintosh.—I mean to say that they have sufficient good land at present when they are able to accomplish all that at present.

6662. The Chairman.—Have you any further interrogation to put?

6663. Mr Mackintosh.—Are not the cattle stock of the crofters in Sleat and Strath much superior to the stock of the crofters in the north end of the island of Skye?—I believe they are better.

6664. They are much better?—I don't know about 'much' better, but I think they are better: I heard people say they were better.

6665. And is it not the case that the crofters' stock are the best in Sleat—certainly the best in Skye?—I believe that.

6666. And you admitted at the same time that they could not get the same prices as the tacksman does for his?—No, I don't know that I did.

6667. The Chairman.—What would you say on the average: do you get as good prices on the average as the tacksman, or not so good, or better?—Well, it was the young stirks that I was questioned about, and I have never seen farmers selling stirks.

6668. You are not, in fact, able to judge?—No.

6669. Mr Mackintosh.—Is it possible to land seaware on the shore of Suisnish?—Yes, in some parts of it.

6670. It has a stretch of about six miles, I suppose; how many places could you land seaware?—You can land them in about six places in Suisnish itself, and there is only a mile of it.

6671. In very favourable weather?—You could come to the north.

6672. Are you desirous of obtaining a new holding?—Yes.

6673. Would you leave Torrin if you got a new holding?—Yes.

6674. You know the good lands down in the forest on the mainland, Mr Winans's forest?—Yes.

6675. Would you like a holding there? would you rather have one at Torrin?—Yes, I would rather have a holding in my native place.

6676. The Chairman.—Now tell us what size of holding you have in view?—From 10 to 12 acres.

6677. Of arable?—Yes, of arable land.

6678. And what extent of grazing?—Just what would keep 100 sheep at least, and 4 cows and 2 followers, and 1 pony.

6679. Have the Torrin people got ponies mostly already?—Yes.

6680. Mostly each one has a pony?—Yes.

6681. Now suppose you had a holding of that size, would you expect to be able to live by it without any other assistance?—Well, I would do my best.

6682. Oh yes, of course. But as a man skilled in agriculture would you expect?—— I am not skilled in agriculture at all.

6683. Well, with such experience as you have, would you expect to be able to live by the holding without further aid?—If I had it properly stocked, and got good prices, maybe I would, according to the kind of arable land; it would give a good return may be on the whole.

6684. You said you would like to be near the sea?—Yes.

6685. Have you a boat?—I have a share of a boat.

6686. And you do not wish to have to give that up?—If I was removed to another place I would have.

6687. Would you be willing to give it up? What I mean to be at is this: is it your desire to get a holding large enough to enable you to live by the holding and away from the sea, or is it your desire to remain very much where you are and trust partly to the sea and partly to the land?—That is what I mean.

Broadford, Skye.

Donald Nicolson.

6688. Then you don't wish to leave the sea?—No.

6689. You wish to be able to gain a livelihood partly by the sea and partly by the holding?—Yes.

6690. And you have no idea of going into a holding to which you would have to devote your whole time?—No.

6691. Mr. Macleod.—About the sheep stock: did you sell your usual number of sheep last year?—No; we sold only the shot lambs and the wool last year.

6692. So that the stock you have in Torrin just now is very much above the usual stock?—(No answer.)

6693. Mr Mackintosh.—Still you were able to winter your hoggs at home.

6694. The Chairman.—Enough has been said on that point.

JOHN MACKINNON, Crofter, Torrin (59)—examined.

John Mac kinnon

6695. The Chairman.—You have heard Nicolson's evidence, I suppose?—Yes, the most of it.

6696. Do you wish to make any addition to it?——I concur in all that he said.

6697. You have one fourth of No. 10, Torrin?—Yes.

6698. The area of which is 1 acre 1 rood 12 poles arable, and 2 roods 26 poles outrun: the former rent was £2, 5s. 10d., and the fair rent £1, 18s.?—Yes.

6699. Would you like to make any addition to Nicolson's statement with regard to land?—I am not particular, unless your lordship be pleased to ask any questions. I will answer any questions as far as I can.

6700. I suppose you heard the statement which Nicolson read to us?—I have not seen it, but I have heard it all, and I agree with what is said in it.

6701. It was a pretty full and distinct statement, but if there is anything else you would like to tell us we shall be happy to hear it?—I know for instance that there are some in Torrin who would like to be removed to another suitable place, because people who only occupy one-fourth of a croft cannot be supposed to be content.

6702. I suppose the Torrin people trust mostly to the sheep stock and their cattle stock more than to the land?—Yes, they do.

6703. I see your arable is a very small patch extending to an acre and a quarter; but you are able to winter your hoggs upon your own ground?—We are able to keep them in life, my lord: some of them die and some live, that is all.

6704. But many crofters and farmers, too, are not able to winter their hoggs upon their own ground, you know?—No.

6705. Are you in the habit of doing so?—Yes, they have never been put away; we were not able to put them away. If they live they will live, and if they die they must.

6706. But you have low ground suitable for wintering?—We keep them on our crofts.

6707. Do you know what was the death-rate last winter?—No, but Nicolson would know about it.

6708. Can you tell us what did each crofter in Torrin get from the committee, for the management of the club farm last year?—Not a penny; they had to put in some on account of expenses.

6709. You had to put money into the common fund?—Yes.

6710. What expenses do you refer to?—Shepherds' wages and dip for the sheep and such things. We bought a bull last year at £40, and it had to be paid up.

6711. You were not able to meet those expenses out of the profits of the year?—No.

6712. And besides getting no profit, you had to pay money out of your pocket?—We had to pay in, some of us. My one-fourth share came to 10s. or 12s.

Broadford, Skye. — John Mackinnon.

6713. What was the state of the account the year before?—Much better, but I cannot exactly tell.

6714. Did you get any?—Yes, we got some money.

6715. And you had nothing to pay in?—No.

6716. Some years, of course, it is very good?—About nine or ten years ago we were getting considerable sums.

6717. How much now, nine or ten years back?—As much as £12 and £14 each.

6718. Each whole croft?—Yes.

6719. How many shepherds do you keep?—We keep two.

6720. What wages do you pay them?—One of them is paid nothing but wages, the other one is paid partly in sheep grazing, partly in land; he has got a patch of land.

6721. One shepherd is paid in wages: how much is he paid?—£16.

6722. And the other, how much?—£7 in money, and the rest in land, and grazing for cows and sheep.

6723. And he is provided with a house?—Yes.

6724. Are these sheep you have black-faced sheep?—Black-faced sheep.

6725. Is there anything else you would like to add?—No.

6726. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Have you got a share in a boat?—Yes.

6727. And I suppose you agree with the other delegate that you would rather have your land, if you had any new holding, near the sea?—Yes, of course; yes.

6728. You are not paying much rent for the small bit you have now, but you would rather have a larger bit of land, even although you had to pay a larger rent?—Certainly.

6729. Well, these are bad times for farming now, for sheep and everything else; why do you think you would be able to pay the larger rent, even though the holding were larger?—I would help by the cultivating of any arable land I could get; it would help to maintain my family, and surely the rest of us would work for the rent, maybe, outside.

6730. Some of the family would work outside?—Yes.

6731. How many of a family have you?—I have four.

6732. Sons?—Two.

6733. And they would help to pay the rent of the new holding?—Likely; I was helping to pay my father's rent long before.

6734. Do you think any crofters would be able to cultivate any holding away from the sea without any help from fishing or outside labour?—It would depend on what kind of holding it was; if the holding was self-sustaining it would.

6735. Say, 15 acres of good land and a good bit of hill pasture inland, away from the sea?—I think a crofter would be able to maintain himself on that, if it were 15 acres of good land; but, of course, that alters with the times. Very often, in this country, the land does not yield such a good crop; there may be a bad year; of course, we must trust Providence for the like of that.

6736. But we must expect bad times as well as good?—Well, but I think a crofter would be able to sustain his family upon a 15-acre croft.

6737. You say, sustain his family, but would he have anything over?—I cannot exactly answer the question.

6738. I am only asking your opinion as a man who has cultivated the land?—I think he would need it all to sustain his family.

6739. Mr Sutherland.—You have proved that it is possible to make a sheep croft pay in Skye, without sending the sheep to winter in the Lowlands?—I don't know about the general rule, but we have been trying that experience for about eighteen years, anyway.

6740. You have made it pay, have you not?—Yes.

6741. Even last year?—Last year it did not pay us.

6742. Did not you add to your capital £40, the price of a good bull?—Yes, but it is not all paid yet.

6743. But you consider that, were it not for this expense, you would have a bigger dividend than you had the year before?—No, we would not.

6744. Would you have it equal to what it was before?—No, we would not. We sold nothing last year but the wool and the shot lambs.

6745. But do you think that if your holding were larger than it is now, your profit would increase in proportion?—I think it would.

6746. You think it would?—Certainly.

6747. And if your holding were made less in size than it is now, you think your profit would lessen, would it not?—My profit is very little, with the holding I have, supposing Lord Macdonald would make me a present of it. Supposing I had it for nothing, it would be very little to support my family.

6748. Is your desire to carry on the fishing influenced in any way by the fact that you have a boat just now?—I have a boat.

6749. Is it influenced in any degree by the fact that you have a share in a boat, and do not wish to part with it?—Oh yes.

6750. It is?—Yes.

6751. Mr Gordon.—You did not get any return from your sheep stock last year, mainly because you did not sell your wedder lambs?—That is it; we sold no wedder lambs.

6752. Did you sell any cast ewes?—No.

6753. You have them still?—Yes.

6754. Mr Maccallum.—Is it the practice with tacksmen to send the hoggs for wintering away from the island?—In general it is.

6755. But you have wintered them at home, as you say. Now is it because your pasture is superior to the pasture on the big farms?—No, because we were not able to pay for wintering; we would not be able to pay the expenses of the wintering, and we left them at home, so that it would be better for us if they would leave.

6756. Well, with regard to the tacksmen's land, do you think if they cultivated the arable land, they would be able to winter their hoggs at home? if the tacksmen cultivate the arable land in their holdings, would they be able to winter their hoggs at home?—Well, I believe they would be better able, anyway.

6757. They cultivate very little of the land?—Very little.

6758. But you have been improving your pasture, have you not?—Yes, by cultivating.

6759. And that helps to winter your hoggs?—It does, a good bit. We have some green land on both sides of the township, that we have been taking in, sometimes for five years, and sometimes for ten; a piece here, now and again, and we have finer grasses.

6760. And they have been cultivated?—Yes.

6761. Mr Macleod.—The fishing in Loch Slapin when the fish do come in there is particularly profitable, is it not?—Particularly.

6762. You get the fish close inshore, and with very little trouble, and close to your houses?—Yes, but we have bad access to the markets, and we always get low prices. If we could get good prices, we could live quite comfortably, sometimes.

6763. But you would not say that the fish could be got as easily in the average of places as it could be got in Loch Slapin, or at such a small expense in the way of material?—No, not for the last few years, anyway.

6764. The Chairman.—The Torrin crofters, as I take it from what you say, have always been accustomed to trust a good deal to the sea?—Yes, they have.

6765. And would they be reluctant to leave the sea-shore, do you think?—Well, I think they would; that is my opinion.

6766. You do not think that any of them would be willing to try a croft inland, and away from the sea altogether?—I do not know; but I think it is the general feeling.

6767. What is the general feeling?—I think the general feeling is, that they would rather be near the sea.

6768. Taking their livelihood partly from the sea, and partly from their crofts?—Exactly.

6769. That is what they have been always accustomed to?—Exactly.

6770. Is it herring fishing or white fishing?—Mostly herring fishing; there is cod and ling fishing in the springtime.

6771. Is it generally good?—There are very few try it. I have been at it for the last thirty years mostly, trying it every year, but some years to very little profit.

6772. Are some of the Torrin crofters away at the herring fishing now?—No.

6773. Are they going?—I do not know. I was myself at the East Coast fishing for about thirty years, but for the last eight or nine years there was a great failure in it, and the men on the East Coast were going in crews themselves, and there was not so much demand for hired hands.

6774. They had no room for you?—No. They were going four or five themselves, into a crew.

Lachlan Mackinnon.

LACHLAN MACKINNON, Cottar, Torrin (60).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

6775. The Chairman.—Do you pay any rent?—No.

6776. You are a cottar; are you situated on one of the crofters' holdings?—No, it is on the township grazing.

6777. How long have you been living there?—About thirty-three or thirty-four years.

6778. Have you any stock?—I have a cow and a stirk.

6779. And do you pay anything for the grazing of the cow and stirk?—I pay £1 a year.

6780. To whom?—To the township, and besides I pay for wintering nearly £3.

6781. Have you any sheep?—Three sheep.

6782. Are you desirous of obtaining a new holding, if it can be got?—Yes.

6783. Are you able to point us to any land that would be suitable?—I would like to remain near Torrin.

6784. Near the sea?—Yes.

6785. What sort of holding have you in view?—I would be for 6 acres of arable land.

6786. And what stock have you in view?—Two cows and 40 sheep.

6787. Is there suitable land near where you are, for such a holding?—Yes.

6788. Where?—Kilbride is the nearest place to me, or on the Strathaird estate.

6789. You mean near Kilbride House?—Yes.

6790. How far from it?—About quarter of a mile.

6791. Now, could you take such a holding and pay the fair rent without assistance from the outside?—If I could get time to stock it.

6792. How long?—In a year or two.

6793. I think there are eight cottars in the township, aren't there?—Yes.

6794. Did you use to go to the fishing when you were younger?—No.

6795. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You say that you might be able to stock a new holding in a year or two. I want to know if you would have to borrow the money for it?—No, I have a strong family, earning.

6796. Are they working away in the South—in the Lowlands?—Yes, one of them is in Glasgow, and the other is in England.

Neil Grant.

NEIL GRANT, Fisherman, Kilbride (50)—examined.

6797. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No, a fisherman, styled so.

6798. Do you pay any rent where you live?—Well, I live upon a croft, but I am not directly a tenant, or a crofter. I live upon a croft in Torrin. Broadford Skye. Neil Grant.

6799. Whose croft do you live upon?—I live with my father-in-law.

6800. What is his name?—Charles Mackenzie.

6801. Do you pay him a rent?—No, not of any kind.

6802. But any assistance?—Yes.

6803. Can you tell us of any land near you available for new holdings?—Oh yes, plenty; plenty of land. Five townships have been cleared within my own memory, in the parish.

6804. What are their names?—Keppoch, Feaulin, Arinacreige, Suisnish, and Boreraig.

6805. They were all cleared in your recollection?—Yes, it was in my own memory.

6806. And do you say there are lands where these townships stood that would be suitable?—Yes, of course there are; they were inhabited before.

6807. And you think they might be inhabited again?—Certainly.

6808. To a profit?—Yes, to a profit.

6809. What kind of land is it now; is it grazing land?—Yes, grazing; pasture land, there is nothing else.

6810. What size of holding would you like to obtain?—We cannot look for equal holdings; it is a matter of taste.

6811. I am speaking of your own holding?—Well, I would say, 10 to 12 acres, or 10 acres arable.

6812. And what more?—Outrun for 4 cattle—4 cows.

6813. And followers?—I believe that is a misunderstood term among delegates here, because they do not know what it means.

6814. Any sheep?—Yes, between 60 and 70 sheep

6815. Could you pay the rent of a holding such as that?—Well, give us a chance first, and then we will look for the means; the means will provide themselves.

6816. But you have not the means at present; is that what you say?—Partly; we have some stock, and we would add to it, and they would increase.

6817. What stock have you got?—Three cows.

6818. And what more?—That is all.

6819. But could you put up the buildings and get the additional stock without some assistance?—Yes, we would; the question is, the getting it.

6820. Getting the land, you mean?—Yes.

6821. You describe yourself as a fisherman?—I do.

6822. Would you be unwilling to leave the seashore?—I would not.

6823. You would like to get away from it?—Yes, I am tired of it; sick tired of it.

6824. It is not paying?—No, it is very unremunerative business, now-a-days.

6825. Have you a share of a boat?—Yes.

6826. But you would be willing to give that up?—Yes.

6827. And devote yourself entirely to the cultivation of a croft?—Yes.

6828. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You say that in the townships you have named, those who lived there before were people who had crofts, and they might live there again?—Yes.

6829. How did they maintain themselves before—by sheep?—No, not by stock; it is by the produce of the land; it was a self-supporting country about a hundred years ago, until after the passing of the Corn Law, and the sheep-farming system played the mischief with the Highlands, and sent them away altogether out of their own country.

6830. But I want to know about the produce of the land. Why do you think they would be able to live on the produce of the land on these townships now, at present prices?—Yes.

6831. Why do you think so?—Because they would live upon the produce.

6832. They would live upon the produce?—Of course they would.

6833. But then they would have nothing over?—I cannot say. It depends on the markets.

6834. But as markets are now?—Well, you must assimilate the rent with the prices.

6835. That is to say, when prices are bad, there must be no rent?—When prices are bad, there will be a low rent, on that account.

6836. And in a good year, do you think the rent ought to go high?—No, unless you adopt the sliding scale for it.

6837. Do you think it should be?—Well, I think it should be.

6838. Do you think that would work?—Yes.

6839. But then, on a holding of the size you mention, there would not be much over?—No; well, they would be self-supporting; they would not be going to the poorhouse, as they are now. We are only rearing beggars and paupers—breeding pauperism.

6840. But you do not see any way in which they could pay for the land?—Pay for the land! Why not? It is the land that pays for itself, not the people that are on it.

6841. But to get on it at all—would they be able to pay any rent for it; supposing they had an advance from Government, would they be able to repay it?—They would be able easily to repay it.

6842. Why are you so sure of it, when you say that in bad times they would only be able to maintain themselves?—Interest comes down in bad times, the same as other things; the Government would have to assimilate their interest with the times.

6843. The interest on the loan would not go up and down with the times. It would be a fixed quantity?—Well, it seems the landlords have the laws of the Medes and Persians still.

6844. The landlords sometimes lower their rents in bad times?—Yes.

6845. But if you were dealing, not with a landlord, but with a sum of money advanced by the Government, you would not find the Government lowering the loan on account of bad times?—What is the Government, but the representatives of the nation?

6846. Well, a bargain is a bargain, and if you borrow the money from the Government, you would have to repay a part every year?—Do you think the Government would act the part of the unjust judge?

6847. I am afraid it would be a rather hard judge?—I would rather trust to the tender mercy of the Government than to the tender mercy of the landlords, for we know too much of them.

6848. Mr Sutherland.—What distance are you from the sea at the present time?—A quarter of a mile, or thereabout.

6849. And with regard to the question of the self-sustaining croft: do you expect that, in any circumstances, you would have anything over after supporting your family. For instance, you would not expect to eat all the sheep in one year, would you?—No, we would eat a few of them. We did not eat very much beef for a good many years past, only that we got some cast ewes last year, because stock was not saleable.

6850. With regard to this question of stock, do you think there would be a natural increase of stock by itself?—Yes, if the land was capable of holding it; the stock must be in proportion to the land.

6851. But you would have no fear that you would have been able to pay a fair rent fixed by an impartial tribunal and interest on money if you got money advanced to you?—Not the least. The produce would support us.

6852. And have you any idea as to the interest that the Government charges?—2½ or 3 per cent.

6853. About 3 per cent.?—Yes.

6854. So you think there would be a good prospect of repaying that in the event of you getting it, as well as a reasonable rent?—I have no doubt of it; it is my firm conviction.

6855. Have you any knowledge of money having been advanced to landlords to improve land before?—Yes.

6856. What do you know about it?—It was done here.

6857. And do you know the conditions upon which that money was advanced?—No, but I know conditions on which they dealt with their crofters.

6858. That is what I wish to know. The landlords were made the mediums through which the money was paid, and they made certain bargains with the tenants about it?—Yes.

6859. Do you know what these bargains were?—That they were to be paid for twenty-five years.

6860. Can you tell us what the rate of interest was?—I was too young at the time.

6861. Do you know if there is any difference between the rate the landlord charged and the rate the Government charged?—I think the landlords charged 5 per cent. to improve the land for themselves.

6862. I am afraid you are not referring to the same thing. You mean where the landlord advances his own money?—No, I know no instance of that.

6863. You know instances of where the landlord received money from Government and advanced that money to the tenants?—Yes.

6864. And are you sure he charged 5 per cent.?—I cannot give a definite answer to that question.

6865. Mr Gordon.—What rent would you be prepared to pay for a croft to keep 4 cows and their followers and 40 or 50 sheep?—How many acres arable of land?

6866. You said 10 yourself, I think.—I would say the arable land for 10s. per acre, and 10s. or 15s. for every cow.

6867. You would not charge yourself with a land rent and the cows too?—And 1s. 6d. for every sheep.

6868. I'm afraid you have rather a big bill. 10s. per acre comes to £5 and adding £6 comes to £11.—Yes.

6869. I am afraid that would be rather much?—Well, it depends on the rent; the rent must be according to the price of stock, or the price of produce.

6870. Mr Munro.—You have told us that fishing is very unremunerative?—Yes.

6871. How is it more unremunerative here than elsewhere? To what do you attribute the unremunerative nature of the fishing?—Just to supply and demand; the supply is in excess of the demand.

6872. I understand from that that you have not a ready outlet for your fish?—No ready market.

6873. If you had a ready market it would be remedied?—Yes, we send out fish to the South.

6874. In answer to Mr Shaw Stewart you stated that if the Government advanced you money you could repay it by easy instalments?—Yes.

6875. Did I also understand you to say that if you got more land you thought you would get on without any outside assistance?—Yes.

6876. Therefore, any question of loans in your case does not arise?—Yes.

6877. The Chairman.—Suppose you got a croft of the size you have been describing—10 acres arable and so forth—do you feel confident that you could take such a holding and meet the rent without assistance from somewhere else?—Well, I daresay.

6878. In average years?—Oh, well, we cannot speak for the future.

6879. What would you expect to be able to do in a series of average years—that you could take the holding and pay the rent, or would you require assistance from somewhere else?—The question is very difficult to answer.

6880. I would like you to endeavour to answer it?—Stock was unsaleable last year.

6881. But I am talking of the average year?—Oh, well, for the past you know——

6882. Never mind the past, I am speaking of average years in the future?—Well, if we are to assimilate the future with the past——

6883. I am asking you to take an average. You would expect to carry on such a holding without assistance?—Well, I don't know about the stocking.

6884. You think you might need assistance for the stocking?—Yes, assistance for the stocking.

6885. And what about the buildings?—The building would go on; plenty of lime and stone here.

6886. But you would require assistance?—Not the least.

6887. Mr Alexander Macdonald.—I would like to ask a question.

6888. The Chairman.—I thought you were representing Strathaird?

6889. Mr Macdonald.—But he is talking of Strathaird; he has been trespassing on my ground.

6890. The Chairman.—At least he has been referring to it.

6891. Mr Macdonald (to witness).—Did you say that you would have been able yourself to stock such a holding as you have described?—Well, give me the chance first to do it; break up the land.

6892. But do you say that you would be able yourself to stock such a holding or not—give a definite answer, please?—Yes?

6893. You have the money, have you?—That is no other man's business.

6894. You have come here to answer our questions, you have put yourself forward to answer questions?—If they are relevant I will answer them.

6895. The Chairman.—The relevancy will be decided by us; I think the question here is fair enough?—I would not be able to stock it without external aid.

6896. Mr Macdonald.—You would have to borrow the money?—Well, perhaps.

6897. The Chairman.—Would you, or would you not?—Part of it.

6898. Mr Macdonald.—Now you say that you have some money?—Well, I did not say that.

6899. You do not say it now?—Nor before.

6900. Do you say you have any money?—Yes, I have some money in my pocket here.

6901. Enough to buy the ground? You have set yourself forward as a delegate to answer. Have you got any money, have you got £10?

6902. The Chairman.—I think the fair question is, has he money to stock a holding suppose he got one?

6903. Mr Macdonald.—He said not. I asked if he had got £10; if it is not relevant, I won't press it. (To witness) But the money that you have got, is it by fishing that you made it?

6904. The Chairman.—I put the question in this shape; do you mainly subsist by means of fishing?—Yes, for the most part.

6905. Mr Macdonald.—Now, with reference to the Keppoch field and Arinacreige which you mentioned, are these on the property of Sir William Mackinnon, and not on the property of Lord Macdonald on which you live?—They are on the property of Sir William Mackinnon.

6906. Does Loch Slapin divide you from these places that you have mentioned? Does it lie between you and them?—Yes, it does.

6907. Are you of opinion that the people at Keppoch were living before, and that people could live there comfortably again?—Why not?

6908. The Chairman.—Were they living comfortably before, do you know?—Well, they were according to the times; but there was the failure of the potato crop.

6909. Mr Macdonald.—Are you aware that the people that were living at Keppoch completely failed to be able to live there, and at the same time pay their debts or rents? Are you aware that the people at Keppoch completely failed to live there and at the same time pay their debts; do you understand that?—No, they were put away from there.

6910. But are you aware?—I do not know of such a thing.

6911. Are you aware that at the time the people of Keppoch were living there the arrears were as follows:—Katherine Robertson, £4, 9s.; Norman Cameron, £22, 6s. 9d.; Ewen Macinnes, £39, 11s. 4d.; Norman Mackinnon, £6, 8s. 8d.; John Mackenzie, £1, 11s. 10d.; William Grant, £31, 14s. 3d.; and a large number besides in arrear with whose names I shall not trouble the Commission. They were years behind with their rent. Are you aware of that?—No, I did not know their liabilities.

6912. Therefore, don't you think it would be wiser for you to keep to the property to which you belong?

6913. The Chairman.—Stop a moment, that is an argument? That is not a question of fact.

6914. Mr Macdonald.—I will ask this question: are they casting their eyes across and coveting the Strathaird property?

6915. The Chairman.—I will not allow that question.

6916. Mr Macdonald.—Well, I will not use the word 'covet.' I will say, are they casting a longing eye?

6917. The Chairman.—I do not allow the phrase—'a longing eye.'

6918. Mr Macdonald.—I will put it any way you like.

6919. The Chairman.—Ask him with regard to matters of fact.

6920. Mr Macdonald.—The people of Torrin have already over and over again come across and in opposition to the remonstrances of Sir William Mackinnon and his factor and his tenants, taken away the seaware of the Strathaird estates.

6921. The Chairman.—We cannot go into a subject of that nature. A charge of theft cannot be prosecuted before this tribunal.

6922. Mr Macdonald.—Have not charges of theft been made by the Procurator Fiscal already?

6923. The Chairman.—I disallow that question.

6924. Mr Mackintosh, Factor for Lord Macdonald.—Have you any more information as to the state of the people of Suisnish and Boreraig that you have in regard to the people of Keppoch?

6925. The Chairman.—You had better put a specific question.

6926. Mr Mackintosh.—I am not going to ask unless he is better informed. He said there were so many tenants removed from Suisnish and Boreraig; does he know anything of their circumstances?

6927. The Chairman (to witness).—The question put to you is this. Do you know anything of the circumstances of the tenants of Suisnish and Boreraig prior to their removal?—I know that some of the Boreraig crofters went of their own accord; they were willing to leave; but the Suisnish people were put away against their will, and that at the point of the bayonet by sheriff officers and emergency men.

6928. But do you know anything of their circumstances?—Well, we must look to the times; the failure of the potato was a cause of it.

6929. You think they were in backward circumstances, but you say that was owing to the times?—Yes, they had not got over the famine.

6930. Mr Mackintosh.—They were also deep in arrear of rent to such an extent that there would be no difficulty at the present day in clearing the whole township.

FARQUHAR KELLY, Crofter, Heast (47)—examined.

6931. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter or a cottar?—I am a crofter.

6932. Do you occupy one-half of lot 2, Heast?—Yes.

6933. I see the holding extends to 2 acres 2 roods 16 poles arable, 1 acre 0 rood 27 poles outrun; 3013 acres grazing common to the township, divided into thirteen shares, of which you hold half a share; your old rent was £5, 4s., and your fair rent £3, 10s.?—Yes.

6934. Can you give us any information with reference to available land for crofts?—Yes; there are some in the two townships of Boreraig and Suisnish in our neighbourhood.

Broadford, Skye.

Farquhar Kelly.

6935. The lands of Suisnish and Boreraig?—Yes.

6936. Any others?—Well, I believe Kinloch also.

6937. That is going towards Isleornsay?—Yes.

6938. Any others?—Swordale, I believe.

6939. Is that all?—Yes, that is all I am acquainted with.

6940. Do you think the lands you have mentioned on these places are all available for arable land?—Some of it—some for pasture, and some for cultivation.

6941. Mr Macleod.—How many crofters are in Heast?—There are thirteen crofts and five of them are in halves.

6942. That is eighteen families?—Yes, eighteen families.

6943. How many cottars?—One.

6944. Do you belong to the township of Heast yourself? Were you born there?—No, I was born in Boreraig.

6945. Are there many of your name in this part of the country?—Not many; there are some in Sleat.

6946. Where did they originally come from?—I could not say: I was told that my race came along with a Lady Macdonald from County Antrim in Ireland in about the year 1400.

6947. With regard to the township of Heast you say that you are marching on the one side with Boreraig and Suisnish?—With Boreraig only.

6948. And are you marching with Kinloch?—Yes, part of it.

6949. And is there a sufficiency of arable land in the township of Heast, supposing that there were only one family to each of the crofts?—No, the crofts are not sufficient for one.

6950. How about the hill pasture, have you got any sheep upon it?—Yes.

6951. Is it in a club stock?—Yes.

6952. Exactly the same as Torrin?—Yes.

6953. Then do you think that you could profitably occupy more hill-grazing than you have at present?—Yes, it is for that purpose that I came here. There were 419 acres of our hill-grazing taken from us by the Crofters Commission the time they were here.

6954. The Chairman.—We cannot go into that; we do not revise the judgments of the Crofters Commission.

6955. Mr Macleod.—Do you say that the crofters at Heast only desire an extension of hill pasture, that they don't want new holdings—or do you mean that they want both?—There will be some of them will do so, but it was only for the grazing that I was sent here.

6956. And they think that they could profitably use a larger area of hill-grazing than they have got at the present time?—Yes.

6957. Now with regard to the farm of Kinloch, could a portion of it be conveniently added to the township of Heast?—Not very conveniently.

6958. Boreraig lies very conveniently?—Yes.

6959. There is no other farm that lies near the hill-grazing of Heast?—None, excepting Kinloch and Boreraig.

6960. And Boreraig would be the most suitable for an extension, supposing there was an extension?—Yes. There is a part of it that they wanted called Peighinn. It is separated from the other part of Boreraig by a burn, a ravine.

6961. A sort of natural march?—Yes.

6962. How many acres would there be in that?—I have no idea. And it is completely divided from the rest of Boreraig from hill to shore by this burn.

6963. Now tell me about the club stock: how many sheep will you have on Heast?—Over 500.

6964. Do you winter the hoggs at home?—Yes.

6965. Is it a black-faced stock?—Yes.

6966. Did you have any profit last year, did you sell any sheep?—We sold the old sheep, wedders, and shot lambs. We also sold the wool.

6967. You had not to pay in any money, had you?—No, we cleared ourselves, low as the prices were.

Broadford, Skye.

Farquhar Kelly.

6968. And you have no doubt found the sheep stock of great assistance to you?—Yes.

6969. And you think that the club stock is the fairest to all parties?—Oh, certainly.

6970. And you would have no difficulty with regard to the management of it?—No, none.

6971. Now you have heard the opinion expressed to-day by a witness from Torrin that he saw no difficulty supposing that there were a very much larger number of sheep to manage, and a very much larger number of crofters interested in them; do you think any difficulty would arise? Supposing there were a larger number of crofters about a sheep stock, and that the sheep stock was say 2000, do you think there would be any more difficulty than with 500?—I think there would be more difficulty; but if they gave the management into the hands of two or three men, it should not be more difficult.

6972. You think it would be quite within the capacity of three men to manage such a large stock as that?—Yes.

6973. Mr Gordon.—What land is there in Kinloch that you think would be suitable for crofters?—The low-lying land, in view from the road that goes to Isleornsay, the left-hand side.

6974. By the shepherd's house?—Yes. The whole land from the shepherd's house down to the sea has been cultivated.

6975. How many crofts would you expect to get in there?—I think it should make four; I never looked at the thing.

6976. Would not the low land require to be drained?—Oh yes, parts of it.

6977. But the whole of it would, would it not?—No. There is a good deal of the land on the hillside down there that I think would not require much draining.

6978. But that is not arable land?—I mean the decline, the higher ground.

6979. You say you march with Kinloch, but it is a very small neck?—Yes.

6980. Would you prefer the extension of your grazings towards Boreraig rather than Kinloch?—Yes.

6981. What do you call that burn?—Allt-na-Peighinn.

6982. Have you any notion of the extent of ground between that burn and your present march?—It is fully half a mile broad.

6983. It is about 600 acres, I think, is it not?—About two miles or a mile and three quarters.

6984. Say a mile and a half by half a mile. There are about 600 acres, would that be enough?—Well, we thought that very convenient; it is cut off from the other part of Boreraig by the burn; it forms a natural march which would require very little fencing.

6985. Mr Sutherland.—You say that you were born at Boreraig?—I was.

6986. Do you know anything about the circumstances under which the people were put out of Boreraig of which we have heard something?—I have heard of it; I do not by my own experience know much of it, for I was very young at the time.

6987. But what did you hear about the state of the people before they came to Heast?—I know they were in circumstances the same as their neighbours round about them. The circumstances of the people here about that time were not so good as now.

6988. Any more than in any other parts of the country? I mean that the same circumstances existed relatively there as in other parts of the country?—Yes.

6989. But were they as well of as they are in Heast now?—No, I do not think they were.

6990. And were they as well of at that time as they were in the other townships here about?—I think they were.

6991. What was done with the townships of Bore-oadford, ye.

rquhar lly.

raig and Suisnish after the people were cleared out of them?—They were let to some tenant as a sheep farm.

6992. Were the people cleared for the purpose of making a sheep farm?—Well, I cannot say they were.

6993. But looking to the result.—Yes.

6994. The people were not thinned, and some of them left?—First of all some of them went to Australia, and those that were left were scattered here and there through other parts of Strath. They were put out of their houses there.

6995. And the land was made into a sheep farm?—Yes. My father was about the last in the place—the second last, I think.

6996. The Chairman.—Have there been any new houses put up in Heast of late years?—Yes.

6997. Within the last six or eight years?—Yes.

6998. How many?—One, I think, and there is another in the course of erection.

6999. Within what time were these put up?—About five years since the first was built.

7000. Mr. Mackintosh.—Did not those people who were removed from Suisnish and Boreraig, who did not go to Australia or elsewhere, get similar holdings on Lord Macdonald's property?—Did not they all get some place to go to?—No.

7001. Were any of them left without a place at all?—Yes.

7002. Did you see the farm of Suisnish and Boreraig advertised to let about eight years ago—offered to be let to nine tenants?—No.

7003. You did not see it advertised?—No.

7004. Did you ever hear that it was offered to be let to nine tenants?—I never did hear how many tenants. I heard it was offered to tenants.

7005. It is the case that Lord Macdonald was prepared to let Suisnish and Boreraig at that time, and to treat with them for the stock which his lordship had to take over at valuation from the outgoing tenant.

7006. The Chairman.—He does not know anything about it apparently.

onald acarthur.

DONALD MACARTHUR, Fisherman, Luib—examined.

7007. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—No. I am a fisherman.

7008. Do you pay any rent?—Yes.

7009. What rent do you pay?—5s. a year.

7010. To Lord Macdonald?—Yes.

7011. Were you brought up as a fisherman?—Yes.

7012. And you subsist entirely in that way?—Yes.

7013. Do you go as a yachtsman at all?—No, but I have been sometime at sea, in a sailing vessel.

7014. How many years have you been at sea?—Two years.

7015. And have you a share of a boat?—Yes, two or three of them.

7016. Have you some boats of your own?—Yes.

7017. How many?—Three.

7018. Three of your own?—Not exactly of my own, but I have shares in three.

7019. Have you any of your own?—No.

7020. What is the size of these boats?—One of them is 15 feet, another 18, and another 24 feet keel.

7021. You go to the herring fishing?—Yes.

7022. And also to the white fishing?—Yes.

7023. What is it you desire to say to us, with regard to the land?—Well, about 5 or 6 acres of land; I will be pleased with that amount of arable land.

7024. But do you wish to give up the sea?—No.

7025. Do you wish to continue to depend mainly upon the sea for your livelihood?—Yes.

7026. But you want a small holding by the seashore?—Yes.

7027. With 5 acres or so of arable, and some grazing?—Yes. Broadford, Skye.

7028. But I suppose I am right in thinking that you do not wish a holding so large as would interfere with your carrying on your trade of a fisherman?—No. Donald Macarthur.

7029. Is there land near where you are that would be suitable?—Yes, there is a small spot over the head of Loch Ainort.

7030. That is at Kinloch-Ainort?—Yes.

7031. In the Deer Forest?—Yes.

7032. Your notion is that a holding there would be suitable?—Yes.

7033. Mr. Macleod.—You said that you would like a holding of 5 or 6 acres. There would not be much land at Kinloch Ainort?—No, but I think there would be as much as would make that much. Of course there is plenty land in the Island of Scalpay.

7034. Anywhere else?—Down nearer, about Corry there.

7035. But not in your own immediate neighbourhood?—Oh, there is another nice spot about Strollamus farm.

7036. That you think would be suitable for the sort of holdings?—Yes.

7037. And that would still be quite convenient to the fishing?—Yes.

7038. And if you and your neighbours got such holdings as you have spoken of, I daresay they would be able to put up the necessary buildings, and get the little stock that you would require?—The most of them would not.

7039. But you have got considerable means yourself, having a share in all these boats. Are the others as well off?—No.

7040. Not as well off as you are, speaking generally?—No.

7041. And you do not think they would be able even to take a small 5 or 6 acres croft with some hill grazing, without some assistance?—No.

7042. Do you think they would be able to repay a loan, if it were made to them?—If the fishing was successful; but the fishing has forsaken the district, since a good number of years.

7043. The Chairman.—You are not making so much out of it?—No, not in our own district, but we do on the west side of Loch Slapin.

7044. You have to go round there to do it?—Yes. And about Loch Hourn, and Loch Scavaig.

7045. As a matter of fact, you have found that in prosecuting the fishing, if you are to make a profitable thing of it, you must go away from home?—Yes.

7046. For considerable periods?—Yes.

7047. And you have no fear but you would be able to pay up the instalments of a loan if it were made to you?—No.

7048. If the fishing were successful on an average of years?—Well, I think we could.

7049. Mr Munro.—I was rather surprised to hear you say that you and the bulk of your acquaintance would not be able to take a small croft without outside assistance, in the shape of money advance?—Well, some of them have only got small boats, and they cannot go fishing far off, now that the fishing has forsaken our place for a good number of years. Of course, we have got that bigger boat last season; we have not done anything yet, but we are in hopes that we shall be able to do something yet.

7050. From whom do you think assistance should come?—Unless it would come from the Government, I do not know of any other way.

7051. But what security could you give the Government for any advance?—I could not give an answer to that question.

7052. How do you know that you would be able to repay the loan, if you got such a loan from Government?—I think there is not a year during the last three or four years when we would not have been able to repay it.

7053. Did I understand you to say in answer to

Broadford, Skye.

Donald Macarthur.

Mr. Macleod that if the fishing were good you would be able to repay the instalments?—Yes.

7054. But suppose the fishing were bad, what would happen?—We would do it some other way.

7055. You know it is a very easy matter to contract a debt, but it is not easy to get out of it?—No, it is not.

7056. Do you not think, now, that if land were offered to you, you could stock it, and build your own houses, without outside assistance, just as many other crofters would?—I do not mean to say about the houses, but I think we could stock a small lot.

7057. You have referred to Scalpay as affording an excellent field for the migration of crofters?—Yes.

7058. Would the crofters be able to take the stock of 1800 sheep which are there, and pay for them?—No, I am afraid they would not be able to do anything of the kind.

7059. Without assistance?—Without assistance.

7060. Mr Shaw Stewart.—In what capacity have you been at sea?—Before the mast.

7061. I want to ask you one or two questions to find your general opinion about fishing. Do you think the transport of fish could be improved in the south and west of Skye?—Well, I don't know.

7062. If there was a railway to Mallaig, for instance?—Yes, of course, if there was any handy convenience for the English market there would be more money got for the herring in these corners.

7063. The fish are there but the transport fails?—Yes.

7064. Well, now, I want to ask you this. Speaking of any fisherman in the south of Skye whose chief profession was fishing, would he not be better off with a small patch of potatoes, and live entirely by the fishing, with nothing but his potatoes to look after at odd times, rather than go in for a croft of some acres of arable and some hill pasture?—No, I don't think so.

7065. I want your general opinion, would you mind telling me why you think not?—Because he could turn some odd time or another to the land when he could not to the fishing.

7066. At what time of year?—Through the winter time. There is not much fishing going on here through the winter time.

7067. You really think that a fisherman who is making a good thing fishing will have time to attend to a small croft and hill pasture?—Yes.

7068. And that it would be a benefit to him?—Yes.

7069. Even with rent to pay and bad times and failure of stock and that kind of thing?—Yes.

7070. You say at present you have to go some way from home for good fishing?—Yes.

7071. Where do you go to?—Round to Loch Hourn and anywhere about the west of Sleat.

7072. That is not a very great distance?—It is about forty miles.

7073. And you think that if there was better transport for the fishing you would be able to do as well as the East Coast fishermen do who come round to Skye?—I really do not know.

7074. Why do the East Coast fishermen do so well to make it worth their while to come round to the west of Skye?—Because they have more capital, and the accommodation is better, and they have more gear to work the boats.

7075. The Chairman.—Have you seen cases of men whose crofts were so large that they had to attend to the croft when they should have been at sea fishing; or were at sea fishing when the croft required their attention?—No.

7076. Now you mentioned 5 acres arable, would that not be rather large for a man who depended on the sea for his livelihood?—Yes, for an old man, but we are three or four young strong fellows.

7077. Are you brothers?—Yes.

7078. How many brothers have you?—Four, besides myself.

7079. That is, five in all?—Yes.

7080. And do you all live together?—No, there are two of them in England. Broadford, Skye.

7081. How many are living at home?—Three.

7082. Counting yourself?—Yes. Donald Macarthur.

7083. And when you speak of 5 acres arable you mean that one of your number would be looking after the croft and the stock while the other two were fishing?—Yes.

7084. But suppose this case, that you were alone as a fisherman, or you and one brother; would you be able to cultivate a croft of that size and carry on the fishing successfully?—I think I could, if my health could stand it.

7085. But don't you think there is a danger in a fisherman getting too large a croft if he wishes to depend on the sea?—I think there is, unless he were clear of the fishing altogether.

7086. But I suppose it is your opinion that if he depended on the fishing it would be necessary that he should have a small croft, and devote his time mainly to the sea?—Yes.

PETER ROBERTSON, Cottar, Luib (31). Peter Robertson.
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

7087. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter or a fisherman or what?—A cottar.

7088. And do you pay rent?—No rent.

7089. Did you hear the evidence of Macarthur?—Yes.

7090. And do you agree with it?—Yes.

7091. Have you any land?—No land.

7092. How do you live?—By fishing.

7093. Do you fish along with Macarthur?—I fish along with two other young men, not with Macarthur.

7094. What are their names?—Angus Mackinnon and John Mackinnon: one of them has land—John Mackinnon.

7095. Can you tell us of land available for a holding near where you are?—About Loch-Ainort there is some, and there is a bit at Strollamus, also at Scalpay.

7096. These are lands that have been mentioned already?—Yes, these are all that are near the sea.

7097. And do you agree with the evidence that has been given with regard to these portions of land?—Yes.

7098. Do you wish to make any addition to the statements made already?—I have only the same language to repeat which the other young men spoke.

7099. Mr Munro.—With reference to the question of fishing, Mr. Macarthur stated that the difficulty in prosecuting the fishing on the Skye coast is mainly owing to the lack of good boats and fishing gear?—Yes, there are no good boats.

7100. If you had good boats and quick means of conveying the fish to the Southern markets, could you prosecute it successfully then?—Yes, if there was fishing and good prices; many a one who was at the fishing with good gear did not succeed.

7101. Mr Macleod.—How many are paying rent in Luib?—I think about eighteen.

7102. And how many cottars, like yourself, that pay no rent?—Ten cottars, in addition to the eighteen.

7103. Are you aware whether there was any application made from the township of Luib for a loan for fishing-boats or fishing-gear, under the Crofters Act?—No, I am not aware.

7104. Is your view that even supposing they had boats and gear the fishing might not serve as a means of livelihood?—That will be just in accordance with the fishing that there might be.

7105. What is your view about the fishing along this coast: do you mean to say that there is good fishing and that they don't take advantage of it, while East Coast fishers do; or do you mean that there is so little fishing that it only pays for a few East Coast boats to come and do it?—The fishing is good enough as long as it lasts; but it does not last long, and sometimes when the fishing is there, there is no price.

7106. So that the fishing is not such a very good thing after all?—The people are trying to make their living by it.

7107. The Chairman.—Do East Coast boats come to your quarter?—Yes, plenty.

7108. How many on an average in the season?—For the last two years there would be about a hundred East Coast boats during autumn.

7109. And do they come every season?—Some of them come every year, and there are some that never leave our coast at all.

7110. Are there always East Coast boats going about your quarter?—Some one or two are constantly between this place and Portree.

7111. Are there any boats from your township of a similar size prosecuting the fishing along with the East Coast boats?—Yes, some West Coast boats fish along with the East Coast boats.

7112. Are the East Coast boats larger than the West Coast?—Yes, very much larger.

7113. And do they get the best fishing?—Yes, and then when these East Coasters come here the poor fishermen from this side won't get the chance of casting their nets among them.

7114. Why do West Coast men allow the East Coast fishermen to get the best of the fishing when you live on the ground?—They must allow them; they set the nets at high mid-day.

7115. But why don't the West Coast men set nets and go to fish with the same vigour as the East Coast men, who come a long distance?—Some of the West Coasters try to do the same thing.

7016. But not successfully?—Sometimes they succeed and sometimes not.

7117. But you say the East Coaster gets the best fishing; why do you allow him to get the best fishing when you are on the ground?—We cannot prevent them; we cannot keep the fishing from them.

7118. But why don't you try to rival their fishing?—We try to do that, but we are not succeeding.

7119. Why did you not succeed?—The nets which they employ are full of stones.

7120. With sinkers, you mean—Yes.

7121. Why don't you use similar nets then?—Sometimes that would answer, and at other times it would not.

7122. Is this the way of it, that they are able to put much more capital into the enterprise, and use much larger boats, and go to work more systematically than the West Coaster?—That is the reason; they have more fishing gear and better than we have.

7123. Mr Shaw Stewart asks me to put this question. Could the West Coast men not club together and get larger boats with better gear, so as to compete with the East Coasters?—Perhaps if they did that the matter would be worse than before.

7124. Why?—Many a reason.

7125. Give us one of the reasons?—Should one of the party in company stay at home one year and not succeed the next year he would leave; he would go away elsewhere.

7126. Mr Macleod.—I think you said that one of the reasons that the East Coast boats succeed better than the West Coast boats at the fishing, was that they put down their nets at mid-day; is that legal?—Good fishing is nowadays found in deep waters and stormy waters, where our smaller boats cannot venture.

7127. But did you not say that East Coast boats put down their herring nets at mid-day?—Sometimes they do, and if they get herring they would set the nets at any time.

7128. And do you know whether that is according to the law or not?—They leave the nets in our loch the whole day without lifting them at all; I cannot say whether it is legal or not.

7129. But the West Coast men do not do that, do they?—No.

7130. Why don't they do it?—They don't want to scare away the herring.

7131. Then in that sense you think that the West Coast men are better fishermen than the East Coast men?—Some of them are and some are not.

7132. But you are not willing to admit that the East Coast men are better fishermen than West Coast men?—No, nor so good; they are not so good fishermen, in my estimation, as the West Coast men would be if they had proper gearing.

7133. Do you think that sometimes the reason why the East Coast men succeed better than the West Coast men is that the East Coast men have less consideration for their neighbours in the matter of fishing?—Sometimes the East Coaster fishes to his own disadvantage, to his own loss as well as that of the West Coaster.

7134. Mr Sutherland.—Is it not the case that the East Coast fisherman is a fisherman all the year round, and follows the fish from place to place?—Yes, I am aware of that.

7135. And is it the case that when he is at home he has easy communication with the markets of the South, and gets a higher price than he could get here?—Yes, I am aware of that.

7136. And do you think that is one of the reasons why he has more capital than the West Coast fisherman?—Doubtless that is one reason why he is possessed of more capital; and he has bigger boats besides, and can follow the fishing wherever it is.

7137. Can you also affirm that the East Coast boats during the fishing season on the East Coast are almost entirely manned by West Coast fishermen?—Yes, I am aware of that.

7138. Of whom a great number are Skye men?—Yes, plenty.

7139. Are you aware further that the fishing has been so unremunerative on the East Coast of late years that those who used to be sole owners of boats are now only part owners of boats?—Yes, I know that to be the case also.

7140. Mr Maccallum.—Do you think that generally the East Coast fishermen make a profit off the fishing on the West Coast?—Some of them profit by their fishing here, and some of them return emptier than when they came.

7141. And do they make their profit principally on the East Coast?—Yes, on the East Coast.

7142. And they only come here when there is no fishing on the East Coast?—Yes, when there is no fishing there.

7143. And could they live by fishing here alone?—No, I do not believe they could live all the year round.

7144. Only a small number would succeed, you think?—Only a small number could live upon it all the year round.

7145. And you think, therefore, that the fishing on the East Coast is much superior to that on the West Coast?—It was better before now, at all events.

7146. The Chairman.—I would like to ask you this: you said to Mr. Sutherland, I think, in answer to one of his questions, that a considerable number of Skye men go as hired hands on the East Coast boats that fish on the West Coast?—Yes, before now they used to go in greater numbers than at present.

7147. Fishing on the West Coast?—Fishing on the East Coast.

7148. Do they go as hired hands on the West Coast?—Sometimes where there are big boats they employ natives.

7149. On the West Coast?—On the West Coast.

7150. Why should these natives go as hired hands on the East Coast boats fishing on the West Coast rather than have large boats of their own?—They would not get employment at home, because there are no big boats.

7151. Mr Alexander Macdonald.—Does not the much longer period for which the East Coast men have had railway facilities account for the accumula-

Broadford, Skye.

Peter Robertson.

tion of capital on the East Coast which has enabled them to buy boats?—They have had the opportunity of making money by the railways for a long time, and the West Coast people have not.

7152. Are you able to say whether in your judgment the establishment of a railway to Mallaig would greatly increase your facilities for the transport of fish?—Doubtless, but then Mallaig is far away from us here.

7153. Would it not be suitable?—If the fishing was near Mallaig.

7154. The Chairman.—A railway to Kyleakin would be an improvement, would it not?—Yes, it would be much better there.

Kenneth Macrae.

KENNETH MACRAE, Crofter, Dunan (60)—examined.

7155. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

7156. You have the half of lot 1?—Yes.

7157. I see the croft has 1 acre 0 roods 37 poles arable, 3 acres 3 roods 39 poles outrun, and 473 acres common grazing divided into eight full shares, of which you hold half a share. The former rent was £1, and the fair rent is also £1?—Yes.

7158. You have heard all the evidence given to-day?—Yes.

7159. Have you any addition to make?—Well, no, but I was sent here for the township; they were wanting more land.

7160. And I suppose the locality of the land has been mentioned already?—Oh yes, there are too many on the place.

7161. Do you subsist mainly by fishing?—Yes.

7162. Do you wish to give up the fishing?—No, I cannot.

7163. You are going to stick to the fishing?—I must; I have some gear, and if I dropped the fishing the gear would become useless.

7164. But you don't want to get a holding away from the sea?—No, I would like to get a holding near the sea.

7165. What size of holding?—Four acres arable.

7166. And some grazing?—Yes.

7167. And you think if you had four acres arable and some more grazing you would get along with your fishing?—Of course, I would get as much as would plant seed potatoes anyhow.

7168. How many crofters are there in Dunan?—There are eight crofters, and six of them occupy half crofts.

7169. Are there any cottars?—Yes.

7170. How many?—Three cottars looking for land, but more than that not looking for land.

7171. How many cottars altogether?—Five.

7172. Mr Maccallum.—Are there any new houses built at Dunan since the passing of the Act?—Yes.

7173. How many?—Three.

7174. How have they been able to put up these houses?—That is a thing I cannot tell; by working their way the best they could.

7175. The holdings are very small?—Very small.

7176. So they must have got the money for building these houses from elsewhere?—Of course; they have families in the South in service, &c.

7177. And those who go to the South are very mindful of the family they leave behind and send them money?—Yes.

7178. They send their savings home?—Yes.

7179. And the houses have been built in that way?—Yes, likely.

7180. Do you think that these houses would not have been put up if it were not for the security of the holdings?—Well, yes. Before the Act there was no use in putting up a house like that; they could not build houses before the Act in Sleat, because if they were sent out of the land they would get nothing for them.

7181. They have now been encouraged to build houses on account of the security which they have under the Act?—Likely.

Broadford, Skye.

Norman Macrae.

NORMAN MACRAE, Crofter and Fisherman, Dunan (58)—examined.

7182. The Chairman.—You are a crofter and fisherman at Dunan?—Yes.

7183. You have the half of lot 1?—Yes.

7184. The acreage is 2 acres 0 roods 30 poles arable, 2 acres 3 roods 15 poles outrun, half a share of 473 acres grazing divided into eight shares. The former rent was £1, 9s., and the fair rent is £1, 4s.?—Yes.

7185. Are you anxious to get a larger holding?—Yes, a few acres.

7186. But you live as a fisherman?—It is not long since I was a fisherman; I was sailing.

7187. How long have you been a fisherman?—Eleven years.

7188. And do you get your means of living mainly from the sea?—Not altogether.

7189. But mainly?—No.

7190. How do you get it?—Some of my family are at sea.

7191. And they send you help?—Yes.

7192. Is it a holding close to the sea or away from the sea that you want?—Close to the sea.

7193. You do not wish to give up the subsistence you obtain from the sea?—No.

7194. What size of holding have you in view?—Four or five acres arable.

7195. And some more grazing?—Some more grazing.

7196. Have you any stock?—Yes.

7197. What stock have you?—Two cows and two stirks.

7198. And no sheep?—A few sheep.

7199. In other words, you would be content with a holding of about twice the arable you have got and some more grazing, and continue the fishing?—Yes, if any one would leave in the township so that I could get the croft that was vacated, close to me. There are other four crofters wanting more land too.

7200. You are representing, I suppose, the township of Dunan?—Yes.

7201. And you state their views as well as your own?—Just so.

7202. What are the names of those other four crofters?—One of them spoke already.

7203. That is Kenneth Macrae?—Yes; and Lauchlan Macleod, Colin Mackinnon, and John Macpherson.

7204. And yourself?—And myself, also the two cottars.

7205. Their holdings are very much like your own, I suppose?—Well, they are still better than myself.

7206. But they are small?—They are small.

7207. Mr Sutherland.—In your opinion is the land of Scalpay suitable for holdings such as you have in your mind?—Well, it is pretty good, but still we would rather have Strollamus or down at Skinidin.

7208. Are the facilities for carrying on the fishing as good as in Dunan and Luib?—Yes, and it is handier for steamers.

7209. Mr Macleod.—You have some hill pasture at Dunan; would it be any advantage if you got more hill pasture, leaving you where you presently are?—Well, to be sure, but we lost some of our hill pasture last Commission, without anything on us.

7210. The Chairman.—We cannot go into that here.

7211. Mr Macleod.—You had more pasture at one time than you have now?—Yes, two years ago.

7212. And you think that you would be more comfortable than you are if you had an extension of your present grazing, even supposing you did not move?—Well, still it would be as much good to us yet as it was but for the march.

7213. But what I am saying is this, that supposing you had an extension of your present grazing would it be any advantage?—If we could get it; but they are close on all sides of us.

7214. Who?—Luib, and Strollamus, and Torrin.

Mr. Gordon.—That was black ground that you lost, was it not?—Yes.

7215. And it would not be possible, in fact, to give you an extension of your grazing?—No, not without breaking them.

7216. You would be going in on other crofter ground if there was an extension given to your grazing?—Yes.

7217. You do not march with the farm of Strollamus at all?—We used to march with the farm of Strollamus and Torrin.

7218. But you do not now?—We march with Strollamus and Luib.

7219. So that in order to give you any relief in Dunan, it would be necessary to take a number of you out of there?—Just so, and give us land elsewhere.

7220. Is there any land on the Strollamus farm that would be suitable?—Oh yes.

7221. And you think that you could make small holdings there that would suit along with the hill pasture?—Just so.

ALEXANDER MACLEOD, Crofter, Ardorch (70) —examined.

7222. The Chairman.—Your holding, I see, extends to 1 acre 3 roods 8 poles arable, 3 acres 0 roods 10 poles outrun, and a share of 325 acres divided into four shares. The former rent was £4, 2s., and the fair rent is £2, 10s. Your township is up at the point beside Scalpay?—Yes.

7223. And is there land near you that would be available?—Yes.

7224. Where is it?—It is about Strollamus that I would wish it, if I was to get a chance myself.

7225. I see you have only an acre and three-quarters; are you anxious to get away from Ardorch altogether?—Yes, if I could get a better chance. My father was once at Strollamus, and I was a while there myself.

7226. How long is it since you left it?—Forty years.

7227. Was there a township there?—It was an inn; and then a shooting lodge at the point there.

7228. Had your father the inn?—Yes.

7229. He was the innkeeper?—Yes, he was at that time.

7230. What extent of land had your father?—He had the land below the house, and the point, and below the road, and above the road, a bit of ground.

7231. Was the holding a good deal larger than the one you are in?—Oh yes, far larger.

7232. And would you like to get into a new holding similar in size to what your father had at the inn?—Yes, if I could get it.

7233. What stock did your father keep?—He kept only two cows at the inn, because it was let as a Tack; it belonged to Scalpay at that time; and he had a horse.

7234. You do not keep a horse now?—Oh no, I can walk myself where I am.

7235. Have you any sheep?—No, but there are some who have a few.

7236. How many crofters are in Ardorch?—There are five; two in one share, and three in full shares.

7237. And how many cottars?—There are three cottars.

7238. Are they crowded together, the crofters and cottars?—Indeed, ay, they are very near each other. It is but a small place, however.

7239. And it would be an improvement, in your judgment, if some of them were flitted to other places with larger holdings?—Suppose I was to stop where I am it would be that.

7240. Did you go to the fishing when you were younger?—Yes, and I am going to fish yet about the coast where I am. I am an old fisherman. If I was to get any support, I would rather this—I have a smart son that would like to get a skiff to buy, for he is a good fisherman. I don't ask anything of the land, but if I could get that boy land I would take it. My neighbours desire me to say the whole of them would take land if they could get it.

ALEXANDER GRANT, Seaman and Cottar, Ardorch (35)—examined.

7241. The Chairman.—You are a cottar. Do you pay any rent?—No; I pay a little dues.

7242. What dues do you pay?—Just the school rates and the poor rates, and the like of that.

7243. But do you pay any rent?—Not now; I used to.

7244. What is it you wish to tell us?—I wish to get a bit of land.

7245. Have you no land where you are?—No, not a bit; not a plot of land.

7246. Is your place at Ardorch rather crowded?—Yes.

7247. With crofters and cottars?—Yes, there are more cottars than crofters.

7248. How many cottars are there?—Five.

7249. And how many crofters?—Five.

7250. And is the land there worked out?—There is no land there in that ground; there is land in the neighbourhood of it.

7251. Where?—Strollamus and Corry and Scalpay, and these places.

7252. The land that we have been hearing other witnesses describe?—Yes, just the same land.

7253. And you agree with their evidence?—Not at all; I did not hear any evidence from the rest of them.

7254. But do you agree with what you did hear?—Oh yes.

7255. Do you wish to say anything more?—I wish to have about four acres.

7256. Your idea is a croft of four acres arable?—Yes.

7257. And some grazing?—Yes.

7258. Well, now, suppose you had a croft of that size, could you put stock upon it, and erect the buildings without assistance?—I would try to.

7259. Yes, but could you do it at present without assistance?—No, but I would sooner not get any loan of money, but put it up on my own account. I could not do it.

7260. You could not do it at present?—No, I could not do it at present.

7261. Mr Gordon.—You are a sailor, are you not?—Yes.

7262. You are a married man?—Yes.

7263. But you are generally at sea?—Yes.

7264. When were you at sea last?—Not this year.

7265. Were you at sea last year?—Yes.

JOSEPH MACPHERSON, Cottar, Kyleakin (46) —examined.

7266. The Chairman.—You are a cottar at Kyleakin?—Yes.

7267. Do you pay any rent?—Between 5s. and 6s.

7268. The cottars there have village lots, I think?—No, most of them have feus that have the lands.

7269. You are not a feuar?—No.

7270. And you represent the township?—There are two or three of us, two of us especially.

7271. What case do you wish to state to us with regard to the desire for more land?—Well, for my own part, I am a cottar, and in a way I am more of a burden to the rest that have the smaller holdings about the place. It is very small, the bits they have—about an acre each individually, I believe, and we are more a burden to them than any good. If the Commission could do anything for us, in letting us have a little bit of land, that is what we would like.

7272. Do you mean in the neighbourhood?—Yes.

Broadford, Skye.

Joseph Macpherson.

7273. Is there available land in the neighbourhood?—Yes, there is plenty.

7274. Where?—Kyle Farm.

7275. Is there good land there?—Oh yes, pretty fair land.

7276. Both arable and grazing?—Yes.

7277. Who occupies that farm at present?—Robert Ryrie, Esq.

7278. As a sporting tenant?—Yes.

7279. Has he the grazing in his own hands?—Yes.

7280. But he has the farm mostly for sporting purposes?—He has sheep on it and he has the shooting.

7281. He is not a sheep farmer?—He is a London merchant; he does not depend upon the sheep, I suppose.

7282. Does the Kyle farm come close up to the village of Kyleakin?—Yes; there is just a fence between them and the village. There is a sort of point that extends into the sea, and there is a fence round the small spot where the village is.

7283. What sort of holding have you in view?—Well, for my part, I am a fisherman myself, but sometimes that does well with us and sometimes it fails; and it would help ourselves and our families if we had a little bit of land. At this time of the year we could set our potato crops.

7284. What size of holding have you in view?—Between 4 and 5 acres of arable land.

7285. And how much grazing?—We would like to keep a cow or two.

7286. But no sheep? Have you no idea of keeping sheep?—Well, it is low land; we might have maybe ten sheep or thereabouts.

7287. May I ask you what rent you would be disposed to pay for a holding of that kind?—I leave that to the Commission. I have not much idea of land, but I can work it myself if I had it.

7288. You live by the sea?—Well, I never earned a week's living ashore in my life; but it is going against us.

7289. But such living as you get is from the sea?—Yes.

7290. Have you a family?—Yes.

7291. Have you grown-up sons?—My eldest is sixteen.

7292. Do you think you could proceed with such a holding without assistance?—Yes, I think I could.

7293. Stock it and put up the necessary buildings?—Well, I have a nice house where I am, and it is near enough if I could get it there.

7294. You would not require building?—No.

7295. How many cottars are at Kyleakin altogether?—To give what I may call a rough sketch, there are about twenty of them, I think.

7296. And how many feuars?—I think between eighteen and twenty.

7297. There are no crofters?—Well, they have small crofts—those that I mentioned just now; they have what they call a lot. Maybe an acre or so.

7298. Is there any other land besides Kyle farm to which you wish to invite our attention?—Well, no; for my part, as I have got my home there, it would be more suitable if I could get a bit there.

7299. You have no desire to leave the place in which you are?—No.

7300. In fact, you do not wish to change your house if you could get more land?—No.

7301. Of course the land would be away from the house a bit?—A little bit, but it would be no harm.

7302. Have you a share of a boat or boats?—I have two little boats of my own, a middle-sized one.

7303. What do you call that?—A second class fishing-boat.

7304. What keel?—Twenty-two feet keel.

7305. You have a smaller one?—Yes.

7306. Mr Sutherland.—I understand from what you say that there are two classes in Kyleakin, first, feuars who have got small holdings at present; and, second, those who pay the 5s. or 6s. a year of rent for the sites of their houses, and who have got no land at all?—Yes.

Broadford Skye.

Joseph Macpherson.

7307. What do you do for fire in that case?—Well, we are a burden to them that have a little bit. Of course, we have to cut our peats off their grazing.

7308. Have the feuars much grazing?—No, I think it is little enough.

7309. For themselves?—Yes.

7310. Then you think that if there was an extension given of the grazings attached to Kyleakin you could all share and share alike with it?—Yes.

7311. And you are satisfied it could be managed jointly to your advantage?—Yes.

7312. Do you know if the feuars would like to join with you in any application?—Well, I did not put that question to them; but there are a few of them here to-day. I might ask them.

7313. We may ascertain ourselves, but you think that they would have a desire to participate in the extension of the holdings probably as much as you?—Oh yes, it would be to the advantage of the place, I believe, on both sides.

7314. Are the feuars able to have cows?—They have all cows.

7315. But those of the class you belong to have none?—Oh, nothing at all; we have not even as much as would plant half a dozen potatoes.

7316. And is there land adjoining you or near you which could be given to you as arable holdings?—Yes.

7317. Would it be equal in size to what you have in your mind—to what the feuars have at present?—Yes, it would, and more, I believe.

7318. Are the feuars' arable holdings adjacent to the village?—Close by the village.

7319. Do you know land where small arable holdings could be given to you also within convenient distance of the village?—Yes, plenty of land.

7320. And is the grazing you have in view immediately behind that again?—Behind that again.

KENNETH MACKAY, Cottar, Kyleakin (67). (Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

Kenneth Mackay.

7321. The Chairman.—We propose to take the evidence given by Macpherson as applicable to the whole of Kyleakin, unless you have some addition to make to it?—I agree with what has been said by Macpherson, and you may take that as sufficient.

7322. Some of our number have been over the place, and we are quite familiar with the locality and know exactly the state of the case at the village.—Yes.

7323. And we know the narrowness of the holdings and the whole circumstances of Kyle farm, and in these circumstances we do not feel it necessary to examine you further.

DONALD MACKINNON, Cottar, Ashaig (38)—examined.

Donald Mackinnon.

7324. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—I am a cottar.

7325. What claim do you make?—I have a written statement.

7326. Read it please.

Statement of the Cottars of Ashaig in the Parish of Strath.

We, the cottars of Ashaig, in the Parish of Strath, live on the hill above the road leading from Kyleakin to Broadford. We have been for a considerable length of time cottars on the Kyle farm, the last arrangement being made by Alexander Mackinnon, Esq., the then tenant of Kyle, forty-four years ago. Our lots were then rented at £2 each; for this we were allowed to build houses, to cultivate and possess a piece of waste ground, and to hold some stock of adford, e. — nald ckinnon.

sheep or cattle on the adjoining hill. There was no cultivated ground there previously, that is, the tenants of Kyle, whose cottars we were, had no cultivated grounds at or near our lots. On his, that is, Mr Alexander's leaving, Mr John Mackinnon, his brother, came into possession of the farm of Kyle, and being scarce of labourers, made an arrangement with the cottars that in lieu of the £2 we should give so many days' labour. We were required to labour as many days as he required our services, and with the threat of eviction if we refused to go at any time we were required. We possessed the same privileges as previously, that was, to cultivate the small lots we reclaimed from the waste, and to have some sheep on the hills. Nearly six years ago Mr Ryrie became tenant of Kyle, and since then till now no rent or labour has been exacted. He has taken no notice of us, and we have not troubled him by offering rent.

There is a considerable extent of land in our neighbourhood, in fact, bordering with our lots, the high road only separating our lots from it, called Lower Ashaig. It formed the same part of the Kyle farm, and originally was held by the same tenants as our lots. This place has been made noticeable of late years, the neighbouring tenants having placed their stock upon it, and has given a considerable amount of annoyance and trouble to the estate officials and the tenant of Kyle. It consists of about 320 square acres, half of which, or say 120 acres, could be easily rendered arable. It is contiguous to our homes, and could be made into ten or twelve lots of as many acres arable, and this, with the privilege of hill grazing which we at present possess, would enable us to live in comparative comfort; this would enable the six cottars having lots and the seven who have no lots, and who make this statement, to have holdings, and once and for ever settle the present burning dispute. If this were granted we would not require to remove from our present holdings, and we could and are willing to pay fair rents, and also we could without much difficulty, or at least the most of us, stock the holdings, that is, the sections mentioned of Lower Ashaig.

(Signed) JOHN ROBERTSON.
DONALD MACKINNON.

May 15, 1893.

7327. This is a statement on behalf of the township of Ashaig?—Yes.

hn bertson.

JOHN ROBERTSON, Ashaig (40)—examined.

7328. The Chairman.—Have you signed the statement handed in by the previous witness?—Yes.

7329. And it represents your views?—Yes.

7330. I do not think we require to ask any more; we know the ground very well.

7331. Mr Mackintosh.—Might I ask him whether the occupants of Ashaig would be able to keep the stock belonging to the tenants of Upper and Lower Breakish off the ground if they got possession of it; would they pay rent for it if they got it, and hold the places themselves?

7332. The Chairman.—Mr Mackintosh is concerned to know whether you could keep the Upper and Lower Breakish stock off the Ashaig land?—But if Mr Mackintosh wants us to pay rent for it, he will put the Breakish people off it.

onald ackenzie.

DONALD MACKENZIE, Ashaig (27)—examined.

7333. The Chairman.—Do you concur in the statement given by Donald Mackinnon?—Yes.

7334. And you have nothing more to add, I suppose?—No.

7335. How many cottars are in Ashaig?—Seven.

7336. And how many crofters?—Six.

7337. Mr Mackintosh.—They are not exactly crofters, my lord: there are six cottars without any land to cultivate, and the others have a small plot of land—six cottars with land and seven without. Broadford, Skye. — Donald Mackenzie.

ANGUS MACLEOD, Crofter, Upper Breakish (48)—examined. Angus Macleod.

7338. Are you in No. 6 Upper Breakish?—One-fourth of No. 6.

7339. The Chairman.—Have you a written statement?—No.

7340. What is it you wish to tell us?—It would take some time to tell all I have to say.

7341. But we must bring the thing to a point?—I have to tell in the first place that I live in a very poor township; it is occupied by thirty-one tenants to my knowledge and two cottars, and is reckoned the worst soil in the parish. We live very uncomfortably.

7342. You are too crowded?—Yes.

7343. And you wish an opportunity of claiming more land?—Very much.

7344. Where is the land that you point us to?—There is enough surrounding us.

7345. What is the name of it?—There is the farm of Kyle, in the possession of Mr Ryrie, a bachelor from London; and the farm of Kinloch, in the possession of Lord Macdonald, without a tenant.

7346. Are these two the only available places in your neighbourhood?—Yes.

7347. What is the size of holding you would propose to take?—It depends on the quality of the soil where we are placed.

7348. Well, but you know the quality of the soil in the locality?—Well, supposing that we got the arable of the farms in our neighbourhood, I suppose from 10 to 12 acres of that arable land with good pasturage would support a moderate family.

7349. Do you do anything at fishing?—I do, sometimes.

7350. Are you anxious to give up the sea, or do you wish to keep on fishing?—I am very tired of the sea; I go very far to sea sometimes.

7351. But do you wish to give it up altogether?—I do wish to give it up, because I am getting too old for it now.

7352. And to live by your holding?—Yes.

7353. How long is it since you went to the sea?—I daresay twenty-eight years ago.

7354. How many since you gave it up?—Not a year itself.

7355. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Can you give us any idea of the acreage of the farm of Kyle, roughly?—I cannot; I do not know the acreage.

7356. Or of the farm of Kinloch?—No.

7357. But you must have some idea of the size of it?—No; but I suppose it is very easily got from the factor or some of the other officials.

7358. Have you any idea of the rental of either?—No. I was never in conversation with these gentry at all.

7359. Then what you suggest is that thirty-one crofters and two cottars should have 10 or 12 acres each in the farm of Kyle and the farm of Kinloch?—I did not say that they should have that in the farms of Kyle and Kinloch; we have a wide country here. We have lands quite convenient to the church here that might be suitable for some of them; so is Suisnish and Boreraig; also Pabbay, right in the neighbourhood, capable of holding four or five good crofts.

7360. How are the lands close by here occupied just now?—The island of Pabbay, I understand, is under rabbits lately for a good many years.

7361. But the land you spoke of near the church here?—The land near the church here is occupied by the hotelkeeper here.

7362. And you would like to see him give up the land and one or two crofters put on it?—I would imagine that the large hotel in Broadford here would support a family.

Broadford, Skye. Angus Macleod.

7363. When you mention particular lands naturally one wishes to know what comparative use the lands could be made of compared with the use made of them now?—It is cultivated partly here and the rest is under grazing.

7364. But thirty-one crofters and two cottars with 10 acres each would be about 400 acres of land somewhere?—I suppose that could be got in the grounds I have mentioned.

7365. Well, supposing they were; supposing you found the land and could get it, would they be able to pay any rent for it?—Yes.

7366. In bad years as well as good?—Bad years as well as good. There are cottars in our township that offered as high as £90 for a small croft that is vacant here this spring with the use of the small stock; that was over double the value. I should think they would be quite willing to pay and quite able to stock a good croft in these good localities if they got it.

7367. Without assistance?—Without any assistance.

7368. They must be possessed of a good deal of capital?—I think the crofters want to be as well posted as these cottars.

7369. You think they would all be able, or nearly all, most of them?—The majority of the township that I represent would, I think, be able to stock a fair croft in this parish.

7370. But if they have so much land now, and are not making much at the fishing, how are they able to find the money to stock and occupy the land?—I know several in my township who have three times the stock that they should have already; I daresay some of them gave evidence before the Crofters Commission here, that they had four times the stock that they should have, and I do not see why they should not stock a croft in some other part of the parish.

7371. About this island that you say is now under rabbits—how many crofters would it take?—I think four or five crofters could live there very comfortably.

7372. And make something by it besides maintaining themselves and paying a rent?—Make a living; I do not say that they would lay any money aside.

7373. You doubt their being able to pay rent?—I know they would be able to pay rent by the shellfish on the shore, let alone the produce of the land.

7374. Mussels for bait?—Whelks and mussels and bait; crabs and plenty of other produce.

7375. And they would fish too?—If they liked; the crofter has a good deal of leisure time to fish.

7376. Would it pay them to fish?—It would pay them to fish at their leisure time. I worked ten hours yesterday, and I came out with about a shilling's worth of fish. The crofter can live on very little here. I don't mean that it would pay a crofter, the value of the fishing all the year round,—quite different.

7377. Mr Sutherland.—You are of opinion then that, provided the farm of Kyle were distributed among the people in your township, they would be able to live very much better than they live now?—Very much.

7378. And you do not think there would be any loss to any party by doing that?—I think it would be a great profit to the proprietor and the people.

7379. You think that if they have certain rent-producing powers in a small place and under poor circumstances, they would have far more producing powers in a better place and under better circumstances?—I do.

7380. You think that follows quite naturally?—I think an acre of the Kyle farm is better than four of the ground that we possess.

7381. And your neighbours generally, I think you said, are willing to take up such holdings?—Yes.

7382. And you think with a prospect of success?—The prospect would be very successful.

7383. Would you now undertake to take one of these holdings yourself?—I would. Broadford Skye. Angus Macleod.

7384. And be glad to get the opportunity?—Very glad to get the opportunity.

7385. Mr Macleod.—How many whole crofts are in Upper Breakish?—Fifteen.

7386. That was the number of crofts that were originally on the place?—Yes.

7387. And you said that the land was very bad?—The worst in Skye; the clippings of these two farms.

7388. Of what two farms?—Kyle and Kyleakin; where they are without cattle, and sheep could not live, I actually am not ashamed to say.

7389. Is it boggy?—Bog and moss; nothing but bog. There is not one acre of what we call green grass on the hill of Upper Breakish pasturage.

7390. And the arable land that you have got is mossy land?—The arable land is the worst that I know.

7391. But I want to know its nature. I don't deny it may be very bad, but what is the nature of it?—It is mostly moss and rocks.

7392. How long is it since the township was formed?—About eighty years ago, I think.

7393. The Chairman.—It is right to tell you that since we began our sittings we have been told in various parts of Skye that the land we were talking of was the worst land in Skye.—Our land?

7394. No, but a great many people say that their best land is the worst in Skye; I have heard the expression frequently?—I have to say that one of the Crofter Commissioners told me that to his own knowledge there was not worse land in the north of Scotland except Gairloch that ever he knew. And to give you an idea of our cattle pasturage, we never had a bull that could exist on it. It is a common thing in our township to have cattle two years without calves.

7395. Mr Maccallum.—How do you manage to have such a large stock there on such bad land?—Did I mention the stock?

7396. You said many of them had more than their souming; how does that come about?—Because the place is not laid out for a large holding, and the people are very industrious and are trying to have as much stock as they possibly can—what the place is not able to bear.

7397. The Chairman.—There is more stock kept than the land will sustain?—Yes, than the place is able to bear; I may say three times as much. They are merely in existence by trespassing a little on the neighbouring farms.

7398. The original number of families was fifteen?—Fifteen crofts the place was meant to hold when it was cut out.

7399. Would it sustain fifteen now?—If they were confined to their own ground they would be poor enough.

7400. How many would it sustain?—I could not say.

7401. Would ten do?—Yes, I think ten would make a living.

7402. How was the number increased so greatly from fifteen to thirty-one?—There were some evicted from other parts of the estate and put there.

7403. And were some of the holdings divided by the crofters themselves?—I expect so. When their families got up they would be divided. My own father is living still, and he divided the croft between us.

7404. And the croft was too small for your father, I suppose?—Small enough for him.

7405. So you made it a little smaller?—Yes, I made it as small again; but he has no family but myself.

7406. You think that subdivision of new holdings should be prevented in the future?—Well, I don't think they would subdivide now for their own sake. It has gone far enough, I think. If there is any more division they should go into some other part of the estate.

roadford, kye. ngus acleod.

7407. You think it has gone too far already?—Yes.

7408. And that it is injurious to the people?—Injurious to the people.

7409. And the multiplication of stock is also injurious?—Oh yes, our stock will soon be ruined unless we get more ground for it.

7410. Has the ground got three times as much stock as it ought to have?—Yes, the factor says we are taking the use of Ashaig and most of the Kyle farm already; and Ashaig is as bare as our pasture. A good deal of our stock is trespassing on Kinloch. They won't stay on our ground. It is a bad sign of Breakish, that the animals themselves have to leave the place, and take to some other place.

7411. Your father is Neil Macleod?—Yes.

7412. The entry in the Blue Book is 3 acres 1 rood 24 poles arable, 2 acres 1 rood 23 poles outrun, and half a share of 2593 acres common grazing divided into fifteen shares. The former rent was £3, 3s., and the fair rent is £2, 10s.

7413. Mr. Mackintosh.—What stock do you keep?—I have a cow and a stirk, and about twenty head of sheep.

7414. Is that more than your proper souming?—Oh yes, a good deal more.

7415. Do these parties you spoke of as keeping three times their souming pay for the right to graze to some of the other tenants who have not the souming?—They do not; it is not worth while paying for it.

7416. It is worth paying. The other tenants who have not got the stock are forced to pay?—Maybe the souming they have is trespassing on the neighbouring farms.

7417. Do you grow as much fodder as to winter the stock you have?—I just barely wintered the cow this year, I had nothing over.

7418. Do you know any of the others in the township who grow as much fodder as to winter their full souming?—Very few.

7419. There are some?—I don't know many.

7420. How many?—Well, to my knowledge I don't know any who have their stock and wintered them this year.

7421. Do the people not sell crop off Breakish Moss?—Not one that has his souming; they would have to buy it.

7422. You described the number of acres of arable land required; would you be surprised to know that there are nearly as many acres of arable land in Breakish Moss as in the farms of Kinloch and Kyle?—I would be astonished to hear what is not true, Mr. Mackintosh.

7423. Excluding Ashaig, which is almost in your own possession?—There is more arable land in Ashaig alone than in Upper Breakish—double, I think.

7424. I am excluding Ashaig. Supposing you got all that arable land, what would you do with the rest of the hill ground? There are about 22,000 acres of hill ground between the two farms. We don't want the whole of the two farms to put us in good circumstances.

7425. You wanted all the arable land evidently. You stated there were so many of them requiring so many acres?—Yes.

7426. What could be done with the hill ground if you got all the arable ground?—The hill pasture would be in connection with the arable land.

7427. Would you take the hill ground in connection with the arable land?—Yes, the most of it.

7428. And at a fair rent?—At a fair rent. We offered a fair rent to the Crofters Commission for Ashaig and its pasturage already, and promised to pay or lodge five years' rent to Lord Macdonald for the use of that.

7429. Are you aware that the Breakish Moss people are not now paying their rent?—I am not aware that they are not paying their rent.

7430. Well, they are over £90 in arrear. There may be widows or people with small families who are in arrear.

Broadford, Skye. Angus Macleod.

7431. You have stated that you were quite prepared to take the hill ground along with the arable land of Kinloch and Kyle?—I did not; that would be too much for us.

7432. The Chairman.—I thought that was what you intended to convey?—I never meant anything of the kind.

7433. What is it you do mean?—I mean that every man that wants land in Breakish would take 10 to 12 acres with pasturage and stock it.

7434. Mr. Mackintosh.—How much stock?—Four cows and sixty sheep.

7435. I asked you then what became of the rest of the hill ground and you said you would take it?—There are other parts of the parish wanting ground.—

7436. They don't want hill ground without arable.—There is arable on it.

7437. The Chairman.—The question put before you is this. Suppose the arable land absorbed, what would become of the grazing land, 20,000 acres of hill grazing? how would you dispose of that?—I think there is arable enough to take up all the pasturage on these two farms, and there is another township that has not come forward yet that wants plenty of pasturage, where there are fifty families without any sheep pasturage at all. I think it will take a good many acres to supply them when they come forward. They will be after this, I suppose.

7438. What place is that?—Lower Breakish.

7439. Mr. Mackintosh.—Would they take the sheep stock of Kyle and Kinloch at valuation—the crofters of Breakish?—I don't know. I am saying that our place is over-stocked; we should have room for our own stock first. I think there is a good deal of Kyle farm that is under stock that is very ready for the market just now, and their wedder stock could be removed, and Ashaig would have no stock at all. There is not an animal belonging to the tenant there to my knowledge these five years.

7440. Whose stock did we see yesterday?—The crofters' stock.

7441. How many horses were there?—I could not tell you. They have a large number of horses, more than the place is able to carry at present.

7442. In fact, if a man has an acre of land in Breakish he gets a horse?—No! oh no. In Breakish there are fifteen without a horse. I have no horse myself.

7443. Did you ever drive your stock off Ashaig if you found them trespassing there?—Well, to tell you the truth, Mr. Mackintosh, I never drive them off nor on.

7444. The Chairman.—We cannot go into questions of trespass, Mr. Mackintosh. The Witness.—I am giving him a fair answer.

7445. The Chairman.—There is a long-standing dispute there, as we know, and we have heard a great deal about it in another place. The Witness.—I must state before I sit down, that Ashaig is a great nuisance to Breakish at the present time, because it is open to everybody that likes to come and place a beast there. There is no tenant to keep up the ditch to save our crops. The people that live near it, their crofts are ruined every year. A tinsmith might come round and he sends his horse there, and in the morning it will be found maybe in the crofters' land or among the crofters' corn. There is nobody keeping march with us at all, and nobody to put up the dyke.

7446. Mr Mackintosh.—Did you interfere with the stock——

7447. The Chairman.—We are dealing with the question of available land, not with questions about this Breakish dispute. The Witness.—There is plenty of available land there.

7448. Mr Sutherland.—You never proposed to break up the farm of Kyle and pick out the arable land and leave the pasture behind?—I never did.

7449. You mean to say that if you take the arable

Broadford, Skye.

Angus Macleod.

land you will also take the hill grazing in proportion?—Yes, and much more pasturage.

7450. So that practically there would be no separation of the arable land from the pasture land such as has been suggested?—There would not. There is plenty of arable land to take up all the pasturage on the farm.

7451. Mr Shaw Stewart.—But I rather understood that the arable land of Kinloch would also be required for this number of tenants as well as of Kyle?—Very well.

7452. And then that there would be so much hill pasture left over out of this whole 20,000 acres which would not be taken by the crofters. The question is what would be done with them?—I have told already that there are plenty crofters on Lower Breakish that have no grazing, and they will take up a good deal of hill pasture. I think the township of Kilichro will take up a good deal more pasturage if they could get it. I think there are plenty of crofters surrounding the two farms that will take them up, arable and pasturage.

Archibald Mackintosh.

ARCHIBALD MACKINTOSH, Crofter, Upper Breakish (36)—examined.

7453. The Chairman.—Are you a crofter?—Yes.

7454. I see from the Blue Book that your holding covers 3 acres 0 roods 32 poles arable, 3 acres 1 rood 7 poles outrun, and half a share in the common grazing. The former rent was £3, 3s., and the fair rent £2, 12s. Do you concur in the evidence that has been given?—Yes.

7455. Is there a desire among the crofters in Upper Breakish for new holdings?—Yes.

7456. Where would these holdings be situated?—In the neighbourhood.

7457. What do you call the neighbourhood?—The farms of Kinloch and Kyleakin.

7458. There is grazing land there?—Yes, plenty.

7459. And arable? and hill grazing also?—Yes.

7460. Is it the desire of those whom you represent to take both the grazing land, the old arable and the hill pasture?—Yes.

7461. For the formation of new holdings?—Yes.

7462. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Do you also think there is enough arable land in the farm of Kinloch to take up most of the hill pasture behind it? I think so.

7463. Would you take a holding there yourself if you had the chance?—Yes, I would.

7464. Mr Gordon.—Where is the arable land in Kinloch? Is it beside the old house there?—Yes, to the head of the loch; the woodside at the back of the hill.

7465. How much would there be there?—I am not very sure; but I know the place very well.

7466. How many acres would you think there would be?—I don't know the acreage.

7467. Would there be twenty?—Yes, and more.

7468. Thirty?—Yes, and more.

7469. Forty?—Yes, round the coast line.

7470. Is there any arable land round Loch Sleat opposite, near Ostaig?—Yes, I think so.

7471. But you are not sure?—Well, I was there many a time.

7472. There is no arable land that I know of round that side?—There have been crofters there sometime.

7473. Where at?—At a place called Camuscross, and as far as Ostaig at the west side.

7474. I don't think there is anything like 40 acres of it?—Yes, up to the shepherd's house in Kinloch.

7475. There are some acres round down to the riverside, and about 20 acres near the shepherd's house?—It was cultivated some time ago.

7476. It must have been a long time ago; it is all rushes now?—Yes, but crofters in my neighbourhood were there cutting corn.

7477. Suppose you put in four crofts; would you suppose that they would take up the whole of the pasture land—about 9000 acres of hill ground?—I think there is more arable land there than that.

Broadford, Skye.

Archibald Mackintosh

7478. I took your own word; you say four crofts could be put in?—Four crofts? I did not say that.

7479. I thought you said you could put in four crofts on that side?—Yes, on the coast side.

7480. Tell us where on the coast side there is land?—The woodside down there, the woodside and then up the head of Kinloch.

7481. The fact is that I think there is very little arable land and about 9000 acres of pasture.

7482. The Chairman.—I was down there yesterday, and I did not see arable. There are small patches, but we could not see arable land, or old arable in any quantity. If you could tell us where it is we would be happy to go back and look at it?—I was many a time there myself, and I have seen the old houses the people had there.

7483. Mr Macleod.—Give us the names of the places?—Camusantallin, they call the place.

7484. What other places?—The wood we call it.

7485. Is that in sight of the road?—Yes, beside the road to Isleornsay.

7486. Mr Gordon.—I think possibly there may be four crofts got in there by reclaiming part of the hill ground?—Yes.

7487. But if you take the whole farm you would require to take 9000 acres of hill pasture?—It would keep up a lot of crofters on the shepherd's side up to the head of the loch.

7488. You might build houses upon it, but you would not have land for them?—There is plenty of land about there.

7489. The Chairman.—We can go back and look at it after what you have said; we will see it to-morrow.

7490. Mr Macleod.—Have you ever seen any land in your township that has been reclaimed? Has there been land reclaimed there since you remember the township, or was it all in cultivation before you remember, in Breakish?—Yes, it was cultivated since I remember.

7491. Have you seen any land taken in since you remember?—Yes.

7492. Is there land, do you think, on the farm of Kinloch that might be taken in the same way as the land was taken in at Breakish?—Yes, I think so.

7493. Tell me the places where you see that land on Kinloch?—It is in Kinloch—I have no names on the places. It is the farm of Kinloch.

7494.—Mr Sutherland.—You know how sheep farms are made up; there must be a certain amount of low grazing for them?—There is.

7495. In proportion to the hill grazing?—Yes.

7496. There is that in Kinloch farm, I presume?—Yes.

7497. So that if it is good for a sheep farmer, it would be good for you also if you got it?—Yes.

7498. Mr H. V. Maccallum, on behalf of the Highland Property Defence Association—How much seed do you sow per acre on your own holding?—About two bolls.

7499. And what is the return?—Perhaps I would have to buy a boll or two.

7500. What is the average date of sowing?—I begin in March and April, that is the time we sow.

7501. Can you tell me what are the earliest and latest dates on which you have seen harvesting begin and end?—They are sowing in our township to-day.

7502. Sowing to-day! as late as this?—Yes.

7503. When do you see your harvest end as a rule? What is the latest date?—I cannot give you a date.

Hugh Macrae

HUGH MACRAE, Crofter, Upper Breakish (40)—examined.

7504. The Chairman.—I would propose to take you as concurring with the other evidence given on behalf of this township of Upper Breakish?—Yes, with the evidence of Angus Macleod.

roadford, Kye.

7505. You concur with his evidence?—Yes.

Hugh Macrae.

7506. I do not know that we have more to ask you, but if you wish to make an additional statement we would be glad to have it.—I have not many additional statements, except that there is plenty of land round about.

7507. Kyle and Kinloch?—Kyle and Kinloch and Pabbay.

7508. Well, we have seen them already, and we will see them again.

William Munro.

WILLIAM MUNRO, Crofter, Lower Breakish (56)—examined.

7509. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Lower Breakish?—Yes.

7510. What is the number of your croft?—No. 22.

7511. I see the arable is 1 acre 0 roods 31 poles, the outrun 29 poles, the grazing 763 acres, divided into forty shares, of which you hold one-fourth of a share. The former rent was £1 and the fair rent is 16s. Have you a statement?—Yes.

7512. Kindly read it.—Statement of Lower Breakish. Names of those that want to remove.

7514. Mr Mackintosh.—You find a difficulty in paying your present rent; would you be able to stock a new holding?—I would put my stock on. I have doubled my stock. I can't go beyond the limit.

7515. What size of holding would you be able to take?—Well, I have got a promising young family, five sons and three daughters, and I quite believe they would be able to help me.

7516. But can't you say what size?—8 or 10 acres, with four cows and a horse and sixty sheep.

7517. Do you find your present holding too much for you?—No, I did not, but it put me to poverty altogether.

7518. You do not find it more than you can manage?—No.

7519. But you do not manage to pay the rent?—I can easy pay the rent sometimes. I lost all my gear last year and I was better off when I started than when I finished. I have been twenty-eight years skipper of a boat. I made a great deal of money before I was married; the fishing ruined me and kept me in continual poverty, and I must drop it at once or else it will put me on the rock. I tried almost everything in my power to get subsistence for my family, even going to the seashore for whelks. It is a positive fact, my lord.

John Macinnes.

JOHN MACINNES, 31 Lower Breakish—examined.

7520. The Chairman.—I suppose you wish to give us practically the same account as the previous witness?—Yes.

7521. You desire to leave your holding, if there is available land in the neighbourhood?—Yes.

7522. And you will leave us to look over the land and form a judgment upon it?—Yes.

Broadford, Skye.

7523. Mr Macleod.—Do you know the farm of Kinloch well?—Yes, I do.

John Macinnes.

7524. Can you mention any places where people were living at one time that were not mentioned by the previous witnesses?—No, not exactly.

Myles Maclean

MYLES MACLEAN, Harrapol (60)—examined.

7525. The Chairman.—Have you a written statement?—No.

7526. Your holding, I see, extends to 5 acres 1 rood 28 poles arable, 0 acres 2 roods 3 poles outrun, 1396 acres of common grazing, divided into twenty shares, of which you hold one. The former rent was £4, 10s., and the fair rent is £3, 10s. Are you desirous of leaving your holding if land can be got?—Well, I am, in a manner. My family is grown up now; some members of it have grown up to the age of manhood and are desirous of leaving me. They have been true and diligent in supporting me, and for the sake of my family I am desirous of getting a larger holding, either for me or for them. There is no use dividing the few acres that I have; it would leave both me and them in misery.

7527. How many crofters are in Harrapol altogether?—There are twenty crofts.

7528. And how many crofters?—Well, one of them is at the present time occupying two crofts, and I understand that this present year the rest are divided, which would leave nineteen.

7529. Are there any cottars?—There are not very many. There is a place, Lower Harrapol, below the road, where they are mostly cottars, for all that they have is small patches of land.

7530. Do you know how many cottars there are?—I could not exactly tell the number, but there is a delegate to give evidence upon the matter after me.

7531. Is the township crowded?—It is.

7532. Is the land exhausted?—It is fairly exhausted.

7533. Would it be an advantage to the township if some of the crofters or cottars could be removed to other holdings?—It would.

7534. And the remaining crofters and cottars get the vacated holdings?—Undoubtedly, because the land that I now occupy I do not recollect of leaving it out to improve it, but had to cultivate it regularly every year and sow it. I would calculate it a good return if the ground was to sow the seed back again.

7535. And do you think there is land in the neighbourhood?—I think there is.

7536. Tell us where it is?—It is right fornent me there—the farm of Corry.

7537. Who occupies the farm of Corry at present?—One of the name of Murchison.

7538. Is it a large farm?—I cannot say the acreage of it; it is a large farm. The rent is about £100, I think.

7539. Does the farm of Corry include the lands of any old townships?—At first the farm of Corry was in one, but it is divided now into four parts, that is Strollamus, Swordale, and Liveras over here; it is divided into four parts now, which were at one time occupied as one farm.

7540. And is it many years since the division was made?—I cannot exactly tell the date.

7541. It is not in your recollection?—Oh, yes.

7542. How many sons have you?—I have two sons that are grown up and a boy about twelve years of age.

7543. And the grown up sons want new holdings?—They do, and are desirous of having them.

7544. And you wish to be relieved of them?—No, I have no desire; they were not so very undutiful to me.

7545. But, I mean, to get new holdings?—Undoubtedly; I want to pay my respect to them as far as in my power.

7546. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Have they been brought up to any trade at all?—Well, not to a certain trade; they are following the sea in a kind of manner at times of the year.

7547. They know about the sea a little bit?—Yes.

7548. Fishing?—They are generally at the fishing and sometimes in yachts.

7549. They have no desire to go to the mainland and seek work there or further south?—They are south at the present time.

7550. Oh! are they? at sea?—Yes, engaged in a yacht.

7551. Mr Gordon.—This large piece of pasturage up here belongs to the township of Harrapol—this green ground away above the house, does it not?—Yes.

7552. That is to say, the greater part of your outrun or the common pasture is green ground?—No, the most of it is quite visible, all the green ground mostly. It was there where the crofts were made at first till the proprietor removed them to cultivate this mossy ground where they are now situated.

7553. Did you get good grazing upon your old crofts?—Yes.

7554. Is the half of your grazing green ground?—No.

7555. Do you go back as far as Swordale?—There is a river that leads up just over here which divides us.

7556. How many cows would you have in the twenty crofts? What is the souming?—The souming of each croft is three cows and a horse.

7557. You have fully that amount upon it just now?—We are not allowed to keep more than the souming.

7558. You have not more than the souming?—No; if you keep more than the souming you are bound to pay grazing for them, and there is hardly a croft within my knowledge in the township that will feed the souming. You may keep life in them, but no feeding.

7559. But your grazing would keep them in summer well enough?—They will not die in summer.

7560. There is plenty of grass just now on the hill?—Yes, because there is grass everywhere at this season.

7561. Mr Macleod.—Have you got any sheep on this hill grazing?—Yes, we have a few sheep: five sheep on each croft, some more or less.

7562. And would it be an advantage to you if you had that grazing further extended?—Well, it would be the desire of some to have additional grazing.

7563. Those in the township who desire to stay where they are would naturally desire to see the pasturage enlarged?—Undoubtedly.

7564. And who are you marching with?—Marching on the one side with the township of Scullamus, and on the other with Mr Ross, the hotel-keeper here.

7565. That is the only ground you are marching with?—Yes.

7566. You are not marching with any other?—Yes, with the Heast people; we are coming in contact with the Heast people.

7567. You are not marching with any other farm than the farm of Swordale?—No: these are all the big farms. I may state that I was requested by seven or eight of the young men, and married men too, remaining about Harrapol there, just to speak in their behalf that they would get land in the old Corry farm there.

7568. You were requested to make that statement?—Yes.

7569. Are they living in Harrapol just now?—Not at the present time, but they belong to Harrapool.

7570. Where are they living?—They are young men mostly that are grown up to manhood now, and they are away at their employment.

7571. Where is that?—South.

7572. Labouring in the south?—Generally following the sea.

7573. Some of them in yachts?—Yes.

7574. Mr Mackintosh.—Would these six or eight men be able to take the whole farm of Corry as now possessed by Mr Murchison?—They will get plenty to assist them to take it along with themselves. There will not be an acre of it left without being taken.

7575. Would they be able to take the stock at valuation?—Let them drive their stock to Inverness sale and get cash for them. I wish I had the stock. I would know what to do with them.

7576. Would you not take the stock at valuation?—No! maybe I would take time before I would be able to stock the ground.

7577. But you would not take the present stock on the ground?—Not the present stock.

7578. Are you aware that stock sold off a sheep farm are not worth as much in the open market as they are to the man who takes the ground?—Any one who takes the ground at the present time is not bound to take the stock; the person has no lease of the ground.

7579. You know more than most people do. If you take Corry as a tenant, you are bound to take the sheep stock.

7580. The Chairman.—If it is agreeable to the others who are here—John Maclean, Lower Harrapol; Malcolm Maclean, Waterloo; John Mackinnon, Waterloo; and Lachlan Mackinnon, Black Park—we take them as concurring generally in the evidence we have heard to-day, and not prolong the examination of the witnesses from Broadford. But if any of these tenants desire to come up and make an additional statement, we shall be glad to have it.

JOHN MACLEAN, Lower Harrapol—examined.

7581. The Chairman.—What is it you wish to say?—Well, I was proposed to come here as a witness to give evidence on behalf of the people of the township of Harrapol. Their minds were laid wholly upon getting more land, so as to get the living out of the crops in the land, and the benefit of the cattle. As far as I can understand their means, they would live in the old style by cropping the land for food, and the use of milk for feeding.

7582. They feel their crofts to be too small, and would like larger holdings upon good ground?—Yes, and the crofts they have are in an exhausted state. The land gives no return whatsoever; it is only labour in vain, tilling it over year after year.

7583. We are quite familiar with the circumstances. We will look at all the ground in the neighbourhood while we are here.—Very well, sir.

7584. Mr Mackintosh.—Would you adopt a different course of cropping land if you were to get a new holding? Would it be the same mode of cultivation, or how would you cultivate a new holding?—By cropping it, ploughing it, harrowing it, putting in seed and allowing Providence to raise a crop out of my labour.

7585. What would you do with it next year?—When I would get it into good working order I would bring it into rotation, so that I would have room to come and go upon. But allow me to state now that I have seen Morayshire men brought into this country to crop lands, and they have owned on leaving the country that the people here were far better at raising a crop than these strangers, because we knew the nature of the climate and the nature of the soil, and studied all these things that would raise a crop out of the land better than those strangers that came from Morayshire, Banffshire, and these countries.

7586. And Elginshire?—Well, it might be. I have seen a crop of wheat—this experienced man tried for two years to raise wheat out of the land here, and he had nothing but black smut: not an article for his trouble.

LACHLAN MACKINNON, Cottar, Elgol (47).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

7587. The Chairman.—You are a cottar at Elgol?—Yes.

7588. Have you any land?—No land.

7589. What is it you wish to say?—I came here to get a piece of ground if I possibly could.

7590. Are you a yachtsman?—I was at one time: I have given that over now.

7591. Mr Forsyth.—What land do you wish? Have you any land in your mind that you were seeking on Strathaird?—Yes, I am sent here for others as a delegate. I mentioned the farm of Glasnakill, Dunlia, Riochan, and Robustan.

7592. You speak on behalf of the whole of the crofters and cottars at Elgol, do you?—Only for the cottars.

7593. How many cottars are there?—Seventeen.

7594. How much arable land do you want each?—We would like to get six acres if it is possible, and if we cannot get it we must give up asking.

7595. Do you think you could get what you want at Robuston and Glasnakill?—Yes, I think so.

7596. Are you also asking for hill grazing?—Yes, if possible.

7597. Would you be able to stock it?—Partly.

7598. The people are living partly by fishing at Elgol, are they not?—Yes, the most of them.

7599. But you could work your fishing and more land if you got it, together, profitably?—If I got the land I would not depend much on fishing, but I will try the fishing when I am beat in dealing with the land.

7600. Mr Alexander Macdonald, Factor for Sir William Mackinnon.—Since Sir William Mackinnon bought the estate, is it the case that you have lived mostly by fishing?—No, I gave up the fishing a year or two before he came. It is seven years since I gave up the fishing.

7601. Has it not been by work given by Sir William Mackinnon since he bought the estate that you have been living since then?—No, but it was a help to me: I was living on my previous savings.

7602. As a cottar?—As a cottar.

7603. You saved money as a cottar then, did you?—Yes, on the fishing about Ireland and England.

7604. Have you not had lots of work of all sorts since Sir William Mackinnon bought the place?—Yes, I did, but the others are complaining.

7605. I am only asking yourself. You got as much work as you could do, or pretty near it?—Yes, sometimes.

7606. Sir William has spent a large sum of money on making a road for you from Elgol, has he not?—Yes, but I think he did not do that on account of the cottars, at any rate.

7607. The cottars use it as well as others, don't they?—Yes; I live on my neighbour's ground, and I am in his way; and I must either get land or leave the place, and I hope it will come to be that we will get the land.

7608. Mr Macleod.—I suppose that you did a fair day's work for a fair day's wage to Sir William Mackinnon?—Yes.

NEIL MACKINNON, Cottar, Elgol (37).
(Examined in Gaelic through an interpreter.)

7609. The Chairman.—You are a cottar at Elgol?—Yes.

7610. Do you wish a new holding?—Yes, there is plenty there that I could get.

7611. Tell us what land you refer to?—Drynan: the townships that are already mentioned. Glasnakill, Dunlia, Riochan, Drynan, Mebost, Robustan, and Glen-Scaladale, a part of Robustan. That is without encroaching on the chief part at all of the farm. These lands that I mentioned are green places on which crofters lived before. I am not mentioning the place called Keppoch. It is only forty years since the tenants left that place; and another place where there is a tenant that we need not trouble, that is Camasunary, and then Kirkibost and Kilmaree—we leave that to themselves, and we need not go to the hill to seek for land. The land begins at the end of Loch Slapin up to Loch Scavaig, round 13 or 14 miles of seacoast.

7612. Mr Maccallum.—Are the 17 cottars desirous of getting land?—Yes, they are as desirous as I am.

7613. And we have found out that Sir William Mackinnon has done a great deal for the place. Did you forward to him any application for holdings?—Yes, four or five times, and I may even with safety say oftener.

7614. What reply did you get?—We got various replies: we asked Glasnakill of him, and offered a reasonable rent for it, and we did not get it. Then we asked a cow's grazing a-piece of him, and offered to pay for it, and we did not get that.

7615. What reply did he give to the first application?—That he could not at all give it.

7616. Was that the whole of it?—We then sent a letter to him asking a park in which we could plant potatoes; to which he replied that he would rather give us money wherewith to buy potatoes than give us land, the giving of which he might repent, until he would come himself to the country.

7617. When he came to the country did you renew your application?—He then came to the place, and we gave him time in obedience to him. On another occasion we went to meet him at Feaulin when his steam yacht was lying there. We waited on him with a letter for him, and we sent the letter out to him on board his yacht. He asked our messenger for the names of the applicants, and we furnished him with them, and we heard no more of the application.

7618. Did you accept the alms which he offered in that way?—We did not get alms.

7619. Mr Alexander Macdonald.—You said that you were going to leave Kirkibost with ourselves, with Sir William Mackinnon. Do not these places of Robustan and Drynan and Dunlia comprise the greater part of what is known as the farm of Kilmaree?—He has plenty besides that. From Ringill away to Kirkibost and Nead-an-fhirein. Though I mention these names, the fourth or fifth or even the sixth part of them would satisfy us.

7620. So you do not mean to take the lot?—No, nor anything like it.

7621. I understand you admit that these places comprehend a great part of Kilmaree, and that you could not take them.

7622. The Chairman.—Yes, Mr Forsyth was over the ground and thinks he is giving his evidence very well.

7623. Mr Alexander Macdonald.—I do not think the Commission understands that these places comprise a large part of Kilmaree. (To witness). Is the farm of Glasnakill a farm that was until lately let as one small farm?—The last man in whose possession I saw it was a south-country man who had it along with Glasnakill—Mr Bower—and he had the whole estate except Camusunary and Elgol.

7624. But was Glasnakill always known as a separate farm on the estate, and is there a separate slated farmhouse on it, with a separate rent in the valuation roll?—Yes; that was the case to the best of my knowledge until Mr. Bower took it.

7625. Are you aware that Glasnakill, which you mention, is a small farm, let hitherto at a £70 rent, with a slated house?—I heard different rents: I know that Archibald Macallister had it for £20.

7626. When was that; before you were born?—Yes, before I was born; he may have had it for £5.

7627. He was a relative of the proprietor, was not he?

7628. The Chairman.—What of that?

7629. Mr Macdonald.—I mean that it was let for favour; it was not a fair rent.

Broadford, Skye.

Neil Mackinnon.

7630. The Chairman.—By one relative to another.

7631. Mr Macdonald.—Yes. (To witness). Is Drynan, the other place that you mention, within just a few yards of the house of Kilmaree?—Not the nearest side of Drynan; it is about half a mile.

7632. The Chairman.—It is right to mention that we have received in connection with the township of Elgol the following petition:—

ELGOL, SKYE, March 24, 1893.

We, the undersigned cottars of the township of Elgol, Strathaird estate, proprietor, Sir William Mackinnon, beg most respectfully to lay this petition before you, craving your kind consideration of the same. We have grievances to lay before you, the chief one being concerning "land," and our chief object in placing this in your hand is in the hope that when you come to Skye, you will kindly favour us by asking an interview with us, and we will be most happy to meet you so that you may be able to settle our grievances. We may say that we spoke to our proprietor fully two years ago about our poor condition. He then said to wait a little. We have waited now all the time, and as there has been nothing done, nor any signs of anything, we would crave your consideration of our affairs, and hope you will see to them when you come to Skye.

7633. We will take this petition into consideration along with the evidence we have heard from you and the preceding witness.

James Mackintosh.

JAMES MACKINTOSH, Ostaig, Sleat, Factor for Lord Macdonald—examined.

7634. The Chairman.—I think you wish to make a general statement, Mr Mackintosh?—In regard to the parish of Strath, I am quite prepared to make a statement. I have here a statement giving the total acreages in the different townships in the parish of Strath, together with the fair rent fixed, the arrears ordered to be paid and the arrears at this date, also stating the number of lots and the number of tenants in each township, together with the souming. [It is given on page 178.]

7635. The rents are better paid here, I believe, than in the north end of the island?—Much better.

7636. And the arrears are not nearly so heavy?—Not nearly.

7637. Last year, I suppose, you will agree was a very bad year?—Yes, it was.

7638. Considering the unfortunate circumstances of last year, would you say that the arrears have been fairly well paid?—They have been fairly well paid.

7639. You do not feel that you have any such ground of complaint in the matter of arrears in this part of the island as in the north?—No, certainly not.

7640. Do these arrears represent much more than half a year's rent?—There is a little more than that; about two-thirds of a year's rent.

Broadford, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

7641. But under a year?—Under a year.

7642. And I suppose you anticipate that a considerable part of these arrears will be recovered?—Yes, if times improve, there should not be more than a quarter of a year's rent lost.

7643. If this year turns out good?—There will be a material reduction in the arrears.

7644. You attribute the non-payment of the arrears very largely to last year being a bad year?—Yes, certainly.

7645. Mr Sutherland.—Who designed the form of that return?—I did myself.

7646. You just took those parts of it that more readily convey your view of the case?—I took what would give you most information in the least bulk.

7647. Did not you think the old rent might be some information to us also?—I did not think so; I see the report of the Crofters Commission is very much in evidence here.

7648. We can get the fair rent out of that?—Yes, and you can get the old rent there also. The reduction of rent that the crofters got is about 32 per cent.

7649. Mr Gordon.—You have not included in that statement the amount of the old arrears?—No.

7650. Mr Sutherland.—Can you give us any idea of the total amount of rent paid by the crofters since 1889, when the Crofters Commission visited this place?—I could do it in ten minutes.

7651. Could you hand it in at any time as a supplement to that?—I will.

7652. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Supposing in any cases where a landlord was willing to give up say a sheep farm, to be divided into crofts and hill pasture, one great difficulty would be the valuation of the stock, would not it?—It would.

7653. If a landlord gave up a farm to be divided into crofts, he would have the sheep stock in his hands?—In every case. In every sheep farm in these properties the proprietor is bound, or the incoming tenant is bound, to take the sheep stock at valuation.

7654. Have you ever thought of any way of overcoming that difficulty?—No, I have not, because I consider that in an island like Skye, with a climate of this sort, it would be a mistake not to take the stock on the ground at valuation.

7655. Why?—It is a difficult matter to acclimatise sheep to the ground.

7656. Mr Gordon.—Can you tell us the stocking at present of Suisnish and Boreraig?—About 800 ewes, I would say.

7657. Could you tell us what sheep stock is on Corry—I mean the bigger Corry?—I think about 450 Cheviots. The rent is £100.

7658. And what is the rent of Suisnish and Boreraig?—£125.

7659. And of Strollamus?—£60, and there are about 350 sheep.

7660. Now could you tell us about Kinloch?—The rent in the valuation roll is £200.

7661. And what stock has it?—There are over 2000 of a stock.

7662. Mixed stock?—Yes, ewe and wether.

7663. Cheviot?—No, blackfaced.

7664. What about Kyle?—I am afraid I don't know exactly at this moment.

7665. Mr Forsyth.—It is a wedder stock he has now, is it not?—I think about half and half.

7666. Mr Gordon.—What is the rent of Kyle Farm?—£440.

7667. Without the shooting?—Mr Ryrie values the shooting at £200, but that includes Ashaig.

7668. Could you give us any idea of the stock?—About 2000 blackfaced sheep.

7669. It ought to carry 2000 if fully stocked, is that your idea?—Yes; I have here also a report on the different farms in the parish of Strath, prepared by Mr Taylor and myself.

7670. Mr Gordon.—Excuse me one moment. There

BROADFORD, 19*th May* 1893.

(Signed) JAMES MACKINTOSH,
Factor for LORD MACDONALD.

(Signed) JOHN TAYLOR, Land Surveyor.

Broadford, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

is a small farm called Duisdale. What is the rent of it?—From Whitsunday next it will be £25.

7671. And the stock?—It is a flying stock; I really can't tell you. It is a sheep and cattle dealer who has the stock on it. I should think there will be about a couple of hundred sheep.

7672. What about Kilbride?—The rent is £70, and I think there will be 450 sheep on it, all ewes.

7673. Mr Macleod.—I see that you have given us here the amount of fair rent ordered to be paid when the rents were fixed and the amount of arrears ordered to be paid?—Yes.

7674. Which makes a total of £1535, 0s. 2d.?—Yes. The fair rent was of course ordered to be paid within the year, and the arrears were spread over a period of two years.

7675. But at the time the rents were fixed the crofters were due to the estate, according to the decision of the Crofters Commission, £1535, and to-day they are only due £533, 4s. 1d.?—At the time the rents were fixed, possibly before Whitsunday term, they were only perhaps due the amount of arrears ordered to be paid. During the first year after the fair rents were fixed they were due to the proprietor a year's rent and a certain proportion of the arrears. The arrears were not ordered to be paid at once.

7676. According to this statement, as I take it, the amount of the crofters' indebtedness to the estate at this moment is just a third of what it was when the rents were fixed?—Yes, that is so. I might mention in regard to these rents that the townships of Heast and Torrin, where the best crofts are, are most in arrear. And the smaller the crofts the less the arrears are. The following is the report on the farms.

REPORT on the Farms of STROLOMUS, LIVERAS, CORRY, KILBRIDE, SWORDALE, SUISNISH and BORERAIG, KYLE, and SCALPAY, the property of LORD MACDONALD.

STROLOMUS.

The farm as at present possessed by the heirs of the late Mr Alexander Campbell extends to 2203 acres, and is bounded on the north by the crofting townships of Dunan and Strolomus and sound of Scalpay, on the west and south-west by Torrin common hill, and on the east and south-east by the farm of Corry.

There are about 22 acres of old arable land, which is kept under permanent grass, with the exception of a small field kept under cultivation by the shepherd for the use of his cattle. The remainder of the farm is all under land mostly of inferior quality, and embracing Ben Dearg, 2323 feet above sea-level.

There is a little green pasture along the public road, where there is the appearance of a little cultivation having been done amongst the rocks, but although it affords fair good pasture it is in no way suited for cultivation, and besides the farm could not be deprived of it, there being very little green on the whole grazing; consequently it will only carry a blackfaced stock of sheep, although the neighbouring farm of Corry carries a Cheviot stock.

There is very little, if any, land on this farm that could be brought under cultivation, and the small portion mentioned as being under permanent grass is required in connection with the grazing; indeed the scarcity of good green pasture appears to be the greatest drawback in connection with this farm. The dwelling house is quite suitable for the farm, and the marches as at present are those recently rearranged by the Crofters Commission when fixing their fair rents for the crofters' common hills adjoining. The farm is of a size that should not be interfered with, should there be suitable land for crofters to cultivate—which there is not.

LIVERAS.

This farm is occupied by Mr John Mackinnon, and extends to 751 acres, of which 53 acres or thereby is arable land and kept under a regular rotation of cropping.

Broadford, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

This is more an agricultural than a grazing farm; and should feus be taken up and built upon in the neighbourhood of the new pier, as is being done, this would be a very desirable small farm for dairy purposes.

The farm is surrounded on three sides by the sea and on the fourth by the public road, along which there is a wire fence and stone dyke which entirely encloses the farm.

The arable land, which is situated close to the new pier, is composed mostly of good soil, worth being well farmed and properly treated, and is such as will yield a fair return for labour.

There is also a small field under permanent grass at Camus-Sgianadan, at north end of farm, but the soil here is not so good as the fields already mentioned.

Although these fields are well enough adapted for cultivation by a farmer, I do not think it would be desirable to break any of it up for the purpose of giving it to crofters. The outrun is small, and would not be sufficient for any number of well-to-do crofters,—such as would be in a position to build suitable houses in this locality.

The steading is very suitable for the farm as at present possessed, and the sitting tenant who recently erected the wire fence along the public road intends building a suitable dwelling-house.

CORRY.

Presently tenanted by Mr Murdoch Murchison, extends to 3867 acres, of which 20 acres or thereby is arable and permanent grass, and is bounded on the north by Liveras and Scalpay Sound, on the east by Swordale, on the south by Kilbride, and on the west by Strolomus and Torrin common hill.

The farm along Kilbride and Swordale marches consists of good mixed pasture, partly low-lying and liable to be flooded along the Broadford River, part of which has at one time been under cultivation. There is also a strip of land stretching from the present dwelling-house in a northerly direction, to the public road leading to Broadford, a distance of about 1300 yards and about 300 yards broad, that has at one time been under cultivation and is now under fog and fern.

This part, in which there are some small spots of good soil, is a good deal interspersed with rock, and turf, and stone-dykes, and it would entail a very great deal of manual labour to bring it into good arable land by levelling down the old dykes and removing the stones. The dwelling-house and steading are suitable to the farm as at present occupied.

The hill grazing, which extends to the top of Benna-caillich and Ben-Dearg, 2403 and 2323 feet high, is entirely moorland with very little mixture of grass. All the green pasture is along the parts mentioned, and without which the remainder of the farm would be of very little value. Whether let to one tenant or to crofters, the green land on the east of the farm and the hill should go together, as there is no green pasture on the west side, where the hill is dry and black, and useless without a change of better pasture.

KILBRIDE.

The farm is presently occupied by Mr John Anderson, and extends to 1877 acres, of which 40 acres or thereby is arable at Kilbride House, but is rocky and uneven and cannot be close cultivated.

The boundaries of the farm are as follows: on the north by Corry farm and glebe; on the east by Swordale; on the south by Suisnish and Boreraig; and on the west by Loch Slapin. The farm, with the exception of a strip along the public road from the west end of Loch-Cille-Chriosd to the parks, is composed of black moorland, very rocky at the west side, and on the whole rather inferior pasture.

The strip of green pasture mentioned along the public road, and which appears to have been partly cultivated at some time, covers thin soil much broken up with rocks and not at all suited for cultivation.

We know of no land on this farm that could be profitably cultivated by crofters or any one else, even the parks would pay the tenant better, should he have them sown out with grass seed and left as permanent grass.

The dwelling-house and offices are suitable for the farm on its present boundaries.

Suisnish and Boreraig.

This farm, which extends to 2880 acres, is at present occupied by Mr Malcolm Macinnes, and is bounded on the north by Kilbride farm, on the east by Heast common hill, on the south by Loch Eishart, and on the west by Loch Slapin. At Suisnish on the west side, at the mouth of Lochs Slapin and Eishart, about 80 acres of land had at one time been under cultivation extending from Ault-a'-Mhuilin along the shore to the east of Rhudha Suisnish. The old arable, which is now under grass and heather, with the exception of the shepherd's park and a small piece occupied by a cottar, is very steep and would be difficult to labour, the rocks along the shore at the place are also very steep, and we think it would be next to impossible to land up seaweed. This point being as mentioned at the entrance of the two lochs is very much exposed to the westerly winds; it is two miles from the nearest public road, to which there is only a very rough footpath, and about 3¾ miles from the nearest public school at Torrin. This point forms all the green pasture on the west side of the farm, the part lying behind and to the north and east being moorland.

At Boreraig on the shore of Loch Slapin, and distant about three miles from the public road leading to Broadford, there are about 50 acres of old arable, which is very much broken up by rocks, and, with the exception of the shepherd's park and about another two acres, is under green pasture.

The two parts mentioned are the only green pasture on the farm, the remainder being moorland. Neither place is well adapted for cultivation, the one being too thin and rocky to yield a fair return, and the other, although better soil, is, as already mentioned, too steep and much too exposed. The farm throughout is well sheltered and very compact, being surrounded on two sides by Lochs Slapin and Eishart, and of a size that would easily let.

Should crofters be put on the shores of either Loch Slapin or Loch Eishart, the farm, as a sheep grazing, would be useless.

Swordale.

This small farm is at present occupied by Mr James Ross and extends to 1859 acres, of which about 65 acres are arable and permanent grass. It is bounded on the north by Corry and Broadford Bay, on the east by Upper Harrapool, on the south by Kilbride, and on the west by Corry. With the exception of the arable land mentioned and a little green pasture adjoining the glebe lands and Corry farm, the remainder is moorland, embracing Ben Suardal. Except the land at present under cultivation, and which is well farmed, there is no other part of the farm that could be cultivated; a good part of what is enclosed is under grass as being unfit for cultivation.

The farm, which is small, is at present used as much as an agricultural as a grazing one, and being in the neighbourhood of the hotel and village of Broadford, suits better, we should think, with a fairly mixed stock of horses, cattle, and sheep. This farm, and a few others in the parish, appear to us to be of a size that, should a proportion of them be suited for cultivation, it would not be judicious to curtail them in any way. This farm of Swordale in particular would not let readily if the arable and grazing portions were separated. The present tenant has considerably improved the land both by fencing and draining.

Scalpay Island.

The island is at present let to Mr Robert Ryrie, and extends to 6098 acres. The parks at Scalpay House are partly cultivated and partly under permanent pasture, and extend to about 70 acres, part of which is soft and boggy.

A small herd of Highland cattle are kept, and all this land is necessary for producing winter keep. This is all the arable or green land on the island, except two small parks used by the shepherds, the remainder of the island being moorland with in places a mixture of green grass. Along the shore between Corran-na-chinn-Uachdavaich and Scalpay House small patches of poor land have been cultivated many years ago, but there is really no land on the island fit for cultivation except about 15 or 20 acres of the 70 acres in the parks at the house.

The proportion of green grass on the island is barely sufficient to give justice to the sheep, but every part that could be cultivated and converted into green grass appears to have been taken advantage of. Many years ago, probably seventy years back, the then tenant, who only kept a cattle stock, cultivated every available part, not for the purpose of getting a paying return, but so as to produce winter keep for his cattle. Should the island have been under sheep at the time, those few patches of cultivation on such miserable soil would never have been made. The island, taken as a whole, is fairly good grazing and suitable for a sheep run, but not at all suitable for cultivation, nor for crofters, as it would be necessary to build a school, &c. &c., it would be grazing and not cultivation they would have to depend upon. The dwelling-house is a good substantial building, with a good garden attached, and both it and the steading are very suitable for the grazing.

Kyle.

This farm is at present occupied, as also the shootings, by Mr Robert Ryrie, and extends to 9490 acres, of which 15 acres are arable near Kyle House and about 23 acres under permanent grass at Lusa Bridge. The farm is bounded on the north-east and south by the sea, and on the west by Ashaig, Breakish, and Kylerhea crofts.

At the top of Loch-na-Beiste a small piece of old arable is still green, and at the Rudha-na-Caillich on the south end of the farm, and where one of the shepherds now lives, a good deal of cultivation had at one time been done, but the soil is very inferior, being thin, wet, and spongy, and situated over two miles from the public road at Kylerhea.

The whole farm, with the exception of these spots, is composed of rough moorland, partly covered with natural birch wood and all quite unsuited for cultivation. Beinn-na-Caillich, which is the highest hill on the farm, rises to 2396 feet above sea-level.

The proportion of arable land on the farm to grazing is smaller than on any other of the sheep farms on the Macdonald estates, consequently, little or no cattle can be kept for want of wintering.

The farm on its present marches is very compact, being surrounded by the sea on three sides, so that a wire fence of about six miles long along the remaining side would enclose the whole farm.

After carefully examining all the most likely places we are unable to see any ground that could be profitably brought under cultivation; the greatest drawback in connection with the farm being the want of sufficient good pasture or green land.

Note. After going very carefully over all farms in this parish belonging to Lord Macdonald, with a view to looking for land that could be profitably brought under cultivation, we see none that could be so occupied, except perhaps the small portions at present kept under cultivation by the present tenants, and in most cases that would not (even should it not damage the farm to take it) be sufficient for more than two or three ordinary crofters in each farm. Upon the whole, therefore, we are of opinion that no part of any of these farms should be cut up for crofting purposes; but if cut, the crofters should get the whole, so as to have the bad land as well as the good patches.

BROADFORD, May 19, 1893.

(Signed) JAMES MACKINTOSH,
Factor for Lord Macdonald.
" JOHN TAYLOR, Land Surveyor.

7677. The Chairman.—Is that report signed?—Yes, it is signed by Mr Taylor and myself.

7678. We will take Mr Taylor as concurring in the report.

7679. Mr Macleod.—You say in your joint report that this farm of Suisnish and Boreraig is not suitable for small tenants?—No, I don't think it is.

7680. But you stated in the course of putting a question to-day, that you had advertised it to let for small tenants?—They did not come forward, and they are better judges of what suits them than I am.

7681. But what I want to be at, is this. You come to us and say that these places are not suitable for small tenants, and yet you yourself admit that you advertised it for small tenants?—Yes, I consider when the crofters did not offer for it, they must be better judges of what was suitable for them than I am.

7682. So that the statement contains your opinion, converted by the crofters?—Yes.

7683. Did you think the evidence to-day went to controvert your statement, that they did not want to get there?—There was an opportunity given.

7684. But can you give us the conditions that were attached?—Mr Macdonald is here who drew up the advertisement, and I believe Lord Macdonald was quite willing to let it to eight or nine substantial crofters, and to treat with them for the stock. The stock was in his own hands.

7685. What was the particular point on which they differed?—There were none applied for it, as far as I know.

7686. You had nothing whatever to do with it personally?—No, it was before my time.

7687. Mr Sutherland.—You, of course, know the terms of the remit to us, and the object of our inquiry?—Yes.

7688. And I take it generally—I do not wish to trouble you to go into details—I think the purport of the paper you have read, is, that you cannot help us in this object, by pointing out land suitable for the purposes for which we have been appointed?—Not land that could be cultivated with profit to crofters.

7689. You have heard the evidence that has been given by crofters here?—Yes.

7690. They have a very different opinion?—They have.

7691. You have just said, in answer to a question by Mr Macleod, that you thought in a certain circumstance, they were the best judges of what was good for themselves?—Certainly.

7692. Why do you exclude them from their judgment in this case?—They do not always know what is best for themselves.

7693. Only in the case where they agree with your opinion?—I don't fail to state it then when they agree with my opinion; but at the present moment, I think some of them have not been quite so successful as they might have been.

7694. I suppose that would apply to a good number of people besides crofters?—No doubt.

7695. They are in hopes of good times coming with lower rents and higher prices, and they think they will be successful. We look around, and see that the crofters in the parish of Strath have undoubtedly the best grazing land in the parish?—Yes.

7696. Better than the farmers have?—Yes.

7697. That is your opinion?—Yes.

7698. I think you said, that if the lands were to be taken at all, they should be taken in whole?—Yes.

7699. Now, I take it from that statement, that if the lands were taken in whole, a good number of your objections would be removed. Is that so?—A good many of my difficulties would.

7700. Of the difficulties?—Yes.

7701. But do not your difficulties determine your objections?—Not always. One great difficulty would be, what would have to be done with 7000 or 8000 acres of the farm of Kinloch, if the farmers got 2000.

7702. Take them over altogether?—Take them over altogether; good and well. Give the landlords security for the rent, and fix a fair rent.

7703. And then all your objections would be overcome?—If they pay their rents.

7704. To whom they were due?—To whomsoever they were due.

7705. And in that case?—Oh, take over the whole island.

7706. Would that apply also to a farm, as well as to the whole area of an island in your opinion?—I think if you take over the few farms there are in the parish of Strath, you may take over the whole island.

7707. You do not look upon farms as entities in themselves; it is the island of Skye you look upon as an entity—I mean in wishing anything of that kind to be done. If these difficulties were removed, you would have no objection to the land being taken over?—I have no objection to the land being given to crofters or others, if there be fair rents fixed, and security given to the proprietors.

7708. So your fear is not for the crofters not succeeding, but for the landlords suffering?—My fear is for the landlords suffering. I have no fear the crofters will succeed if they get all that they expect for nothing.

7709. For nothing! That is a most important qualification?—They expect to get it for nothing.

7710. Who said that to us?—They expect to get money to stock it.

7711. Do you deliberately say, Mr Mackintosh, from the evidence they have given here, that they expect to get it for nothing?—No, not exactly, but a witness here to-day fixed a fair rent for his own croft at £11, and he would have to pay interest on money borrowed as well as that.

7712. That was one witness?—That was one witness. He could not live a couple of years at that.

7713. That was one out of many. I don't think you would yourself, upon consideration, say that the people would expect to get it for nothing, judging by the evidence you have heard?—Oh, they don't expect to get it for nothing.

7714. But on reasonable terms?—I don't suppose they expect it on reasonable terms.

7715. You don't?—No.

7716. Mr Maccallum.—You admit, I suppose, that the present holdings are congested?—Some of them are.

7717. Which of those?—The two townships of Breakish are congested.

7718. And Luib, and round that point?—Well, Luib and these places are fishing lots.

7719. But are they not too small even for that?—No, I don't think they are. I think they would make a mistake if they asked big crofts that would take them away from their living.

7720. But you admit that there are several townships that are congested?—There are.

7721. Is there any remedy at all, that you can suggest yourself for the amelioration of their condition?—If they get crofts of a suitable size, and security was given for the rent, and that the landlord would not suffer to the same extent as has formerly been the case.

7722. The Chairman.—That is not an answer to the question.

7723. Mr Maccallum.—Is there land in the parish that could be formed into lots for which they could roadford, kye — ames Iackintosh.

pay a fair rent and have a profit for themselves?—No, I am not aware of any place of any extent where they could be settled down, where burdened with the fair rent and interest on money borrowed for stock and cattle, they could meet their liabilities.

7724. What can be done for them at all?—Well, I am sorry to say that I am hardly in a position to answer that. It is for the men to find that out. I say that without meaning any disrespect to the gentlemen before me.

7725. Then you spoke of Lord Macdonald's estate being more burdened with crofters than any other estate in Skye?—Yes, and I don't know but what I said in Scotland, which includes Skye.

7726. And they are burdens that you wish to throw off?—We should have our own share of them only.

7727. When did they come to be considered burdens by Lord Macdonald?—I don't know if Lord Macdonald ever considered them burdens.

7728. But you represent him?—I said he was burdened with them.

7729. And he does not see how he could bear the burden of them?—He does not see why he should bear more than his share of them.

7730. Well, but can he find available land then for his own share of them?—If he has none to give, he can't find it.

7731. It comes to this, then, that they are considered by you as burdens that must be thrown off?—I did not say that they are burdens that must be thrown off.

7732. That make you very uncomfortable?—If they are allowed to subdivide and increase and not to move out of the country to obtain their livelihood elsewhere, I certainly say they become burdens.

7733. Do not they object to subdivision as well as you?—They do now; but even at the present moment I have as much to do as I can sometimes to get them from subdividing still.

7734. But you don't offer them land on which they could settle?—No, I don't.

7735. Then, taking the whole island of Skye, do you think there is land on which the crofters or the surplus of them that would require to be removed from the townships could be settled?—I don't know the whole island.

7736. I would just call your attention to a question and the reply that was given to it before the Napier Commission in this place. This is the question put by Professor Mackinnon. "But even with the enlarged crofts, and supposing they were spread over some of the tacks of the country to the utmost reasonable extent, emigration would still have to form some solution of the problem for the improvement of the people." The reply is, "I think if an opening could be found for them in the different places in the country, the question of emigration might be deferred o a future generation."

7737. Do you agree with that reply?—I don't think I should be asked whether I agree with it.

7738. Do you agree with that reply?—I will take nothing to do with it; I have not read the evidence before or after it, and I don't know the context.

7739. You will give no opinion as to that?—I will not.

7740. Then the next question by Professor Mackinnon is, "It would come?" and the reply is, "Well, we would not see the necessity for it, if they could get those holdings at home." Do you agree with that answer—that there would be no need of emigration if they got these holdings at home?—Well, I think that some people would have to emigrate. If the island of Skye was cut out into small holdings, such as you describe, or such as you desire, the public burdens—the poor rates—would become so heavy, that it would be a serious matter how they could be paid. How would the poor be supported? The local rates would not be sufficient.

7741. And you think that emigration would need to form part of any scheme for ameliorating the condition of the people?—I certainly think that any person thinking of emigration should be encouraged. Broadford, Skye.

7742. I will put it in this way to you. This answer was given by Dr Mackinnon of Strath?—I suspected it was he, and he was a better judge of the matter than I am. James Mackintosh.

7743. You considered he was a very good judge?—Yes.

7744. Are you aware, too, that he was not against emigration; that he considered emigration a very good thing?—I do not know his views sufficiently to say that.

7745. I think we may take it that this is the position; he thought that emigration in certain cases would be a very desirable thing, but he did not see after all the necessity of it; and don't you think he was a very good judge?—He certainly ought to be.

7746. He was very long in this place, and that was his opinion.

7747. Mr Munro.—I should like to put one question suggested by an answer given to Mr Maccallum. You stated, I think, that if the people were put back upon the land, the numbers that are now claiming land, the poor rates would increase very much, and the condition of life in the island would become perfectly intolerable and unbearable?—Yes.

7748. Is it not the case that the poor rates increased as the people were put off the land?—No, I don't think so. I think there are more crofters in Skye now than there were 100 years ago, or for that matter 50 years ago.

7749. I think it will be within your recollection that at Portree, Mr John G. Mackay submitted a statement showing that as the people were removed from the soil the poor rates increased?—He may have done that with regard to one parish, but I don't think he made any mention of the parish of Strath.

7750. My recollection was that his statement was with reference to the whole of Skye. Now assuming that statement to be true, is it not a fair inference that if the people were put back on the land the poor rates would diminish?—I don't think so.

7751. You are a gentleman of great experience in land matters and you know Skye thoroughly. The question was put to you by Mr Maccallum whether you could suggest any remedy for the present state of discontent among the crofters. Now have you considered that a little further since he put the question?—Oh, I considered that long long ago.

7752. And you have no remedy to suggest?—I have plenty. Provide me, or provide a committee of gentlemen who have the same experience or more, with the amount of money that these Commissions have cost since the first was appointed, and we will satisfy every crofter in the Highlands.

7753. So you think that what is wanted in order to satisfy the crofters in Skye is charity?—Not charity.

7754. Or the distribution of money?—No. Distribute the money among the many and not among the few.

7755. Well, but that is charity, I take it?—No, I don't think it is charity.

7756. Any other remedy you have to suggest?—Emigration—inducements to emigrate.

7757. Then you do not agree with Mr Mackinnon that provision could be made for them in land?—No, I don't think that sufficient holdings could be found in Skye for the number of people who would expect to take holdings in it. Sufficient holdings, I mean, to enable them to make a livelihood out of it.

7758. That is for the present population of Skye?—Yes.

7759. But seeing that they manage to live on their present scant holdings, is it not possible that if they got them even slightly increased they might become more comfortable?—No, I don't know a crofter to-day—and some have got very nice holdings, some of them have got better holdings than any of the witnesses described to-day, and I don't think any of them are able to take their living out of it.

Broadford, Skye.

James Mackintosh

7760. Mr Sutherland.—Did not you yourself describe to us a holding that showed £27 to the good?—Yes, but none of the crofters on this property have got any such holding.

7761. But they might have them in the future?—Yes, but if you divide Skye into holdings of that extent there will not be enough for the people. You will leave a great many people without any at all.

7762. A great number of people would be required to furnish them with the necessities of life. I mean tradesmen and shopkeepers and people engaged in commerce.

7763. The Chairman.—Are you to be at Isleornsay to-morrow?—I am.

7764. If I find it necessary to put a few questions after perusing this report, I suppose you will have no objections?—No objections.

Alexander Macdonald.

ALEXANDER MACDONALD, Factor for Sir William Mackinnon—examined.

7765. The Chairman.—Do you wish to make a statement?—I don't want to go into the whole question. Your Honours have seen Strathaird and know the nature of the land, and you can judge how far it suits the purpose you have in view. You saw it for yourselves, so I am not going to offer any remarks such as have been offered on other estates on that point. I merely make one general observation, and that is that the breaking up of a compact subject is one of the most difficult things possible with justice to all concerned. If there is a small moderate-sized sheep farm it is a unum quid, and it is almost impossible to break that up without doing serious damage to some one. I was also going to point out the large expenditure which Sir William Mackinnon laid out on his property. He bought it only five years ago, I think, at a cost of £15,000; but he has spent about £12,000 since then on the estate, and the crofters got the benefit of a great part of this expenditure. Of course there were contractors, but the crofters got work to do. In connection with the farm of Kirkibost and Kilmaree, he built a large set of offices which cost £1200 or £1300. He also made a road for the benefit of his tenants and himself to Elgol, a place which was quite inaccessible before. Of course it is a private road, and is not given over to the public; but practically they have the use of it, though it is a private road belonging to the proprietor and his tenants. Sir William spent £2500 on that road. Then he made a great many other minor improvements. The churchyard there was in a disgraceful state; he put a fine wall round it and improved the site generally. That is all I wish to say, unless the Commissioners would like to put any question.

7766. Mr Sutherland.—Who maintains the road that is made to Elgol?—Sir William Mackinnon maintains it out of his own pocket.

[ADJOURNED.]

NINTH SITTING.

ISLEORNSAY, SKYE, MAY 20, 1893.

Present:—

DAVID BRAND, Esq., Advocate, Sheriff of Ayr, and Chairman of the Crofters Commission, Chairman.
MICHAEL HUGH SHAW STEWART, Esq., M.P.
ANGUS SUTHERLAND, Esq., M.P.
JAMES NOEL MULLER FORSYTH, Esq.
GEORGE GORDON, Esq.
REV. MALCOLM MACCALLUM.
JOHN MACLEOD, Esq.
HENRY MUNRO, Esq.
WILLIAM MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary.

7767. The Chairman.—I may mention at the outset of the proceedings here that the townships in our list have been arranged in a certain geographical order, and naturally that order should be followed; but it has been represented to me that there is one general witness from a special township who is in a position to submit a written statement applying to the whole of the townships in the district. I accordingly propose to take his evidence prior to that of the others; but before doing so there is one general witness at the head of the list who should probably come first of all, as I understand his statement will be of even a wider scope. I shall, therefore, call first the name of Myles Macinnes, Portree.

MYLES MACINNES, Merchant, Portree (32). Myles Macinnes.

7768. The Chairman.—You belong to this district?—I belong to this district.

7769. And to the township of Drumfearn, I believe?—Yes.

7770. Do you propose to submit a written statement?—I have a written statement here which deals generally with the parish, and gives the acreage under farmers and under crofters, &c. Part of it again deals with a general statement regarding the island. I may say that apart from the interest I have taken in the proceedings of this Commission, I was instructed by the League of which I am secretary to make a general statement before the Commission left the island.

7771. Read it, if you please.—The lands in the parish of Sleat at present in the hands of farmers, which should be immediately available for crofters' holdings, and which can be cultivated to profit, are the following farms, the table showing area, total rent, and rent per acre:—

Farm.	Acreage.	Total Rent.	Rent per acre.
		£ s	s. d.
Tormore, Gillen, and Ostaig	9,450	325 0	0 8¼
Knock	1,750	180 0	2 1½
Ord	6,410	240 0	0 9
Duisdalemore	1,040	73 10	1 4½
Kinloch	8,320	200 0	0 5¾
	26,970	1018 10	0 9½

7772. That includes both arable and grazing?—Yes, both arable and grazing. Thus there is in Sleat an area of 26,970 acres, occupied by five individuals at a rent of £1018, 10s., which shows the average price per acre paid by them to be 9½d. Now consider the area occupied by the crofting population of Sleat. I find that the entire ground, including arable, outrun, and common pasture, tenanted by the crofters of Sleat, amounts to 12,018 acres 0 roods 23 poles. For this there is a rent paid of £623; this is the fair rent, which is at the rate of 1s. 0½d. per acre. The number of crofters in the parish is 247 or thereabout, showing that the average individual croft, including arable, outrun, and grazing, is but a modest 49⅓ acres. This amount of land is adequate grazing for no more than sixteen sheep; in other words, the average crofter has an extent of land sufficient to rear only sixteen head of sheep.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

7773. Next let us turn to one or two ordinary crofting villages, to examine the actual condition of things in particular instances. Drumfearn in the north of Sleat has 68 acres 2 roods 31 poles of arable land, 75 acres 3 roods 31 poles of outrun, and 1340 acres pasture, amounting in all to about 1486 acres. The whole rent for the village is £54, 19s., being at the rate of 8½d. per acre. On this land they keep an entire stock of the equivalent of 740 sheep. This shows that the actual pasture for a sheep is but two acres, including arable and all. Take next the township of Camuscross, further south. Here the total area is 495 acres 1 rood 3 poles. The gross rent of the village is £69, 15s., showing that the rent is charged at the rate of 2s. 10d. an acre. Leaving the parish of Sleat, I find that on Lord Macdonald's estate in the parish of Strath, the farm of Kyle pays only 5d. per acre, and Boreraig and Suisnish 10d. per acre, while in the same parish the crofting township of Harrapol pays 11½d. per acre. On the same estate, and in the parish of Portree, the farm of Glenvarigil, with an area of 3740 acres and a rent of £110, pays at the rate of 7d. per acre, while the adjacent crofting township of Penifiler is charged 8d. per acre. Further north, in the same parish, the crofters of Drumuie are charged 1s. 1d. per acre, while the large farm of Scorrybreck, which has historic, agricultural, and pastoral fame, is rented only at the same figure. On the Kilmuir estates, the property of the heirs of the late Mr. Baird, the large farmers pay 1s. 1½d. per acre on the average, while the crofters of Bornaskitaig are rented on the average at 4s. 10d. per acre.

7774. So much for indisputable statistics, which are perfectly representative of the respective land rents charged against farmers and crofters all over the island; now for the examination of these facts, and for the stating of justifiable conclusions. Farming Sleat, then, pays 9½d. per acre, crofting Sleat 1s. 0½d.; a difference of 3d. per acre cheaper for the farmer. Thus the landlord gets 3d. per acre more from the crofter than from the farmer, and it is therefore plain that Lord Macdonald loses annually in pence three times the number of acres occupied by farmers, i.e., £337, 2s. 6d., by the fact of his having farmers and not crofters as tenants of those 26,970 acres. But the worst aspect for us of this fact is that according to the justice meted out to the farmers, the crofters of Sleat are overcharged to the extent of, in pence, three times the number of acres occupied by them, i.e., £150, 4s. 6d. annually. But this by the way. What I wish to make plain is that 3d. per acre of difference embodies far more injustice than the figure superficially shows. For let it be remembered that the crofters hold by selection the worst places available, and that the very fact of their being left in or sent to these holdings is proof that the land was considered too inferior for a farm. Secondly, it must be taken into consideration that the proportion of arable to outrun and pasture in crofters' holdings is enormously less than the corresponding proportion in large farms, for the simple reason that the greater part of those farms have once been cultivated by crofters.

7775. Can you state the proportion?—No, I have not got the actual figures of the porportion. Thirdly, the landlord never gave assistance to crofters for in any manner equipping their lands or houses, while such assistance he does give to farmers. For these three reasons, then, it is outrageous that crofters should be charged more than the agricultural value of the land, taking that to be for the sake of the argument, what the farmer pays. But so far from its being just that the crofters should pay more than the farmers, it is gross injustice that they should pay as much. For let it be remembered that the crofter has from of yore been busy in improving the soil. He has, in fact, reclaimed the whole of it. Of old, when his land was well fattened by improvements, and when it pleased his master's eye, marching orders were given, and the sheep run substituted. This has been the recognised historical routine. Moreover, when there came to be no worse place to which to remove the crofter, and when forcible emigration began to be resisted, the rent was carefully raised on his miserable patch. In fact, the crofting system has been a huge machine used by the landlords for draining bogs, and pasting a depth of soil to the faces of precipices, and then came the eviction or the increase of rent. In inevitable succession there recurred improvement, eviction, improvement, increase of rent. The crofter has increased the value of the land for the landlord, and for such kindness he receives the following tokens of esteem:—he is sent to land of worse than prairie value if possible, he has to pay for it more than the farmer pays for the improved land, and in his improvement he gets no assistance.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

7776. My conclusion, therefore, is that the crofter never got a fair chance, as his industry was never encouraged. But I am coming to conclusions more thoroughgoing than this. If we look at the farms of Skye, we will see that of all the forty-five farms only eight are tenanted by practical farmers depending entirely upon their farming profits. Fourteen are held by proprietors, eight by hotel-keepers, four by sporting-tenants, five by gentlemen of independent means, and six by merchants. With all these gentlemen farmers, sportsmen, and general absentees, it is obvious on the face of it that rents are not fixed by the actual value of the land in a competitive market, but by the extent of the superfluity of spend-thrift coin. Land, in short, is a sporting luxury, for which a fancy price is paid. To prove the truth of this allegation, I shall mention a number of excellent practical farmers who, in my recollection, had either to make haste to escape from competition with these fancy farmers, or had to succumb to the extortion. I begin with one who was an extensive farmer here, and who has some connection with the parish yet,—I refer to Mr Macdonald, Tormore, who still has the Isleornsay stores. Then comes Mr Mackinnon, who had the farm of Kyle and Kinloch; Mr Martin, who succeeded him, and who had to give it up; Mr Bower, Strathaird—some of those that I have mentioned are dead, but all the same they had to give up farming—Mr McRae, Camusunary; Mr McRae, Glasnakill; Mr McRae, Glenvarigil; Mr Macleod of Scorrybreck; Mr Macleod, Duntulm; Mr McCrae, Ose; and Mr Mitchell, Kingsburgh. These were all obliged to give up their holdings—some of them were ruined, and others gave them up in time. Nothing can in my opinion account for the general failure of the man who depends entirely on his farm but an exorbitant rent charged. Thus it is clear that the farmers are over-rented; and much more, therefore, are the crofters. This also shows that the crofters have stood the strain of hard times and injustice quite as well as the farmers.

7777. In regard to remedies for the present grievances, I beg to submit some clauses which I proposed some time ago as desirable amendments to the present Crofters Act.

7778. The following are the proposals which I made with the concurrence of some and the most of the people of Skye, and those that were taking an interest in their behalf:—

1. That Government loans be given through the County Council to stock new and enlarged holdings, and to build suitable steadings of properly slated houses, and that the loan, interest and capital, be repaid by annual instalments extending over thirty years.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

There are two or three reasons in connection with this that I should like the Commission to look at, and I may just briefly mention these. There is the disadvantage of having to cut rushes for thatching the houses, instead of using it for wintering their own sheep. That it keeps a man mostly all the year round to keep three houses in proper thatch. If the house was slated the man could use his labour entirely for improving the soil.

2. That each district committee report to the County Council the loans considered necessary for each district, and that the County Council investigate the claims, and be directly responsible to Government for collecting the successive instalments.

3. That loans be not given to fewer than five applicants.

4. That no townships be eligible for a loan without first putting their sheep on a joint stock or club farm system.

5. That every company or township that gets a Government loan must keep a qualified shepherd in constant employment, and that the shepherd be responsible to two men annually appointed and to the parish or district Councillor.

6. That it be illegal to keep on a holding more than the specified stock, but that a shareholder may let his grazing to the extent of his deficit in horses, cows, or any other animals grazed in the township not in the joint or sheep stock.

7. That any crofter or number of crofters who are able and willing to stock their own share of the joint stock township independent of Government assistance may become shareholders.

8. That no landlord be entitled to let shootings—(this is perhaps rather strong according to the present ideas)—that no landlord be entitled to let shootings or loch and river fishing on township holdings, but that the township singly or collectively be so entitled; and that it be part of the shepherd's duty to protect the game and fish.

I hold that the landlord should only get one rent, and I hold that it is not good enough that the landlord would put a man on my croft or on my farm to rear up animals which I put down as vermin, and that he should be interested in making these as profitable and as plentiful as possible; and that the more rent he gets for this grouse moor or forests, or rabbits, or whatever it is, the more they eat of the crofters' stock or crop. Therefore I hold that if these rents are to be given to the landlord, you never get at a fair rent for the crofter, while he is encouraged by keeping a man on to keep stock that is eating up what belonged to the farmer or to the crofter. I think that the one rent should be fixed, so that the man who had the land should reap everything that was growing on it or feeding on it.

9. That all proceeds of joint stock be banked in name of each township till the annual balance, when after payment of expenses (1) his due share shall be given to each shareholder who did not receive Government aid; (2) the annual Government instalment made over to the District Committee, who shall remit the same to the County Council; and (3) the balance divided among the shareholders.

10. That joint stock and houses be security for the Government loan till the payment of the last instalment; that rent accruing from shootings and fishings be security for the rent. I suppose the crofters then would be interested in letting to a sportsman the ground game or winged game or fowls, which although they would get full liberty of themselves, one man would take advantage of it and another would not. I think they could make something out of it by having the whole thing. It would be to their advantage, and it would not be too much, to have a reasonable amount of shooting on the lands, but I would give this as a security to the landlord for the rent. This is the statement, my lord.

7779. Is that the whole of it?—That is the whole of it.

7780. Do you submit that statement on behalf of all the townships that are being heard to-day?—Yes, and I may add a few remarks about one or two townships. In the Aird, there are twenty crofts, and there are forty-six crofters, I think. The cottars are not very numerous in this end of Sleat; there are a few, but not so many as in the other end of Skye. They have very small holdings as a rule, and the township of Aird is very much congested. It lies near Tormore and Gillan, and marches across to Calligarry on this side, and on to Achnacloich and Tarskavaig, and Tokavaig comes between them and Ord. The farm of Ord marches with Drumfearn, so that the farms are contiguous to all the crofter holdings. Then we come to Teangue and Saasaig on the other side of Knock; then to Camuscross and Baravaig; the south part of Knock marches with it, and is quite suitable and within easy access of it. Then there is Duisdalemore marching with Drumfearn, and Kinloch on the other side. Kyle Rhea is a very small township, with very small crofts; they have first-class pasture beside them, but they have no sheep, and depend entirely on the fishing. I know there are some in the parish of Sleat, who would migrate, and some places suitable for migration, but the most of it is more suited for enlargement of holdings to the people who already hold it. If some people were taken out of the most congested townships the rest would have good land in the neighbourhood to increase their arable and pasture land.

7781. You have given us a number of figures here; are these the result of your own calculations?—Yes. I may be a little wrong in them.

7782. What I mean is, do you make yourself responsible for these figures, so far as they are correct?—Yes, entirely.

7783. This statement is written out by yourself?—By myself entirely. I think I am pretty correct in the figures, but I may have made some mistakes. The reason why I made up the comparison as to the farmers' and the crofters' rent was that I had been hearing so much said in previous evidence in regard to the larger rent that landlords were getting from farmers, and more benefit. I believe if I had access to their books for the last twenty years I would be able to show that the landlords have lost fully as much by the farmers as by the crofters, in the island of Skye. I went over a few statistics dealing with other places in Skye, and I found that the crofter pays the higher rent.

7784. Mr Shaw Stewart.—I should like to ask a few questions about the statement you have read, which is of some importance. First, with regard to your comparison of the rate per acre, paid by the farm land and the crofter land respectively: comparing a rate of 9½d. with one of 1s. 0½d., might not that show that there is a large extent of poor land on the farms, as well as good land?—No, it cannot show that, because any man who has any knowledge of land will see at a glance that in all Skye the best land is farmer's; that is an indisputable fact.

7785. But looking at the figures only, without seeing the land, would it not occur to any one that that is a possible explanation of the difference in the figures? On paper a smaller rent per acre, with a larger acreage, might mean that there is a great amount of rough hill ground, which would not bring in so much rent under crofters?—But I will tell you that is not the case with all those farms that I have mentioned. I know them intimately, and have walked through them, and while that might be the case elsewhere, it is not so here. It might be put in that way, certainly.

7786. It is open to that construction?—You could put anything on the paper.

7787. Mr Sutherland.—Mr Shaw Stewart means that if that were the case, it would be an explanation?—Yes.

7788. Mr Shaw Stewart.—I don't want to alter your opinion, but I only wish to point out that figures are capable of more than one construction. Then you go on to say that by letting their land in this way to large farmers instead of to crofters, the landlords lose a good deal of rent that they might otherwise gain.—Yes, I hold that strongly.

Isleornsay, Skye. Myles Macinnes.

7789. But you went on to say that it is unjust that crofters should pay as much rent as farmers?—So it is, because they improve all their own land; the farmer gets money for improvements, he gets houses and fences erected for him, but the crofter gets nothing.

7790. But those two statements rather contradict each other?—No, I don't think so, because each deals with its own side of the case. The farmer here gets houses built for him, and he gets the benefit of the crofter who has been removed, who brought the land into an agricultural state. I will not say that it was brought into first-class agricultural condition, but it was taken in by the crofter from the state of nature to the state of green, which it now shows. If you lift a crofter township, you will find the land is worth half as much rent again for the next twenty years; after that it deteriorates in value as it goes under moss. In this country I believe the land is reduced too much by the cultivation of the crofters, and on the other hand it is allowed to go too much to a state of nature by the farming tenants.

7791. Follow me for a moment. You say the landlords have lost an opportunity by not letting a great amount of this area to crofters?—I believe so.

7792. They might get more than the rate of 9½d.?—They might.

7793. You then compare that with land which is at present let to crofters at 1s. 0½d. per acre, yet you say that crofters really ought not to pay as much as farmers; therefore is 1s. 0½d. too high a rate?—It is much too high in the present circumstances. That does not affect my conclusion that both are over-rented, but the crofter higher rented than the farmer.

7794. Surely it comes to this, that there would not be such a very large inducement to landlords to let to crofters, if the crofters are too heavily rented at present? If this land were to be let to crofters (I quite understand your view that it is unexhausted land) it would have to be let at a lower rate than the crofters have been paying hitherto?—Yes, that has been proved by the Crofters Commission. The rents have been reduced already by the Crofters Commission, and I hold they have no right to be charged on their own improvements.

7795. Now with regard to these forty-five farms in Skye, I don't quite understand on what principle you have taken them. Are they taken at random, or from certain districts?—I actually know the men personally who occupy them.

7796. I don't question that, but I don't know them all. Have you taken a farm here and a farm there, or how?—These are the whole of the farms in Skye, every one of them, except that I omitted from them some home grounds such as Lord Macdonald's policies at Armadale, and the policies of Macleod, and places of that sort.

7797. You speak about fancy farmers, and the superfluity of spendthrift coin, as if there was no work at all for crofters in the laying out of the grounds of the fancy farms, or in making roads. Is there none of the superfluity of coin going to the crofters at all?—No, and it had not been going to the crofters. The benefits that the crofters got in my recollection from being beside a sheep farmer were very much worse than they are to-day.

7798. Pardon me a moment; I am not speaking only of the sheep farms, I am speaking of the fourteen proprietors, the eight hotel-keepers, the four sporting tenants, the five independent gentlemen, and the six merchants.—Some of them are absentees, living in another place; and I hold that no man can be a benefit to a community unless he lives among them.

7799. That is a matter of opinion, not a matter of fact.—It is a matter of fact I am about to give you. I know the farmers in Skye, and I say that a crofter spends more in the community, and is more useful to the community; if he could pay his way and support his family, he would be of more benefit than the farmer.

7800. That is further than my question went. My question only went so far as to ask if none of this superfluous coin went in wages to crofters at all?—Oh no, crofters get no share of it, nothing worth mentioning. You may count a few shepherds who are engaged in a place, but that is nothing; they are only getting a fair day's wage for their work. The farmer is bound to have these men; but it is nothing in comparison with the profit the crofter would have in having the land itself.

7801. That brings me to my next question. If the crofters were living on this land that you speak of, and the fancy farmers were no longer there, would there be any work for the crofters to rely on, in building houses or keeping up the roads?—There is nothing for the crofter just now; he does not get a day's work from the farmer. I was referring to shepherds, not crofters.

7802. I am speaking of other places besides sheep farms.—Every one of these is a sheep farm. There is no arable farm that has been used for work. There is no labour on any of them. I remember when a crofter might be employed in smearing the sheep; but now, since dipping came in, there is not a copper spent on the crofter.

7803. What work would the crofters get to rely on besides the working of their own crofts?—They would not require any work. And they would not have the same burdens to keep up as they have now, because every one would have land, and there is plenty land to keep them. Many of them become a burden on the parish at present, but the rates would be relieved by having the land more equitably distributed. I do not at all advocate that all the crofts should be on a level; I think they should be varying in size according to the place. Some of them would have the liberty of going to the fishing when it came round, and they would be just much about the same as they are at present; only I would like to get the place thinned out, so that there would be room to live.

7804. I understand your point, and I won't trouble you to make a statement in reply to every question, but I just want to know this. You think that except for those crofters who would be fishing, the other crofters who were not fishermen would not have to rely on outside work?—No, they certainly would not.

7805. You have considered that point?—Yes, I have often thought of it, and I see it daily.

7806. Well, but they would have not only to maintain themselves and their families, but they would have to repay the loan that you spoke of?—Yes. I speak as a man who has been actually working at this work myself; I know what it is, and what time it takes a man to thatch a house, and to keep in order three houses, a byre, a barn, and a stable, even without the storms that we have here in Skye. I know the labour that it is, and I know that a man would actually earn more than the interest on what the dwelling house would be.

7807. How?—By wages anywhere.

7808. Where would he get these wages?—He would get the wages out of his own soil if the croft was increased. He could spend more time in trenching it.

7809. But he would not get wages for trenching his own croft?—It would come in in the shape of wages. If he had land, and could spend on his land what he would spend in cutting and keeping in order the houses that he has to keep up to-day, I say that in two or three years you would see quite a different country.

7810. I quite understand your point about the cultivation of the croft, but what I want to point out is this. I may as well state that as far as I have been able to see very few witnesses wish to have a croft inland. Many witnesses have come

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

before us, and said they would rather have a croft near the sea where they could get to the fishing or something of that sort, and I want to find out whether in your opinion the crofters could maintain themselves entirely by their own crofts without getting wages for work elsewhere?—Certainly they would, and be very comfortable.

7811. But just now you said something about wages?—I compared wages with the man's work; I compare a man's work in earning a day's pay with the man keeping up his crofting.

7812. Improving his croft?—Ay, even improving his croft. A man who had not so much as would keep him improving his croft would earn as much in the ordinary way as a labourer in the country.

7813. But with the country in the condition in your mind, under crofters, what labour would they chiefly look to?—Well, there would be a great deal more labour in the country under the proposals that I made than they have just now.

7814. Such as?—Roadmaking, masons, joiners, and all trades would be busy in the place, whereas the farmer at present, with miles of land has only two or three shepherds, and he has all, even to his own clothes and boots, from London. There is nothing done in the country; the tradesmen get nothing and the crofters get nothing; and I failed to count in the township one out of 60, or even one out of 100, that gets even a day's pay.

7815. Then you think there could be work by cutting up the farms?—Far more work.

7816. And you think the crofters would need this work, because they would not be able to maintain themselves and repay the loan solely by working their own crofts?—Certainly, and every other work that would be in the parish in connection with that.

7817. Just answer my point. I don't wish to stop your statement; I understand what you mean, but do you agree with the opinion that a crofter must look for some outside work at some periods of the year besides the produce of his own croft, to maintain himself and repay his loan?—No, I do not, if he gets anything like a reasonable rent, and enough land to keep himself going, he must work.

7818. We are speaking of the ordinary croft of 20 acres.—With that croft the man should live independent of outside assistance.

7819. The croft that is desired, I mean?—Yes, even with 15 acres of arable and outrun for one horse and about 100 sheep a man could live without being in the reverence of any man, and as independent as any man in Scotland.

7820. He would not have to work?—On his own croft.

7821. Yes, but not for any other man?—No, not for any other man.

7822. Then there is one more question. You speak of the shootings in the hands of the proprietors now, and say it is to the interest of the shooting tenants to keep up the game which destroyed the crofters' crops, and therefore the only remedy would be to put down the game altogether?—Or give the game to the tacksman or to the tenants.

7823. Well, but if you give it to the tenants with the view of letting the shooting, you will have the same evil all over again?—No, they would have the benefit of the land themselves. They would see to what extent they could allow this to go, and they would soon find out the benefit of it.

7824. But everybody knows that a very few rabbits may do a great deal of damage in one night. —The winged game and others will do some damage, but the point just now is that it is the proprietor's interest to keep these plentiful, and the tenant's ruin.

7825. I understand what you are driving at there. But if the townships are to look to these shootings to make something out of them to help to repay this loan, it will be to the interest of the township to keep up the game, otherwise they will have very inferior shootings to offer in the market?—Certainly they would, but the benefit would be to themselves.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

7826. But their crops would get as much damage from the crofters' covey of grouse or the crofters' rabbits as from the landlord's, and they would eat just as much?—Yes, they would eat as much, but the crofters would have the profit of the whole thing; whereas at present their crops are eaten, and they get nothing for it.

7827. The damage would be done all the same?—The damage of it would be the same, but the injustice would not be the same.

7828. But still the damage would be done?—The damage would be done, if they allowed it to get very high; but they would have the thing in their own hands and could manage it to their own pleasure. I gave that statement in not as a benefit, but as a security to the landlord for the rent.

7829. But what I want to point out to you is that you can't eat your cake and have it too. If the township has a shooting to let, that means a certain amount of game on it; and if you have a certain amount of game, it is very difficult to keep game within limits. You must either have game or no game at all, and certainly that applies to rabbits. You cannot have what you call a "reasonable amount" of rabbits?—I am not taking rabbits into consideration, because at present they are not game, but I am talking of the ordinary winged game.

7830. Well, if the township wanted to get a good rent for their shooting, they would have to keep up a good stock of winged game; the damage which you say is done by the winged game to the crops would injure a good deal of the income which the crofter would derive from his croft?—But they would be able to see what profit and loss was in it.

7831. Well, but I am afraid they would see the loss?—If that is the case, then the loss is very great just now; it is enormous just now.

7832. If the loss is very great just now, it would be just as great then?—But they would have the more profit.

7833. They would have the profit of the shooting, you mean?—Yes.

7834. If they reduced the head of game, they would not get much for the shooting?—No, certainly not. But there are some moors in which winged game would live without doing much damage; they could be bred there and live there.

7835. What I wish to point out is that in a place with a shooting where the game does damage now, if you wish the crofters to flourish in the future, you must put down the game, and write it off your security —No, the winged game could be to a certain extent kept within limits under a shepherd, without very materially damaging the ground, and that would be a reasonable way of giving a little sport if the people wish to have it.

7836. But for a very little sport you would get a very low rent?—I don't myself count anything on the rent; I don't attach much importance to the rent.

7837. But you put it down as a security?—So it would be. But the landlord gets more from it just now, and it is entirely fed on the crofters' land.

7838. But you would either have to keep up the game pretty much as it is now, or else you would have to put it down altogether, and give up the shooting rent for the township?—If the crofters got the land, I suppose they would willingly take the responsibility of seeing what would happen to the winged game, and I have no doubt they would soon find out the advantage of it. I know what I would do with it.

7839. What would you do with it?—I would encourage them in some moors where they would not do much damage. The shepherd would be the only man looking after them, whereas just now there are keepers and shepherds and others.

7840. Mr Sutherland.—You have supplied figures regarding the relative rent paid by large farmers and by crofters, and you have made out that the farmer is paying 9½d. per acre against the crofter's 1s. 0½d. May I ask you where you got the acreage?—I did not take it off the Ordnance Survey map myself, but a friend of mine took it off for me. Part of the figures, those relating to Kilmuir, I took from the figures already given by the factor. I have no reason to believe that I am in any way above the acreage, because I took the figure from the other side, not from any one who had a bias.

7841. I am glad we have got them, because we were promised them and the promise was not kept. I thought the difference would be much greater. What distinction do you draw between a large croft and a farm?—Very few of the crofters we have here pay above £5 or £6, they have small pieces altogether.

7842. Is it altogether a matter of size?—Altogether a matter of size.

7843. So that a small sheep farm could be called a large croft, and a large croft a small farm?—The very same; I see no difference between them: in fact the word croft is a new name altogether.

7844. It is not a Highland word?—No, it is not.

7845. It was absolutely unknown in the Highlands before the time of the clearances?—Yes, it was unknown to me in my younger days; I never heard of it until after growing up. It was always "tenants."

7846. And the crofter system was formed for what purpose?—It was formed for reclaiming the land. I know one landlord in Skye that we had before the Crofters Commission, Captain Macdonald of Waternish, who admitted that he removed a township three times to reclaim land and to take in others.

7847. Now, as regards the relative value of the land, you stated, and I believe rightly stated, that the land in possession of the large farmer is very much better than the land in the occupation of the crofter at present?—Yes.

7848. Better as to what?—Better in quality, and better in situation, and in that way better in grazing.

7849. Why is it better in grazing?—Because it has places from which crofters have been removed; and if you remove a crofter township to-day, the land is worth a great deal more to a sheep farmer for a number of years, because they leave it green.

7850. What made it green?—Their cultivation.

7851. So it is the crofters in times past who gave the value to sheep farms that they have now?—The whole of it, in fact more than it is now worth, because it has now deteriorated.

7852. Why has it deteriorated?—Because it is growing moss, and rushes, and heather.

7853. What is the thing to put it right in your opinion?—Cultivation again; that is the only thing that I know. And the proprietors, as far as I can see, have realised that, because they had lands that they could not get anything like the rent for the large farm, and then they were turned into deer forest or shooting.

7854. Is it within your knowledge that the land under farms at the present time supports less stock per acre than it did before?—I put that down in the statement. Taking Drumfearn, the nearest township to here, I found that reducing the whole stock to sheep, and taking the whole area, arable along with pasture, they had only two acres for each sheep on an average. Excluding the arable, it would be something like one acre, and I don't know how they are making their livelihood. They are taking far more out of the land, even with their poor cultivation, than the tacksman.

7855. Going back for a moment to the rent, the computation of the rent you gave was taken, I presume, from the Report of the Crofters Commission?—Yes.

7856. And if you had taken the old rent instead of the fair rent, the difference would be very much more striking?—Very much greater.

7857. What was the general reduction given by the Commission in the places you have referred to?—Some 30 to 50 per cent.

7858. So that if you take that old rent, this comparison would be very much larger?—From 30 to 50 per cent. more.

7859. Then I think you mentioned with regard to sheep farms that a number of the occupants of them were non-resident?—Yes; that has been so.

7860. Now when large farmers are resident, do you find them very useful public men as a rule?—No, I don't know that they do any use as public men.

7861. Do they take an interest in the public matters of the district?—Very little; perhaps some of them who would like to get in as members of the Parochial Boards, or of the School Boards, or the County Council, may take a little, but as for encouraging the crofters about them, or in any way associating with them, they are of no value in the place.

7862. Do they look upon themselves as having their home elsewhere, and being to some extent strangers to this community?—In fact, they are the most of them complete strangers to this community. You may find one here and there a native, but very few.

7863. From the remarks in your statement I take it that it would be safe to say that the large farming system has been as great a failure as the crofter system?—I think so; and were it not backed up by the capitalist sportsmen, it would have been a much greater failure. The only way to look at it in which it is profitable is to the landlord, and when it would not pay the landlord, then he had to resort to letting the shootings.

7864. What your statement amounts to then is that while the rent for the grazing has been going down, the rent for sporting purposes has been going up?—Going up.

7865. Well now, with regard to the comparative value to a community of a man who works for wages—days' wages—and a man who works for profit to himself at the end of the year, I think you expressed your opinion that a man who supports his family in comfort is a greater benefit to the trade of the community than a man who holds a large area of land?—Most certainly, that is my opinion.

7866. Taking the case of tenants who occupy these large tracts, as a rule there is just one family of them?—One family and a few shepherds.

7867. Now take the case of the local shopkeeper. I think you have some experience in that way yourself?—Yes, I have had some experience that way.

7868. Do you get much of your custom from large farmers?

7869. The Chairman.—Perhaps Mr Macinnes does not wish to go into that. Witness.—I have no objection in the world.

7870. Mr Sutherland.—Well, I will put it in this way. How do they compare generally?—Perhaps I am scarcely an independent judge of that, because they don't come near me at all personally. But without making the matter personal to myself, every merchant that I know in the country depends on the success of the crofters either as wage-earners or as good fishermen. The farmer is not looked on by the shopkeeper as of any benefit, and is not counted on. Even although the whole of the farmers in Skye to-day were to be cleared out without paying a penny to the shopkeepers of Skye, there would not be a third of the loss to the shopkeepers that there would be in the case of the crofters. In fact merchants would not miss from them all that the tacksmen buy in a year.

7871. Then you of course believe that the larger the number of men who are in comfort and who have families to support, the more trade there is?—Yes, in every way.

7872. I suppose you take it as a general thing that it is better for a man to work for himself than to work for another?—I know that a man will work more when he sees an advantage to himself than he will work for another.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

7873. And you also, no doubt, believe that it tends to better habits in a man when he is his own master?—Yes.

7874. And that he gets more thrifty, and he will look more to the future?—Yes.

7875. And that he will also gather some capital?—Yes. There is one remark you have put me in mind of about the crofters. My belief is that the smallness of the croft and the continual cropping is not the only reason for the deterioration of the holdings in value. Until the passing of the Crofters Act they were so much terrified by the increase of rent and by the evictions, and by the threatening so much of removals given although not acted on, that they got discouraged.

7876. In connection with that, do you see an increased tendency on their part to erect better houses since the passing of the Act?—I see a marked improvement in the country.

7877. Not only in this neighbourhood, but in other parts of Skye?—In every part of Skye, there is quite an independent feeling about rising above their present surroundings.

7878. You speak more generally than in reference to houses, in other things also?—Yes, in everything. I believe that were it not for the bad times since they had got the advantage of fixity of tenure, there would be a great deal more improvements made than there is at present, even with the small patches they have.

7879. Do you think there is a general inclination on the part of the people of Skye to remain close to the seashore?—Not a general inclination, but there is some. The reason is this. There are some lochs here round Skye where the herring comes occasionally—Loch Slapin is a very good place—I buy fish myself, I have a small boat buying herring, and I know well enough what it is; it comes at nights and perhaps there will be a year before it comes to the loch again. When a man who has perhaps a hundred sheep on the hills has the opportunity he may take advantage of a night on the lochs when it comes. But to depend on it for a living, no man can make a living as a fisherman on this coast.

7880. Are you of opinion that those wishes that were expressed yesterday were dictated by the fact that the people were poor, and all the capital they had was already sunk in the fishing?—That is so. The men who have been following the fishing for some time back are poorer, if anything, than the crofters.

7881. You refer to Luib and those other places?—Yes, they are poorer than those men who do not depend on the fishing at all.

7882. There is one matter that has been mentioned, and I am only going to ask you one question about it. We have heard of emigration as a means of curing the state of matters that exists in the Highlands. Do you know if there was any disinclination on the part of the people of the Highlands to emigrate?—I know that they have all along been disinclined to emigrate, and that they looked on emigration as a way of forcing them from the land.

7883. But as a matter of fact, do you admit that there has been less emigration from the Highlands of Scotland than from any other part?—I know there has been more emigration; that is my opinion; in fact, there has been too much; and then, look at the way in which it has been encouraged, the best men were encouraged to go away, and the worst left at home.

7884. How were they encouraged?—In this way: they had been encouraged by some men who were interested. In my days I did not know that the men were interested, but they were taking the most able men, the men who were most thrifty, and encouraging them to go away.

7885. Is it not in accordance with your experience that the more comfortable a man is in the world, the less fear he has of emigration?—Yes; it is the poorest man always that stops at home.

7886. And if you want rational emigration from a country, don't you think the best thing to do is to put the people first in a position, so that they can see what the world is like?—That is entirely my opinion. I know of cases where families were brought up on small crofts, and where the sons and daughters when they grew up went south to work one by one, and sent home every copper they could spare of their earnings to support their families. When they got old they came back to their homes, and that is the way to a certain extent that the crofts were overcrowded. The man that could give some education to his family and some advantages could lift them up higher, and they had no fear of emigration; every one would be looking for a better place. I believe that if the crofters got justice, you would have a difficulty in getting the people to stop at home.

7887. Mr. Gordon.—You quoted the crofting township of Bornaskitaig, I think, at 4s. 10d. per acre?—Yes.

7888. Is there any hill pasture attached to it?—There is some—a little, I think.

7889. How much?—I am not sure; I just took the average.

7890. But would this 4s. 10d. not practically apply to arable lands or intersected pasture?—It applies to arable and pasture.

7891. And field pasture, not hill pasture?—Field pasture as well.

7892. And how much would there be?—I don't know.

7893. But that is a rather important statement to make without being able to go into detail?—I did not go into detail, because it would have taken too long.

7894. But you have given other townships here in detail, very clearly and distinctly?—Because I was then giving the parish of Sleat; but I mentioned a few other places as specimens of the island generally. But I know they have not very much hill pasture.

7895. I don't want to trouble you to make a long statement, but practically you don't know, you see?—No, but I know it is not very large. But I may mention Monkstadt on the other side; that is exactly the same land, that the people reclaimed.

7896. Practically it applies to arable and town pasture?—Yes, town pasture. But as a proof against that, Monkstadt is the very same quality of soil, taken in by crofters.

7897. I quite understand that the people took in the ground themselves, but the area applies to arable and town pasture?—I don't give any weight to the arable of the croft.

7898. You also say that previous to the evictions the crofters had improved their holdings from which they were evicted, and that these old crofter holdings now make the best part of the larger farms?—Yes.

7899. How can you reconcile that with the statement that the principal improvements they made were from peat bogs, and from precipices to which they pasted earth?—That is their present position just now.

7900. And then they were evicted, you said?—Yes, I will tell you places from which they were evicted.

7901. But it did not refer to these?—It refers to Boreraig and Suisnish if you like: there is there some of the rocky, thin ground, which the people had actually to put soil on. Some of the ground is quite shallow.

7902. I have seen the place myself, and I know there is a part of it very poor land; but we were told yesterday by one of the delegates who represented that place, that the people migrated or emigrated themselves of their own accord, because the soil was so poor?—Some of them; well, I was listening to the evidence, and I did not take it up that way. I know the man: he said some of them emigrated of their own will, and some were actually put out. The man who made that statement was brought up beside me; his own father was evicted. There was a man who died in a sheiling in Suisnish after being put out of the house.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

7903. You state that the crofters get no benefit from money expended in the island?—No.

7904. At the sitting yesterday we were told that Sir William Mackinnon had expended a sum of £12,000 on his property, principally in improvements, road-making and fencing, and draining. Did not the crofters in that district get part of that labour, and benefit to that extent?—Certainly, but I don't put that down, as the man was wanting to make the roads to his own mansion house. There is labour going on in the south all the same.

7905. But is it not better for a man to get local labour, than to go south and seek it?—But it is far better for the man to get the land.

7906. I don't dispute that; but if the man has to labour to get money, is it not better for him to get it in his immediate neighbourhood?—Very good, but no landlord will give labour unless he requires it for his own use.

7907. I don't suppose any landlord would create work to give employment to people except in a great emergency. Now you stated that a croft of 15 acres arable and 100 sheep would be sufficient to keep up a man. Could you give us in a few words the details of the income obtained from such a croft?—Not in a few words. You have had so many details of this kind already that I did not prepare myself with the figures. I thought my statement was already rather long.

7908. Could you do it now?—Not in the meantime, standing here. Though I know the matter thoroughly, I could not go into a profit and loss account for the year, showing the labour and the expenditure, and the proceeds; I could not do it off hand.

7909. Do you know any croft in your part of the country, of that size or larger, in which a man has sufficient to live on and keep his family without working outside his croft?—No, but I know lands in Skye that are not a third, or a half of it at anyrate, that are very near making ends meet.

7910. Without any foreign aid?—Without any foreign aid. I have known them for years require very little assistance.

7911. Could you mention any one of them?—Well, I am not going to mention names in connection with that, or perhaps I might be giving offence to some people.

7912. It would be rather an important thing, because I would go and see the croft. How do you make up your souming, will you tell us that? I want that for my own information, and for the information of the Commission. You said you reduced the souming of a croft to sheep; how many sheep do you put to a cow?—Four sheep to a cow, and eight sheep to a horse. I think I am a little under the mark, as some people say six should go to a cow, and twelve to a horse; but I believe the eight sheep would leave the place as bare as a horse; and about four as a cow.

7913. I think you are not too high at anyrate?—Not too high; no.

7914. In the statement you read you gave us certain proposals with regard to the disposal of the club farm proceeds. Now I may just put the question direct; why did you not include the payment of the rent before the division of the money, as a first charge upon the proceeds?—Perhaps that is an omission. I put down the stock as security for the government loan.

7915. Would you be prepared to put down the rent as the first charge?—Yes, I would put down the rent as the first charge.

7916. I think that is an important admission.—Yes, I am quite prepared to do that, and I believe there need be no fear, if what I propose was given. I would have no objections myself.

7917. It would be a very important matter if that was agreed to.—I would take in hand myself, if the crofters got the land, to act. I am quite confident that they would work harmoniously together, and I would feel no difficulty as a County Councillor in helping them to work it out.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

7918. You have told me that you would like the graduated system of holding?—Yes.

7919. I quite agreed with you. Now you have given us the minimum croft as 15 acres, with 100 sheep. Have you any idea of the number of such crofts, assuming that they were all minimum crofts, that could be put into this parish, or into the island?—Of course that calculation could be made, but I did not make it.

7920. Have you any idea how many of the present crofting population could be accommodated with such crofts—what proportion of them?—No.

7921. A third, or a half, or a fourth?—I cannot give you figures at all. But I know personally every part of Skye, and I should say that there would be plenty of room for the men whom I would thin out, leaving the rest in comfort.

7922. I am afraid you or I would not be allowed to make the selection; they would select themselves.—It does not matter.

7923. Mr Munro.—Since we have entered upon this investigation we have heard a good deal about advancing money on loan to crofters to enable them to take enlarged holdings; but I feel bound to tell you that yours is the first intelligible and business-like statement on that question that I have yet listened to. Now am I correctly stating your views, when I say that the security you propose is as follows:—(1) the buildings on the croft, (2) the stock, (3) the game, and (4) that the County Council should intervene between the borrower and the lender?—Yes, that is so. The statement that I originally made is not altogether there; I had another form of security, that no merchant should be allowed to interfere with the joint stock, which should be left on the ground until the government instalment was paid, and nothing should interfere with it.

7924. Now to make your statement plainer, and that there be no mistake about it, let us go over in detail the several securities which you propose. First, upon the question of the buildings, I can understand that being a good security, because the lender can obtain a title to the buildings. But what security would the stock afford to a lender?—I think the stock would be as good a security as the building, except for the risk of some of them dying. But if the stock was put in on a joint farm, and no one allowed to interfere or to take out a beast, in time it would put off the usual average every year; and under a competent shepherd, with the assistance of the County Council and two men appointed by the township, I have not the slightest doubt that the return from the sheep stock would more than pay the instalment dues. I think it would be the most valuable of all the securities.

7925. But in a hypothecation of stock, does not this obvious objection occur to you, that stock can be removed from a croft?—Yes, but the sheep stock cannot be removed from a club farm.

7926. It could be removed with consent of the parties interested. I merely want to define the nature of your proposed security.—No, it cannot be removed with the consent of the parties interested; it cannot be removed at all. And besides, I would bind this provision in the clause of the Act in such a way as to make it impossible for any one to move the stock off the ground. At present no man can sell his own sheep stock; is not that so, Mr Maclachlan?

7927. Mr Maclachlan.—I understand that is so.

7928. Mr Munro.—I understand a sheep stock is raised for the very purpose of being sold?

7929. The Chairman.—Not by an individual. Witness.—But in the club farms they cannot be sold.

7930. Mr Munro.—You also proposed that the County Council should intervene between the creditor and the borrower. Do I understand from that that the County Council would become the first security for the loan?—The first security.

7931. Now with reference to the payment of the instalments, which you propose should extend over a period of thirty years. Take, for example, an advance of £200, how would you propose that that should be repaid—in what instalments?—In equal annual instalments divided into thirty years.

7932. And you think that a crofter would be quite well able to repay these?—I feel quite positive about it; I feel as strong on that point as on anything that I have said. From my own experience among the crofters, I know if they got the opportunity they would work night and day—a man would leave that stock and work night and day to pay the Government.

7933. That is in consequence of the strong incentive that would be presented to them to become absolute proprietors of the crofts—they would work night and day to repay these loans?—Yes, and you would relieve them of an enormous amount of work in giving them slated houses instead of thatched ones.

7934. And I presume you have contemplated this contingency also, that if after a certain period of years they fail to pay their instalments, they would in all probability have to forfeit what they have paid?—Yes, and you would get another man to take up the place.

7935. That would be an additional incentive?—Yes.

7936. And you are also of opinion that if the crofters were placed on large holdings their comfort would materially increase, as well as enable them to pay these loans back?—Oh, yes.

7937. A statement was made to us yesterday on responsible authority, that if the crofters were replaced on the land again, poor rates would increase so much as to render the occupation of the island almost intolerable. Is that your opinion?—No; my opinion is that statistics clearly prove the other way—I believe the poor rates in parishes where sheep farms predominate are increasing as well as where the crofters are. Another thing, no crofter can get any money from poor rates.

7938. Then is it consistent with your knowledge that poor rates have increased as crofters were removed off the land?—It is not within my knowledge, but I always took it to be so, and it is the feeling and opinion of the country. From my own experience as a member of parochial boards, I think that is so; and I can tell you that since Mr. Wood came to the island of Raasay, and since the clearances there, the poor rate increased enormously, and I think it is now three times what it is on the mainland.

7939. Mr Maccallum.—I think almost all the questions that I should have liked to put have been already put and answered, and, therefore, I shall only keep you a very short time. I was very much struck with a statement you made that of the forty-five farms in Skye only eight are managed by practical farmers?—Only eight.

7940. Now, with regard to the qualifications of the crofters for taking up the land, do you think they have as much knowledge as the large farmers, as a rule, in regard to the working of the land?—I think they have far more.

7941. Can you also tell us about the factors, are they practical farmers? have they a practical knowledge of land?—There are five or six factors in Skye, and, I think, only two of them have had practical experience; the rest have none at all. Mr Mackintosh here has had some experience of land; he came from Beauly. As for his practical knowledge of working it, I don't know; but theoretically he knows a great deal about land. As to Mr. John Mackenzie, the factor for Kilmuir estate, my opinion is that he knows nothing about land except that he is living on it.

7942. What training did he get for it?—He was for some years in the factor's office. Then there is Mr. J. T. Mackenzie at Dunvegan.

7943. You do not think they are particularly qualified?—I don't think he had any knowledge of farming at all. He was a kind of merchant, having a shop, and dealing in coals; and then he was postmaster in Dunvegan. Then there is also Mr. Alexander Macdonald, Portree, who is a solicitor.

7944. Then there are fourteen proprietors having farms. Have they taken a special interest in agriculture?—Yes, some of the proprietors have a knowledge of farming.

7945. But what do you say of the majority of them?—The rest of them do not look at it.

7946. And they entrust it to the other hands?—They entrust it to the factors, of course.

7947. You said there were eight hotel-keepers who had farms. Are these hotel-keepers retired, or do they carry on the two businesses at the same time, farming and hotel-keeping?—There is only one of them retired, but I think his interest is drawn out of the hotel—Mr Ross of Glenvarigil. But Boreraig and Suisnish are in the hands of a hotel-keeper, so also are Swordale, Ose and Uig, and one or two more.

7948. Do you think hotel-keeping a profitable occupation in Skye?—I think it is perhaps the most profitable.

7949. Do you think it is by the profits of the hotel rather than by the farming that they live?—I don't believe they have made anything out of the farming.

7950. You spoke of superfluous coin, and a great deal of money being lost by the large farmer. Into whose pockets did that money go?—That is more than I can tell you; it did not go to the crofters in any shape or form. It went to the landlord probably in over-rent.

7951. Very little of it came to the crofter?—Oh, nothing at all of any consequence.

7952. It was put to you about Sir William Mackinnon having spent £12,000 on making a road, &c.; but is that a typical case?—That is the only case of a proprietor in Skye making any improvements since my time. I suppose when the rest bought their estates they might beautify the mansion-house, before my time. Major Fraser, for example, I suppose, spent more on the estate than Sir William Mackinnon did; but he trebled the rent after that.

7953. But in recent times?—There was nothing done in recent times; except when they took houses and bought estates, I believe they improved them, and brought them into working order.

7954. And you are clearly of opinion that the stock-carrying capacity of the land is getting smaller by being put into large tacks?—Yes; I know instances in which they cannot carry the old stock, or anything like it. Boreraig and Suisnish cannot carry within 300 of the stock that it carried when Mr Scott had it, when the people were removed out of it.

7955. Then do you think that if the land on these large farms were divided into small holdings, the crofters could pay as high a rent as any tenant can pay out of the land?—Yes, if it is taken out of the land. If you take as the value of the land what can annually be taken out of it. I think the man with an ordinary share who could work it himself will take more out of it than the man who has a large tract.

7956. He can cultivate it, you think, more profitably than the large farmer?—Yes, that is my opinion.

7957. The Chairman.—I do not mean to detain you at any length. You have a number of proposals here which you have submitted to us with regard to the development of the crofting system in Skye; but I do not intend to ask you any questions on these proposals, because in my opinion they do not at all come within the terms of our remit. These matters are not before us.—Quite so.

7958. You made a statement and were asked a question about Bornaskitaig?—Yes.

7959. The Secretary has been good enough to turn up the blue-book and give me the figures, which are: —arable, 158 acres 3 roods 30 poles; outrun, 75 acres 1 rood 5 poles; pasture, 273 acres; total, 507 acres 0 roods 35 poles; the fair rent is £120, being at the rate of 4s. 9d. an acre on the average. I think you said 4s. 6d.?—4s. 10d.

7960. You were referred to the farm of Strathaird, on which there had been much capital expenditure by the landlord?—Yes.

7961. Is not there another farm in Skye where there has been very large and very generous expenditure?—(A pause). Do you not remember the farm of Skeabost?—Oh, yes, I remember that fencing being done.

7962. Is not he a very generous landlord?—Yes.

7963. And has not his expenditure been very large?—The crofters, I suppose, gained more by his expenditure than by Sir William Mackinnon's. In the first place the difference between the two is very much. Skeabost has fenced in a piece of moor, which is not very good land; but Sir William Mackinnon's land is first-class land for cultivation.

7964. Is it not the fact that Skeabost's tenants are so satisfied with the way in which he has treated them that they are exceedingly loath to make any claim for land?—I believe they would rather suffer than make any complaint against him, he is so kind to them in every way.

7965. And in their claims for land they have been very careful to keep away from any land that they think he might be reluctant to part with?—I believe that is so. But it is not the same in the case of Sir William Mackinnon. It is not from a feeling of generosity or gratitude, but they are actually afraid of Mr Macdonald and of Sir William Mackinnon—afraid of getting into their bad graces: and the parish minister said that to Mr Macdonald yesterday in front of the hotel in presence of witnesses.

7966. We cannot take that; it is not evidence.—I have a knowledge of it myself.

7967. You say there are 45 farms in Skye?—Yes.

7968. And you are in favour of a large development of the crofting system?—Yes.

7969. Would you carry that to the extent of obliterating the farms?—No, not quite. I would leave every farmhouse on the farms, and some value in connection with it. There are only eight practical farmers.

7970. Never mind the farmers, it is the farms. Would you obliterate any one of these farms?—No, not as a whole; I would not wish to do that.

7971. You would be in favour of the continuance of the farming system to the number of 45 farms as at present, but with a very much reduced extent?—Very much.

7972. Mr James Mackintosh, Factor for Lord Macdonald.—What rent did you say is now being paid for Ostaig, Tormore and Gillen?—I think it is £200 odds.

7973. You said £325, but the present rent is £395.—Of that £70 is paid by the sub-tenant.

7974. You said Ostaig, Tormore and Gillen: the rent of these is £395, not £325?—I took that out of the Valuation Roll.

7975. But Gillen is entered separately at £70. As regards improvements on farms, is it not by arrangement with the landlord that the farmers execute improvements on their holdings?—I suppose it is.

7976. Therefore there is no such arrangement between the landlord and the crofter?—He is allowed to do that if he likes.

7977. You said that the land held by crofters in Sleat was inferior to land held by tacksmen?—Yes.

7978. That is your opinion?—It is.

7979. State any crofter you know in Sleat to-day who adopts the process of fattening his land?—If you remove the township the fat that the people leave there is very material to the tacksman, it is out of that that the tacksman made his profit, and the landlord too.

7980. That is not exactly an answer to my question; I asked you to mention any crofter in Sleat to-day who fattens his land?—My answer is that what I meant by fattening was the fattening the crofter made for the benefit of the landlord, who got the benefit after removing the crofter. I say if you throw him out of house and home, you have the land fat for grazing.

7981. What sheep stock is there on the Kyle-Rhea end of the Kinloch farm; what class of stock is it?—I don't know, indeed: I saw blackfaced sheep about the road, but I don't know what is on the hills.

7982. You stated that it is good grazing land: is it so?—So it is.

7983. Is it usual for farmers to graze wedders on their best grazing land?—Sometimes it pays them, if the price is good, especially if the land is high. The wedder would thrive on good high ground where the lambs would not do.

7984. What class of sheep stock has been the least remunerative for the last few years?—I suppose the cheviots were the most unremunerative.

7985. What kind; ewe or wedder?—The wedders.

7986. Then is it likely the farmers would continue keeping wedders on ground if it was suitable for ewes?—Certainly, if the wedders were profitable.

7987. But you said they were the most unremunerative?—Yes, but on high hills the most profitable. Of late years mutton was high, and wool cheap, and wedders on good grazing paid better.

7988. What is the acreage of arable land under crofters in Sleat?—Something like 12,000.

7989. Arable?—I don't think I have the arable in my statement.

7990. Have you any idea what is the extent of arable land held by tenant farmers in Sleat?—I have not a positive proof of it, but I know that some time ago it was mostly arable and cultivated, but now it is growing wild again and going back to a state of nature.

7991. Do you consider it is a fair comparison to make between the whole land held by crofters and the whole land held by tenant farmers, seeing that the crofters have 900 acres of arable land and the farmers only 200 acres of arable land?—The comparison is this: the crofters took in the whole of their arable, but the tacksmen reduce the arable; they do not take a twentieth part into cultivation.

7992. Were there crofters on the farm of Ord?—Yes.

7993. On the whole of it?—On the most of it.

7994. Were there crofters on the farm of Knock?—Yes.

7995. On the whole of it?—The whole of it except the grounds around the house: at Baravaig and Morsaig and Linigary.

7996. You said that crofters earned no money by employment from sheep farmers in Skye?—Nothing of any consequence.

7997. You said that they obtained none?—None whatever, unless they gave them a day's free labour in clipping: that is the only thing I ever knew.

7998. I am not aware of any free labour being given.—Well, it was given in my time.

7999. In passing along the road, did you never see crofters employed in harvesting the crops at Armadale?—Yes, I believe there would be some there about the castle; one or two.

8000. Did you ever see them employed in harvest work at Ostaig?—Not the crofters; never.

8001. Did you ever see them so employed at Knock?—I never did. It is quite natural that they should be working perhaps a day at the harvest, but I never saw them there.

8002. Do crofters expect, or would you support, a measure giving them the sporting rights without any rent for them?—I would leave the rent to be judged by those who would be assessors—competent men.

8003. You would expect the crofters to pay a fair rent for the sporting rights?—No, I don't think so.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Myles Macinnes.

My view is, that everything belonging to the land should belong to the man who pays the rent.

8004. What is the lowest rent of the forty-five farms you spoke of?—I suppose it will be about £73, Duisdalemore. The rest are all a good bit above £100.

8005. In drawing a comparison between the average rent of the farmer and that of the crofter, you calculated the crofters' rate on the fair rents?—Yes.

8006. And you calculated the farmers' on the present rent too?—Yes.

8007. If you had taken the rent paid five years ago in this parish by farmers, it would have made a considerable difference?—Well, I suppose there would be a difference in both cases.

8008. And the difference in both cases would not be greater than it is now?—I cannot say very much as to that.

8009. Are you not aware of any farmers in Skye who take an interest in the social condition of the people, inducing them to better their circumstances in any way?—No, I am not aware; I heard that Major Kemble was to give them a bull.

8010. That is not to improve the social condition of the people; I object to that answer. Are you not aware that the crofters and others in Sleat held a cattle show in Sleat last year? who promoted that?—That is something like the others.

8011. Was it not got up principally by a tenant farmer, to induce the people to take an interest in their stock?—That is not the first cattle show that I have known; I did not know anything of that.

8012. When was a cattle show held in Sleat or in Skye before that?—I suppose there are many new things done, and the people are not much the better of all the introduction of new things.

8013. When a crofter has borrowed money, would he not require to take more out of his land to pay interest on borrowed capital, than one who had no interest to pay, before he could meet his debts?—He would, certainly.

8014. The Chairman.—In the Valuation Roll, the rent of Tormore, Ostaig and Gillen, is given as £325, and the lands and farm of Gillen £70, but the witness fairly enough took as the valuation of Tormore, Ostaig and Gillen the rent marked in the Valuation Roll, £325. The witness.—I gave an explanation of that; the man is paying £70 to the tenant.

8015. Mr Mackintosh.—The farm of Tormore, Ostaig and Gillen, is responsible to us for £395. The witness.—But he gets £70 from the sub-tenant.

8016. Mr Macleod.—There is a sub-tenant on Gillen?—Yes.

8017. Can you tell us why Gillen is mentioned along with Tormore and Ostaig, and then is entered as a separate subject?—Just to give a vote to this man, as he is on the other side.

8018. That is not what I want to be at. Mr Mackintosh stated that the amount of rent for which the tenant of Tormore, Ostaig and Gillen is responsible, is £395?—Yes.

8019. Then you don't doubt that the figure you should have given in your statement should have been £395, and not £325?—I should not do that, because I know that the sub-tenant of Gillen pays £70 to the principal tenant.

8020. So that you still maintain that your statement of £325 is correct?—Yes.

Donald Macpherson

DONALD MACPHERSON, Crofter, Saasaig (67).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

8021. The Chairman.—You are a crofter from Saasaig?—Yes.

8022. Do you occupy No. 4?—Yes.

8023. And your holding is 4 acres 0 roods 32 poles arable, 2 acres 1 rood 8 poles outrun; 278 acres grazing, divided into ten shares, and you hold half a share. The present rent is £2, the former rent having been £3, 6s. Have you a written statement?—I have.

8024. Will you kindly read it?—

Isleornsay, Skye.

Donald Macpherson

STATEMENT OF SAASAIG, SLEAT.

The crofting township of Saasaig has ten holdings, only one of which is not subdivided. There are twenty-one families in the township. Prior to 1811, there were only five tenants.

About sixty-three years ago the park of Glen-Saasaig was taken from the township, and added to the tack of Ord. It was here the crofters of old used to cut the bulk of their grass for wintering.

About 1874, a stretch of common pasture called Glen-Saasaig was taken from the township, and added to the tack of Ord. Our souming before these lands were taken from us was 8 cows, 1 horse and 24 sheep per holding. To-day it is 4 cows, 1 horse and 8 sheep for an entire holding; and the land would not do justice to more than half our present nominal souming.

To improve our position, we would respectfully suggest two things: first, the lands taken from the townships should be given back; and secondly, that the congested condition of the township should be relieved by migration to new holdings.

There is a great amount of suitable and available lands in the parish for new holdings in old cleared crofting townships in the farms of Knock, Ord, Ostaig, Tormore and Kinloch.

Knock Farm.—This farm includes the township of Baravaig, from which tenants were evicted in the beginning of the century, and where there is old arable and improvable lands sufficient for four new self-supporting holdings. There is besides the Brae of Knock, where four could be placed.

Ord Farm.—This farm contains Morsaig, cleared about fifty years ago. All the old tenants had a large stock of cattle, horses and sheep. This township would keep three new tenants very comfortable. Croisg would keep two tenants.

Tormore, Ostaig and Gillen.—These three now form one farm. Tormore includes the old townships of Little Calligarry, Capisdale and Carradale. Carradale was cleared of eight crofters fourteen years ago. The excuse was the want of a school, but they were all better off there than where they are now. The above three townships would make thirteen comfortable new holdings.

Ostaig embraces the old townships of Kilbeag and Linigary. Kilbeag would provide five new holdings. There were eight tenants in Linigary, each of whom had 8 cows, a horse and corresponding sheep.

Gillen includes the township of Dalville, where there were five tenants, who were evicted a little over sixty years ago.

Kinloch Farm.—This farm includes the township of Tettercailleach, which was cleared twenty-five years ago. Ardnameachdan was also once occupied by small tenants.

We cannot close our statement without referring to the Knoydart evictions of thirty-nine years ago, when the following townships were absolutely cleared, viz., Niogart, Samadlan, Doune, Sandaig, Rhidarroch and Croulig. All these, with the best arable land to the sea level, are now under deer, and would, along with the townships already mentioned, relieve completely the congestion of population in the whole parish of Sleat.

(Signed) DONALD MACPHERSON,
No. 4 Saasaig.

8025. How many crofters are in Saasaig?—Ten.

8026. And how many cottars?—One cottar.

8027. Mr Mackintosh, Factor for Lord Macdonald.—When did crofters occupy Knock Farm or any part of it?—They were there, at all events, though not in my time. My grandfather was there.

8028. Was he a crofter?—He was.

8029. In a pamphlet, entitled "The past and present

Isleornsay, Skye.

Donald Macpherson.

condition of the Skye crofter," by Lachlan Macdonald of Skeabost, there is a list given (Sheet 19) of farms held as tacks in 1733 and 1751 still in the possession of proprietors and tacksmen.

Peter Macdonald.

PETER MACDONALD, Saasaig (30)—examined.

8030. The Chairman.—What is your No. in Saasaig?—No. 6. I am only a sub-tenant of my father.

8031. Your father's name is John Macdonald?—Yes, my Lord.

8032. And the croft has 8 acres 0 roods 36 poles arable, 1 acre 2 roods 3 poles outrun, with a share in the common grazing; the old rent was £7, 8s., and the fair rent is £6, 5s.?—Yes, my Lord.

8033. Have you a written statement?—I have, my Lord.

8034. Would you read it?—I only wish to call the attention of the Commission to a few remarks especially regarding my own case. When I was out of school I was getting into a situation in Edinburgh, but my parents would not let me go, as my father was old and could not work the croft alone. Some years ago I got the third of the croft from my father, for which I pay very high rent. The stock I keep is one horse, one cow and one stirk, but the crop of my share of the croft is not sufficient to winter this stock, and last year I was out about £10 in provender and oats. Now if I had the value of that £10 of good land I could keep and winter a good deal of stock. From this it is evident that the smallness of holdings keeps the people in poverty, for the little money they earn during the summer season, which in many cases is not sufficient for the support of their families, they require to spend the most of it on other things owing to the scarcity of land and the poor soil, which maybe has not been uncultivated or let out for the last twenty or thirty years. In many cases we find three or four crofters, and perhaps a cottar or two, on one small croft which would be too small to support one family, and not even that; but when the people are thus crowded it also spoils the grazing of their township. For example, in the township of Saasaig there are only ten crofts, but there are twenty-one families, and on one of these ten crofts there are four families. Now each household requires the same amount of peats, which are cut every summer in the grazing. Now you see the four crofters which occupy the one croft will need as much peats as would almost do for the half of the township if each householder had a a full croft. The population of the small parish of Sleat is about 1800 souls, and when we find two Englishmen occupying eight sheep farms in Sleat, the rest of the people must be very much crushed upon each other. There is not the least doubt that the people would benefit by getting more land, and I think the Government ought to give the matter their immediate attention, and replace the poor Highland crofters in the straths and glens from which their forefathers were cruelly evicted.

(Signed) PETER MACDONALD.

8035. Are you in any employment?—I am a merchant.

8036. You have a shop?—I have, my Lord.

8037. What do you sell, groceries?—Groceries principally.

8038. And have you a licence for anything?—No, except for tobacco.

8039. The only other question I want to ask you is this. You say there is one croft in Saasaig where there are four families?—There is, my Lord.

8040. Which one is that?—No. 10.

8041. Who is the crofter?—There are four Macinneses on it.

8042. What are the names?—Lachlan Macinnes, widow Agnes Macinnes, widow Duncan Macinnes, and widow Ewan Macinnes.

8043. And have they separate houses?—They have.

8044. And separate fires?—Separate fires, separate holdings. Isleornsay, Skye.

8045. Do they cultivate the land in common or have they each a patch of their own?—Each has a patch of his own. Peter Macdonald.

8046. Within the limits of the croft?—Yes, my Lord.

8047. Have they each stock?—They have, my Lord.

8048. Mr Macleod.—You said that you are a sub-tenant of your father's. You are not then paying the rent to the proprietor direct?—No, but to my father.

8049. Being in that position have you ever made an estimate as to the number of sub-tenants in this parish or in the whole of Skye?—No.

8050. Would you be able to give us the number if you had time to think about it—the number say in this parish of Sleat?—Not in the meantime, without considering the matter.

8051. But supposing that you had time to consider it?—I believe I could.

8052. You could supply us with that information?—Yes, through time.

8053. Then would you supply it?—I could in some days.

8054. Thank you. Then, as to the township of Saasaig, what farms does it march with?—There are three townships, Kilmore, Ferrindonald and Saasaig. Knock Farm is on the one side, and a great part of Ostaig on the other side of Kilmore.

8055. Your township grazes with the farm of Knock?—No, with the grazing of Teangue.

8056. Would it be possible to extend your grazings without removing the tenants there?—No, I don't think it would.

8057. And you agree with the previous witness as to the places where you think the crofters could cultivate to profit?—I quite agree with Mr Macinnes.

8058. And with Mr Macpherson?—And with Mr Macpherson.

8059. Mr Mackintosh.—What stock of your own do you keep?—A horse, a cow and a stirk.

8060. What rent do you pay to your father?—One third of his rent.

8061. Do you cultivate the land separately from your father?—Yes, I do.

8062. Can you mention any other sub-tenant of the same class as yourself in the parish of Sleat?—Not in the meantime.

8063. Do you know of one at all? You have been all your days in Sleat, do you know of any other sub-tenant in Sleat?—Not in the meantime.

8064. The Chairman.—He said so; it is quite a frank answer. The Witness.—I don't know of any in the meantime; there may be some, for all I know.

Donald Macgillivray

DONALD MACGILLIVRAY, Crofter, Aird (58)—examined.

8065. The Chairman.—You hold one half of lot 9 Aird?—Yes.

8066. I see it extends to 2 acres 3 roods arable, 1 acre 1 rood 3½ poles outrun, and half a share of 2770 acres hill pasture divided into 19 shares. The former rent was £3, 16s. 8d.; and the fair rent is £2, 11s. You heard the statement made by Mr Myles Macinnes?—Yes.

8067. And you also heard the statement made by Donald Macpherson, Saasaig?—Yes.

8068. Do you agree with these statements?—Yes.

8069. And do you think they fully set forth the case for the crofters in this district?—Yes.

8070. May we take you as resting your case upon the statements which these witnesses have made?—Yes, I suppose much about the same; but we have been dealt with worse than some, because two small townships have been taken from us in my own time.

8071. What are these?—Caradale on the Point of Sleat.

8072. Do you remember that occurring?—Yes, myself.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Donald Macgillivray.

8073. Are these places included in farms now?—One has been cleared again and put into Tormore.

8074. Which is in Tormore?—Caradale.

8075. And the other one?—The other in Point of Sleat. It is under crofters.

8076. I think all the old townships in this locality now forming parts of farms that would be available for new holdings have been mentioned?—Yes.

8077. You do not suggest any other township?—No.

8078. How many crofters have you in Aird altogether?—Thirty-eight, in nineteen crofts; there is another croft with eight or nine families (A voice "Ten").

8079. A croft in Aird?—Yes, the twentieth croft holds ten small crofters but no grazing.

8080. What is the name of the man?—There are ten of them.

8081. Is there any principal holding?—No, they are all the same; they have equal shares of it.

8082. Can you give me the names?—Yes.

8083. What are they?—Myles Macinnes, Mrs Matheson, Mary Beaton, Angus Robertson, Donald Macgillivray, Mary Macintyre, Donald Macgillivray again, Catherine Gillies (but she is dead a few weeks ago), John Beaton and Donald Macleod.

8084. Have they separate houses?—Yes.

8085. And separate fires?—Yes.

8086. But no grazing?—No grazing.

8087. Have they separate patches of arable land?—Yes.

8088. Have they stock?—Well, they will be keeping a cow, but they have got no grazing for it; they have neither grazing nor hill pasture for sheep or cattle.

8089. Have they any sheep?—They might have a few, but no grazing for them.

8090. What farm or farms march with Aird?—Tormore, from sea to sea, from the one end to the other.

8091. Any other farm?—No, Tormore marches with Aird from one side to the other.

8092. Mr Shaw Stewart.—How do the men in this croft that you speak of get their livelihood?—I cannot tell much about them; they get their livelihood by working through the world.

8093. Do they go to the south for work?—To the south.

8094. Every year?—Yes.

8095. Mr Macleod.—Have you got any sheep?—Yes.

8096. Have you got them in common, or has each tenant his own?—Each has his own.

8097. You have not a stock in common?—No, every man has his own quantity.

8098. How many sheep go to each croft?—Twenty-six to each croft. There is no whole croft.

8099. A man with half a croft will have thirteen?—Yes.

8100. Don't you think it would be better to hold them as one stock?—I don't think so.

8101. You think it better to hold them as at present?—I think it would be fully as well.

8102. You don't think that you suffer from the family which is stronger getting advantage of the weaker family?—Well, I don't think so.

8103. There are no tenants in the township who have more sheep than their souming?—Yes, we are souming the sheep every year, and any one who has more than the souming buys the grazing from his neighbour.

8104. That is how you do it; but don't you think you would get a better price for the sheep if you had them all under the one mark and they were all of the same kind?—I don't know how we could do that.

8015. But don't you know that if you are able to sell a few hundred sheep, having all the same mark and pretty much the same appearance, they will sell better in the market than a dozen, or more small odd lots?—I daresay they would, but there would be more expense.

8106. How would there be more expense?—By keeping a shepherd or two shepherds. Isleornsay Skye.

8107. But don't you think that if you had larger holdings that would employ more of your time than the holdings you have at present, it would be more profitable to have a shepherd?—We are certain sure of that if we had more holdings, but we have not plenty of holdings to keep him. Donald Macgillivray.

8108. So that your position is this, that whilst you are in favour of each crofter holding his own sheep at the present time, if you had the sort of holding you would like to have you would keep your stock in common, you would have a club stock?—We would keep them whatever way we thought best.

8109. I want to get your opinion?—What was the benefit of me now to go and pay my share of 13 sheep.

8110. Supposing you had 50 sheep, or 100 sheep, what view would you take of it then?—They might do as well; the whole stock on the place might.

8111. But you think an individual stock would do just as well?—I think it would.

8112. You do not see any disadvantages?—No, not I.

8113. Then about this croft that has ten families on it; has that come about by subdivision, or have they been placed there?—I believe they have been placed there at first. They were not paying rent at all at first.

8114. They were not paying rent at all?—Not a shilling.

8115. And they settled down there, did they?—Yes.

8116. Has any of those places been vacated in your memory?—Yes, a man was put in his place.

8117. How did they come there; did they come in without the permission of the estate or with it?—Not at all.

8118. With the permission of the estate?—Yes, with the permission of the factor, I believe.

8119. They came in there?—Yes, every place that they got benefit.

8120. There was another tenant put into it?—Yes.

8121. The Chairman.—I doubt that very much, but I am not going to take up time pursuing the examination.

8122. Mr Mackintosh.—Would not the extension of a railway to Mallaig greatly benefit you and all the other crofters in the parish of Sleat?—It would, but it would not do any good in the case of more land.

8123. The Chairman.—If you got more land you do not want a railway to Mallaig?—We will take more land first, we have been asking more land for the last three years. We gave the factor here a chance, and we gave Mr Maclachlan here a chance, for Capisdale, part of Tormore.

HUGH MACDONALD, Calligary (52)—examined. Hugh Macdonald.

8124. The Chairman.—What number are you in Calligary?—No. 1.

8125. Did you get your rent fixed by the Crofters Commission?—No. The croft is divided into five shares.

8126. And has Angus Macdonald or Macinnes one of them?—Yes.

8127. And John Macgillivray the other?—No, there are the two of us here.

8128. You heard the statement made by Mr Myles Macinnes?—Yes.

8129. And the statement made by Mr Macpherson of Saasaig?—Yes.

8130. Do you agree with these?—I quite agree with them.

8131. And do they set forth the case for the crofters in this district very distinctly?—Yes, I think so.

8132. Have you any addition to make?—No addition at all.

8133. The only other specific question I would put Isleornsay, Skye. Hugh Macdonald.

is, can you mention the name of any other old township formerly occupied by crofters besides those already brought under our notice?—No, I don't know of any.

8134. Mr Sutherland.—You said the croft was divided into five shares?—Yes.

8135. Who divided it?—The proprietor, I suppose, or the factor.

8136. It was one croft at first and now it is five, is that so?—I think so.

8137. And it was done by the proprietor?

8138. The Chairman.—The answer is, "the proprietor, I suppose," these were his words.

8139. Mr Mackintosh.—Was that croft No. 1 Calligary ever held by one tenant alone?—Not that I am aware of.

8140. Was it not formerly occupied by the Armadale farm labourers?—It went under that name at one time.

8141. (Question repeated).

8142. The Chairman.—He said it went under one name; he means that as an affirmative answer.

8143. Mr Mackintosh.—You are aware that that was a lot that was held by men who worked on the Armadale Home Farm? Don't you know that?—I have given you my answer.

8144. The Chairman.—Does it consist with your knowledge that that croft was formerly occupied by the farm labourers?—Yes.

8145. Mr Mackintosh.—What was done with the sixth share recently?—I cannot say, indeed.

8146. Was not the sixth share, formerly held by Widow Stewart, divided among the other five?—The fifth share was divided among the four. This croft was divided into six shares till two of the tenants, Widow Stewart and John Maclean, died last year. Widow Stewart's share was divided among the four, and Maclean's is not divided yet. His brother, who is one of the four, is claiming it.

8147. It was the sixth share?—The sixth share is not divided yet.

8148. Was not the land held by Widow Stewart divided among the others?—Yes.

8149. And she was one of the six?—Divided between five.

8150. The Chairman.—Gentlemen, I wish to make an explanation before we resume. The Secretary has received a number of letters in which claims are made by individuals for particular portions of land, or land situated in particular places. I wish to say that we are not here to consider claims of that kind; we are here to investigate generally under terms of the remit, and not to consider individual claims by crofters or cottars for particular portions of land. Accordingly we do not propose to examine witnesses of that kind. Our desire is rather to take evidence from delegates, persons who have been appointed by townships to give evidence with regard to the township, and I hope the distinction will be quite understood. If any crofter present or any cottar present desires to ask any explanation about the matter, I will be glad to answer his questions.

I will give you an example of what I mean. We have here, for instance, John Macgillivray from Calligary who makes a personal claim, and Malcolm Macpherson from Calligary who also makes a personal claim. These are not the kind of witnesses, and what they desire to put forward is not the kind of evidence we have come here to receive; and therefore it is not intended to call either of these persons. But if any one has any doubt about the matter, or would like any further explanations, I will be happy to afford them if I can.

Jonathan Macdonald.

JONATHAN MACDONALD, Achnacloich (65)—examined.

8151. The Chairman.—You hold one-half of lot 7 Achnacloich?—Yes.

8152. I see the holding has 2 acres 0 roods 3 poles arable, 1 rood 24 poles outrun, and half a share of 470 acres divided into fourteen shares; the former rent was £2, 1s. 10d., and the fair rent is £1, 8s. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

Isleornsay, Skye. Jonathan Macdonald.

8153. Would you read it?—STONEFIELD. This township was formerly occupied by five tenants, who, we understand, were very well off. It is now divided into fourteen small crofts, nine of which are between twelve families. This is due to making room for evicted tenants from Ostaig and other places. To put the township in a fair way, the half of the tenants will have to be removed. The most suitable places for crofters from Stonefield would be some of the extensive farms of Mr Kennard which lie in the neighbourhood, and which were occupied by crofters. We feel convinced that we would all benefit very much by removing some of the population to suitable places. Although there are some in the township that do not apply for more land, the removal of some of the rest would benefit them as well.

If necessary, the delegates will give the names of those that require more land, and of those that need it most.—Signed on behalf of the tenants of Stonefield, JONATHAN MACDONALD.

8154. Can you give us the names of those who you think need more land?—Yes: Alexander Macinnes, No. 4; Donald Macdonald, No. 5; Jonathan Macdonald, half of No. 7; Donald Macdonald, No. 8; John Macdonald, No. 9; Alexander Macdonald, No. 13; Malcolm Macmillan, No. 13; Alexander Macdonald, No. 14.

8155. That is eight altogether?—Yes.

8156. Out of fourteen?—Yes.

8157. Explain how you selected these names, and left out the other six?—Well, the most of these have half crofts.

8158. Is your township of Achnacloich congested?—Yes.

8159. Is the land run out?—It is mostly run out, but it is long tenanted.

8160. It has been tenanted for a long time?—Yes.

8161. Have tenants from other townships been put in there?—Yes; my father and grandfather were evicted from Linigarry.

8162. Is that now part of the farm of Ostaig?—Yes.

8163. Were there other townships on Ostaig?—Yes, Kilbeag.

8164. Do you know how many crofts were there?—I am not exactly sure, but I think it was five.

8165. Can you mention the name of any other old township in Ostaig?—No, there was another township—Glencru, they call it—on Ostaig farm.

8166. Now forming part of the farm?—Yes, the home farm.

8167. Can you say how many tenants were there?—No, I could not. Gillen and Ostaig lie alongside of us; there is only a burn between Ostaig and us.

8168. Are you able to say whether, when tenants were brought in from Ostaig to Achnacloich, the Ostaig crofts were extended in any way—more land granted in respect of additional persons coming in?—There was less land given to them than they had in Ostaig.

8169. Do you mean by more people being put on it, or was any land taken away?—No.

8170. I suppose you mean the land became less by the increase in number?—Yes.

8171. How far is the land which formed these townships in Ostaig from the Ostaig farm steading?—About a mile.

8172. Not nearer?—Well, I could not say exactly.

8173. It is a quarter of an hour's walk, is it?—Yes, about that.

8174. And in your opinion is that land to which you refer in Ostaig suitable for crofters' holdings now?—I think it is.

8175. Do you think the land could be cultivated to a profit?—Oh yes, it could; they were well off that were in it before.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Jonathan Macdonald.

8176. You know the farm very well, I suppose?—Yes, every inch of it.

8177. What size of holding would you like to see formed in Ostaig upon the lands of these old townships?—I could not say; it would be according just to how crofts were made.

8178. Of course, but I want to get from you if I can your notion of what would be a proper size of holding on land with which you are well acquainted. What stock would you aim at having in a new holding formed in Ostaig?—We could keep a good stock on it.

8179. What extent of stock would you think of acquiring with a view to a holding that would enable you to maintain yourself without outside labour or fishing?—About six cattle.

8180. Six cows with their followers?—Yes, and a horse.

8181. And how many sheep?—Between 50 and 100 sheep.

8182. And the arable land necessary for that stock, whatever it amounts to?—Just so.

8183. Mr Sutherland.—There were formerly, you say, five tenants; now there are fourteen?—Yes.

8184. How long is it since the number was increased from five to fourteen?—At the time of making the crofts they made fourteen crofts: there were no crofts when the five tenants were in it; it was divided among themselves.

8185. And when the land was divided the tenants were increased from five to fourteen?—Yes.

8186. Not by the people themselves?—No, it was by the landlord.

8187. Mr Mackintosh.—Were the five former tenants holding from the landlord or were they subtenants of the tacksmen?—They were holding from the landlord: there were no tacksmen then.

8188. Was the landlord himself the tacksman then?—I suppose he was the landlord.

8189. Was the farm of Ostaig and Gillen not in the landlord's own hands when the crofts in Stonefield were cut?—No, I don't suppose they were.

8190. But the fourteen crofts in Stonefield were cut at the same time as the rest of the crofts in Sleat were cut?—I suppose they were cut before some of them.

8191. How many years since?—I could not really say.

8192. Mr Sutherland.—By whom was the sub-divisions made?—By the landlord.

8193. Mr Mackintosh.—That was in the year 1810 or 1811.

Alexander Macdonald.

ALEXANDER MACDONALD, 13 Achnacloich (34) —examined.

8194. The Chairman.—Your holding, being half of lot 13, covers 2 acres 3 roods 2 poles arable, and 1 acre 1 rood 17 poles outrun, with half a share in the pasture of 470 acres; the former rent was £2, 7s. 7d. and the fair rent is £1, 14s. I think you are one of those whose names were mentioned by Jonathan Macdonald as wishing more land?—Yes.

8195. You heard the evidence given by Jonathan Macdonald?—Yes.

8196. And you concur in it, I suppose?—Yes.

8197. Does it fully express what you desire to say on the matter?—Yes.

8198. There is one thing I did not ask the previous witness. Are there any cottars in Achnacloich?—Not in Achnacloich: there is one on the farm of Gillen.

8199. You have heard the other evidence given to-day?—Yes.

8200. And you concur in the evidence?—Yes.

8201. How do you earn your living?—In the south.

8202. You go south every year?—Yes.

8203. What do you labour at mostly in the south?—Just any labour.

8204. Is it on the railways?—Sometimes, and sometimes on an estate.

Isleornsay, Skye.

8205. Where do you get estate labour?—From Lord Breadalbane.

Alexander Macdonald.

8206. Anywhere else?—Yes, I was once in another estate too, in Glen Etive.

8207. Whose estate was that?—Mr. Graves from England.

8208. You go south every year?—Not just now. I am home a year now. I am only there myself now and I cannot go, but of course I have to try fishing or some other way of making a living, because I cannot leave home, on account of there not being another person at home that can do the work to be done.

8209. You have to stay at home to look after your croft?—Yes.

8210. What does your household consist of—are you a married man?—No.

8211. There is somebody else in the house with you, I suppose?—Yes, my mother.

8212. Anybody else besides you and your mother?—No.

8213. But you earn your livelihood and pay your rent, and in fact pay your way generally by means of labour in the south?—Yes, the croft is too small to enable me to live.

8214. And you are anxious to get a holding where you would have land sufficient to keep yourself going, pay your way, and make a profit?—Yes.

8215. Mr Shaw Stewart.—I suppose the kind of croft that you would call a good croft would be 15 or 20 acres?—Yes.

8216. And the stock that has been named before. You consider that you would be able to maintain yourself and pay your rent out of such a croft without going to the south or anywhere else for labour?—Yes, I would think so.

8217. And could you stock it yourself?—I could partly stock it.

8218. Not entirely without assistance?—No.

Alexander Macdonald.

ALEXANDER MACDONALD, Tarskavaig (35). (Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

8219. The Chairman.—Has your croft in Tarskavaig a number?—Yes, No. 14.

8220. Who is the crofter—is it yourself?—It is in my mother's name.

8221. Widow Christina Macdonald; 2 acres 2 roods 3 poles arable, 1 rood 37 poles outrun; share of 912 acres township pasture divided into thirty-one shares, and of 2530 common pasture divided between seven townships, or eighty-seven shares. The former rent was £3, 6s. 7d., and the fair rent is £2, 10s

8222. Mr Mackintosh.—Do you wish to note the names of the townships that participate in the common lot?

8223. The Chairman.—If you please.

8224. Mr Mackintosh.—Achnacloich, Tarskavaig, Tokavaig, Kilmore, Ferrindonald, Saasaig, and Teangue.

8225. The Chairman.—Thank you. (To witness) Have you any written statement?—No.

8226. You have heard the evidence given to-day.—Yes.

8227. Does the evidence, speaking generally, express your views on the matter?—Yes, it expresses our township's views.

8228. Would you like to make any addition? Have you anything to add that you think has not been referred to, or has been omitted?—I would only say that there are too many people in my township, they are congested.

8229. It is overcrowded?—Yes.

8230. And it would be to your benefit, you think, if a number of crofters were taken out and supplied with holdings elsewhere?—It would take the one half to relieve the rest. They were leornsay, kye.

lexander lacdonald.

taken from Kilbeag and Cargill and Glencru, and crowded in upon us; also from Morsaig.

8231. When did the overcrowding take place?—When these townships were lifted.

8232. Can you give us the time, how many years ago?—There are some in our township who were born in Kilbeag.

8233. That will enable you to give us an idea of how many years ago?—It will be sixty years ago.

8234. Do you know when the crofts in the township of Tarskavaig were cut?—In 1810, as has been already stated.

8235. How do you earn your livelihood?—All sorts of work that comes my way.

8236. Labour work?—Yes; fishing and sailing and labour.

8237. And do you go south for the most part to get labouring work?—Yes, I go south: it is in the south I earn my wages, there I have done all the work I have ever done, except fishing.

8238. And you get the money to pay your rent by labouring?—Yes.

8239. How many families are in Tarskavaig?—Thirty-six families.

8240. Are these crofters, or partly crofters and partly cottars?—Every one of these has land. There is one cottar besides the thirty-six, and there are eight of the crofts halved.

8241. Was the division made by the crofters themselves, or by the estate; or partly the one and partly the other?—Perhaps some crofters were dividing their crofts, but the estate was doing the rest.

8242. Both causes were in operation?—Yes.

8243. And at all events are all these thirty-six families now asked for rent by the landlord?—Yes.

I had better read this statement which has been handed in.

Application and statement regarding the croft No. 3 Teangue.

We are in all thirty-three souls. Our part of the croft is only about 2 acres and have ten of a family on it, and I would take 10 or 12 acres for my family. I was appointed as a delegate for the township of Teangue, but had to leave for the fishing. Hence the reason of sending this letter in my absence.

(Signed) JOHN NICOLSON.

llan ampbell.

ALLAN CAMPBELL, Crofter, Teangue (67)—examined.

8244. The Chairman.—You hold one-half of No. 7 Teangue?—Yes.

8245. I see it extends to 3 acres 2 roods 3 poles arable, and 2 roods of outrun; the township pasture is 530 acres divided into ten shares, and you have also half a share in the large common of 2530 acres divided into eighty-seven shares. The former rent was £3, 14s., and the fair rent is £2, 10s.?—Yes.

8246. How many families are in Teangue?—Seventeen families paying rent.

8247. Are there any not paying rent—cottars?—One cottar.

8248. How many crofts are in Teangue?—Eight and a half crofts.

8249. How long ago is it since these eight and a half were divided into seventeen? it would be a gradual process, I suppose—They were divided gradually.

8250. But was it subdivision by the estate, or by the people themselves, or both?—The most, I believe, was done by the tenants themselves.

8251. Is the township in your opinion overcrowded?—Yes, there are four on one lot.

8252. What lot is that?—No. 3.

8253. What are the names of these four?—John Nicolson, Norman Nicolson, Donald Nicolson, and Widow Norman Nicolson.

8254. Are they all related to each other?—They are the one family. Isleornsay, Skye.

8255. Have they separate houses?—Yes.

8256. And separate pieces of land?—Yes. Allan Campbell.

8257. And very much pressed in upon each other?—Yes, very much; every one of them has a big family.

8258. Well, I would just like to get them. What family has John Nicolson?—He has seven or eight.

8259. And Norman Nicolson?—He has six at any rate.

8260. Donald Nicolson?—He has only himself and his son and his mother.

8261. And Widow Nicolson, has she children?—She is alone.

8262. What farm or farms march with the township of Teangue?—Knock.

8263. Do you remember—because a question has been asked to-day—do you remember when these townships on Knock that formed part of the farm were cleared?—No, I do not remember.

8264. Have you heard of such townships from people who are dead?—Yes.

8265. How many such townships were there?—I did not hear how many.

8266. Were there more than one?—Oh yes, more than one. We have a poor crofter in our township who has a big family; he has ten of a family.

8267. What is his name?—Alexander Nicolson.

8268. Is it the fact that John Nicolson of Teangue is away at the fishing?—Yes; he went away to England to the fishing there.

JOHN MACKINNON, Crofter and Fisherman, Camuscross (56)—examined. John Mackinnon.

8269. The Chairman.—Your holding, I see, extends to 2 acres 3 roods 1 pole arable, 1 acre 1 rood 33 poles outrun, and share of 462 acres common pasture divided into thirty-nine shares. Is that all the pasture?—That is all.

8270. The former rent was £2, 18s., and the fair rent is £1, 16s. Have you a written statement?—Yes.

8271. Would you read it?—

Statement by the Crofters of Camuscross.

In this parish there are forty crofter holdings besides eight cottars.

The souming of each croft is two cows and no sheep or horse, and the land would not do justice to half the souming. The township is enclosed on the seashore and surrounded by the tacks of Knock and Ord.

The township, according to the evidence given by Angus Mackintosh before the Crofters Commission four years ago, was in possession from time immemorial of the brae of Camuscross, which lands were taken from the township and are now part of the farms of Knock and Ord. Besides this curtailment of our township boundaries, the island of Oronsay in our immediate vicinity was taken from the township and added to Knock farm, and is at present occupied by Mr Macdonald.

It is the earnest desire of every tenant in Camuscross that the lands above referred to, the loss of which has made our township one of the poorest crofting townships in Scotland, should be restored. Those places would be a considerable extension of our arable land, as well as grazings, both of which are urgently required. Even with this addition it would be necessary to migrate one-half of Camuscross tenants to new holdings to make the remaining half comfortable.

Lands suitable and available for such holdings are to be found in the large farms of Kinloch, Knock, Ord, Ostaig, Tormore and Gillen, in each of which there are old crofting townships that were cleared, which would be gladly pointed out by delegates to the Royal Commission if asked.

(Signed) JOHN MACKINNON, 40 Camuscross.

Isleornsay, Skye.

John Mackinnon.

8272. Mr Sutherland.—The term souming was used. Who fixes the souming?—It was the landlord, with the assistance of those who were cutting out the crofts when the crofts were formed.

8273. Do you know what rule they proceeded on?—I cannot tell how the souming was fixed.

8274. Had the people any voice in determining that souming?—Very likely they were consulted.

8275. But you do not know as a matter of fact?—I believe that they were consenting parties—that they were quite agreeable to the souming that was fixed.

8276. And have they found in practice now that that was too high?—Yes; we know that if the complete souming was in the township one cow would eat the tail of the other.

8277. Mr Mackintosh.—Have you got the full souming in your croft?—Yes.

8278. Did you sell any corn crop this year?—Yes.

8279. And you have your full souming?—Yes, but they are young beasts.

8280. Do you know of any other people in Camuscross who have their full souming, who sell corn?—I know one more.

8281. Mr Sutherland.—Does the souming apply to the corn crop?—No, the souming is applicable to the grazing.

8282. Mr Mackintosh.—Is it not also applicable to what is required to winter the cattle?—It is no wonder a piece of land that gets such an enormous quantity of manure put on it yields a plentiful crop.

8283. Mr Macleod.—You said that only one of them besides yourself out of forty could sell crop?—Yes, of those who had full souming only one to my knowledge sold corn; but others sold corn who had not the full souming.

Lachlan Macdonald.

LACHLAN MACDONALD, Duisdalebeag (60)—examined.

8284. The Chairman.—You are a crofter and seaman?—Yes.

8285. You have two crofts, No. 4 and No. 5?—Two crofts, or two half crofts.

8286. The area is 3 acres 3 roods 22 poles arable, 5 acres 0 roods 25 poles outrun; township common, 710 acres divided into seven shares. The former rent was £13, and the fair rent is £7. Do you represent the township of Duisdalebeag?—Five of the tenants.

8287. How many tenants are there altogether?—There are seven.

8288. How many cottars?—None.

8289. Have you a written statement?—I have a kind of statement. I, Lachlan Macdonald, crofter and mariner, aged sixty years, and residing in 4 and 5 crofts, Duisdalebeag, at the request of five of the inhabitants of Duisdalebeag, do hereby give my statements for the township in writing for the guidance of your honourable Commissioners.

In the year 1876 the township of Duisdalebeag was divided into eight lots or crofts. In the year 1877 we were deprived of the best portion of our sheep run. It was added to the extensive farm of Ord, and no compensation or reduction of rent was given to us for our loss.

Previous to the year 1876, four of the crofts of Duisdalemore, a township of eight crofts marching with Duisdalebeag, had been cleared for the Mackinnon family. The cattle of those remaining crofters was put on Duisdalebeag pasture. Thus we have the cattle of two townships living on the pastures of one, and it is impossible for us to get on with any degree of pleasantness.

If the two townships were restored to their original marching, sixteen or seventeen years' experience of Duisdalebeag leads me to believe that the tenants of the two townships would cultivate to advantage. We now beg of your honourable Commissioners to restore to us this part of our sheep run of which we were deprived, and also that you will enlarge our present holdings, for which we are willing to pay a fair rent.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Lachlan Macdonald.

The portions of land we wish to have restored to us are in the hands of Mr. Donald Macdonald, Park, Nairn, late of Tormore, Sleat, Skye, and are situated in the middle of the township of Duisdalebeag. It can be assigned to us without causing Macdonald any damage or loss. If those portions of land referred to are not restored to us, we cannot live on our crofts to any degree of comfort, much less cultivate our crofts to advantage.

The outlay on houses and improvements done by me upon my small holding, I cannot estimate at a less figure than £450, besides paying an average of £18 annually for winter keep for my cattle. I have also paid £65 extra rent from the year 1876, until fair rent was fixed on my croft in 1889. My neighbours and I have spent in all a sum of not less than £1000 in houses and improving our lands on an average of £1 an acre for the whole of Duisdalebeag. We have had no assistance from our proprietor to erect houses or improve the lands. This outlay debars us from applying for crofts elsewhere.

We now sincerely hope that your honourable Commissioners will take our case into your kind consideration.

On behalf of my neighbouring crofters and myself, —I remain, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed) LACHLAN MACDONALD.

8290. Is the statement signed?—Yes.

8291. Is it written entirely by yourself?—Yes.

8292. How long have you been a seaman?—I was only about fifteen or sixteen years when I went to sea.

8293. And do you still go to sea?—I go to sea yet.

8294. Are you an officer or an A.B.?—I sailed in gentlemen's yachts for the last eighteen or twenty years.

8295. As captain?—Yes.

8296. Mr Shaw Stewart.—There is a large drop in the rent, from £13 to £7. I suppose that the loss of some of the sheep run was taken into account by the Crofter Commissioners when they lowered the rent?—Probably, but twelve years expired between the date 1877 and the sitting of the Commission.

8297. I beg your pardon, I thought you said 1887.

8298. Mr Sutherland.—You said you expended a sum of £1 an acre. Does that apply to the whole of your holding, both arable and pasture?—I understand the acreage of the whole township, arable and all, is about 1000 acres.

8299. And you have taken that into account?—I have taken that into account.

8300. What proportion of your holding is arable, and what proportion is pasture?—There was about 2½ acres on my croft.

8301. But in the township, putting it roughly, is a third of it arable land?—No, not that.

8302. A fourth?—I don't think a sixth; that is including arable and pasture.

8303. So that if you had made the calculation on the arable land, it would be a great deal higher, would it not, the rate per acre that you spent on improvements?—The calculation I made is about £1 an acre on the area of the township of Duisdalebeag.

8304. I want, if you can tell me approximately, how much it would amount to per acre, if applied only to the arable land. Would it probably be £6? We will take it so. Did you ever know a large farmer, a sheep farmer, improving his land to that extent in your experience?—No, I don't think so.

8305. Mr Mackintosh.—The witness stated that he knew of no large sheep farmer who expended such an amount on his holding; does he know of any large farmer that has fixity of tenure?

8306. The Chairman.—I disallow that question.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Alexander Macinnes.

ALEXANDER MACINNES, Drumfearn (46).
(Examined in Gaelic through an Interpreter.)

8307. The Chairman.—You hold one half of lot 3 Drumfearn?—Yes.

8308. The area is 4 acres 2 roods 9 poles arable, 2 acres 1 rood 37 poles outrun; hill pasture, 1342 acres divided into ten shares; the former rent was £4, 15s. and the fair rent is £2, 18s.?—Yes.

8309. You have no written statement?—No.

8310. But you represent the township of Drumfearn?—Yes.

8311. How many crofters are in Drumfearn?—Ten crofts, but they are broken: they are all divided except one. Some of these crofts have three families settled on them.

8312. How many have three families?—There are three on No. 8, and three on No. 9, and three on No. 10.

8313. Is the township overcrowded in that way?—Very much. When the crofts were cut in 1811 the township consisted of ten crofts, and before then it was occupied by five.

8314. You mean there were first five crofts and then there were ten, and these ten have been divided into nineteen?—Yes, I believe there are twenty-one families now.

8315. Are two of these families cottars?—It is one cottar that is in the place.

8316. I find we fixed fair rents for nineteen holdings there, and originally you say there were five and afterwards ten?—Yes.

8317. But while the families increased in number the land remained of the same area, I suppose?—That is so; while the families were becoming more numerous, the crofts were remaining the same, and the crofts were being subdivided continually.

8318. How did that subdivision come about?—The crofters themselves were dividing in some instances; when a son would marry, the father would generally give him a place to build a house in a corner of the lot, and in some cases crofters who had whole crofts had other families settled among them by the landlord—families that were evicted from other places.

8319. I think it is stated by Mr. Macdonald of Skeabost in his pamphlet that in 1733 there were three tenants in Drumfearn—Angus Robertson and two others—so that the statement of the case, if I comprehend it correctly, is this: Originally three, then five, then ten, and now, from whatever cause, twenty-one?—That is so.

8320. Is that correct, do you think?—Yes, I believe that is correct.

8321. The township is very much overcrowded?—Yes, quite enough to do to carry the one half.

8322. Suppose you were relotting the township, how many crofters would you put upon it?—Ten.

8323. And remove the others to separate holdings?—Yes.

8324. Could ten crofters live there and keep themselves and their wives and families without further assistance by labour?—Not without labour elsewhere, but they would be much better off than they are at present.

8325. And is it the desire of the crofters in your township, those who would like to get away, to have holdings where they could maintain themselves and their families, or holdings where they would require to supplement what they get from the croft by their wages or fishing?—There are some in our township who could perhaps keep a croft on which they could live entirely; but there are others who could not take a bigger croft than they have at present.

8326. Just explain a little more distinctly, why?—It is difficult to get money; they are as needy of money as they are of stock. The three things are required by them—money, stock and land.

8327. What I would like to get at is this:—Is it the feeling of certain crofters in your township that they would like to have holdings where they could live by their holdings, or would they prefer a sort of holding that required outside labour to keep them going?—The desire of those in our township is that they should have crofts that would keep them at work all the year round.

Isleornsay, Skye.

Alexander Macinnes.

8328. Do any of the crofters in your township go to the fishing?—Yes, a great number of those in our township; if they don't do that, the township won't keep them alive.

8329. It is by fishing mainly that they are able to pay their rents?—Yes, between fishing and every other earning that they can get. They make a little money on the sale of cattle, but it is by their earnings mostly that they make the rent. The rent is nothing so much as the buying of meal, the crop does not grow on their crofts and they have to live on bought meal.

8330. Mr Forsyth.—I want some information as to how this great subdivision of holdings took place at Drumfearn. I think you said it was done partly by the tenants themselves, and partly by the estate?—Yes, I said so.

8331. The tenants simply subdivided their own holdings?—Yes, the father and son would divide the croft between them.

8332. Then did the proprietor in every case step in and cut the crofts in two or more pieces?—No, but he sent the ground officer and divided crofts to accommodate families who were evicted from Kilbride. Peter Gillies in Drumfearn had a whole croft, and Angus Macgillivray had another whole croft; and when Kilbride was cleared for Mr Mackinnon of Strath, Duncan Mackinnon was taken from Kilbride and settled at Drumfearn on one of these crofts, on Macgillivray's croft; and Angus Robertson was put in along with Peter Gillies.

8333. These were done by the direct order of the proprietor or his agent?—Yes. Kilbride was at that time cleared, and the tenants were settled between Drumfearn, and Suisnish and Boreraig, and Teangue.

8334. And this was done by direct order of the proprietor or his estate agent?—I don't know if it was the landlord, but it was those who were administering the estate under him.

8335. It was by his agent if not by him—his ground officer or agent?—Quite so.

8336. Mr Mackintosh.—You have a general knowledge of the ground. Would not the extension of a railway to Mallaig greatly benefit the crofters and others in the district?—I am not accustomed to railway work, and I have not seen much benefit that it has done in the country.

8337. I may state, my Lord, that we have not had a bona fide fisherman here to-day, or I would have put these questions to him.

Lachlan Macdonald.

LACHLAN MACDONALD, Duisdalebeag (recalled)—examined.

8338. The Chairman.—I think you said you represented five out of seven tenants?—Yes.

8339. Was five the number that applied to the Crofters Commission?—There were six.

8340. How is it you represent five and not the other two?—One of the other two is in the hands of the proprietor; the present tenant has only got it from year to year, and I had not his consent to appear for him; and the other, the eighth lot, is held by Mr Mackintosh here. If I said they should get more land, I believe Mr Mackintosh the factor would say no.*

8341. Mr Mackintosh is the occupant?—Yes.

* Mr Macdonald has, since the date of the examination, forwarded the following amended answer to question 8340: "Croft No. 7 is in the hands of the proprietor, and let to George Ross, march-keeper, Kinloch farm, from year to year. I have no authority to represent croft No. 7. Croft No. 8 is occupied by the Heirs of Mr Alexander Macintyre. If I were to apply for more land for No. 8, I believe Mr Mackintosh, the factor, would tell me that the present occupants are making poor use of what they have. If, however, the whole township of Duisdalebeag is restored to its resident tenants, we are open to let them all have equal shares of the pasture and hill ground, rents to be fixed according to value of individual crofts and share in hill ground."

JAMES MACKINTOSH, Ostaig, Sleat, Factor for Lord Macdonald—examined.

8342. The Chairman.—I said I might ask you a few questions. You made a statement with regard to seven farms, viz., Strollamus, Liveras, Corry, Kilbride, Suisnish and Boreraig, Scalpay and Kyle?—Yes.

8343. The total area, as I have added it up roughly, occupied by these farms is 29,025 acres?—I believe that is so.

8344. You may take that as correct or very near it. Now, the area of Strollamus is 2203 acres?—Yes, about that.

8345. How much of that is old arable?—I think it is stated in the report.

8346. You say in the report that there are about 22 acres of old arable which are kept under permanent grass. Is that all the old arable?—That is all the old arable that we could see.

8347. On this farm of Strollamus?—Yes.

8348. That you could see? but you know the farm well; there may be old arable presenting such an appearance now that it is not easy to say whether it is old arable or not?—It is quite possible.

8349. Now, in the case of Liveras, you say that of 751 acres 53 are arable, kept under a regular rotation of cropping; how much of that is old arable?—I am not aware of any, except a small patch at Skinidin, at the march with Strollamus farm.

8350. What extent?—Not more than 3 acres at the utmost.

8351. You say there is no more than that?—No more. (A voice.—There is more than 100). The gentleman who is speaking is referring to the whole farm of Corry; it is Liveras we are dealing with.

8352. Never mind these interruptions; they are not ill meant. Are you quite positive in your opinion that there are not more than 3 acres of old arable there?—There may be.

8353. But your view is that that is all?—That is all that has come under my notice.

8354. Now in Corry there are 3687 acres according to your statement, of which 20 acres or thereby are arable?—Yes.

8355. How much old arable?—There is a considerable quantity of what was old arable; it is stated there.

8356. You mentioned 20 acres, but that is not what I referred to?—There is also some part of it that was at some time cultivated. It gives the extent there, or at all events it describes the distance in yards.

8358. Then in Kilbride there are 1877 acres, of which 40 acres are arable at Kilbride House. Is there land on the farm which you would describe as old arable?—No, I have not seen any.

8359. You need not say you "have not seen," you know the ground very well?—But I have really not seen any more: the Strath glebe is there, and passers-by might not be aware of the boundaries of the glebe.

8360. But leaving that out of view, you do not think there is any old arable?—No, I do not.

8361. Then, in Suisnish and Boreraig the extent is 2088 acres, occupied by Mr Malcolm Macinnes, and you say there that at the mouth of Lochs Slapin and Eishort there are about 80 acres of land which had at one time been under cultivation, extending from one place to another, which you mention. Is that all the old arable there?—That is.

8362. Then in Swordale there are 1859 acres, and 65 acres are arable. Is that the whole old arable?—My attention is drawn to the fact that there is some old arable mentioned in Boreraig, which is part of the farm of Suisnish and Boreraig.

8363. I see you say, "At Boreraig, on the shore of Loch Slapin . . . there are about 50 acres of old arable, which is very much broken up by rocks, and with the exception of the shepherd's park, and about another 2 acres, is under green pasture." That is the whole old arable in Suisnish and Boreraig?—Yes.

8364. Then in Swordale, out of 1859 acres, there are 65 arable and permanent grass. Is there to your knowledge other old arable on the farm?—There is not to my knowledge.

8365. Then on Scalpay there are 6098 acres with parks at Scalpay House, and 70 acres partly cultivated and partly under permanent pasture, but soft and boggy. Is that the whole arable or old arable in Scalpay?—That is the whole, with the exception, I think, of a few plots among the rocks, and inaccessible places cultivated by the grazing tenant for cattle.

8366. Then in Kyle there are 9490 acres, of which 15 acres are arable near Kyle House, and about 23 acres under permanent grass at Lusa Bridge. Is that the whole old arable at Kyle?—I think there is a small bit at the head of Loch-na-Beiste: it is mentioned there, I think.

8367. "At the top of Loch-na-Beiste a small piece of old arable is still green." What is the extent of it?—A few acres, not more than 4 or 5 at the outside. Of course we consider Ashaig as part of Kyle farm; there is no reference made there to the old arable on Ashaig.

8368. Now, going back to Strollamus farm, is the farm under lease?—The lease expires at Whitsunday.

8369. Of this year?—Of this year.

8370. And what is to become of the farm?—It is being relet by the landlord.

8371. On a written lease?—On a written lease to a crofter.

8372. To a crofter?—Yes.

8373. At what rent?—Within £5 of the present rent.

8374. That is?—£55 is the new rent: £60 is the present rent.

8375. I will ask, if you are at liberty to state, who the crofter is?—Donald Mackinnon at Strollamus. Of course the transaction is not quite concluded, but it is as good as settled.

8376. He is under the Act of Parliament?—He is.

8377. And he is to pay a rent of £55?—Yes.

8378. Is that a lease for a term of years?—A ten years lease.

8379. Going next to Liveras farm, is that under lease?—It is.

8380. For a term of years?—For a term of years.

8381. Expiring when?—There is a lease of fifteen years, I think, with breaks at seven.

8382. How long has the lease to run before it is out?—About ten years yet.

8383. And the rent there?—Is £60.

8384. Taking next Corry farm, is it under lease?—The tenant has not signed his lease, but——

8385. Is it a case of a tenure that would constitute a lease?—I think it would.

8386. Well, we need not go into the legal question. But he is by way of holding under a written lease for some years?—Yes.

8387. And some years have still to run?—Yes.

8388. What is the rent there?—The rent is £100.

8389. Then in Kilbride, is it under lease?—It is.

8390. For some years?—For some years. I think three of these leases expire about the same time, Corry, Kilbride, and Liveras.

8391. When?—In about ten years.

8392. What is the rent of Kilbride?—£70.

Isleornsay, Skye. — James Mackintosh.

8393. Then in the case of Suisnish and Boreraig farm, is it under lease?—It is.

8394. To Mr. Malcolm Macinnes?—Yes.

8395. How long has it to run?—About eleven years.

8396. What is the rent?—£125.

8397. Then is there a lease of Swordale farm?—There is.

8398. With some years to run?—Yes.

8399. What is the rent?—£124. That is not the rent stated in the lease; there was a reduction given to the tenants who held under old leases, and the tenant of Swordale also got a reduction.

8400. What was the rent of Swordale before the reduction?—30 per cent. more.

8401. Is the reduction given there in accordance with the reductions in the crofters' rents in the surrounding district?—Just about the same.

8402. Then as regards Scalpay Island, it is under lease to Mr. Ryrie for a term of years?—Yes, expiring in 1894.

8403. Is that a lease of the island alone, or a lease of the Kyle farm?—It is a lease of the island alone.

8404. For sporting and grazing?—For sporting and grazing.

8405. What rent does he pay?—£330.

8406. For the island?—For the whole island, including two small islets off it, Guilleman and Longay.

8407. He is also the tenant of Kyle farm?—Yes.

8408. And the shootings?—And the shootings.

8409. And he holds it under a written lease?—Yes.

8410. Expiring when?—About nine years hence.

8411. What is the rent there?—The rent is £440 for the whole subjects, shooting and grazing, and including Ashaig.

8412. You were asked a question yesterday, and your answer was that if you got the money expended by successive governments on Commissions you could better improve the condition of the crofting tenants in the Highlands than by any other proceeding. Is that your view?—I am sorry if I said "than by any other means," but "than they are at present," the condition could be improved.

8413. Did you intend that as a piece of impudence or what?—Well, I was perhaps a little annoyed at so much cross-firing levelled against me, and perhaps for once I lost my self-control.

8414. Do you wish it to stand upon record?—No, I do not.

8415. Mr Sutherland.—You withdraw it?—I do.

8416. I am glad to hear it, as that obviates the necessity for my putting some awkward questions.

8417. The Chairman.—I do not intend to ask you further about it, but I think it is a pity that a sentiment of this spirit should have escaped a responsible officer on this estate. However, you withdraw it?—I do, my Lord.

8418. Your practical acquaintance with this estate dates from 1886.—No, from 1888.

8419. But I suppose you have no doubt that in the past there has been, from whatever cause, a process of congestion arising in various townships?—No doubt about it.

8420. In many townships?—In many townships.

8421. And with a tendency to continue, but at a less rate?—Well, of course it is not allowed now.

8422. I know, but it went on at all events in the past?—It did.

8423. Due in part to the action of the tenants, and in part to the landlord?—Yes, certainly, due to both causes.

8424. And its effect has been injurious?—It has.

8425. Because at the time when the process was going on, no land was being added to the crofters, while the number of crofters or cottars was increasing, at least as a rule?—Well, as a rule; but there have been cases where crofters obtained more land.

8426. But the congestion has proceeded at a much greater rate than the giving of land till the time of the Crofters Commission?—Yes, I daresay it has.

8427. You would not desire, I am sure, to see that system perpetuated?—No, I would not.

8428. And its existence in the estate constitutes a danger?—Undoubtedly it does.

8429. For which, if possible, some remedy should be devised?—Surely.

8430. Now would not the formation of holdings upon grazing lands be one remedy?—Yes, that would be a remedy.

8431. To a certain extent would not it in your judgment be an effective remedy?—It would, to a certain extent; I admit that.

8432. The restoration of crofters to land from which they had, from whatever cause (I blame no one), been removed or removed themselves would constitute a material relief to the congested township?—It would to the congested townships, but it would not be an advantage or it would not be a benefit: it would be a benefit to the congested townships, but there are certain parts of the country which were occupied by crofters which I do not think crofters would——

8433. Advantageously occupy again?—No.

8434. I quite follow your meaning there. But leaving that for a moment out of view, would not it be a double benefit, supposing they got land reasonably capable of cultivation, would not it be a double benefit to those who got such lands, and to the relief of the townships, if that process were carried out to a considerable extent?—It would certainly be a benefit to both if it could be done.

8435. I am not at all discussing at present the landlord's claim.—I quite understand.

8436. And is it not your opinion that there are considerable tracts of land within the area of the farms you have mentioned, affording facilities for such an experiment?—Well, with the exception of Corry Farm. Corry Farm possesses a certain amount of land that might with some considerable expense be made into arable, and it also possesses what I consider would be a fair amount of hill grazing for as many holdings as the arable land could hold. That is one place that I think of. But as to the farms of Kyle and Kinloch, the amount of grazing is so much out of proportion to the land that is now arable or to any land that could be made into arable that it could not be profitably occupied by crofters or by any person who depended in any way on cultivating land. I may state that the reason why I believe the farm of Kinloch has been left on the proprietor's hands is that there is no arable land. I have had several parties inquiring after it, and one or two came to see it.

8437. You mean there is a disproportion between the extent of grazing and the extent of arable?—A great disproportion.

8438. But supposing the arable of Kinloch—I am only taking it as a possible illustration—were assigned to as many crofters as skilled men might think fit to put upon it, with as much hill grazing as the arable required for a properly formed croft, might not the remaining hill grazing be properly dealt with by being assigned elsewhere?—No, I am afraid not.

8439. Why?—Well, the sea is the boundary on the one side. All the arable land lies at the head of Loch-na-dal—there are a few patches round the shore. But the hill ground extends back to the march with the Breakish hill, right over the top on to the road at Bealachode and on to Kyle Rhea. I consider that that land without any arable or low land about it, would be quite useless for grazing. The low ground is at Kinloch, at this end of it, and it is very useful in spring: in fact the farm has not got as much of it as it ought to have.

8440. But could the grazing not be assigned to other townships, leaving as much of it as is necessary for the arable that would be formed upon the low ground of the farm?—No, I don't think so.

8441. Why? I don't wish to press you unfairly.—My reason for it is this, the Breakish tenants have got the best stretch of ground between their arable ground and the Kinloch march as it is. So that to give them what would perhaps fall to their share of Kinloch hill would make their grazing of an enormous extent; make it perhaps 10,000 acres.

8442. Too large to be managed?—Too large to be managed by crofters.

8443. I know your connection with the island is comparatively recent, but do you know anything of the details of the formation of any of these farms?—Not sufficiently well to give evidence on that point. I may be able to answer any question about them, as I have a fair knowledge of them.

8444. But I suppose it is the fact that these farms or some of them at least have from time to time been increased by encroachments upon what was formerly land in the cultivation and occupation of small tenants?—Well, in regard to the farms of Kyle, Kyleakin and Kinloch. I am not aware that either of these has encroached upon any land that was formerly held by crofters or small tenants.

8445. But you say affirmatively with regard to all the others?—Well, I will speak of each one.

8446. Please do so.—We will take then the farm of Ord.

8447. Is that one of the farms in your list?—Not in yesterday's evidence. Certainly Kyleakin farm and Kinloch were not formed at the expense of crofters' lands: neither was Scalpay.

8448. Take Strollamus?—I cannot say as to Strollamus.

8449. Liveras?—I have no record of crofters having ever occupied any part of the farm of Liveras.

8450. What is your belief?—I do not think they ever occupied it.

8451. Are you able to say so?—Well I have not looked into the question of Liveras.

8452. Corry?—I do not think Corry was occupied by crofters: I have never come across any evidence that it was.

8453. But you don't know?—No, I don't know.

8454. Kilbride?—There were crofters in Kilbride.

8455. Suisnish and Boreraig?—Yes, there were crofters there.

8456. And Kyle?—On Kyleakin, no, nor on Kinloch.

8457. And Swordale, what about it?—I am not aware of crofters ever having been there; I don't think there were ever any there.

8458. Now you have admitted quite candidly that the present state of matters, arising from whatever cause, is injurious to the estate?—It is.

8459. What remedy would you propose? I leave out of view your answer given yesterday, to which you do not adhere?—Certainly.

8460. What is your remedy, speaking as a man of skill and dealing with the matter in all seriousness, and with a desire either at your own hand or as advising Lord Macdonald, to take some steps if it be within his power—what would your proposal be?—I would favour the formation of small holdings in such places as would enable the occupiers to earn their living, as the most successful of them do now, partly on sea and partly on land.

8461. In short, you would advocate a development?—Of fishing industry.

8462. Of the present system?—Not of the present system exactly.

8463. You would develop and increase the number of crofter fishermen?—Certainly.

8464. Are you not disposed to view with favour any proposal for the assignment of land to crofters for grazing farms? I am not dealing at all just now with the question of injury to the farm or to the landlord, that is another matter.—I quite understand.

8465. But leaving these considerations out of view, are you not disposed to view with favour the assignment of land to crofters from grazing farms?—I would favour the giving of crofts of a fair size to crofters from the grazing farms; that is, crofts of not less than 15 to 20 acres of arable land, where a crofter, situated inland, would be fully employed on his croft all the year round.

Isleornsay, Skye. — James Mackintosh.

8466. And a corresponding extent of hill grazing?—Yes.

8467. And would you expect a man on a holding of that sort to be able to maintain himself in average circumstances?—Yes.

8468. And I suppose you would also say that there is such land within the area we are dealing with?—There is such land, if it could be obtained.

8469. Of course if it can be obtained?—Without serious injury to the remaining part.

8470. What rent do you have in view in describing the holding?—I would consider that a rent that a crofter might be expected to pay would be about 16s. 8d. for each cow's grazing if he had a holding, and a proportionate rent for younger stock.

8471. And his arable of course according to the quality of the particular land?—Yes, and so much for the sheep. I mean by cow, a Highland cow of course.

8472. Would crofts of that size if developed to a considerable extent operate a material relief to the congestion that exists?—No doubt it would, if there be an improvement in the agricultural depression.

8473. I assume that too?—If not, of course there is not the same chance.

8474. But I am afraid then all sorts of people would suffer in that way?—Yes.

8475. Are you in favour of a croft the rent of which is paid partly by labour and partly by the profits of the holding?—I am in favour of a certain number of them. All crofts should not be so, nor should all crofts be such as would maintain the crofters all the year round without going elsewhere

8476. You would have a gradation of holdings?—A gradation of holdings.

8477. Beginning with the fisherman's croft in point of size and going up to the large farm?—Yes.

8478. What would you desire, if you had the doing of it yourself, to see as the average rent of a crofter with a self-sustaining holding in this part of the island?—I think about £20.

8479. Would you not be in favour of holdings with rents as low as £10 to £12 as self-sustaining holdings?—No, I do not think that there can be any self-sustaining holdings at that rent.

8480. What rent would you like to see?—Well, some men might occupy holdings of the rent you mention and have well to do families elsewhere which would assist them in keeping the holding.

8481. Is that a good state of matters where a man depends on his family?—No, it is not a good state of matters; but of course, when people do become aged and not exactly fit to look after holdings, they become dependent on their families in many cases in this country.

8482. Do you think it a fair system, the system of holdings for which confessedly the rent is got elsewhere?—I think it is.

8483. You think it is fair?—I think it is. I don't consider that a man should have a holding to which he would require to attend perhaps when his labour was of most value elsewhere. I think about £3—that is the grazing for two cows—and a few sheep would be sufficient for any man who had to go away six months of the year—who left his holding for six months of the year.

8484. Now I pass to another matter. All the houses of crofters in this part of the island have been put up by the crofters themselves?—Yes, I may say in almost every case.

8485. And for long years the rents on this part of the Macdonald estate were not raised?—They were not.

8486. The improvements made, such as they were, were done by the tenants?—Yes they were, except that Lord Macdonald's ancestors spent a great many thousands of pounds in making roads in Skye.

8487. That I quite understand, I am speaking more of individual holdings. In the individual holdings the improvements, such as they were, were effected by the tenants?—Yes.

8488. And there was not the system, which we found to exist in some other quarters, of aid bestowed in the way of lime or slates, except perhaps to a very small extent?—No, I don't think there was.

8489. On the other hand, in the case of large farms, the leases stipulate, don't they, for improvements by the landlord? in the first place, the dwelling-house and steading is put up by the landlord?—Yes, in most cases.

8490. And where there are improvements stipulated for in the lease the stipulation is for the most part mutual, certain improvements by the tenants during a nineteen years lease, and certain improvements by the landlord?—That is in the most cases the way.

8491. Now in estimating the difference or contrasting the difference between the rents of crofting tenants and the rents paid by tacksmen did you allow for that?—To a certain extent it was allowed for.

8492. To what extent?—The crofters' rents in this parish and the Macdonald estates were not raised from 1810, except to the extent of 7½ per cent., for a very long time. Now the rent of sheep farms rose considerably; and I must say for the farming tenants on the Macdonald property, that when the times were good, they spent a great deal of money of their own on their holdings, and the amount of hill ground—perhaps I am not following it exactly?

8493. No, I don't think you are following me. What I want to know is this: in contrasting the difference between the rents paid by crofters, and the rents paid by large farmers, did you allow for the matter of improvements?—Well, the rents paid by the crofters were fixed by the Crofters Commission.

8494. I am not dealing with that at all.—The present rent paid by crofters?

8495. I was pointing out to you at some length the improvements done by the crofters, and the improvements done by the large farmers. I say, when you compared these two rents, did you allow for the difference in the process and cost of improvements; or just frankly say you did not?—No, I did not.

8496. That is a frank way to deal with it. Now, suppose you allow for the difference, would not it make a difference of 20 per cent.?—I am not prepared to admit it would.

8497. But you are prepared to admit it would be a good deal more than nominal?—It would.

8498. Now, you heard the figures given to-day in some detail, and after, I have no doubt, careful calculation by Mr Myles Macinnes; contrasting crofting rents with farming rents.—Yes.

8499. Did you see any reason to dispute these figures, assuming the perfect bonâ fides of the writer?—I see no reason; the only discrepancy I could discover was that he understated the rent of Tormore, Gillan and Ostaig.

8500. We had that up already; Mr Macleod expiscated the matter, I think?—But I have this to say, that Mr Macinnes omitted to state that the crofters possess a great deal more arable land than the tacksmen do.

8501. In proportion?—In proportion. The proportion of arable land possessed by tacksmen in this parish is not more than 200 acres, whereas the crofters possess about 900 acres.

8503. Why?—I consider that when a crofter or any man depending on his two hands for labour to earn his living, possesses subjects which make a fair value, he is in a far better position if his rent is a fair rent, than a labourer who lives in the town.

Isleornsay, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

8504. I am not comparing him with the labourer in the town; I am asking you to compare him with the large farmer. Now, don't you think that a crofter who has to sustain himself partly by his labour, or fishing and partly by his croft ought to pay rather at a less rate than the large farmer?—No.

8505. Why?—I cannot see that he should.

8506. Do you give any reason?—I can see no reason why one man should pay less for a certain article than another, if it is of equal value to both.

8507. Oh, no; but you are mixing up things that differ. I am comparing the crofter with the large farmer. The crofter is in his position, and the farmer is in his. The crofter is a man with narrow means, and ekes out the good of his holding by fishing or labour; the farmer is an extensive capitalist (or was at least), who not only lives by his holding, but brings up his family and progresses in the world. Don't you think as between these two men, and as a matter of fairness, that the crofter, instead of paying at a higher rate, should pay at a lower rate?—I have no doubt he has been hitherto paying at a lower rate. Of course the farmer has a certain amount of capital.

8508. Take this view of it. You have admitted already that the crofter's land has, for the most part, been improved by himself; the farmer gets his farm in so much arable, so much grazing, such and such a dwelling-house, and such and such a steading, all compact and fitted, the one into the other, so that there is a sort of guarantee in the very condition of the thing, that with average years he will be able to work it to some profit, and in the past he did. He improves no land; he gets a thing ready to go on with, but he improves no land except under some stipulations in a written lease. Now, in these circumstances, don't you think a crofter who is improving his own land altogether, beginning with a small patch and making it gradually double and treble the size, should pay rather a less rate than the farmer? is not that common fairness, as well as common sense?

8509. You had better just say yes.—I am not prepared to say that the farmer pays less than the crofter.

8510. But you know you had a lot of figures given you to-day, which you are not disputing?—I am not disputing them, but I consider that the mode of comparison was not exactly what it ought to be.

8511. But, suppose that I am proceeding from data that are correct in point of fact—assume that for a moment; of course, what I am driving at would fall to the ground, if it is not correct in point of fact. But take your facts hypothetically from me; don't you think it only fair that in such a case the crofter should pay rather less than more?—Certainly, if the facts were as stated by your Lordship.

8512. Quite so. Therefore, does not this follow, that if the crofters in certain districts got new holdings assigned to them of the kind you describe, they should be called on to pay rather a less rate than the farmer is paying for that land? does not that follow?—The difficulty is to arrive at what the tacksman really pays for the land that crofters must be put upon.

8513. You are quite fair to raise that, but suppose the rate is proportioned. I don't know that it can be, but suppose it is proportioned to the piece of land assigned, arable and grazing. Would not you say that the crofter in this case ought to pay at rather a less rate than the farmer has been paying?—Well, I do not think he should.

8514. You do not think so?—No.

8515. Mr Gordon.—You stated in answer to his Lordship that there would be a difficulty in dealing with the remainder of such a farm as Kinloch, provided the low ground was taken from it?—Yes, there would.

8516. Do you mean by that, that you want the low ground for the wintering of the high ground?—Yes.

8517. And consequently if the wintering ground was taken off the farm, the higher ground would be of little or no value to anybody?—Of no value to anybody.

8518. And there is not arable land or low ground in the neighbourhood that would be available for the high ground of this farm?—No, certainly not.

8519. I assume that the tenants here receive and expect the buildings at entry of their leases as in good order?—The tacksmen do.

8520. Do you bind them to keep them in good order, and deliver them over?—We do.

8521. Then they have that expense along with their rents?—Yes, they have to keep up the buildings.

8522. Can you tell me what is the total extent of land under farms in this parish?—I will give you the acreage of the principal farms in the parish.

8523. But you cannot tell me the whole? (Mr Macleod.—26,000 acres).

8524. Can you tell me how much is under crofts? (Mr Macleod.—About 15,000)—There are 41,994 acres in the parish belonging to Lord Macdonald.

8525. That would leave 15,000 to crofters?—I can give you the amount under crofters. The total acreage under crofters in this parish is 13,460 acres.

8526. I am asking you these questions with reference to the proportion of the rents. Can you tell me how many acres of arable land there are in the 26,000?—Not over 200.

8527. That is less than 1 per cent.?—Yes.

8528. And 939 acres in the crofts?—Yes.

8529. That is about 7 per cent.?—Yes.

8530. Seeing that there is only 1 per cent., or less, of arable land on the farms, while there is 7 or 8 per cent of arable land on the crofts, would that account to some extent for Mr Myles Macinnes's relative rentals?—It would fully account for it.

8531. Mr Munro.—There was one point raised here to-day by Mr Macinnes in his statement, which I should like to test from your point of view. Macinnes, in advocating the claims of the crofters to more land, said that Government ought to provide loans to enable them to stock their crofts and to erect new buildings. He also furnished us with four grounds of security—the first was the buildings; second, the stock on the croft; third, the game; and fourth, the County Council, which was to intervene between the borrower and the lender. Now, do you see anything defective in any of these securities, or in all four combined?—The buildings, of course, would be of considerable value, but I would not take stock as security for money advance, and I would not give money on security of stock.

8532. I assume that any money the Government advanced will be within the value of the securities. I assume, for example, that if a crofter were building a house worth £100, possibly £75 of that might be advanced, or £80?—Yes.

8533. You consider that a fair security?—But Mr. Gordon also brought out that one of the first claims on the proceeds of the stock should be the payment of the rent.

8534. And you will remember that Mr. Macinnes said that that should be made the first charge?—Yes, it should.

8535. Therefore the remaining stock on the farm minus the rent would be a first security to the State for making the advance?—Yes.

8536. You see no objection to a crofter hypothecating the stock on his farm as one of the securities for an advance?—No. Of course I am taking it for granted that you mean a joint stock of sheep?

8537. I do.—No, it would be an improvement on the present system.

8538. And do you consider that the crofter would be able now, supposing that he got a croft of the size already specified, on an average to pay back any reasonable loan made to him by the Government within a period of thirty years, principal and interest?—It depends a great deal on the price of stock.

8539. I admit that; but assuming a fair average of prosperous years, would you allow that he then should?—Of course, I think if a crofter cultivated such a croft as has been described with skill and energy, and kept good stock, he might reasonably be expected to pay the money back in thirty years.

8540. Mr Macallum.—With regard to the acreage of arable land in the farms v. crofts, no doubt that is an important element in considering the rent?—Certainly.

8541. Now you say that there are only 200 acres in the farms?—Not more than 200.

8542. Could these 200 acres be ploughed?—You may take it as ploughable land.

8543. Now take the 900 acres with which you are comparing these 200; could all these be ploughed in the crofts?—No, I cannot say that the 900 could be ploughed, but I stated that the 900 are under cultivation.

8544. But they are not land that could be ploughed?—Not the whole; certainly not the whole.

8545. Could you give any idea of the number of acres the crofters have that is ploughed?—No.

8546. But there is a great proportion of the 900 acres under crop that can only be cultivated by the caschrom?—The proportion that cannot be ploughed is not so great as the proportion that can; the greater part of it can be ploughed.

8547. I don't want that at all. Is it not the case that the greatest number of the 900 acres is cultivated by the caschrom?—No it is not.

8548. The most of the 900 acres are ploughed?—Yes, the most of the 900 acres in this parish are ploughed.

8549. Now, with regard to the 200 acres in the farms, you say that these could be ploughed. Can you give now the number of acres that were cultivated at some time or other in the farms?—No, I cannot.

8550. But don't you think there is a great number of acres, besides the 200 you gave, that were at one time cultivated?—It is quite possible.

8551. And the farmers have allowed these to get back to a state of nature?—Yes.

8552. So that if the land in tacks now were under crofters they would cultivate far more than 200, would they not?—They might.

8553. And they did at some time or other?—No, I don't admit they did.

8554. Do you really say that not more than 200 acres in the tacks were ever cultivated?—By crofters.

8555. But cultivated?—Yes, but not by crofters.

8556. Oh, well, sub-tenants; it does not matter what name we call them by, but was more than 200 cultivated?—No, not more than 200.

8557. But you have said that far more than that was cultivated?—At the one time.

8558. At one time or other; that is what I am asking?—There are a few acres perhaps more than 200.

8559. Did not you say there was a very considerable number of acres that was cultivated in some way or other at some time or other?—I don't know if it is considerable.

5860. Can you give any accurate idea then at all of the number?—No, I would state that there are 200 acres of arable land under cultivation in the farms at present.

8561. And you leave out of consideration the large portion that was cultivated at one time or other by crofters or sub-tenants?—I do not say whether it was considerable.

8562. But you leave it out of consideration, you don't include that?—No, I do not, but at the same time I will say that there are not 25 acres more.

8563. That was ever cultivated?—Yes.

8564. Then you are prepared to say that 200 acres was the utmost that was cultivated in the farms mentioned?—225.

Isleornsay, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

8565. In any way whatever?—Well, I am not going to go back in any way whatever.

8566. But that is the question. There are signs of cultivation all over the hills, and do you say that 200 acres will cover all the acres we see evidently bearing the signs of having been cultivated?—They have been cultivated in a way, lazy beds and such like; not by the farmers.

8567. By whom then?—By cottars and sub-tenants.

8568. Well, that is exactly what I wish to get at. May you not quite well admit that in the farms there is a large number of acres that was cultivated in some way or other by cottars, crofters, and farmers that you do not include in your 200 acres?—Well, I will admit there was by cottars, crofters, farmers, or others.

8569. So that it is not a fair comparison that you institute between the 900 and the 200?—That is the state at present.

8570. They cultivate 200 and the crofters 939?—Yes.

8571. But the crofters cultivate land which the large farmers would leave out and such land as they do leave out?—And the crofters cultivate better land than the farmers have to cultivate. In some cases farmers cultivate worse land than the crofters have.

8572. I don't wish to go into minute details as you have been so long under examination; but you mentioned a number of farms that were not made out of small holdings. Scalpay, for instance. Do you say there were no small holdings on Scalpay?—There were no small holdings. There were tenants in the employment of the tacksmen, allowed to cultivate a piece of the land as part of their wages, just as at the present time.

8573. And are you quite positive, that there were no crofters paying to the landlord?—I would be very much surprised if there were. I have not obtained such information.

8574. In Skeabost's return Kemball is mentioned as having four tenants. Are you prepared to say that that is wrong?—In the first place, I do not know where that place is.

8575. Well, I have been over Scalpay myself, and it is one of the names that are given Gemboil?—I don't know the name; I could not localise that place.

8576. Do you know Kenachtrich?—Yes, there is a place of that name.

8577. It is given also as a separate holding in Scalpay?—Does it state in Scalpay?—there may be similar names for other places.

8578. My clear understanding of it is that the township is in Scalpay. May it not be that in the other townships too—is your information so distinct that it may not possibly be that there were townships in these farms that you mentioned?—I think I may say that my information is such that I can safely say there were not.

8579. Then with regard to what you said about Commissions—I don't wish to enter into that, but don't you think really that the Crofters Act has done some good to the people of Skye? Have they not derived some benefit from the working of the Crofters Act?—Well, in some cases they have.

8580. And they are getting up houses?—But if you put that question to some of the crofters, many of them would conscientiously tell that it has not; they have stated it to me repeatedly.

8581. But you think it has?—It has in some cases; it has benefited the proprietor.

8582. I noticed you put a question to-day, suggesting as the reason why large farmers did not expend so much on their holdings as the crofters, was that the large farmers had not fixity of tenure. It is a desirable thing generally speaking, and will lead to people making improvements on their holdings?—No doubt if a man considered anything was his own he would treat it better than if he thought he had only the loan of it.

8583. Don't you think there was some need of some Commission then?—I appeal to you, my Lord, whether I should be asked the question.

Isleornsay, Skye.

James Mackintosh.

8584. I will not go into it. I do not object in the slightest to the way in which you have given your answers; I am much obliged to you for your answers, and I have not put any question to you to annoy you in the slightest. I think you have answered very fairly, and that we have no reason whatever to complain of the way in which you have spoken.

8585. Mr Sutherland.—With regard to the difference in the land, I understand that you said that an important element in the comparison of the rentals per acre was the fact that the crofters had more arable land in their area than the large farmers had in theirs?—Yes.

8586. Have you considered the origin of the arable land as an element? Of course the same question was put to you in a slightly different form by the chairman; have you considered that in one case the crofters made the land arable, and in the other case the farmer got it ready made. Is not that a very important element?—No, I consider that a great deal of what is now arable land held by crofters, was made when the occupiers of it were servants of the tacksmen, or cottars who were allowed to cultivate land as part of their wages.

8587. Your opinion is that they were shifted from one township and put in another?—No. There have been cases of that, but my opinion is that where cottars were allowed to settle down, and cultivate patches of land, and to give labour to the tacksmen in return for the privilege of cultivating the land, when these tacksmen from various circumstances gave up the land, the proprietor then formed these into townships in some cases.

8588. Take an instance—the case of Breakish, for example, which we see when passing along the road, I suppose it is Upper Breakish. Do you consider that any large farmer would cultivate that land under any circumstances whatsoever?—Well, I don't think I would cultivate it if I was a farmer.

8589. And do you think the people themselves cultivate it of choice?—I don't know.

8590. What would that land in your opinion be worth per acre when the people were settled upon it?—I don't know the condition it was in.

8591. Suppose it to be common pasture land, which I presume it was—a few pence?—I am not going into that.

8592. What do you think it is worth to-day; what, as a matter of fact, are they paying for it?—I really don't know what they are paying to-day; it will be found in the Crofters Commission Report.

8593. It is a few shillings, no doubt?—Probably.

8594. So that the difference in value between the two is given to it by the people's own labour?—No, I am not prepared to admit that.

8595. Are you prepared to admit that the value of the large holdings is considerably added to by the facts of the green spots being there? I think you have admitted that already.—Yes, certainly.

8596. Do you believe that those green spots were there naturally, or that they were the result of former cultivation?—There are certain green spots naturally in the country.

8597. And in the place from which people were evicted, are not these green spots there now, and giving value to the farm in which they now are?—I consider that any arable land in this country will not continue fertile very long; it will go back to heather and fog and bracken.

8598. But the part that remains still—there are traces of old cultivation on these farms, are there not?—Yes, there are some traces of cultivation.

8599. And they give a great deal of value to the grazing farms that already exist?—They add to the value of them.

8600. Yes, considerably. And I think you stated that one of the causes why Kyle farm was not so valuable was that it had fewer of those green spots within its borders?—Absence of land fit for cultivation.

8601. And of land that had been cultivated?—Or land that had been cultivated.

8602. And is it not the fact that the land there was the result of crofters' previous industry?—No, they were not crofters.

8603. They were not grazing farmers, were they?—They were not crofters who cultivated that land.

8604. You mean crofters as now defined by statute. Do you make that legal distinction? We know that none of them existed before 1886.—I go a little further back, and say the beginning of the present century.

8605. So that the double value of land that is occupied now as grazing, and now as crofters' holdings, has been given to it by the labour of the same people?—No, the labour of the servants of the tacksman.

8606. They are not the same people at all? the cultivators did not give the value to the soil that it now has in either case?—There were not rent paying cultivators.

8607. I must say I do not see how that affects the question at all. A value is given to land in a grazing farm because of former cultivation?—Yes.

8608. And value is given to crofters' land now by their cultivation?—Yes.

8609. And you debit the people twice with the result of their own former industry?—I don't admit that the cultivation in every case of farms was done by crofters.

8610. The Chairman.—Have you a statement regarding Sleat similar to what you read regarding Strath?—I have. [It is given on page 208.]

I will now read reports by Mr Taylor and myself on farms in Sleat:—

REPORT on the farms of KINLOCH, ORD, KNOCK, OSTAIG, and TORMORE, the property of Lord MACDONALD.

KINLOCH.

This farm extends to 8340 acres, and is at present in the hands of the proprietor. It is bounded on the north by Breakish Common Hill, on the east by Kyleakin crofting township, on the south by the Sound of Sleat, and on the west by Loch-na-Dal, Duisdale and Drumfearn. At the old farm-house on the west side, and near the public road leading from Broadford to Isleornsay, as also near the present dwelling-house, there are a few pieces of land that were at one time under cultivation in connection with the farm, but which is now pasture. There are also some signs of former cultivation along the shore from near the mouth of Loch-na-Dal on to Alien, but the soil is thin and poor, lying on rock and mostly covered by natural birchwood, and not worth cultivation. No cultivation is being done on the farm, and with the exception of about 20 acres at the old farm-house and the present dwelling-house, there is no land that could be brought under cultivation.

With the exception of the parts mentioned the farm is composed entirely of moorland, all the green pasture being on the south-west side in the natural wood, and without which the farm would not be suitable for a sheep stock.

The part at Alien where the patches of old cultivation can be traced is three miles from the public road at Kinloch and four miles from Kylerhea, where the nearest public school is.

The ground is also very steep, and seaweed, I believe, is scarce and is at present claimed and boated away by the crofters at Isleornsay.

I do not consider any part of this farm suitable for crofters to cultivate, at any rate that could be profitably cultivated.

The dwelling-house, which is comparatively new, was recently added to and improved, and is now very suitable for the farm.

ORD.

This farm, as at present possessed by Mr Macdonald, extends to 6147 acres, and is bounded on the north and west by Loch Eishart, on the south by common hill grazings, and on the east by Camuscross crofting township and the farm of Knock.

The farm was fenced on three sides by the present tenant and is thoroughly enclosed, Loch Eishart as mentioned forming the fourth side. There is about 30 acres of arable land on the farm situated on both sides of the dwelling-house, part of which is regularly cultivated, and part under permanent grass, the latter being on thin and rocky soil and enclosed by a wire fence.

The only other part of the farm which has been cultivated is where a shepherd lives, and a small park at Morsaig where the soil is thin and poor, partly hard and partly wet, and would give a very poor return.

Along the shore of Loch Eishart, from Morsaig to near Ord House, there is a strip of green pasture mostly covered with natural birch, which with the glen along Ord River is all the green pasture, the remainder of the farm being moorland, a large proportion of which at the north-west side is bare rock affording very little grazing. At Morsaig, where the small patches of cultivation have been made, there is no road, the nearest road being that to Drumfearn, distant over a mile. Should this piece of inferior land be cut off the farm, it would not be sufficient to accommodate more than one or two families. We do not suppose, however, that any one would care to go to such an inconvenient place.

We see no other land on the farm worth cultivating unless a few patches along the Ord River in the direction of the present sheep fank, right in the centre of the farm, which could not be detached from the farm without entirely spoiling the working of it as a sheep grazing.

There appears to us to be a scarcity of arable and green pasture in proportion to the extent of hill grazing—so much so that it is doubtful if either sheep or cattle can be brought out to an average size.

The dwelling-house is good and suitable for the farm as at present occupied, as also the offices.

KNOCK.

This small farm, as at present occupied by Captain Kemble, extends to 1818 acres, of which about 40 acres are arable and 35 acres old cultivation now under pasture, the remainder being hill grazing. It is bounded on the north by the township of Camuscross, on the east by the Sound of Sleat, on the south by Knock Bay and the crofting township of Teangue, and on the west by the said township of Teangue and Ord. This farm was at one time much larger than at present, consequently the dwelling-house and offices, which are both superior buildings, are rather too good and commodious.

The farm is of a size that is not likely to be interfered with by the Commission of Enquiry, and, were it possible, should be added to so as to make the extent of grazing in keeping with the buildings.

Most of the arable land is fair good soil, and probably some portions not now under cultivation might be tilled without loss; but we cannot see room for any crofters, unless they were to get it all, and it would be a mistake to render useless the present dwelling-house and steading.

There is difficulty now in letting such a small grazing with such a large house, and were it reduced in size the likelihood is that a tenant could not be got, and that both house and land would be left in Lord Macdonald's hands.

OSTAIG and GILLEN.

This farm is at present occupied by Mr Kennard, who with the consent of Lord Macdonald sublets the portion known as Gillen.

Ostaig extends to 3984 acres, of which about 90 acres are arable and permanent grass, and about 30 acres of old cultivation now green pasture. On the farm of Gillen, extending to 1740 acres, there are about 8 acres arable and 10 acres permanent grass.

The farm is let to Mr Kennard, is bounded on the north by the Crofters' Common, on the east by the sound of Sleat and Armadale Home Farm, on the south by the township of Calligary and farm of Tormore, and on the west by Cuillin Sound.

With the exception of the parts mentioned as arable, permanent grass, and green pasture, the whole farm is composed of moorland suited only for pasture and in no part adapted for cultivation. The 30 acres of old arable land now green pasture is situated near the centre of the farm, and were it better suited for cultivation than it is, it could not be detached from it without doing great injury to the remainder.

There is a good dwelling-house at Ostaig and a suitable steading. There is also a dwelling-house at Gillen and small steading.

TORMORE.

The farm is at present occupied by Mr Kennard and extends to 3895 acres, of which only about 20 acres are arable and permanent grass. The farm is bounded on the north by Gillen, Ostaig and Calligary, on the east by the Sound of Sleat, on the south by Aird of Sleat, and on the west Cuillin Sound.

There are two places on the farm where some cultivation has been done, viz., at Capistal and Caradal. The former place is at the march of the township of Aird, and is composed of steep rocky land, the only good bit being a small park of about 2 acres at present cultivated by a shepherd. I no not consider this place at all suitable for cultivation, and it is situated over a mile from the nearest public road. The second place, Caradal, is on the west side of the farm, situated at the head of a small bay near the entrance to Loch Eishart. The land is steep and rocky, with the exception of a few spots of apparently fair soil. I do not consider it a place where crofters could make a livelihood by cultivation, and it is besides outlying and distant three miles from the nearest public road.

If, however, this small point, extending to about 65 acres, were properly fenced off by a substantial wire fence from the top of Dalavil Bay to a point on Tormore Farm near Loch-an-Seilach, it would be a most suitable place for six fishermen with families. The small bay is very sheltered and suitable for hauling boats, it is besides situated at the entrance to Lochs Eishart and Slapin, which are considered two of the best fishing lochs on the island. If fishermen are to be accommodated as well as crofters, what has been mentioned is worthy of consideration. With the exception of the parts mentioned the farm is composed entirely of hill ground, a good proportion of which is nice mixed grazing, but none of it, so far as we see, is fit for cultivation.

The farm is compact and fenced on the south side.

The dwelling-house and grounds were much improved at a large outlay by the late tenant, as also the whole buildings, which are very suitable for the farm, and about the most desirable residence in the island to be got in connection with a sheep grazing.

Note.—In the parish of Sleat it is very noticeable that the greater portion of the best arable land is now in possession of crofters, and one of the greatest disadvantages the grazings have is the want of a proper proportion of arable and grazing land to enable them to keep what is considered the safest and best paying stock, viz., a mixed one of cattle and sheep. Should the small pieces of arable and green pasture at present let with the sheep farms be taken from them, the remainder would almost necessarily have to go along with it, as few tacksmen would care to be in possession of only the bare moorland, where they could keep neither cows nor horses for their own use or the use of those in their employment.

BROADFORD, May 19th, 1893.

8611. Mr Myles Macinnes.—I would like to ask Mr Mackintosh one or two questions. I ask him if he is prepared to say as a practical man that there is not more than 200 acres just now on the farm of Knock that could be ploughed to-morrow, although it is not used?—I am quite prepared to say there are not 200 acres on the farm of Knock that could be ploughed to-morrow.

8612. Is there 200 acres on the farm of Tormore?—Certainly not, on Tormore and Gillen.

8613. Is there not 200 on the lower part of Kinloch that could be cultivated?—Well, if you go into peat bogs——

8614. The Chairman.—Just answer the question?—No, there is not.

DUGALD MACLACHLAN, Banker, Portree—examined.

Dugald Maclachla

8615. I have been asked to hand in a document with regard to Glen-Haultin, a copy of the Trust Deed. The document is supposed to be in possession of Mr Alexander Macdonald, as agent for the trustees, but I produce a copy of it.* [App. A, p. 210.]

8616. The Chairman.—Made in your office?—Yes.

8617. Will you certify the copy?—I will.

8618. Have you compared it?—I have. Then along with that I also produce another document which was asked of me; a note of the account of Glen-Haultin sheep stock valuation as at Whitsunday 1885, giving the details of the sheep stock. [App. B, p. 211.]

8619. I am anxious to see that. Have you a copy of it?—No, I produce the original.

8620. You are going to keep the original?—Yes, it is not mine to give over. I produce also another document which was asked of me, a note of the bills and of transactions as they were carried through with the bank, beginning with July 9, 1886, when they were discounted, and showing the state in which they are at present: from which it appears that the tenants paid altogether in the shape of interest either to the landlord or to the bank £180, 16s. 1d. That is interest alone; and of that sum there was paid to Lord Macdonald £9, 14s. 4d. on the value of the stock between the date of the delivery of the stock to the tenants and the date on which the payment of the money was made to Lord Macdonald. The rest is interest paid to the bank. [App. C, p. 212.] I also produce a separate detailed note of the various sums of interest so paid. [App. D, p. 212.] The tenants also reduced the principal sum by £206, 1s. 10d., in addition to paying the amount of interest I have stated.

8621. What was the rate of interest?—The rate was about 5½ per cent., the overdraft rate on renewals.

8622. That is an excerpt from the books of the bank?—Yes.

8623. And is correct, to your knowledge?—Absolutely correct: signed by the accountant of the bank and by myself.

8624. Mr Munro.—That is £400 paid altogether in addition to the rents?—Yes.

* See Question 2483.

[The following are the Documents produced by Mr. Maclachlan at Isleornsay on 20th May:—

APP. A. Trust Deed by the Tenants of Rhenetra and Keistle.

We, the undersigned tenants of Rhenetra and Keistle, in the parish of Snizort, Isle of Skye, considering that Mr. Lewis Mitchell, Kingsburgh, Mr. Clow, Cuidrach, Mr. D. L. Ross of Cromarty, Mr. James Macdonald, Skirrinish, and Mr. John Mackay, Home Farm, Portee, have agreed to become security for us for payment of the sum of one hundred pounds sterling each, towards payment of the price as valued of the sheep stock of the farm of Glen-Haultin, presently occupied by the Rev. Angus Martin, and that at the term of Martinmas next: Therefore we, the said tenants, do hereby consent and agree, that the said sheep stock on the said farm of Glen-Haultin, which we have taken as yearly tenants from and after the term of Whitsunday next, shall be handed over and delivered to Mr. Lewis Mitchell, Kingsburgh, and Mr. Donald Clow, tenant, Cuidrach, as trustees for the following purposes, viz.: First, To hold and manage the said sheep stock for behoof of the said securities until the sums which they may be called upon to pay, or may pay, as the price of the said sheep stock shall be repaid to them with interest due thereon, and also that they may hold the said sheep stock so that the Right Honourable Ronald Archibald Lord Macdonald may be repaid and reimbursed pari passu with the said securities of any sum which he may have to pay and disburse to the said Rev. Angus Martin as the price of the said sheep stock, the said sheep stock being held in trust by the said trustees for behoof of the said Lord Macdonald for any sum he may disburse as aforesaid, until he is repaid in the same manner and pari passu with the other securities. Second, To manage the said sheep stock and to make all necessary and usual disbursements, hire servants, purchase materials, and perform all usual and customary acts, including also dismissing of servants, which they may consider necessary or expedient in connection with the management of the said sheep stock. Third, To convey the said sheep stock to the said tenants upon their being relieved in full of their cautionary obligation, and upon Lord Macdonald also being repaid as aforesaid, and upon all sums due under the said cautionary obligation, and under this Trust Deed, including all necessary disbursements in connection with the said cautionary obligation or in connection with the said sheep stock, declaring that the said trustees shall be entitled to hold the said sheep stock in trust as aforesaid, until they are fully relieved as aforesaid, not only of the said cautionary obligation, including interest which they may have to pay, and disbursements and advances as aforesaid, for the said sheep stock to be incurred in the management thereof, and of the said farm of Glen-Haultin, with power to the said trustees to take over the said sheep stock at valuation by arbiters and an oversman, or by agreement in the usual manner, with authority to the said trustees specially to take the said sheep stock at the prices which may be fixed by, and under any reference which may be entered into for the valuation of the same between the said Rev. Angus Martin and the said Lord Macdonald or his factor without the necessity of a second valuation between the said Lord Macdonald or his factor and the said trustees; and further, we, the said tenants, bind and oblige ourselves severally to repay, to the said cautioners and to the said Lord Macdonald, the respective proportions effeiring to our shares of the said sheep stock and others which they or any of them may make on our behalf in connection therewith: In witness whereof,

Beauly. — Colin Chisholm.

8621. The Chairman.—Where is your place of abode?—Inverness, at present.

8622. But you were formerly on the Chisholm estate?—I was born and brought up there, and remained there until I was over 20 years of age.

8623. Have you a written statement to submit?—I have a few memorandums.

8624. We will be glad to hear them.

I have been asked to tender evidence to this Royal Commission on Deer Forests. On former occasions, my opinion has been given without hesitation or reserve on this subject. More than 20 years ago I spoke publicly, and since that time I have written repeatedly, against what appears to be gross misappropriation of some good arable land and a great deal of splendid hill grazing. From that time till now, not an acre nor an inch of land has been withdrawn (so far as I know) from the extensive deer forests of the glens of the parishes of Kilmorack and Kiltarlity. Thus the cause of complaint has not been removed; the grievance still remains unaltered, only intensified by length of duration. Therefore I cannot change my former statements, nor alter my old prescription in endeavouring to expunge from the Statute-Book the obnoxious law that enables one man to say to another—'I will neither cultivate 'nor reclaim one acre of land for the benefit of man, and 'I will not allow you to do so. No, but I will set apart 'thousands of cultivated and uncultivated acres of land 'for wild beasts.' That such is a part of the law of our country, and that it is largely acted on throughout the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, admits of no doubt. For instance, let me briefly refer to changes which took place in my own time in Glencannich. As I was born, and brought up, and remained in the said glen till I was over 20 years of age, my memory is quite clear about Glencannich. The whole of the glen, except one small farm, is at present a deer forest. In my early recollection there were thirty-three tenant farmers and twelve families of cottars in the said glen, making a total of forty-five families, all of whom I was personally acquainted with. That these people were as comfortable as the generality of Highlanders were, about the first five decades of the present century, seems to admit of no doubt. They educated their families tolerably well. In my own time there were seventeen Glencannich men who held commissions in Her Majesty's Army. There were also in my time nine Glencannich men in holy orders; they were clergymen in the Catholic Church. A detailed list of the names of these twenty-six men, their rank, where they were born in the glen, and where twenty-three of their number died, may be seen on page 2766, Vol. IV. of the Crofters and Cottars Commission of Inquiry in 1884. Three of the clergymen are still living and in active service. In my humble opinion, this list will show that they were abreast of their neighbours in social position and general intelligence. However, the management of former proprietors cleared out every one of the forty-five families that I have seen in Glencannich. The remaining farm, now occupied by the widow's son, was not an exception. The factor on the estate at that time took possession, and added it to four other extensive farms and grazings he had in Glencannich. It was when the late James Sutherland Chisholm came home from America, and succeeded to the estate, that he restored the farm from which he had been evicted nineteen years previously to the father of the present tenant. I remember the time when a former proprietor of Strathglass requested his tenantry (by a call at the door of the Strathglass church by Roderick Fraser alias Rory Gow, who was wood ranger and ground officer at the time) to meet him at Cannich Bridge Inn, to enter on arrangements for new leases of their holdings. The men gladly assembled at the appointed time and place, but the proprietor did not come to the meeting. Towards the afternoon his factor came, and stated that he had no orders to enter on any arrangements with them. I was present at the time and heard the message delivered. The men were greatly disappointed, and justly surmised that some undercurrent was operating against their interests. In a few days after this fruitless meeting it transpired that the best farms in Strathglass were let on lease to strangers. The native tenantry would have been glad to give as much, if not more, rent for the land. They were not a penny piece in arrears at the time. They were anxious to keep their holdings, and I will prove that they were able to pay for them. When the late Thomas Alexander, Lord Lovat, heard of the treatment by their own proprietor, he entered on negotiations with the only sheep-farmer on his estate, and arranged to take the sheep at valuation. His lordship sent for the evicted tenants, and placed them in the farms and grazings vacated by the same flock-master in Glen-Strathfarrar. They took possession at the following Whitsunday; the stock was valued to them, and at the ensuing Martinmas every penny of the price of the stock was duly paid by the new tenants. This proves their ability to have held their own, had they been allowed to remain in their native district, Strathglass. Some 14 years afterwards, his lordship rearranged the largest arable farms on his estate, and converted them into ordinary holdings. I remember some of them well, for I have seen twelve ploughs together at work, the property of one man in the plain of Strath Beauly here. Every tenant that his lordship took to Glen-Strathfarrar was taken down from the Glen and reinstalled in arable farms on his lordship's estate. The odium of having cleared the brave native population out of Glen Strathfarrar rests with Archibald, youngest brother of General Fraser, son of Simon, Lord Lovat, who was beheaded on Tower Hill. Glen Strathfarrar has been a deer forest since it was cleared by Lord Thomas Alexander in 1845. It has been a forest nearly all the time, for part of it was a forest then—Gleninchlochel. As I spoke of the crude management of former proprietors, and I might include factors on the estate of Chisholm, it will be necessary to explain how the tenantry on that estate could take additional farms and stock them. The explanation simply is, that Alexander, The Chisholm who died in 1793, left a widow, Elizabeth, daughter of Dr Wilson of Edinburgh. At the time they married he made a fair settlement on her in case of widowhood. He left for her the option of a certain sum of money annually, or the rental accruing from a number of club-farms. Through the good advice of her only child, Mary, who married James Gooden, merchant, of London, Mrs Chisholm made choice of the joint-farms and kept them intact, and kept the tenants on these farms in easy circumstances until the day of her death, which took place 33 years after the death of The Chisholm, her husband. During the whole of that time this kind, considerate, and excellent Edinburgh lady never turned a man out of house or farm; nor did she ever deprive a man of an acre of land. It was the great good sense of this lady, and the sincere attachment of her daughter, Mrs Gooden of Tavistock Square, London, that enabled the men, when deprived of their old farms, to invest in larger and better ones on Lord Lovat's estate. I remember the time when there were eleven farmers and twelve cottars in the Davoch of Clachan. The grazings here are good, and the arable land so fertile and productive, under the tenantry particularly, that this davoch used to be called the Granary of Strathglass; but is now, and has been for some years back, added to the estate and deer forest of Guisachan and rented from The Chisholm. I recollect a number of warm-hearted hospitable tenants on the estate of Guisachan. So recently as 1855 there were sixteen tenants and six cottars or dependents. They had 62 cows, 24 horses, and 4200 sheep among them. There is a printer's error in the number of sheep in the Minutes of Evidence of the Napier Commission. At page 2768 (11 lines from the top), instead of 420 it ought to be 4200 sheep. Lord Tweedmouth admits this to be the right number (see questions 5362 and 5367, Game Laws Report in 1873, p. 220). Lord Tweedmouth took all their holdings into his own hands. From my earliest recollection the Half-Davoch of Knockfin and the most of the glen of Affaric were united as one large sheep farm, in the hands of two brothers from the south of Scotland. It is now, and has been for some years back, a deer forest. This forest, beginning about a mile above the bridge of Cannich, and extending to Cnoc-a'-chuaille (the boundary between Strathglass and Kintail), is about 24 miles in length and about 2 miles in breadth. It was William, The Chisholm, first husband of Lady Ramsay, and herself, who cleared the people out of the Half-Davoch of Knockfin and the glen of Affaric. These evictions took place about the beginning of the present century. The first large party of the evicted left Strathglass in 1801. The second party of them went away in 1803. They settled principally in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward's Island, and in Cape Breton Island. They gave the name of their Highland home to their residences in their adopted country. In Cape Breton Island there is another county of Inverness. The said William and his wife, Lady Ramsay, left two sons. Both the sons succeeded, one after the other, to the estate and chiefship of Chisholm. Between William, Lady Ramsay, and their two sons, they nearly squeezed the whole native population out of Strathglass. It was Alexander William, the eldest of the two sons of The Chisholm and Lady Ramsay, who turned the people out of Strathglass when they went to Glen-Strathfarrar. By this cruel and injudicious act, and the manner in which it was carried into effect, he deserved the contempt of his neighbours, he incurred the anger of the people he evicted, and lost the confidence of those who remained on the estate.

Colin Chisholm.

I have now shown by whom and when the glens of Strathglass were cleared of the native population. They were cleared to make room for sheep, and now that the furor for sheep is beginning to subside, the mania for deer is taking its place. For instance, we read in the public prints that an American 'Mr Winans, by the simple process of outbidding all competitors, has turned nearly 250,000 acres in the counties of Ross and Inverness into a deer forest.' Some say 260,000 acres, or an area of about 400 square miles. In the first place, I have no hesitation in stating that some of the grazing lands in this extensive forest will compare favourably with, if not excel, the best hill grazings in all Scotland. I have seen superior cattle and sheep reared in this glen. I have also seen heavy and splendid oats, potatoes, and turnips raised on the dells and fields of my native glen.

I go occasionally to the West Coast, and wend my way through Glencannich. From the road I see the heavy crop of natural grass waving on the hillside and meadows, half-tame deer browsing at ease among crumbled walls, and empty but substantial houses still standing at intervals in the glen. Let us hope these houses may soon be required to fulfil the purposes for which they were originally built. It is evident that the eye of the Government is on the landed proprietors of the Highlands. How they can justify themselves in cutting off from the use of man these enormous tracts of land is beyond my comprehension. It seems to me to be morally wrong, and as it is the work of the classes without the assent of the masses, how can it be legally right?

Beauly.

Colin Chisholm.

In answer to question No. 5947, p. 241, Game Laws Report, in 1873, I heard the late Mr Ellice of Glengarry saying in a committee room of the House of Commons:—'The great depopulation was in the years 1780 and 1790, when the colony of Glengarry was founded in Canada by the number of people that were sent out from Scotland in order to obtain their low-lying crofts for sheep in winter.'

In another point of his evidence Mr Ellice said:—'I may mention one single case that I am well acquainted with. When the depopulation began in 1780, a particular estate fetched £700 or £800. The people were then cleared off to make way for sheep. They had turned out 700 to 800 fighting men in the Rebellion, consequently the population could not have been under 5000 or 6000.' With the introduction of sheep to Glengarry, and the dispersion of its brave and faithful population, commenced a series of complications and embarrassments that ended in the sale of the whole large estates of Knoydart and Glengarry. The present Mrs Ellice is the fifth owner of the estates of Glengarry in my own time. The late James Grant of Corrimony soon followed the Glengarry plan. He turned the people away and introduced sheep. Finally the estate was sold, and has since been re-sold, and is now in possession of the third proprietor of my time. Next in turn the estate of Guisachan was partially cleared of its hospitable native population by William Fraser of Culbokie. He introduced sheep-rearing to his glens. His grandson sold the whole of the estate, and it is now in the hands of a third proprietor. The Chisholm, William, and his wife Lady Ramsay, left two sons. The father and the two sons succeeded, one after the other, to the extensive estates of Strathglass, and they in turn were succeeded by James Sutherland Chisholm, and his son after them. Those five proprietors probably left about 5000 deer in Strathglass. To Archibald, youngest son of the Lovat of 1745, belongs the odium of having cleared the native population out of Glen-Strathfarrar. Lord Lovat, the grandfather of the present young laird, is fully entitled to the honour of having converted Glen Strathfarrar into a residence of safety and security for the evicted tenantry of Strathglass in 1831. Not only did his lordship give them 14 years' lease of the glen, but he made himself responsible for the payment of the whole stock—some thousands of sheep delivered at valuation by the outgoing tenant to the new tenants. At the ensuing Martinmas every penny of the price of the heavy sheep stock was paid by the new tenants. With regard to eviction of farmers, I may mention that during the 41 years of my time passed in England I have neither heard nor read of a farmer that was threatened or evicted on English soil but one. That one exceptional case took place on the estate of Lord Darnley, near Gravesend. However, as soon as his neighbours ascertained the true state of the case, they raised such a chorus of indignation that the landlord soon acquired—nothing else than acquired—a better knowledge of his own position, and the farmer was instantly reinstated in his farm. What a contrast between this solitary case in England and all the rapacious evictions that took place during that time in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

My belief is that land was given to man to make it support the greatest possible number of human beings in the greatest possible degree of comfort and happiness.

The law that enables a man to say to another:—'I will not cultivate one acre, and I will not allow you to do so,' is most unnatural and most iniquitous in its results. By taking advantage of the said law, society in the Highlands—I might say in Scotland—has been dislocated. And as the owners of the land in Scotland were the cause of that dislocation on them, the onus of reorganisation and restoring the people rests entirely on them. Equity and every manner of fairness demand that our landed proprietors should be compelled, and that immediately, to restore the land to the people.

8625. Can you give me the names of townships that have been cleared from the land of which you have been speaking?—On my own glen I can give them.

8626. What is the name?—The first name I remember is Coire-nan-cuilean.

8627. Any others?—Yes, the next is Ardtaig, and the next is Mullardoch West.

8628. Was that a township?—It was the residence of a comfortable farmer.

8629. I am asking you for townships occupied by crofters or small tenants?—I am telling you that every one of these was occupied in my time by tenants such as in England are known by the name of yeomanrymen, that paid fair rent, every one of them; and I class them as farms. I will come to the townships by and bye.

8630. You wish to give us the names of farms?—The names of farms where I saw the people—single as well as townships.

8631. Well, I will be glad to have both. Now, in the first place, give us the names of farms?—Do you mean the club farms or the single farms?

8632. Either club farms or single farms?—We'll begin with Coire-nan-cuilean.

8633. Then you mentioned another?—Mullardoch West.

8634. The next one?—Mullardoch East, then Shalavanach a township, Leitrie a township, Luibguish a single farm. Glaschorry, I have seen tenant after tenant there.

8635. Is that a farm?—It is a single farm. Then Ariuarich is a single farm. Then Carrie, a club farm. Some of the lands are out of sight of the Commissioners. They can't see the lands unless they leave the road. The next township club farm is Muckrach.

8636. That is a club farm?—A club farm. Next Dalriach.

8637. That is a farm too?—That is a single farm. Then Craskie; that is a single farm now, but it was a club farm before. The next is Tombuie.

8638. Is that a farm?—That was a club farm; there are two Tombuies, but they were joined together in my time—Tombuie Beg and Tombuie More.

8639. Well?—Then there was a farmer opposite Tombuie, Blackcroft you may call it.

8640. That is a farm too?—That was a single farm. The next farm was Ruinahuaig, a single farm; only it was a farm on the other side, but it was not a club farm. There was one farm on both sides of Ruinahuaig. That contains the whole glen of Glencannich. There was a crofter, of course, on Torbeg. Now I am done with the names of the farms in Glencannich, but I have seen crofts occupied by little men that I don't mention here.

8641. Were these little crofts you mention located upon the farm?—They were farms of their own, independently of the other man's.

8642. These were not townships?—No, I mentioned every one of the club farms. Coire-nan-cuilean was a club farm, to begin with.

8643. Are you able to mention any other places that were formerly occupied either as single farms or as townships, or as club farms in the district of which you have been speaking?—Well, I remember perfectly well when the low lands of Guisachan were occupied by comfortable farmers. I mention them in the paper here, and Corrimony on the other side of the hill—it was cleared of the people to make room for sheep. The result was that the estate came to the hammer.

8644. Was there a township at Corrimony?—Several townships.

8645. Just tell us them?—Tulloch of Corrimony, Carnoch of Corrimony. Glen-Coron, again, was either attached to those farms or separate tenants of their own,—I cannot tell you which,—but the Glen of Coron was cleared at the same time.

8646. Any others you can mention?—Certainly there are. I would not wish to begin with them now, but if your lordship thinks proper to have a final examination of this business in Inverness, as your predecessor in Commissions had, I will be very glad to give you the names of everyone I knew to have been a farm.

8647. These lands of which you have been speaking just now, how are they occupied?—As deer forests, except one little bit of farm in Glencannich. Except that Lord Tweedmouth has the good sense to keep a deal of cattle among his forest, that is the only difference.

8648. What are the names of these deer forests?—The first one that I mentioned is Glencannich, then Glenaffaric and Half-Davoch of Knockfin. I don't know whether Guisachan comes here or not, but his lordship has it in his own hands. There are both cattle and deer on it. Glen-Strathfarrar, of course, is a deer forest, as I have mentioned.

8649. Now, in your judgment, these lands are capable of being now occupied by tenants?—Yes.

8650. Is there land capable of being made arable land as well as grazing?—I state in this paper that I have seen the finest oats I ever saw, south or north in England or Scotland, growing on the dales of Glencannich,—the finest potatoes and the finest turnips; and I think that is conclusive. If any of the gentlemen would find out that the number you took down will not make the number that I mentioned here, on purpose I left out the names of two small men: one place called Coiredubh. There was a small single tenant there (Black Coire), and the other one I saw a tenant on was Lubnandamh—one of the lodges now.

8651. Are any of the lands which you have been describing now under wood?—Yes, on the south side of the water, a great deal of wood; and in one or two parts—one part particularly—on the north side is full of fine pine wood. There would be no difficulty whatever in building houses among the crumbled walls of former houses, when they begin to rebuild them. The wood is at the door for them, ready to be used.

8652. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You have spoken of the general standard of comfort sixty years ago, and you said that the people you remember were as comfortable as the generality of people then?—I did.

8653. How does that compare with the standard of comfort of the present day?—If you tell me where everyone of the people are now, between London, Aberdeen, Edinburgh, and wherever they are,—if you tell me the state of the people where they are now, I would be able to answer you.

8654. Then you do not know the state of the people now, generally speaking?—How could I, when they are dispersed and sent out of the country?

8655. But I am not speaking of those very people; I am speaking of the generality?—And what is the generality? If you speak of the generality in the glen I was describing, you will find some half a dozen gamekeepers and one little farmer; and if you call that the generality of people, I have a different name for it.

8656. You don't quite understand what I am asking you. You spoke generally of the standard of comfort sixty years ago. I am comparing the general standard of comfort sixty years ago with that of to-day. People are not content to-day with only the necessaries of life that they had sixty years ago; they want more to-day, don't they, generally speaking?—That is news to me, and I don't believe it.

8657. Then you refuse to admit that the general comfort of the present day throughout the country is higher now than it was sixty years ago?—Of the country? Tell me what part you are speaking of.

8658. The Highlands and Lowlands?—But I am confining myself, strictly speaking, to what I saw in Glencannich. Now tell me where the people are who were there, and what comfort they have.

8659. The Chairman.—Mr Shaw Stewart is not here to answer questions but to ask them.—I will be very glad to answer all questions, but I will ask one favour of you: when my questions are over I will ask the favour of your lordship, or of one of the Commissioners, to allow me to ask a question here and there that I think ought to be answered. I will not ask it while I am here: I know my duty too well for that.

8660. Mr Shaw Stewart.—I should like to make my point clear. Sixty years ago did the people you speak of live in slated houses?—Not one of them, but they were in very comfortable houses.

8661. Do not people prefer nowadays, when they can, to live in slated houses,—the crofters? They prefer slated houses to the old black houses, when they can put them up?—There was no want of them in my time at all.

8662. No want of what?—No want of slated houses. They made their own houses, and very comfortable they were.

8663. They were not slated houses?—Not one, until the factor slated one or two for himself.

8664. Now, what I want you to answer me is this: Do not crofters now, when they get security of tenure, put up slated houses when they can?—I should hope they will, if they ever get security of tenure. Nothing of that kind has dawned on my unfortunate part of the country yet.

8665. But is it not to your knowledge that it is done through the Highlands where the crofter has got security of tenure?—I never saw one.

8666. Oh, well, I have.—It may be so; I have no doubt of it.

8667. Now, with regard to their food: Would they be content nowadays with the same food that they got sixty years ago?—You want me to speak of their stomachs.

8668. Yes, it is an important part of man, is it not?—Well, the fact of it is this. The most of what they required—I might say the whole of it, but the most of it—was grown by themselves. They were not beholden to any extravagance or any delicacy that you seem to hint at in my time at all. They were fine healthy strong men, living on the produce of the land they cultivated themselves.

8669. Do you think the people in the present age would be content to live on the oats that they raise themselves?—On the oats that they raise?

8670. Yes?—Most certainly they would, if they had all the other stock on their farms that they had along with that, in order to make their living of it, as they used to do.

8671. Now I want to ask you this?—Very well, go on.

8672. You are going back to the time when you were about 20 years of age?—Yes, and more.

8673. Well, after that time were you away from the country?—Forty-one years only.

8674. Were you in a good position, during that time, to judge of the varying circumstances affecting agriculture in this country while you were away?—I never pretended that.

8675. Have you paid much attention to the rise and fall of prices of various kinds of stock in recent years?—I have been repeatedly watching the prices and examining and taking note of them in Smithfield Market. I don't know whether you ever were there or not.

8676. But your profession did not bring you into contact with practical agricultural affairs?—Certainly not, certainly not.

8677. Well now, you told us you wished, which I hope we all do, the greatest possible amount of people to live in comfort and happiness on the land?—That would be my prayer, and was my prayer from my boyhood.

8678. But if they were placed on land they could not cultivate to profit, there would not be much comfort or happiness?—To profit? When you speak of profit, would you tell me the conditions on which they are to have it?

8679. I would rather you gave me your idea?—But I can't answer these questions; make your questions intelligible to the whole assembly here.

8680. It is not my business to make statements; it is my business to ask questions?—Very well, ask them, but make your questions clear.

8681. I am doing my best to make it clear to you?—Very well then, do, pray, and I will do my best to answer you, with the greatest pleasure.

8682. Now what I mean by cultivating land to profit is being able to stock their land, keep up their houses, pay the rent, and, if necessary, repay any loan that may be advanced, besides maintaining themselves and their families?—That would be very good if you had people that could do that. Beauly. Colin Chisholm.

8683. The Chairman.—Just wait till you hear the question.

8684. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Do you think that people could be placed on the lands you mention and cultivate those lands to profit in the sense I have stated, without any pecuniary assistance?—I don't for a moment, far from it.

8685. Then might I ask you this: Where is the pecuniary assistance to come from?—I will tell you that by and bye.

8686. I would rather you told me now?—The pecuniary assistance?

8687. Yes.—Well, in the first place, I state in this paper that the cause of the dislocation of society in the Highlands particularly, and almost all over Scotland, was the landed proprietors of the country. The greed for rents made them, as it were, overstock the market. They turned men away who were in a good position; and there would be no need to go to any other source but themselves to have stock and comfort. Is that what you want?

8688. No. I am speaking of the future, not of the past.—How can we speak of the future without taking account of the past; tell me that.

8689. I do not say that we can, but judge from your experience in the past. You have just told me that these lands could not be cultivated to profit without pecuniary assistance?—They could not stock them, I told you that; but I did not say cultivate.

8690. But you agree with my definition of cultivating lands to profit?—Yes, by having grazing and arable lands together. But are you going to ask me where the funds are to come from?

8691. Yes.—Very well, go ahead.

8692. I have asked you that.—I tell you, then, in my opinion, that the first duty of reorganisation lies on the shoulders of the proprietors that disturbed the people. Let them see the people in such a position as they were in when, through greed of rent, they turned them out, and we will have the funds then for them directly.

8693. But the proprietors you speak of are all dead?—But the land is there. It is in possession of some proprietor.

8694. Then do you mean that a proprietor, if he has bought land within recent years, is to find the money to place the people on this land?—His share of it; but I have no doubt the good sense of the Commission and Parliament, when they have to do with it, will see the difference between long-standing forests and new ones. It would not be justice, in my opinion, to visit all alike, but visit them according to the criminality of their proceedings.

8695. Then I understand that these people cannot be placed on these lands that you mentioned, to cultivate them to profit, without pecuniary assistance, and you have no better plan to propose than that assistance should come from the proprietors of the present day?—To begin it. It is quite possible that the Government of the country might do this.

8696. That is what I want to know?—It is quite possible: listen to me. It is quite possible that the Government of the country might take the use of the money of the ratepayers of the country to stock these lands or to assist the tenants to begin on them; but I cannot for a moment suppose that Government, Whig or Tory, would ever consent to leave the present or any future landed proprietors in a position to throw the people about as if they were nothing.

8697. I can understand your point. But if the Government is to help the people, that means they must advance them money?—Advance part of it.

8698. Part of the money?—Part of the money.

8699. For stocking, and so forth?—Yes.

8700. How are the people to repay this loan?—To get the other part of it?

8701. How are the people to repay this loan that may be lent them by the Government?—They repay it as other loans. Other loans are granted by the Government every year. In my lifetime I remember loans being granted, and they had to be repaid by time and by easy interest.

8702. Easy interest?—Yes, exactly.

8703. But you think that they would be able to maintain themselves, pay rent, buy stock, put up buildings, and repay this easy interest without difficulty?—Easily. I don't say a word about buildings. I say that the proprietor ought to be the builder of every house and office on the farm.

8704. Oh, the proprietors are to put up the houses?—The proprietors, by all means. Let them put up the houses as well on the farms where they scattered the people.

8705. Now you have spoken of lands being made into forests: were not most of these forests sheep farms before they were turned into forests?—For a while they were; but in Glencannich we had the black cattle and sheep and goats—great flocks of goats they had at that time.

8706. But the most of the lands now under forest were first of all put under sheep, were they not?—They were not.

8707. After the clearances that you speak of?—After the clearances of 1831 they were put under sheep for a while, and then when sheep-rearing was showing a deficiency and was not paying the shepherd, he gave them up, and then there were no tenantry but to throw them up to wild beasts. That was the way it was done.

8708. Then the clearances were made not so much for forests as for sheep?—I think I may admit that you are right there.

8709. Mr Sutherland.—The land of which you spoke is roughly included, I think, within the watershed of the Beauly and its tributaries?—Oh no, there is Glengarry: I told you something about Glengarry, and I told you something about Corrimony; they come into the river Ness.

8710. That district drains into the valley of the Ness?—Yes.

8711. But all the other lands are included in the watershed of the Beauly and its tributaries?—Every inch of them.

8712. And the climate is good?—The climate is good; and to show you that it is good, I believe some of the cultivated land in the forests will be found to be somewhere about 400 feet above the level of the sea.

8713. But the names of the places you gave us where there was cultivation and occupation before: some of them, I understand, were larger farms, and some others were smaller farms, where they had grazing in common: is that so?—Yes, you are quite right.

8714. So that both are now available so far as old cultivated land is concerned?—Exactly so, but I will tell you this in answer to that question. In all my experience I always saw farmers making choice of a bit of land on their own account. As to the club farms, that may do where it can be done; but through the island and the country I suspect I could mention one part on the west coast where that would not suit. But it is not my business to turn out of my own district.

8715. I wish to ask one question with regard to the standard of comfort. You would like, no doubt, to see the standard of comfort of the people raised?—Most certainly, but I never expect that people would ask their comfort to exceed the comforts of the men that were there before.

8716. So satisfied are you of the comfort there was at the time?—Yes. There would be no bargains with such gentlemen as that (pointing to Mr Shaw Stewart).

8717. I think that there is a good deal of agreement between you and Mr Shaw Stewart on that point, and I wish to make it clear. That is why I ask the question. In making an estimate of the comfort, do you think that it is the right or the proper thing to compare the comfort on the one side of what it was 80 years ago, and on the other side of what it is to-day? The comparison ought to be equal, ought it not, in time as well?—My experience of the comfort and experience of all my friends I left behind is this—that they were as comfortable then as they are to-day, wherever they are, and they would not wish to be more comfortable than they were then. Beauly. — Colin Chisholm.

8718. But provided they did wish to be more comfortable, are not the means of obtaining that comfort easier to-day than they were 80 years ago?—I don't know it.

8719. For instance the railway?—Pooh! What was the use of a railway for a man in Glencannich, where he made his own meal, reared his own potatoes, fed his own wedders, and where I saw them killing their cattle about Martinmas for the winter supply.

8720. That is, so far as the supply of his bodily comfort is concerned?—So far as the supply of his bodily comfort is concerned, I really don't see that there is the slightest difference between to-day and the time I am speaking of.

8721. But, at any rate, I take it that you think that the state of the people ought to be compared with the general state of Scotland at that time, and not with the state of the people of Scotland at the present time, to make it fair?—I will not travel over all Scotland at all: tell me any of the people who,—there may be people who never tasted a morsel of their own growth of beef or mutton, or their own potatoes or oatmeal or anything; there may be thousands and millions of them. But I am speaking of the people I saw there, and the utter necessity there is of reestablishing the people and strengthening the kingdom. Where is the patriotism of the kingdom?

8722. My point is this: that, provided they went back there again, they would be as well as they were at that time?—And as happy.

8723. And they would get the benefit of whatever improvements civilisation might have added since?—Get what they can.

8724. Now, as to the nature of the ground there and its capability of being cultivated to profit. You have no doubt on that point, I understand?—Not the least, if you make the rent in such a way as to enable them to cultivate it to profit.

8725. Is it your idea, then, that the rent ought to be left to a public tribunal to fix?—Most certainly; but on the other hand I would never consent to what I have often seen proposed, nationalisation of the land. I would never be one to that, and if you like I will give you my reasons for it.

8726. I wish to ask you a question about the cattle. You, I think, very properly made a point of good cattle being raised?—And sheep.

8727. Is it not a fact that the Guisachan herd of cattle is famed over the country?—So I believe.

8728. And is it, in your opinion, a proof of the fitness of the place for rearing good cattle?—It depends altogether on the view you take of it. Here, for instance, as to the man in Guisachan. I believe his lordship is a wise and good landlord; that is my firm belief. He allows the people to remain there till they die, but not one will follow them when the present stock of people go. Apply that to all Scotland or any other kingdom. Where would your defences be if you make that a general rule?

8729. Well, but with regard to the fitness of occupying to profit: as we have to look out for land of that kind, you think that the existence, don't you, of a herd of cattle like that in such a place is proof that it is capable of cultivation by small tenants?—I never doubted it.

8730. Then another element you spoke of was the readiness with which timber was got in this locality?—You have only to cut it and just float it across the water, and there it is at your door.

8731. It would be a very important element in building new homes?—A most important element. The stone of the old walls is crumbling, and timber grows on the ground on the other side. You will see that if you go to the glen.

8732. Are you aware of the precise terms of the remit to this Commission?—Not I.

8733. Well, I may put it to you that we are asked to look out for such land as is at present occupied as a deer forest or as a grouse moor or for other sporting purposes, or is now occupied for grazing, not in the occupation of small tenants, which is capable of being advantageously occupied by crofters or other small tenants?—Yes.

8734. Are you of opinion that all this land you have referred to to-day comes within the scope of this remit?—Every inch of it—if you give them fair terms of the land; every single inch of it.

8735. Mr Forsyth.—With reference to Strathglass and Glencannich, are there men from the neighbourhood who are ready and willing to take small holdings or small farms there?—There are no men there, not one man except watchers and gamekeepers.

8736. Then do you think that these places should be laid open to offers from strangers?—I do.

8737. And on what terms?—If you will allow me I will give you the answer to that which I made to the present Lord Lieutenant of the county. He asked me the very same question before Lord Napier. I told him to make the lands available to ordinary tenants, and to advertise them, and that he would soon have plenty of offers. That is what I told Lochiel.

8738. Then, with reference to these proposed small holdings in these straths, you think that for them the present proprietor should put up houses?—Most certainly.

8739. Should he provide capital for stock also?—His share of it, and the lion's share, too.

8740. With reference to the putting up of houses, you say there is wood near. Supposing that wood did not belong to the same proprietor?—But it does, every tree of it.

8741. Then he should take his own wood?—Take his own wood. Every other farmer that I ever formed acquaintance with in England had his house and offices built on his farm.

8742. And then, having done this, he should take any offers generally for tenants?—That would be very favourable for the landlord, and I think it would be the fairest thing for all parties, but I have no doubt some of the old people would be very anxious to get back again.

8743. And then you think that the rents of these offerers should be fixed by an impartial tribunal?—By all means, not by factor or landlord. The less they have to do in fixing the rent the better it is for themselves and for the people.

8744. But, you see, there is some difficulty here. He is to take any offers, and then the rent is to be fixed by an impartial tribunal?—Will you allow me to tell you what they do in Germany under present circumstances? When the late rascal, Napoleon Buonaparte, went to Germany, the Germans were amazed to see their young men, and the smartest young men they had in Prussia, flocking to the banner of Napoleon. They endeavoured to ascertain the cause, and face it out; found out that it was the land, and the land only, that would attract their own men out of the country. This is what they did. They sent a Commission, as you and your brother Commissioners are here, throughout the whole country; parcelled out the land into farms, and kept the men in their own country. That stopped them. Now, do the very same thing, and if you really mean to do business as you ought to do, you will find that if the lands are set apart as farms, and that you advertise them, you will have plenty of offers for them.

8745. That is what I want to get at—'You will have plenty of offers.' I want to know how you reconcile this. The offer, you know, is a question generally of competition. I want to know how you can reconcile the question of a competition with the fixing of rent by an impartial tribunal?—Well, I think I will make it plain to you that the Prussians fixed the rent. They pointed out the farms, fixed the rent, and the men had it. If you had a favourite brother or grieve in your service, no doubt you would wish him to take advantage of this farm; but it is not my business to enter into these things at all. I tell you what they did in Prussia, and I think it would be a capital example for this country.

8746. Then you want the rent fixed beforehand by an impartial tribunal?—Beforehand, by all means. If you make it a competition, the man that has little money will ruin it for himself and his landlord.

8747. Then, supposing you have now got your farm with the rent fixed, and the buildings put up by the proprietor, how do you propose to select your tenant, because you have no longer competition to go on?—To select the tenant?

8748. Yes?—On that point I would most certainly give a voice to the Commission, and even to the proprietor that performed his duty to the tenant. I would not restrict it to one man or to one party.

8749. Then you think that a Commission, or a Commission along with the proprietor, should be employed in the selection of tenants for these fixed rents?—Certainly.

8750. You think there is no difficulty in that?—I don't see the difficulty in it.

8751. There might be a large number of applicants for farms at these easy rents. I presume the rents would be fair or easy rents?—Exactly so. The country is wild for them in another place.

8752. And would you give any preference to men in the immediate neighbourhood?—Well, I think the descendants of men who were there for generations, and that were ill-used in turning them out, ought to have preference. Provided that they were in a position to make good their engagements.

8753. Then don't you think that it would be advisable that there should be some evidence as to the ability of the men to work the holdings?—Well, such men as a gentleman here—I think there is a gentleman, perhaps, in the company that is at the head of a bank; he might give you a very good idea how safe it would be for the land. I think there is a Mr Mackenzie here that obliges us in many respects, a banker.

8754. But you would have offers from outsiders, men from a distance?—Very well.

8755. Would you give no preference to the local men?—I told you to the descendants of those that were there from time immemorial. Their forefathers fought for the land, and have kept the landlords at the time of fighting in possession of the land, and hence they are entitled, without a question, to have them.

8756. And you think there would be no difficulty in this plan of yours?—I don't see it. I wish you would try it; there is Mr Mackenzie.

8757. Mr Gordon.—You were well acquainted with this country about 60 years ago?—Yes.

8758. You stated, I think, that there were twenty-three tenant farmers in the valley of Glencannich and twenty-two cottars?—Yes.

8759. Did you ever hear of them being bothered with frost up there in that country?—And snow too. I have been in both, sometimes very heavy snow.

8760. Did you ever hear of their corn being frosted there?—Well, no, I have not, except in so far as this is concerned. Coire-nan-cuilean is the highest club farm I mentioned. Well, when cattle were plentiful, the farmers there encircled their cattle for a certain time on the hill, and they turned over every bit of that hill, and, of course, they had oats growing in it; but it was rather late, and the snow and frost caught them. In Coire-fearna (I know the place), it was out over the Christmas; but fine weather came, and every stook of it made a peck of good oatmeal for them afterwards.

8761. That is different from the frosted corn nowadays. But do you think that sheep could be safely wintered in these parts of the country?—They were, and they are at this time. How did Mr Robertson?——

8762. He was in a different watershed up at the top of the hill?—Coire-nan-cuilean is much more sheltered, if you come to that.

8763. Has Mr Robertson's farm not some lower ground, then a good part of the hills of Glencannich?—Not at all.

Beauly. — Colin Chisholm.

8764. Whereabout is Coire-nan-cuilean? — It is the very brae of Glencannich at the west end of Loch Mullardoch; and Mr Robertson's farm is nearly 200 or 300 feet above it.

8765. Was there some farm up about Luibnadamh about your day?—Yes.

8766. Were they not bothered with frost on the ground there?—I never heard of that; they may have been.

8767. Well, that is in regard to Glencannich. Now you told us in regard to Guisachan that there were sixteen tenants and so many cottars?—Yes.

8768. Do you remember the name of the township that they were in?—Yes, every one of them.

8769. What was the name of them?—The name first and foremost is Cougie. Then there is Cnocanacrae, to the west of Guisachan. Then there was Mid-Guisachan, Baile-'chladaich, Ach-a'-bhlair, and Tomich. You will find all these places in print in Lord Napier's report.

8770. Were these townships, or were they individual farms?—The first of them in the glen might have been called individual farms, because they were occupied by a tenant of the name of Cameron, in fact two brothers of them, but the others, Cnocanacrae in my time was only one farm, and Guisachan again was one farm. Baile-chladaich was a club farm; Ach'-a'-bhlair was a club farm; Tomich was a club farm; Achnaheglish (East and West) were both club farms.

8771. You have told us about Glencannich, and you have told us now about Guisachan, but you have said nothing about Glen-Affaric. Do you remember any houses on Glen-Affaric?—Oh, scarcely any, except shepherds' houses.

8772. Well, for the last 60 years I may take it that Glen Affaric has never been occupied by any tenants except for sheep grazing?—From 1831?

8773. You were born in 1831, were you not?—Oh, I was seventeen years old then.

8774. Would you remember before 1831?—Perfectly.

8775. Go back beyond 1831, and tell us if you ever remember seeing any houses at all in Glen Affaric?—None except shepherds' houses.

8776. Then there were no crofts and no arable land in Glen-Affaric in your day?—The crofts were there, but whether they had arable land I am not sufficiently acquainted with it to tell you. But I know you will find a great many crofts there.

8777. As regards The Chisholm's property outside Glencannich, with the exception of the farm of Knockfin, occupied by the Williamsons, there were no other tenants within that fine property in your time?—Well, in my very early recollection there was a small speck of the glen of Affaric called Lub-na-gairbh-fhearna.

8778. That is near where the lodge is?—Far beyond the lodge, past Coulavie.

8779. Near Alltbeath?—Scarcely as far as that.

8780. But, in point of fact, you don't recollect any arable lands or crofts or small farms in Glen Affaric?—No, except these.

8781. Knockfin grazings went in over to the edge of Loch Affaric?—Yes, to the forest.

8782. Can you tell us whose shepherds it was that you remember seeing in the place?—I remember seeing numbers of shepherds.

8783. Do you remember their names?—Numbers of them.

8784. Whose shepherds were they?—They were shepherds of the men that had farms. The first shepherd I ever remember there was Ewan Rankine, and his son after him.

8785. Who was his master?—Mr Chisholm of Fasnakyle.

8786. Then the only arable land in your day was down at Fasnakyle on the side of the Glass river?—No, they had arable land in Achagiad. The west end of Loch Beneveian you will find plenty arable land.

8787. I have been there, but I have never seen arable land?—Oh, you had better go if you want to find good grazings and good share of level lands waiting for the strong arm of the labourer to cultivate it, and to reclaim it.

8788. Would you not be a little afraid of frost in Glen Affaric?—Not the least if I were living on good terms of rent. Oh no. Beauly. — Colin Chisholm.

8789. Mr Sutherland asked a question about the cattle upon Guisachan farm. I at once agree with Mr Sutherland that it is a very creditable thing to see such fine animals in that part of the country; but are you aware whether these cattle are kept on the produce of the country or on other produce?—I should be very sorry to give you an answer to that.

8790. But I would like to get an answer; if you say you don't know, that is enough?—I don't. There is a great deal of cake and stuff coming to this country that I know of.

8791. But you believe there is a little cake goes up there occasionally?—I should not wonder, but I am not surprised at the cattle being good.

8792. It accounts for the cattle being rather superior to what you would expect to find in the district?—Yes: well I will tell you another reason for it. He got a third from the descendants, or rather from the last cattle of Mr M'Combie of Tillyfour—the best stock of cattle.

8793. I have no doubt the present cattle owe their good qualities, to a large extent, to the man that is in charge of them?—Just so. Now that we mention Mr M'Combie's name, would you allow me, my lord, to make a little quotation, and I will return to this gentleman?

8794. The Chairman.—No. If there is anything wanted of that kind afterwards, we will give you an opportunity.

8795. Mr Munro.—You have favoured us with an exceedingly long and interesting statement, and you have also answered a good many questions, so that I shall not detain you long. Your age, you have told us, is over 80?—Yes.

8796. I take it, from your extreme age, that you do not yourself expect to participate in any benefit or advantage that may accrue from a reconsideration of existing circumstances in Strathglass and Glencannich?—I do not expect the value of a pinch of snuff, not for myself personally, from all the Commissions I ever saw about land.

8797. Then I suppose that it is purely patriotic motives that have brought you here to-day, and with a desire to benefit others who may be coming after you?—That is the very reason, and there is another reason too. Through my long service in Her Majesty's Customs I have what can keep me in bread and cheese all my lifetime, if I take care of it, and I want to do whatever little lies in my power for all the people of the country that have so generously consented to keep me in my old age. If you call that patriotism, I am full of it.

8798. But, Mr Chisholm, I take it that your desire is to see Strathglass, Glencannich, and these other glens as you remember them when you left them 60 years ago?—If God in His mercy would grant it, I would be very thankful.

8799. And you have no doubt in your own mind that these glens should be repeopled, provided they get them on fair terms?—Not the least doubt of it.

8800. You have been absent from Strathglass for a very considerable time?—41 years only.

8801. And you still cherish some love for your country, as you did long ago?—I found that the love of country never abated in me; it was quite the reverse, and I believe that every man that leaves a happy part of a country can never forget what it is.

8802. Have you ever, in your absence from the country, met other Highlanders who were influenced by a strong desire to return to their native glens and straths?—Hundreds of them.

8803. You have given us details of people from Strathglass and Glencannich who have risen to prominent position in the army and in the church, and other professions. Now, am I to understand from that that you gave us that statement to show that the people then occupied such favourable circumstances that they were in a position to bring up their sons to follow up these professions?—That is the very reason that I have given for it. They were in such a position as to enable their families to take their part in the army and in the church. And while the two bishops, John and Æneas Chisholm, were at the head of the Highland College in Moidart and Lismore, they sent splendid teachers to Strathglass and Glencannich. In my opinion that would account for the desire of the young men of that district to enter the church or follow the profession of arms.

8804. You have given us a very considerable list, and you could add to that number?—Add to it materially. That is the reason why I mention these bishops.

8805. Do you remember what effect the depopulation of these glens and straths had upon the towns around here, such as Inverness and Beauly?—I cannot tell you that it had much effect on them, but I know for a fact that a good many of them came down to Inverness and to other parts.

8806. But I presume you are prepared to admit, as a matter within your own knowledge, that tenants from these places were in the habit of coming to these towns with the produce of their farms, selling the produce and returning with purchases from Inverness?—Repeatedly, and I have seen it done.

8807. And the towns certainly have suffered from the depletion of the population in these places?—Well, I should say so, living there across the sea and other parts, but so far as getting a living on their land at home that is so.

8808. Any misfortune which has occurred to the people in this neighbourhood would no doubt be owing to this fact, that under the old conditions the farmers were in the habit of wintering their sheep from Strathglass about Beauly here and about Inverness?—And the Black Isle, and some in Aberdeenshire.

8809. And that, of course, is unknown now?—No.

8810. Now you mentioned about the produce of ground on Strathglass, and you have known of good samples of oats being produced there?—I have.

8811. Were there many meal mills in Strathglass?—Seven only. That is from Aigas west of the railway. I will mention them. Meal mill at Aigas, Eskadale, Erchless, Culligran, Inchully, Guisachan, and Moor of Comore, I think the only one that grinds meal now out of the whole number.

8812. Were there many crofters in Strathglass?—Well, that depends on the meaning you attach to a crofter.

8813. Well, men paying not above £30 of rent?—Just so. Some of them, in my recollection, numbers of them, paid less than £30. But in rearrangements of farms, again, those that I saw paying £30, they had actually taken farms where they paid more than £30 a year. Now, I don't call them crofters at all. In England, where I spent part of my time, they would go by the name of yeomanry, not crofters.

8814. Now, on the question of poor rates. Do you remember what the poor rates might have been on Strathglass before the depopulation took place?—No, nor any other man, for there were no poor rates.

8815. Mr Shaw Stewart put a question to you regarding giving pecuniary assistance to enable the people to retake the lands in these straths and glens. Now I am not quite sure that you quite understood Mr Shaw Stewart's question. Supposing that a tenant can be got to take a small farm in the strath or glen, what amount of assistance would you expect he would require to enable him to enter into possession,—to stock the farm, and to build his house?—It would be presumption on my part if I were to enter on these things, being so long out of the country. It would cause mere awkwardness and trouble. I can talk of how they are now, but the idea of my mentioning about rents or assistance is beyond my power to give. That must be left for men who know land.

8816. So that you are not in a position to offer us any suggestions on that point?—Well, no; but what I said to the gentleman was that I would certainly expect the proprietors of the land to have the lion's share of providing for the funds, simply because they dislocated the people in possession, and are well able to make good their promises.

Beauly. Colin Chisholm.

8817. Where would the people come from, supposing that there were no more deer forests in Strathglass? Where would the people come from to take possession of the land; can you give us any assistance in that direction?—From wherever God and good men may direct them. If you like, let them come from Lewis, or from Harris, or any other part: but give the names if there be any of them who are the descendants of those who helped to get it.

8818. How could we make a selection now of such men?—That is for wiser men than me to say.

8819. Do you think it entails a hardship on farmers in the neighbourhood of deer forests who used to get their turnips and wintering when sheep occupied land now afforested, and does that depreciate the value of the lands in the forests and in the neighbourhood round about?—I should say it must do that; but I told you I would rather keep clear of rents and values. That will be the work of superior hands among farmers and among other people. But what I maintain is this, that it is a hardship and a gross misappropriation of land to deprive people of their holdings that were able to pay for them. And I consider it even an oppression of the poor. My church tells me—one moment, my lord—my church tells me there are four sins that call for vengeance at the gate of heaven, and oppression of the poor is one of them.

8820. You look at these questions, I think, mainly from how it affects the people, and not from the landlord and tenant point of view?—They have the greatest interest of all to rectify it.

8821. Then would you consider that if the glens were put as they originally were, even the landlords would benefit?—By far, not in pocket only, but in reputation, and in every sense of the word. They are becoming the byeword of the nations.

8822. Mr William Burns, Solicitor, Inverness, Agent for Mrs Chisholm.—Would you tell us what your father's name was?—His name was Colin Chisholm. My grandfather's name was Colin Chisholm, and my great-grandfather's name Colin Chisholm. The latter left Leitrie, and fought at the battle of Sheriff Muir in 1715, and afterwards at the battle of Culloden in 1746. There they are now.

8823. Your father was tacksman of Leitrie?—He was, all his lifetime, until he came down to Phopachy.

8824. What date was that?—Well, upon my word, I don't know.

8825. Give us a notion. It is since 1830, I suppose?—Oh, God bless you, long long since then. It would be in the forties. [To his brother.] Do you remember, Duncan?

8826. It was after 1830. Now your father was tacksman of Leitrie at all events in 1812?—Yes.

8827. Did you ever hear that your father evicted the tenants of Leitrie?—No, I did not, nor any other one.

8828. Very well. Listen to this precept of removing, at your father's instance:—'Colin Chisholm and Colin 'Chisholm, junior, tacksman of Leitrie and Setter of the 'said lands, that they upon the fourth day of April current 'obtained Decree and Sentence of Removal at their in-'stance before Thomas Gilzean, Esq., my substitute, against 'Donald Macdonald and Angus Macdonald in Leitrie.' There is a precept to remove them, and they were removed upon that. Do you know that?—I know perfectly well that they never were tenants. I remember them both just as well as I remember you. Angus was one of the men that went to Ireland—volunteered to go to Ireland in 1798.

8829. Is it not the fact that they were removed at the instance of your father, and that they were sub-tenants of his?—Hear what I have to say to that. They were removed at the suggestion of Colonel James Chisholm, who wanted his nephew and his uncle to come near the church, and they were the nearest tenants but one to the church at Fasnakyle.

8830. But you have been accusing the lairds of removing tenants. I am calling your attention to a legal document under which people were removed at your father's instance; you can read it if you like?—I have no doubt whatever but you can read things perfectly well.

8831. You say that these tenants were in easy circumstances, and they were as comfortable as the generality of Highlanders were, and you talk of the date as 60 years ago. I happened to pick out a rental of that very time you are talking about, 1823.—No, 1831.

8832. You have been telling about the easy circumstances about the beginning of the century?—I was.

8833. Did you ever hear that in 1823 the tenants you are talking of in Glencannich were £1505 in arrear of rent?—That is a dear lookout on them. I will tell you the story of them. You won't find one of my ancestors a penny in arrear.

8834. You are not aware of this, that your father was frequently in arrear?—He never was.

8835. And got forgiven. Well, we are going to prove it?—That is not true. He never in this world owed a penny.

8836. Who was Roderick Chisholm that was at Leitrie and Shalavanach?—That was a brother of old Colonel Chisholm.

8837. He was not a relative of yours?—He was very distantly related. Colonel Chisholm took him down to Comar, as he did the old man that was married to a sister. But to say, Mr Burns, that my father was in arrears, I defy all the lawyers in Inverness, or in the kingdom, to say that my father, or uncle, or grandfather owed a penny of rent on the day that it ought to be paid, when the sun went down.

8838. I will read you an entry from the rental I have just picked up of 1837:—'Leitrie and Shalavanach, Colin 'and John Chisholm, arrears outstanding on 23rd April '1836—£8, 5s.' That is erroneous, I suppose?—What is that?

8839. Colin was your father. He is entered in this rental—I must say it is not much compared with the others—£8, 5s. of arrears.

8840. The Chairman.—What was his rent?

8841. Mr Burns.—£120. Witness (to Mr Burns).—Your paper is erroneous; I will tell you why. That was a dispute about the building of the house. I know what you are driving at, but it was not an arrear at all.

8842. The Chairman.—He kept £8 owing to the dispute?—Owing to the dispute. His landlord, as a great stroke of liberality, gave his tenants £20 for building houses. Very well, my father built a house that cost him, I suppose, the best part of £100, and there was a dispute about some trifle—about the wood I think it was,—and my uncle John exactly was 41 years on the place that Mr Burns mentioned, and the sun never went down on his rent unpaid. He was turned out of it at the end of the lease, without asking whether he would give double the rent or whether he would give any rent at all. He found, like the other tenants of Strathglass, an asylum on Lord Lovat's estate.

8843. Mr Burns.—The lady was a Miss Wilson. Was she Mrs Elizabeth Chisholm, liferentrix of the lands of Chisholm in 1812?—She was.

8844. Then she is correctly described as 'Mrs Eliza-'beth Chisholm, last of Chisholm, liferentrix of the said 'lands' at the date when she obtained this summons of removing along with your father against the tenants of Leitrie?—She never did such a thing.

8845. She is correctly described in this precept—I am not asking you to prove them, but she is the lady that is mentioned?—I know she is the owner of the lands, and the best lady that they ever had; but I have come to the reason why Angus Macdonald and his father were removed, and Rory Chisholm also, by the same man.

8846. Now you state that the population of Strathglass at the same date was 5000?—I never said such a thing.

8847. Mr Maccallum.—He was referring to Glengarry.

8848. Mr Burns.—Do you say the population of Strathglass and this population here have gone down much since the beginning of the cenutry?—Well, I have said, and I say still, that there are no farmers there, and I don't know the population, or how they live, if they are there.

Beauly. — Colin Chisholm.

8849. Do you know the population was a good deal under 5000, both of Kilmorack and Kiltarlity put together, at the beginning of the century?—I know nothing of the kind. I spoke of the glen, and of what I have seen and what I now see.

8850. You said there were thousands of cultivated and cultivable land in Glencannich. Did you say that?—I did not.

8851. In what then, in something?

8852. Mr Shaw Stewart.—In Mr Winans' forests.

8853. Mr Burns.—Not in Glencannich. How much arable land in extent do you think there will be in Glencannich itself?—I give you the length in what we call Glencannich properly. It is just about 14 or 15 miles, and if you take from the top of one hill to the top of another hill, that is the extent of it. You cannot get over it.

8854. Mam Soul is the top of one of the mountains; you cannot cultivate Mam Soul?—Does it belong to any part?

8855. Will there be about 54 acres of arable land in Glencannich. That is what our measurement shows?—I say that is not the case. There is a great deal of arable land on the south side of Glencannich, through which you must drive if you are going to that glen, that never was taken into account by some who described Glencannich.

8856. But you say it is more than 54 acres?—Most certainly.

8857. Would you hazard a venture on the number of acres?—I won't do anything of the kind, nor do I think it is very safe for you, unless you have good measures.

8858. I cannot find these places of yours on the rental. You might go over them again. I don't find Coire-nan-cuilean on the rental?—Very likely, you would not find it now unless I told you. But you would find the place there, and the walls of the houses.

8859. The Chairman.—Are the walls there yet?—Yes.

8860. Mr Burns.—Was it a sheiling?—No, they were there winter and summer in my recollection.

8861. Was it a grazing?—It was a grazing.

8862. Was it a township or under one tenant?—There were a couple of the best tenants.

8863. Were they tenants of Invercannich?—At one time, before these men went there, that place was attached to Invercannich as a sheiling, but these men took it at about the beginning of this century as farms, and they remained there. I will give their names—Colin Chisholm and John Chisholm. Both went to Nova Scotia, and I correspond with their descendants to this day.

8864. Were they at Invercannich?—No, no, they were tenants of Coire-nan-cuilean.

8865. They were tenants of a tacksman, I suppose. Who was the tacksman?—They were the tacksmen themselves.

8866. But we don't find it in the rental?—I don't care what you find in the rental.

8867. Was Coire-nan-cuilean part of Comar?—At one time, but not at the time that I am telling you.

8868. This is 1870–77, Comar, including Coire-nan-cuilean, possessed in tack?—That is the place, but it is not the time that I am speaking of. I am speaking of the time that we find men there.

8869. Ardtaig, is that a sheiling?—It was a residence.

8870. Who lived in it?—Finlay Macrae, a good tenant; and he took a farm in Strathconan when he left it.

8871. It was part of Màm?—Never.

8872. We have Màm and Ardtaig in a rental in 1844, possessed by Allan J. Hunter; you did not know that?—No.

8873. Then Mullardoch, East and West; what were they?—They were in my earliest recollection attached to a club farm in Glencannich.

Beauly. — Colin Chisholm.

8874. Were they not sheilings, part of Comar?—They were not part of Comar.

8875. We were told there never was a club farm in Glencannich?—Who told you that?

8876. The rentals are telling us that; you don't believe the rentals?—I know what I say, and there are plenty who will prove it.

8877. Shalavanach, what was it?—A club farm when the people were removed to Glen Strathfarrar.

8878. Had not your father and your uncle Shalavanach as part of Leitrie? It is in that summons of removing?—My father never had an inch of Shalavanach. Your information is quite wrong.

8879. Our information we take from the documents '1826–27, Leitrie and Shalavanach, Colin Chisholm.' Was that your father?—That is wrong. It ought to be Peter Chisholm and John Chisholm.

8880. No, Peter Chisholm had a part of Leitrie and Shalavanach?—He never had an inch of Leitrie. Do you suppose I am going to believe what is quite an error on your part.

8881. Luibguish, what was that; was not that a sheiling?—That was one of the farms.

8882. Was there more than 3 acres of arable land there?—Well, I should say there was, but I am not so certain. There is a very good plot of arable land.

8883. Glaschorry, was there a house there?—House after house, and barn after barn. The finest oats, the strongest oats I ever saw reared (and I have seen some of the best I think in England and Scotland), were reared in Glaschorry.

8884. Was it let along with Leitrie?—No.

8885. Had not Finlay Chisholm Leitrie and Glaschorry in 1852 and 1853?—Oh, that may be but guessing.

8886. There is Craskie you have told us about: that is tenanted now by your nephew?—Yes.

8887. Well, you have told us about growing oats. Is not Craskie the best bit of ground in the glen?—I would not say that at all.

8888. Does Craskie try to grow oats now?—It did, and grew the best potatoes we had in the country.

8889. Why did he give it up?—That is more the business of a farmer.

8890. Did not Craskie give it up because it did not pay him?—It is possible. I do not know what are the reasons why, but I know this, that it was the safest place in all the country from frost, and grew the best potatoes there.

8891. But Craskie, I fancy, has not found it profitable at all?—It is possible. I do not know why he has ceased it.

8892. His rent is £30 now, but he does not grow oats now or for the last 4 or 5 years?—Oh, I don't know, but the last time I was there I can tell you I saw a beautiful field of turnips, and they would look to me like cakes, the tops of them eaten down to the earth with deer. And near his door they crossed the river, and there was a fence, an animal fence, and the deer went in, and actually ate every one of the best turnips there to the ground, and when they tasted the ground they stopped.

8893. You know there is a deer fence surrounding?—It is not good enough.

8894. The Chairman.—It has some holes in it?—It is full of holes.

8895. Mr Burns.—You have given us some figures about Mr Winans. Where did you get these 400 square miles?—I took them from the public prints, where you might have taken them.

8896. What has Mr Winans got now, if he has got anything?—That I don't know.

8897. He has not got Glen-Strathfarrar?—No.

8898. He has not got Kintail?—I don't know.

8899. You don't know how much he has now?—Well, I know that he has Knockfin and the south side of Cannich.

8900. You do not complain of Mr Winans turning any one out?—Not a bit of it: I am not aware that he ever turned a man out of his house and home.

8901. There has never been any action at his instance against tenants?—I never heard a tenant complain of Mr Winans, except that they complained that deer ate their crops, and I believe he was reasonable enough to give them compensation. Beauly. — Colin Chisholm.

8902. You told us that in 1884 Mr James Sutherland Chisholm brought back some tenants to the district?—He did.

8903. Who were they?—The father of the lad now in Craskie, one.

8904. The Chisholm was very good to him?—Yes, to be sure.

8905. Otherwise he might not have been able to get on very well?—Exactly so.

8906. James Chisholm went to Muckrach?—He did.

8907. What came over him?—You will find him at Mid-Craggie, on The Mackintosh estate.

8908. Did he become bankrupt?—I never heard that he did.

8909. But you do not know that he did not?—Oh, I never heard of it.

8910. And Æneas Chisholm?—Well, proceed.

8911.—He was at Invercannich?—He was at Invercannich.

8912. But that is not in Glencannich?—No.

8913. He has gone too, has not he?—He has gone to Inverness, and he will be very glad to drink a glass of toddy with you, and be quits.

8914. I have done it before; but whatever the reason, he and his sons have given up the holding?—Yes, they have.

8915. And his son has gone away to America?—To America.

8916. He is doing very well, I think?—Very well.

8917. Were there any others that came to Glencannich at the time when the attempt to restore the tenantry succeeded?—I mentioned the only two; the father of the lad at Craskie, and James Chisholm, were the only two.

8918. There was a man went to Breakachy, too: what happened to him?—I cannot tell you.

8919. At all events, these people were not turned out by The Chisholm. They went away for some cause; they were not evicted. I refer to the restored tenants?—Yes.

8920. The Chairman.—I am not going to keep you above a minute. I wish to point out to you that this document produced, showing an arrear of £8, 5s. due by Colin and John Chisholm for the farms of Leitrie and Shalavanach, is not an authenticated document; it is not signed by anybody, and I don't know how far it will have weight with us?—Thank you, my lord.

8921. Mr Burns.—We will put it in as an estate document; it is not authenticated in any other way.

8922. The Chairman.—Now there was produced a decree of removing, which I hold in my hands, at the instance of John Chisholm and Duncan Macdonald, joint tacksmen, and setters of the lands after mentioned, the Carrie grazings, and pertinents lying within the parish of Kilmorack and county of Inverness. The summons is followed up by a decree of removing, but we don't know from this document whether the removing was actually carried out or not?—I will make it clear to you. The men took the lands just at the height of the Napoleon war, and they gave an outrageous rent for them, or promised it. They had money, and they spent the money there, and that is the result. Duncan Macdonald went to Cape Breton Island with his family, and John Chisholm went to Breakachy. I was at two sales of these men; one of them, Duncan Macdonald, remained longer.

8923. You were explaining before, I think, to Mr Burns, why this process took place?—Not the one in your hand.

8924 You were asked by Mr Burns about this decree of removing at the instance of John Chisholm and Duncan Macdonald?—No.

8925. Oh, I beg your pardon. I am looking at the wrong one. The removing I mean is at the instance of William Chisholm of Chisholm against Donald Macdonald and Angus Macdonald in Leitrie?—Yes.

Beauly. Colin Chisholm.

8926. At the instance of 'William Chisholm, heritable proprietor of the lands and others aftermentioned, Mrs Elizabeth Chisholm, last of Chisholm, liferentrix of the said lands, and William Mackenzie, son and heir of the deceased John Mackenzie,' and so on.—Very well.

8927. What is the explanation of this process?—The explanation I gave Mr Burns—and I will tell your lordship as well as I can—simply is, that Donald Macdonald and Angus Macdonald never had more than a cow's grazing at Leitrie, but the young man went away as a substitute to the regiments raised at the time when the war was in Ireland, and in other parts. He was away 8 years, and Colonel Chisholm, the uncle of Angus Macdonald, wanted him to go with his father to the door of the church in Strathglass, at Fasnakyle. He came there, and he took another trusted friend that was in Carrie down to the same place, near the chapel. Then he took his own brother, Roderick Chisholm. Colonel Chisholm took him down, and gave him a farm. That is it.

8928. I see. Now, you gave us some important figures with regard to the lands occupied by Mr Winans?—Very well.

8929. You said that Mr Winans had 250,000 acres, covering an area of about 400 square miles?—260,000 I say after that. The newspaper report was as I said it, but they have 250,000, or some say 260,000 within an area of about 400 square miles.

8930. That is what he had some years ago?—That is exactly the statement in the public papers.

8931. Can you tell me upon whose estates these deer forests are situated?—Perfectly well.

8932. Just tell me?—Chisholm, first Lord Lovat, Matheson, and, I believe, Mackenzie of Kintail, lately, but I am not sure about that.

8933. I think that is quite right. Not more?—I think not. I don't know of more proprietors.

8934. But he had all these combined into one vast forest?—At one time.

8935. Had he land from Gillanders of Highfield?—I don't know.

8936. Was that land exclusively devoted to deer?—Every part of it.

8937. Were there not some parts of it devoted partly to sheep and partly to deer?—Not a bit of it at the time I refer to.

8938. Are some parts of it now devoted partly to sheep and partly to deer?—Stop a little, I am not aware that there is a single sheep on any spot of that land now, except Kintail there may be.

8939. Mr Burns.—Comar?—He had not an inch of what Comar is now.

8940. The Chairman.—Has he some sheep up in Kintail?—Do you mean Mr Winans?

8941. I mean Mr Winans?—Oh, I don't know about that, but I will tell you the names of the proprietors—Matheson and Mackenzie, I think, of Kintail, The Chisholm, and Lord Lovat. And this gentleman (Mr Burns) says Highfield also.

8942. Now I want to know, in the combination of these lands into one vast forest, were some sheep farms taken?—He took the very last of them himself. He took them over himself, and paid for them honourably.

8943. He took the farm, and took over the sheep, and turned it into a deer forest?—Just so.

8944. Can you tell me how many farms he treated in that way?—Yes, I think I can. They were not many. There was the farm of Beneveian and Gleann-nam-fiadh, and Achadh-Giat. They were the only ones he took over, and, of course, he took the farms from Williamson, and, I think, Williamson had Coire-nan-cuilean at one time, but he had Knockfin, and Mr Winans took over the sheep, and sold them, I think, to profit.

8945. And turned it into deer?—Turned it into deer.

8946. Are all these farms now fenced by him?—I was going to say not one, but I believe that there is a splendid fence built up between himself and Lord Tweedmouth. I don't think they were sailing very smoothly in one boat, and there is a large fence built between them all round the hill there.

8947. Mr Burns.—I think he has made a mistake there: was it not Lord Tweedmouth that took over Kerrow?—God help you, man! Don't you see I am speaking of Affaric; Mr Winans never had anything to do with Kerrow. Beauly. Colin Chisholm.

8948. He has it now?—God bless you, but that is a new thing. How long has he had it?

8949. It is about 12 years ago.—Do you mean to say that Mr Winans has Kerrow now?

8950. It is Knockfin.

8951. The Chairman.—Then is the witness right?

8952. Mr Burns.—He is right.

8953. The Chairman.—Has there been a large increase of deer upon the land which Mr Winans has taken under lease?—Well, I suppose so.

8954. At all events it is land given over exclusively to sport?—To sport and nothing else.

8955. Does it include large tracts of fine grazing and arable land?—Oh, I am not going to speak of the arable land in Affaric. I have been speaking of the arable land in Glencannich, and I suppose some of the other gentlemen round the room will speak of other parts. But I confine myself strictly to that glen.

8956. Which glen?—Glencannich.

8957. Now, is there land easily capable of being made arable land in Glencannich?—Yes, there is some land, and a great deal of it was arable before.

8958. And there is a great deal there, as I understand you to say, of land very suitable for grazing?—Oh, to be sure, some of the best grazing.

8959. Low lying land?—Low and high, particularly high land. Splendid grazing.

8960. Do you remember what rent Mr Winans paid when he had the largest amount of land under his control?—Oh no. I do not meddle with rents.

8961. Mr Macleod.—A portion, at any rate, of a legal document was read out to you, in which your father's name appears?—Mr Burns said that.

8962. You don't know anything about it, of your own knowledge?—Not at all; but I will tell you that it was Colonel James Chisholm that brought his sister's son and his father and his brother and his other sisters down.

8963. But tell me this. It would be quite possible for you to know about this?—Perfectly so.

8964. But you never, of your own knowledge, knew that your father's name had been put on that decree to put these people out?—Never.

8965. Well, it is only fair to you that the whole instrument should be read to you.—Very well.

8966. It says:—'William Fraser Tytler, Esq., younger, of Balnain, Advocate, Sheriff-Depute of the County of Inverness. To . . Whereas it is humbly meant and shown to me by William Chisholm, Esq. of Chisholm, heritable proprietor of the lands and others aftermentioned, Mrs Elizabeth Chisholm, last of Chisholm, liferentrix of the said lands, and William Mackenzie, son and heir of the deceased John Mackenzie, Colin Chisholm, and Colin Chisholm, junior, tacksmen of Leitrie,' and the rest has been read to you?—Yes.

8967. Do you see that the principal name mentioned there is, of course, that of the proprietor?—Yes.

8968. And it is quite a probable thing that your father's name was inserted in this instrument without his consent or knowledge?—I think it is most certain to be so, and I will tell you why. My father was a relative of the man that was spoken of here as removed, but William Mackenzie was not: he was a tenant.

8969. But you have no recollection of hearing any talk in your father's house about such a thing?—Never, and I have known Angus Macdonald and his father all the years after they removed.

8970. And you think it is a very likely thing that if your father was taking such a very serious step as to become a party to the removing of his own relative, you would have heard about it?—Yes.

8971. So that you think it is quite likely that his name would be inserted without his consent?—It is quite possible.

8972. The Chairman.—That concludes your examination.—Thank you, my lord; but you told me you would give me an opportunity of saying something about Mr M'Combie, and it bears on the subject of my examination. I heard him saying, before a committee of the House of Commons, or rather in the Committee room, that the Game Laws of Scotland were in a manner a great curse to all the tenantry in Scotland. This is the way he proved it. He said: 'When a farm is taken in Aberdeenshire, the tenant comes and offers for it. The first thing that the proprietor asks you is, "Have you seen my game regulations?" "No," says the farmer, "I have not." "Well, then, here they are; read them." Well, the next question is—"Do you agree with them?" "I cannot agree with them." No; I won't accept your offer," says the landlord to the tenant.' That was what I heard Mr M'Combie saying before a committee of the House of Commons. Now I am done.

Beauly.

Colin Chisholm.

8973. Very well; thank you?—You have done with me, my lord.

8974. Quite done?—I am old, but I have no objections to carry this game on till 5 or 6 o'clock in the evening. I have seen five consecutive chiefs of the name Chisholm who were each in turn owners of Strathglass; add to that the "Fair Lady" and the present Mrs Chisholm, and the number will then be seven proprietors and eleven factors.*

Duncan Cameron.

DUNCAN CAMERON, Church Park, Kirkhill (68)—examined.

8975. The Chairman.—Where do you stay?—At Kirkhill.

8976. Is that in Glencannich?—No, but I have been there. Beauly.

8977. Mr Gordon.—It is just opposite Beauly. Duncan Cameron.

8978. The Chairman.—You were formerly in Glencannich?—Yes.

8979. How long is it since you left Glencannich?—Twenty-four years.

8980. And do you belong to Glencannich?—No, I was born in the parish of Kilmorack.

8981. How long were you there, in Glencannich?—Between 8 and 9 years.

8982. Were you a crofter there?—No.

8983. How were you engaged there?—A sheep manager and shepherd.

8984. To whom?—To Mr Roberston of Aigas.

8985. Was he a farmer or a proprietor?—He was a farmer.

8986. What was the name of the farm?—He had the low farm of Aigas and Phoineas.

8987. Any other farms?—Beginning at the north side of the river, there is in Glencannich, Craskie, Muckrach, Carrie, and on the south side of the river, Dalreoch, Glaschorry, Luibguish, Luibairdtaig, Lub-nam-mang. I had to superintend them.

8988. Can you tell the stock that was there?—Mostly I could; I will come quite close to it. I have a copy of it at home.

8989. Perhaps you can give us an idea?—We delivered about 400 sheep when we delivered them to the present man at Craskie.

8990. What kind were these?—Cheviot ewes and lambs, and all the other ages; about the same again at Muckrach when we delivered them. The lease of that side of the water was out before the other side.

8991. Were there 400 there?—Yes, between Carrie and Muckrach.

8992. Then in Dalreoch?—There would be about 300 there.

8993. Glaschorry?—Another 300.

8994. Luibguish?—Another 300.

8995. All cheviots?—Blackfaced there.

8996. And Luibairdtaig and Lub-nam-mang?—400. We never had a shepherd there, but there were crofters there.

8997. That is 2100 sheep altogether, including cheviots and blackfaced?—Just so.

8998. How is that land occupied now?—Deer forests altogether.

8999. Is part of it high land and part of it low?—Part of it high and part of it low; good land, as it had been represented by the previous witness.

9000. Is it mostly high land or mostly low land?—We were wintering in every bit of the land, except the hoggs.

9001. When was that land turned into deer forest?—Twenty-four years ago.

9002. By whom?—It was Mr Peter that got it; he had the shooting at the time I left; he was at Fasnakyle, and he got the shooting on the south side of the water. Sir Greville Smith again had the north side.

9003. Are there any sheep on it now, or is it exclusively devoted to deer?—Since ever I left there was not a sheep.

9004. Now, on these lands you have mentioned, is there any arable land?—Yes.

9005. What extent of land?—I could hardly say to an acre. There will be about 15 or 16 of good arable at Muckrach.

9006. Anything at Craskie?—Oh aye, fully more than at Muckrach.

9007. 20, say?—Yes, 20.

9008. Carrie?—About 10.

9009. Dalreoch?—About 4.

9010. At Glaschorry?—About 8.

9011. Luibguish?—Between 3 and 4.

9012. And at these other two places (Luibairdtaig and Lub-nam-mang)?—Only about 3 acres between them.

9013. Old arable land?—Good arable land.

9014. Such as it is in extent, was it under cultivation at the time the land was turned into deer forest?—

No, except what we had under potatoes and a bit corn. I had the best potatoes that ever I saw growing in Scotland.

9015. It is all forest now?—All forest.

9016. And is it all fenced in?—Well, if it is not, it is just joining with the rest of Mr Winans' forest. Probably the outside of it is fenced, but it was not fenced when I left.

9017. You don't know the rent of it?—No, I don't know the rent of it.

9018. Prior to the time of its being turned into forest, had it always been sheep land?—No; it was under tenants before it was converted into sheep farms.

9019. Under small farmers and crofters?—Small farmers and crofters.

9020. Then do you know when it was turned into sheep farms?—No; I was not in the country at that time.

9021. But you say the process was first of all occupation by small tenants, then by sheep farms, and then deer forests?—Yes; it is easy seeing that.

9022. Are the walls still visible of the steadings and dwelling-houses?—Yes.

9023. And I suppose there are perceptible traces of land that had formerly been under cultivation?—Old rigs.

9024. Now, is there any other part of the Lovat estate of which you are able to speak?—No. I know the places, but I cannot speak properly, except where I had the management myself.

9025. And your management was limited to this portion?—Yes; to Glencannich.

9026. Well now, in your judgment, is this land of which you have been speaking suitable for occupation now by crofters or small tenants?—There is no doubt about it that it is.

9027. Do you say that the arable land there could be cultivated to profit?—With the hill along with it; take both altogether.

9028. A suitable amount of grazing with such land as could easily be made arable?—Exactly.

9029. And do you think a man could live there as a crofter or a small farmer without aid from outside sources?—Oh, undoubtedly, or else the ground had been spoiled at making the rent. Of course if he was too highly rented he could not live.

9030. But at a fair rent?—At a fair rent.

9031. Is Beauly the nearest town to this land?—Yes.

9032. How far is it from Beauly?—Twenty-one miles.

9033. And is there a good road the whole way?—A splendid road.

9034. Where is the nearest water-carriage to that glen?—Beauly harbour is the nearest place.

9035. Is there any one living in Glencannich now?—No, except a few keepers that Mr Winans has, and an old woman that was there from time immemorial. I believe she is about 100 years old.

9036. She was allowed to stay?—Allowed to stay.

9037. But, except her, there is nobody now but keepers?—No.

9038. Can you tell me how many deer would this land carry?—I cannot tell. The time the sheep were on it there were not so many deer then as after that.

9039. Were deer allowed to roam over that land before it was turned into a forest?—Oh yes.

9040. Along with the sheep?—Along with the sheep, and I heard some of the shooting tenants remarking this. I heard Mr Peter say that he did not know exactly where the sheep were, and whether he had the ground without sheep at all.

9041. Perhaps you are able to tell the area turned into forest?—I could hardly tell. There would be about 12 miles in length and about 3 in breadth.

9042. About 12 in length and about 3 miles in breadth?—Yes; of what we occupied of the ground there.

9043. What you superintended as a shepherd or manager is now under forest?—It is all under forest.

9044. Was there any other shepherd there along with you?—Oh, there were five of us. Beauly.

9045. Are any of the other men here to-day?—No; there are none of them here that I see. Duncan Cameron.

9046. Mr Sutherland.—You gave a statement of the land you thought was arable in these various townships. Did you refer to the land that you thought was under cultivation before?—Yes.

9047. Is there other land, then, that was not under cultivation before, but that might profitably be brought under cultivation?—Well, I could not say whether it would be profitable or not. There is plenty of land that could be taken in at some expense.

9048. But if it were used in conjunction with the grazing, would that not add to the value of the grazing?—I don't know: it might be quite as profitable to be left as it is with the grazing as to take it in.

9049. Have you any idea of the proportion that exists of it, acre to acre, comparing the arable and the grazing?—The arable is not in comparison with the grazing. Of course any man that was dependent on the grazing might have it, or the arable land, if he was to make something for a family.

9050. But you found no difficulty in rearing all these sheep upon the land when you were there?—Not in the least. There are plenty lambs. We put the hoggs always to wintering.

9051. Mr Shaw Stewart.—I have added up the arable land that you have given us in each farm, taking the fullest amount when you were in doubt, and it comes to 45 acres on these different farms?—Back or fore, I could not speak exactly.

9052. Quite so, but about 45 acres. How many crofters would that keep?—Oh well, but one in Craskie: it is a nice bit of farm. It is paying about £70 now. It will keep about 400 sheep. Muckrach again, that is just the same extent. I would make two nice farms of Muckrach and Carrie. There was just a march for other townships hill. You have the old hill after that, that they used to have. That is three. Well, again, Dalreoch is four.

9053. Do you mean only one in Dalreoch?—Not but one, and one at Glaschorry, and one at Luibguish, and one at Luibairdtaig.

9054. That is seven altogether?—Seven.

9055. So that if this glen was deforested, you would only benefit to the extent of seven crofters?—No, no.

9056. I mean this extent of ground, the land of which we are now speaking. If that ground were to be put an end to as a deer forest, it would benefit seven crofters only?—These would not be small crofts. In some of those farms you could put half a dozen crofts. Although you would divide the arable land, you could never work the land that way.

9057. But how would you propose to utilise this land?—That is the way. I would put it into seven farms.

9058. You consider that the arable land in each of these farms is not more than suffices for the grazing of the rest of the farm?—No.

9059. Well, now, would you have a system of club farms, or would you have single farms?—They might be put into a club farm. It would suit Carrie and Muckrach to be on a club farm, and I would put the other side of the water altogether to a club farm.

9060. Mr Gordon.—The south side or the north side?—The south side.

9061. It is mostly black ground?—Yes, black ground, suitable for cheviots.

9062. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Then they would be practically farmers—not crofters, but farmers?—Oh yes, farmers.

9063. Well, now, when you were on the land, did the sheep pay?—Yes, the sheep did pay at that time.

9064. Would they pay now?—According to the management.

9065. Yes, but also taking into account the fall in prices?—Oh well, that would be according to the way the ground had been rented. Of course there was an advantage in the time I was there. We were selling our cheviot wool at two guineas, and our blackfaced wool at £1. This year it is not the one-fourth of that. Well,

Beauly. — Duncan Cameron.

I consider again the rent should be down according to the value of the stock, or else people could not do so well on it.

9066. But then should the rent be on a sliding scale, low in bad years and high in good years?—I would think myself that that would be the best way both for proprietor and tenant. They would have a chance then.

9067. It would only be under those circumstances that they would have a chance of tiding through bad years?—It was just through that they would have a chance.

9068. How could they stock the land?—My idea is that the place itself would not be long in stocking it if they had a small capital to commence with.

9069. Do you know how many foresters and gillies there are now in that part of the glen?—On the ground that I mentioned there are only three.

9070. And when you were there, there were five shepherds besides yourself?—Yes, besides the other people we might employ at clipping time and smearing time, and the like of that. We always employ two men again for wintering the hoggs.

9071. Where did you get them from?—From the same locality.

9072. Mr Forsyth.—I think you said there were about 2100 sheep, partly cheviot and partly blackfaced, on this land of which you had charge. That was somewhere about the stock, all told?—Yes.

9073. Did you winter the hoggs at home; I did not quite gather that?—No.

9074. It would not winter the hoggs?—No.

9075. Did you require the whole of the low ground for the old sheep?—Yes.

9076. Were they mostly mixed stocks, or mostly ewe hirsels, or were there some hirsels with ewes amongst them?—Ewes and wedders.

9077. Had you the hirsels separate?—Yes.

9078. No mixed hirsels?—No. We had the old wedders together.

9079. You have been speaking as to the number of tenants that these places might hold in the way of crofters or small farmers. Now, supposing these men had the arable, which they would cultivate and would use, as they naturally would a great portion of the lower ground, for grazing cattle, would the remainder of the ground carry sheep at all in winter, old sheep?—Oh, undoubtedly it would.

9080. But of course a much reduced stock in that case?—Much would be reduced of the wintering.

9081. The wintering would be much reduced, and the stock would be much smaller?—Whatever was arable the shepherds were using it for hay for their cows and their own potatoes and a bit corn. I would not reduce one sheep for the winter.

9082. In spite of the summer stock of cattle on the ground? It is that point I want to get at very much. Don't you think that if the ground all round the arable was heavily grazed with cattle in summer and of course wintering out more or less in winter, would you not find that a great drawback in time, to keep the stock of old sheep in winter?—Undoubtedly, but we had no cattle there in my day.

9083. Exactly; but I am looking forward to the time when there may be crofters there with a large number of cattle. Do you not think it may be a question whether the old sheep—I assume the hoggs to be wintered each year—would not be rather badly off if the whole of the better ground were hard grazed by cattle belonging to the tenants?—Undoubtedly the sheep would need to suffer when the ground was eaten by cattle.

9084. Would they be able to winter up even a little higher on the hill?—There is ground there we used to winter on, and the highest was the best wintering we used to have, but there was a good deal of wood there.

9085. You found they held up well?—Yes, the woods on the top of the hill were our principal wintering.

9086. But still you think with me that there would have to be a heavy reduction taken off the number of the sheep if you had all these cattle on?—Undoubtedly. But that was the same to the tenant: if the cattle were to pay better than the sheep, why not?

Beauly. — Duncan Cameron.

9087. Mr Munro.—As a shepherd, you will have had considerable experience in the wintering of sheep. Now, do you remember if you were in the habit of sending down a considerable number of sheep to winter in the lowlands about here?—We only sent cows down here when we were at Glencannich.

9088. But you were in the habit of sending them down to winter here?—From Sutherlandshire.

9089. Do you know the farm of Comar?—Fine that.

9090. Do you know how it is at present occupied?—Yes.

9091. Do you know from report what is to be done with that farm?—The report is that the sheep have been valued over to Mrs Chisholm lately.

9092. Do you know how many sheep are on it?—8000.

9093. And are you aware that report has it that it is to be converted into a deer forest?—I cannot say: we heard that report first, but of course the shepherds that were there with the sheep before are engaged with Mrs Chisholm to the middle of October; whether longer or not, the sheep must be on the ground till then, at any rate.

9094. Is it the fact that tenants in the low ground, who cultivate to a very large extent, suffer loss by the depletion of sheep stocks in these farms?—To a great extent.

9095. Do you know that the old tenants in Strathglass were in the habit of having horses as well as cows and sheep?—I am aware of that.

9096. Are you aware that they were in the habit of cutting very considerable quantities of natural grass?—Oh yes.

9097. Now, talking of retaking possession of lands in these straths and glens, and the difficulties to be overcome in doing so, is it the case that stock of itself grows on these farms in course of time?—Undoubtedly.

9098. What did you begin with yourself, for instance?—I will tell you that. In my younger days shepherds were usually only paid in sheep: they got sheep instead of money wages. The first time that I went to service, though I could not do a man's work, I would be between 15 and 16 years of age. We call that a pack, what the shepherd gets in lieu of wages. My pack had been valued over to me: I had not a penny unless it had been on my back, and I might have a dog or two. They were valued over to me. I believe, if my memory does not fail in that, although it failed me in many other points, the valuation came to about £150 for my part. In 3 years I had them clear, and then the place cleared itself.

9099. Did you clear that off without any outside assistance?—None, and paid five per cent. to the master for interest of money on the stock till it was paid.

9100. What stock have you at present?—I am retired now. I am an old man.

9101. You have no doubt in your mind that, if these straths and glens were open to people, they would be readily taken possession of, and farmed on fair terms?—It is likely they would, but the people are out of the country that were fit to go there. People would need to have some experience how to work that place before they would go, or else there would be a few years before they would pay.

9102. But still, from your experience you are prepared to say that these lands could be advantageously occupied by competent persons?—Yes, I have no doubt of it.

9103. Mr Maccallum.—You are well acquainted with this land of which we are speaking just now, having been manager, and is it your opinion that it is not suited for small farms?—It is suited for small farms.

9104. And that the best use to which it could be put would be to divide it into small farms?—Small farms.

9105. Do you think, now, that these small farmers could be able to cultivate it to profit?—Oh, it was all owing to the way they were rented.

9106. If they were not too highly rented?—If the were not too highly rented.

9107. They would be able to make a living without any outside work?—Surely.

9108. If we had self-sustaining holdings?—Surely.

9109. Do you think there are people in this neighbourhood who would be willing to compete for getting these farms?—I question that, because a few were put away out of this locality. I don't see, unless it will be old men and young boys, and they must leave this place; there is nothing for them, but of course the land would take them back again.

9110. Supposing they were advertised as small farms, and that it was known they would be fairly rented, do you think people would apply for them?—Oh, I think so.

9111. Are you aware whether there is a strong competition for small farms generally. Have you any experience of that?—All the experience I have is that, if I see a croft in the public prints, there are more than sixty offers in for one croft.

9112. And do you think that, say with regard to the small farms we are speaking of, there would be a good competition for such as these?—I would think so, if it is so for the other crofts.

9113. But these are larger crofts?—But there is a class for the large crofts. It is easy to make them small by making a club farm.

9114. Now would these small tenants, do you think, if they got possession, increase the arable area?—There is no doubt about that.

9115. And it would pay them to do so, having the pasture?—Yes.

9116. The land, instead of having been divided into small farms, has been devoted entirely to deer forests. Now I would wish your opinion on this, as a practical man, whether the pasture has deteriorated when put under deer?—It is so; there is no two ways there. The pasture gets husky and dry, or it is not worked right. It is never burnt, and on that account again it is getting wild—the grasses that do grow—because it is not handled the way it should be. When I was in service and had to manage a hirsel, when I was taking a hirsel in hand I was bound in my agreement to have the one-seventh of my hill burned every year to make the grass to be natural, and it will take some years before that can be done over the forest. Therefore that grass that is natural now, is not so natural as it was when the ground was properly kept.

9117. You are clearly of opinion that serious injury has been done to the land by allowing it to go under deer?—Oh, a great injury.

9118. And, on the other hand, you think there would be a great improvement if it were put under small farmers?—The land would be improved.

9119. Mr Shaw Stewart.—One question as to the point of the deterioration of pasture. Does pasture deteriorate under sheep?—Not so bad as under deer.

9120. But does it deteriorate?—Yes, it goes back a little, but not so much as under deer.

9121. Then, seeing that most forests have been under sheep first, is it not rather difficult to prove the deterioration from deer? Is it not possible that some of the detorioration came on the land while it was under sheep?—Well, people of knowledge could make that out readily enough. There are two ways of accounting for that—that it would need to go faster out by the deer than by the sheep. The ground is never burned; the hill pasture is never properly handled unless it is burned so much yearly. But, since it was converted into deer forests, there would not be a spark of fire put to it. That accounts for it going wild sooner under deer than sheep. If it was under sheep, every one would try to make it as good as possible.

9122. Still it remains the fact that most of the land we see under deer has been some time under sheep?—Certainly.

9123. Mr Forsyth.—With reference to this deterioration, the pasture going bad, there are two kinds, I believe. There is the land going wild, and there is the old green land going under fog. In the one case the land goes wild for want of burning, and in many cases the green land gets under fog. Now, do you not think that it is possible that a fog land may recover, to a certain extent, if it is only lightly grazed by deer. It is a point I merely want your opinion on?—In ground that is badly fogged it is only the plough that will make it recover. It will take three crops, and then you will get plenty. Beauly. — Duncan Cameron.

9124. And there is no improvement in the fog land, although there are no sheep on it now?—No improvement.

9125. It just remains the same?—Remains the same.

9126. Mr Macleod.—The land that you are speaking of is on the south side of Glencannich?—I am speaking of both sides.

9127. Then is that the whole extent of the glen?—No, not the half of it; that is all I had to do with.

9128. I want to know exactly what you are speaking about. You say you are speaking of an area 12 miles long and 3 broad. That is 36 square miles. Then you gave us the stock. Then you said that there were five shepherds and yourself there?—Yes.

9129. You, of course, had a stock of cattle?—Yes.

9130. What cattle had you?—Oh well, the shepherds had only a cow a piece, and I had three.

9131. It was only one cow they were allowed—they were not allowed two cows?—One cow each.

9132. And you had three; that would be eight cows; and were there any horses there?—Not one. The master's horses were doing the work from the low farm.

9133. They were not being kept up by anything on this ground?—Not at all.

9134. Then this land that you spoke of has a certain area of arable land; what would you consider about the area of old arable land to be seen on this ground: would you put it about 45 acres?—About that.

9135. That is the land that the shepherds were there cultivating, or keeping for the purpose of cultivating?—Just a part of it; they were not requiring it all. They were taking the use of it, as much as a cow would need for wintering and for summering.

9136. Then the sheep were kept off it in summer, and allowed in in winter?—Aye; they were coming to the low ground in winter and kept on the heights in summer.

9137. Would you contemplate a mixed stock of cattle or sheep there, or do you think it would be more profitable to get a small holding with cattle?—I could not speak about that, because I had no experience, and I never saw the cattle tried with the sheep.

9138. But you had your own cattle: did they thrive well?—Sheep and goats, they throve uncommonly well. As an instance of that, when the land was converted into a deer forest I came down to the parish of Kiltarlity; I took one of the cows with me, and she would not milk within 3 pints per day of the milk she would give in the glen.

9139. Is that Scotch pints or English pints?—English pints. She would not do on clover as much as on the natural ground.

9140. But you would say that it might be profitable for them to have a fair souming of cattle as well as sheep there?—Oh yes; although I was to go there myself to-morrow I would have some cattle.

9141. And you think they would be just as profitable to you, to the extent that they would reduce the sheep stock—they would be just as profitable as sheep?—It just depends on the price of sheep stock, and cattle.

9142. But naturally, having knowledge of these things, you would work it accordingly?—Yes, I would need to do that.

9143. Did any of the shepherds or yourself ever grow any turnips?—Yes, I grew them myself.

9144. Did they grow well?—Uncommonly well. I saw them growing larger elsewhere, but I never saw better quality than grew there.

9145. Then have you any experience as to growing potatoes?—Oh yes, I had more potatoes there than ever I had elsewhere in the same extent of ground.

9146. Then did you ever grow any corn?—What I had under potatoes one year I had under corn the next year.

9147. And how did it turn out with you?—Ever since I was in the way of getting corn in the winter time, I never got corn that would do as well.

9148. How many years had you that experience?—I had just 9 years of that.

9149. You speak from 9 years' experience?—Yes, in that locality in Sutherlandshire.

9150. In replying to Mr Sutherland, you said that the extent of old arable might be added to?—Oh, a great deal.

9151. That is, of course, provided you expend the labour on it?—Certainly.

9152. But you know land in the parish of Kirkhill that is not as good a subject as what it is up there?—They would make plenty of arable land if they had it in Kirkhill.

9153. And do you know people in Kirkhill and round about who would not be the least afraid to take the land, and to take it in, and who believe they would make a profit out of it?—Oh! if they could get the climate at Kirkhill.

9154. That is what I want to be at. Your own experience of all the crops was that they were better than you had ever seen?—There was a reason for that.

9155. Give us the reason?—The first potatoes that I put there—it was twenty-eight years since anything was put into that ground—they were just put down into that ground, which had only been harrowed when they were put down, and at the lifting of them they could not turn them with graips; they took their hands, and put it back the same way. I could never think, unless I saw them, that the potatoes grew on the ground. They were as clean as though they were in the water. You never knew how they grew, but they were there.

9156. You think that if the old land was put under cultivation again, they would produce very heavy crops for some years?—The potato land; it would be ploughed next year, and there would be about 2 bushels of corn. I kept a bit of it for turnips, and I know out of 3 bushels I got 10 bolls of meal out of the money. I never saw corn grown in any part of Scotland like the corn that grew over that ground.

9157. You paid the miller as well as getting 10 bolls?—Yes.

9158. There were 10 bolls of meal out of the 3 bushels of oats, besides paying the miller?—Yes, and if they had been careful in the threshing, and so on, I daresay it would be more. I was hurried myself, and could not get a man to do it.

9159. You spoke of the climate: you had nine years' experience of the climate, and that was the sort of crops you had?—Yes, except one year.

9160. What happened that year?—I lost my potatoes.

9161. With frost?—With frost; but it was in the low country too at that time. I was not in the way of using what was in the low country.

9162. Had you any turnips?—Yes, and good turnips.

9163. Could you tell us what year that was?—I could not, but I have a note of it at home.

9164. The turnips were all right?—The turnips were all right: the frost came before the turnips came out.

9165. Of course you know that there are certain lands that grow turnips better than other lands, but this land, as I understand, would grow turnip well?—Oh, it would grow them profitably.

9166. And if frost did come and interfere with potatoes, it would not interfere with the turnips in the same way?—I never had any experience but that it would.

9167. You never heard of turnips failing through frost, did you?—Not I.

9168. Of course all the experience that you have had has been as a sheep manager?—Yes.

9169. And you have been, of course, looking at these questions from the view of the larger farm rather than the smaller one?—Probably I was.

9170. Mr Burns (agent for Mrs Chisholm).—You said, I think, that all the lands in these places you had mentioned are now under deer, but Craskie is an exception. It is no part of the forest?—No, it is not part of the forest.

Beauly. — Duncan Cameron.

9171. You said that Mr Winans had Craskie, and Muckrach, and Carrie; I understand that is not Mr Winans but Mr Sydney Loder?—Well, it was Mr Winans who took them.

9172. Now you said something about wintering. What is your experience about wintering for the last ten years: are not all the farmers complaining that they cannot make money on account of the expense of wintering?—That is true enough.

9173. But has not wintering gone up very much during the last ten years?—I could not say. There was as fine wintering forty years ago as just now, and I paid as much for it.

9174. That is not what other people tell me. Is not wintering dearer now than it used to be a generation ago—a great deal dearer—in this locality?—Oh well, I daresay it is, because the few sheep that are in the country come long distances.

9175. Do you say that as a matter of fact, because it is not my opinion, and I have been dealing with sheep for the last twenty years. I had charge of Corrie and Knockfin, and it was dearer in my experience?—In some parts of the country.

9176. But between here and Aberdeen?—But take Ross-shire and the Black Isle and hereabout.

9177. Mr Gordon.—What did you pay for the wintering of your hoggs at that time?—When I was at Strathglass we had the wintering of them ourselves.

9178. Mr Burns.—What did you pay when you were there?—I had none: we were wintering on our own low country farm. We were wintering in Aigas and other places.

9179. You said something about a club farm in answer to one of the Commissioners. Have you had any experience at all of a club farm?—Yes.

9180. Where?—In Ross-shire and Sutherlandshire. I saw it on the Balnagown estate.

9181. Have you had personal experience?—I was at Strath Oykel.

9182. Are there any club farms in this district, east of Inverness?—I cannot say.

9183. You are not a tenant of Mrs Chisholm?—No, not I.

9184. And have never been?—No.

9185. Do you know any club farm from Inverness to Fort Augustus and round about Drumuie?—I am not acquainted.

9186. Did you ever hear of any club farm ever having been on this part of the country nearer than Strath Oykel?—There was Sir Kenneth Matheson's, at Alness, and also on the west of Ross-shire.

9187. You said that the heather is not burned in deer forests?—Not it.

9188. Have you had any experience of it?—I had.

9189. Of deer forests?—I had experience of the way they manage with sheep.

9190. But if I tell you that all the ground in this part of the country is regularly burned, under deer forests, can you contradict that?—I was for nine years in this place, and I never saw it.

9191. How long ago was that?—Twenty-four years ago.

9192. But speaking for the last fifteen years, do you know that everywhere here the tenant burns in the deer forest regularly?—Is that done by Mr Winans?

9193. Yes, by Mr Winans, and Mr Loder, and everybody?—I did not know of that.

9194. Talking of cattle: do you know any instance of a mixed sheep and cattle farm, where cattle are regularly grown like sheep, to be sold?—Kerrow. That is one.

9195. You know that in Kerrow the sheep part of it is kept entirely distinct from the cattle part of it?—I did not know.

9196. I know about Kerrow for many years. At least I helped to manage it: kept the books. Do you know that the sheep farm is a good way off from the cattle farm?—I am not aware.

Beauly. Duncan Cameron.

9197. With regard to the cattle that were up in Glencannich when you were there, they were, I suppose, the shepherd's cows and their followers?—Yes.

9198. They were not Mr Robertson's?—No.

9199. Mr Robertson had no cattle there, and he was the tenant of the whole place?—No.

9200. The Chairman.—You spoke of this land as capable of occupation by seven tenants?—Yes.

9201. Would you be favourable to the planting of crofters there, paying a rent of not over £30?—Yes; if they would club the hill, I would be favourable to that.

9202. Now suppose crofters to be there and club the hill, how many crofters do you think it would accommodate?—It would keep three crofters for every place well, taking the places on an average.

9203. Over twenty crofters?—Twenty-one crofters could live comfortably enough.

9204. And could they live there comfortably without extraneous assistance?—Yes.

9205. Working their pasture land by way of a club farm?—By way of a club farm. They could divide the arable land the way they like, and every man have his own share of the arable land.

9206. And you think these men could live there to profit, and carry on without extraneous aid?—Yes.

9207. What rent have you in view for say twenty or twenty-one crofters, upon that ground?—By the way that stock is going to-day, a person cannot pay above 2s. a head on every sheep.

9208. What stock of cattle?—I could not say. I have got no experience of that. We had no cattle on the ground as long as I was there.

9209. But whatever the number of sheep the land would carry, you would put 2s. on every sheep?—Yes.

9210. Mr Gordon.—With these twenty-one crofters that you put there, would you propose that they should live exclusively on the profits of their crofts, or do any other work?—If there were a family of them. I did not mean to have three or four idle in a family. I would have every man at work but one man.

9211. What would the one man do?—He would have only 2 acres of land.

9212. Take twenty crofters. At the general average of the country you would have 100 people to maintain. Do you expect to maintain that 100 people with the produce of these twenty crofts?—I believe Mr Chisholm gave you an instance of that. He put them nearly twice that number that were brought up in affluence there.

9213. Where was that?—The very places that you are questioning me about. You got it represented very clear by Mr Chisholm, only that I am behind him.

9214. Do you mean to say that Mr Chisholm or Mrs Chisholm had 100 people there at any time on that ground?—The witness I mean—Colin Chisholm—the previous witness. He knew all the straths about that place.

9215. It is you that I would like to get information from, because I have great faith in your statement?—Oh, there were no tenants in my day.

9216. And no arable land in your day?—And no arable land.

9217. But what I would like to get is your own opinion whether we could keep 100 people there without going out of the country to seek work?—Undoubtedly, if they were careful and thrifty, there is plenty of room for them.

9218. The Chairman.—The area of the arable land could be easily increased by the efforts of the people themselves?—Undoubtedly.

9219. Taking in land capable of cultivation?—Yes.

9220. Mr Sutherland.—You don't think 100 people too great a population on 36 square miles, do you?—No, I don't. There is plenty of room whatever.

Duncan Macrae.

DUNCAN MACRAE, Torgormack, Kilmorack (75)—examined.

9221. The Chairman.—You know about Glencannich, do you?—Yes.

9222. Did you reside in Glencannich at one time?—Yes, for 23 years. Beauly.

9223. How long ago is it since you stayed there?—I left it in 1881. Duncan Macrae.

9224. In what capacity were you there?—As a gamekeeper.

9225. To whom?—To Sir Greville Smith, the shooting tenant.

9226. Had you a house in the glen?—Yes.

9227. With some arable land and grazing?—Yes.

9228. Who occupied the ground there when you went there first?—It was a farmer of the name of Chisholm—Finlay Chisholm.

9229. A sheep farmer?—A sheep farmer.

9230. Was there one or more than one farm in the glen?—Yes, several farms.

9231. Large farms?—Yes.

9232. Have these farms been turned into forests?—The whole of them.

9233. Did that happen in your time?—Yes.

9234. What stock had Finlay Chisholm?—That I could not tell.

9235. You were a gamekeeper all the time, I suppose?—All the time.

9236. What extent of land was turned into forest in your time?—About 5 miles in length.

9237. And how broad?—Just the one side of Glencannich, which is about 2 miles broad, on an average.

9238. Only one side of the glen; was that north or south?—North.

9239. On the side of Craskie?—Exactly.

9240. All that land had previously been under sheep?—Yes.

9241. How many farms were absorbed for that extension of the forest?—I am not deep enough in English to understand the question.

9242. How many farms were taken up—were turned into forest?—Leitrie and Shalavanach.

9243. Any more?—Not at the beginning.

9244. Were these the only two farms that were taken up?—Yes, at the beginning.

9245. Then, later on, was there further land taken in?—Muckrach and Carrie.

9246. Is that the place called Loch Caa?—Very likely.

9247. These were separate farms?—Yes.

9248. And put into forest?—Yes.

9249. Can you tell me how many years elapsed between Shalavanach and Leitrie being taken into forest?—Not exactly.

9250. Are you able to say whether these lands would now be suitable for crofters' holdings, or any part of them?—The whole of the four places that I mentioned.

9251. The whole of the land occupied by the farms of Shalavanach, Leitrie, Muckrach, and Carrie?—Yes.

9252. Is that your opinion?—Yes.

9253. Is there arable and hill pasture which would be suitable in each of these?—Yes, of course.

9254. Both for cattle and sheep?—Yes.

9255. And, in your opinion, could a considerable number of crofters be settled there?—I should think so.

9256. Or would the land be better for large farms?—It would suit both.

9257. Has there been any other extension of forest than what you have mentioned?—Since that?

9258. Yes?—Yes.

9259. What extension?—Mullardoch, which Mr Winans occupied, and Coire-nan-cuilean.

9260. That was added after Muckrach?—Yes, to the same forest.

9261. After Mr Winans had come?—Yes.

9262. Now, what farms were upon Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean. Was there Cosack?—There were two Mullardochs (East and West) and Ardtaig.

9263. How many farms were there in Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean?—There were two Mullardochs.

9264. Yes; there were Mullardoch East and Mullardoch West?—These were separate farms.

9265. Were these all?—Except Coire-nan-cuilean.

Beauly. Duncan Macrae.

9266. Was it a separate farm?—No; it belonged to Mr Williamson, who occupied the two Mullardochs and Coire-nan-cuilean as a sheep farm.

9267. But in olden times it had been occupied as more than one farm?—Of course, but I did not see that.

9268. But the whole of that was added to the forest?—Yes.

9269. Do you remember in what year that was?—No.

9270. But in your time?—In my time. It is since my time that Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean were added.

9271. And you left in 1881?—Yes.

9272. You know the land well, I suppose?—Oh yes.

9273. Is that land suitable for occupation?—Yes.

9274. Is there land capable of cultivation and grazing also?—Yes, on a small scale; but, of course, they all depended on the hill pasture more than on the crofts.

9275. There is some very high ground before you go far from Loch Mullardoch. I see there is Mullach-a'-Ghlasthuill, 2945 feet?—Yes.

9276. And Mullach-na-maoile, 2482 feet. Are the crops in that quarter not very subject to frost?—Yes, very.

9277. And blight in early spring?—Oh yes.

9278. Is there any wood there?—No, not much.

9279. Then are the seasons, as a rule, late in that quarter?—Yes.

9280. And the crops are late?—The crops are late, and very subject to rain.

9281. Is the rainfall heavier than in the surrounding country?—Yes, and than lower down the glen and the strath.

9282. What crops used to be grown there upon the arable land?—I grew oats, potatoes, and turnips.

9283. Successfully, or not?—Well, some years the frost would spoil my potatoes very much.

9284. Was that a common thing?—Oh no; owing to the season, as it might turn out.

9285. But I mean is the cultivation of the soil very precarious owing to the climate?—Yes.

9286. You think so?—I think so.

9287. Then would the land, in your opinion, be or not be suitable for occupation, taken as a whole?—Yes, it would be worth taking, of course.

9288. Is there a road there?—A very good road.

9289. Leading all the way down to Beauly?—All the way down to Beauly

9290. Can you tell me what is the average height above the sea of Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean?—No.

9291. But taking it generally, is it very high?—Oh yes.

9292. I see the land on the verge of the loch is 788 feet, and a little bit up is 806?—Yes.

9293. Is there much mildew there?—No, I don't think there is. I have not found it.

9294. You had a croft, I suppose?—Yes.

9295. What was the size of your croft?—I think it would be between 4 and 5 acres.

9296. Of arable?—Of arable.

9297. And had you some grazing?—Oh yes, of course we had the forest to graze our cattle.

9298. And what stock did you keep?—Three cows and a pony; that was my order.

9299. And some sheep?—No sheep allowed.

9300. You were a gamekeeper, and you had to watch?—Yes.

9301. All the year round?—All the year round.

9302. And you had your croft into the bargain?—Yes.

9303. What was your wage?—£38 in the year.

9304. How many gamekeepers were there?—Three.

9305. Between Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean?—And Muckrach.

9306. And Leitrie?—Exactly.

9307. And were these the only persons living there?—Yes.

9308. Nobody but the two other gamekeepers and yourself?—Well, there was a poor woman that lived there.

9309. We heard of her, I think, already. Do you know of any other land that has been turned into deer forest since you went into that quarter?—If I could recollect, I daresay there is. Beauly. Duncan Macrae.

9310. Can you recollect any?—The south side of Glencannich was turned into a deer forest since I was there.

9311. You mean Leitrie and Shalavanach, or do you mean Fasnakyle?—I mean Tombuie, Fasnakyle and Glaschorry.

9312. Were these turned into forests in your time?—Yes, Tombuie, Glaschorry, Dalrioch, Fasnakyle, Luibguish, Luibnadamh; that is high up.

9313. All that land on the south side of Loch Mullardoch?—Was put into deer forest in my time.

9314. In your time, but you don't remember it?—No.

9315. Was all that tract on the south side of the loch turned into forest at one time, or gradually?—Oh, gradually.

9316. And added to Mr Winans' forest?—Yes.

9317. That afforesting began after Mr Winans came to the north?—No, it would be before that; Mr Peter had it from The Chisholm.

9318. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Did you hear the evidence of the last witness?—No, I was at a distance.

9319. Well, speaking of these farms, he said first that they would make seven nice farms; and then later on he said they might perhaps hold more crofters than seven, but of course in that case the crofters would have much less arable land. I want your idea as to how many people could live in the glen now if they had some hill grazing and a few acres of arable land?—Should they add more to their arable land, I think pasture would pay better. It is cold bottom, and I don't believe it would produce without it was cropped.

9320. And I suppose the arable land is limited: there is not much?—Exactly.

9321. Have you any idea of the number of crofters that could live there?—I would not like to mention.

9322. Do you think, on the whole, they would be better as fair sized farms?—I think so.

9323. Where do the deer mostly winter in this glen?—According to the weather. In fine weather they would go high, and in coarse weather they would come low.

9324. Whereabouts is the best grazing?—There is no grazing there better than Coire-nan-cuilean; and Mullardochs, too, is very good.

9325. On the south?—On the north.

9326. Mr Sutherland.—Where is the exact spot where your house was?—Leitrie.

9327. That is south of Loch Mullardoch, farther down the river?—It is on the north side of the river.

9328. Quite close to the loch?—No, there is Loch Sealbhag between them.

9329. You were there twenty-three years?—Yes.

9330. Was it a sheep farm or a deer forest when you went there first?—A sheep farm.

9331. Were you gamekeeper on the sheep farm?—No, except for about eighteen months. I lived in Muckrach at that time.

9332. In what capacity did you go there first then?—As a gamekeeper.

9333. While it was a sheep farm?—Yes.

9334. And were you made a forester after it was made into a deer forest?—Yes.

9335. And you lived there, in all, twenty-three years?—Yes.

9336. And how many years in these twenty-three was your crop a failure?—Perhaps I might call it a failure every second year, or third whatever.

9337. What did the failure consist in—was it the potatoes only?—Well, yes.

9338. It was limited to the potatoes?—Yes, owing to the frost, or else they would grow as well as any place else.

9339. And is there anything in that particular locality where your land was that in your opinion led to the injury to the potatoes?—There is nothing that could be helped, I think.

9340. You did not hear the evidence that Mr

Cameron gave, that while he was there he had very few failures?—I heard that.

9341. And do you agree with it?—I saw the shepherd that was there before him going with a bedcover, himself and his companion to shake the frost off the crops.

9342. Did you ever see that at Beauly? (Mr Cameron.—Excuse me, gentlemen, but I was 5 miles below him, where the climate was better).

9343. Your oats and your turnips, were they a good crop?—Oh yes, pretty fair, but I would require to sow my seed very thick, for the ground would spue a good deal of it.

9344. Was your land well drained?—It did not require draining; it was gravel and sand bottom.

9345. But it was not drained?—No.

9346. There were no artificial drains there at all?—Not any.

9347. Do you think that the height above the sea had anything to do with it?—Certainly it should.

9348. Do you know the height at which land is cultivated above the sea generally in this country?—I do not.

9349. Would you be surprised to hear that land is very successfully cultivated in Scotland at 1300 feet above the sea?—I would not expect it, indeed.

9350. Do you know the height of Kingussie above the sea?—No.

9351. Then as to the size of the farms that were there: I think you expressed the belief, in answer to a question already, that this place is better suited for small arable farms than what are known as crofters' holdings; it is a matter of size, I suppose?—As for crofter ground, unless they would join—if they would, it would suit them very well.

9352. If they had their grazing in common?—Exactly.

9353. With common management?—Exactly.

9354. You are of opinion that if that were done, small holdings would be successful there?—I would think so.

9355. Mr Forsyth.—You have said that you consider Glencannich is more suited for grazing than for arable cultivation?—I know perfectly well that it depended more upon the grazing than the arable. The arable is a very good friend, of course, as far as that goes.

9356. Then, supposing there were small tenants there who relied upon the profits of their sheep on their club farm, in the event of a bad year when sheep were low or unhealthy, would there be any other means of livelihood there; could they get any work or help themselves?—Not any. The only work I saw there, and which could help them very much, was what cannot be done now—smuggling.

9357. Without the assistance of smuggling, you think in a bad year their gains from other sources than sheep would not be much?—It would be tighter, of course.

9358. Do you think that there would be a reasonable prospect of small tenants succeeding there with their whole livelihood to be obtained from sheep only, year after year?—By understanding about the rent.

9359. If the rents were fixed low enough?—Exactly.

9360. They would not have constant employment though, would they?—Oh no.

9361. If the arable was very small, and they were almost entirely dependent upon sheep, would not they have, as a mere matter of employing themselves, to go away?—Each place there would require one man continually employed on the hill looking after the cattle.

9362. Oh, you would have some cattle?—Of course, yes.

9363. There could not be many cows; they could not be wintered well, you know, unless there was some fair arable, and the people might be rather short of employment, would they not?—Oh yes.

9364. But still you think that they might manage to make a living there, with the help of their club stock?—I certainly do.

9365. And that they would keep themselves in work somehow?—Yes.

9366. In spite of all difficulties as to arable land?—Oh yes.

9367. Mr Gordon.—There were three farms turned into a forest when you were there, I think you said?—Yes.

9368. Do you remember how many sheep were upon the three farms?—I could not tell, because it was not my business, and I took no notice of it.

9369. I may take it that you are not very well able to speak of how many crofts you could put on the farms, being a gamekeeper?—Well, two would be very good in Craskie, or perhaps three; and Muckrach the same.

9370. But Craskie is a farm of £50 rent. They would not be very small holdings if there were only two in Craskie. Do you remember how many bushels of oats you were in the habit of sowing yearly when you were up there?—A quarter.

9371. And did you generally thresh the corn and mill it?—Yes.

9372. Do you happen to remember how many bolls of meal you had out of the quarter's sowing?—Not exactly.

9373. Would you have 14 bolls?—I would be glad if I had the half of it.

9374. You would not have expected to have 7 bolls out of 3 bushels?—Not at all.

9375. Were the oats occasionally frosted during the time you were there?—Oh no.

9376. It did not frost?—I was only a servant there for six months.

9377. You were a keeper there?—Yes.

9378. The oats were your own when you grew them?—Of course, yes.

9379. Well, you are able to tell us something about the quantity of meal that you had out of your oats?—Five or six bolls.

9380. Out of the quarter's sowing?—Five.

9381. You would have that as an average?—Yes.

9382. And were your crops generally safe; did they ripen pretty well?—Sometimes, but not if the harvest was late and wet.

9383. How many bolls of meal would you have had if the harvest was late and wet?—What I might have would not be of very great service.

9384. It would not be of very much use?—No indeed, only it would help the cattle.

9385. Did your oats make meal every year, as a rule?—Not at all: do you mean for my family?

9386. Yes.—Oh no.

9387. Did they not ripen sufficiently well to make meal?—Oh, quite well, as far as it went.

9388. But did the oats ripen every year sufficiently well to make meal?—I tell you, sir, that it did, in natural seasons.

9389. But how often would these unnatural seasons be?—That is the question.

9390. Would it be every second or third year that the oats did not ripen?—Yes.

9391. Mr Maccallum.—Do you mean to say that every second year the crops did not ripen, and that the crop was so badly injured that you got no meal?—That is a thing I could not say. It might stand over one, two, three years, and perhaps the third or fourth might go against me: I will not say how many years.

9392. And in these years that you consider bad, was the crop so bad that you could not make meal of the grain?—Oh never, what I could save of it.

9393. It was never a complete failure?—They had barns there—the farmers that were there before my time—and stakes stuck in the doors so as to allow the wind in, and they would stick a sheaf on each pin of these, and every sheaf that would get dry they would put it back in a rack. That was the way we were sometimes obliged to sell our grain.

9394. On account of the lateness of the season?—Yes.

9395. But did the frost, in any year that you were there, completely destroy your oats, so that you could make no meal of it?—The frost never destroyed my oats.

Beauly. Duncan Macrae.

9396. But sometimes the seasons were late?—Oh yes.

9397. Mr Munro.—At this time that you said your potatoes had been destroyed by frost, are you aware that that was peculiar to your own district, or do you know that the same complaint extended through a wider area?—The whole of the high glens.

9398. But did it extend to the low parts of the country as well?—No, I don't mean that.

9399. Now, without committing yourself to an exact number of farmers that you would place upon these deer forests, I suppose you are quite satisfied that it could be profitably cultivated by small farmers?—Certainly.

9400. Mr Macleod.—I do not quite understand your position. You have told us that you have no doubt but small tenants could live very comfortably there. You have said that several times?—Yes.

9401. And yet at the same time you tell us from your own experience that your crops have been a failure one out of every two or three years. Now, how could tenants be comfortable there if that would be the case?—They would have to take their chance of that, and depend on the grass on the hill for sheep and cattle.

9402. They would have to depend upon the sheep and cattle?—They mostly would depend upon that whatever; it is the only thing they have to depend upon.

9403. I think you said that the potatoes were affected by frost?—Yes.

9404. And that the oats were apt to be affected by either the lateness or the wetness of the season?—It was the wetness of the season that would cause the lateness.

9405. But in the years when the seasons would be wet and you would have difficulty in saving it, and you would not be able to mill so much, you would have usually a very considerable amount of straw, would you not?—Yes.

9406. You would have a larger amount of straw for your stock that year than in a dry year?—Not at all, not a sheaf.

9407. That was not your experience. Your experience was that you had more straw the year that you had the most grain?—Well, how could that be. The sheaf was about the same bulk as the one that was destroyed.

9408. Then you do think that it was entirely the climate that caused the crop to be so late?—Oh, not at all.

9409. What do you think it was?—The climate is high, certainly, but then it produces good crops at times.

9410. I presume that the rain would come in the back end of the season; it would be pretty late in the season when the rain would come?—Generally.

9411. Do you think that, by earlier sowing and the liming of the land, you could have your crops to ripen earlier?—It would be very likely. I never sow anything before the 12th of April.

9412. So far as the potatoes are concerned, you don't think that anything could be done to cure the frost coming upon them?—I could never understand that there was.

9413. You never heard of it?—No.

9414. Then you grew turnips there, did not you?—Yes.

9415. How did they succeed with you?—Very good.

9416. Would the turnip crop have been, perhaps, on the whole, the best crop you would have? Was it less liable to failure?—I did not use to sow them often, but the last year that I was there I limed a piece of the land and sowed turnips there, and I had as nice turnips as you could see. Perhaps you could see larger, but they were sound and solid, and as numerous as anywhere.

9417. You saw others that grew turnips, I daresay, there?—Yes, a few.

9418. Not much? They were not growing much turnip at that time as a matter of fact?—They would rather sow potatoes or oats than turnips, because they grew a good deal of hay to support their cattle.

9419. Would you say that the turnips were less liable to fail than the potatoes?—I found them so. Beauly. Duncan Macrae.

9420. And of course you know that a turnip crop is more valuable to a stock farmer than any other crop, very often?—Oh yes.

9421. Do you quite see, yourself, the apparent contradictoriness of your evidence? On the one hand you express a very strong opinion in favour of putting small tenants in this locality, and on the other hand you express an equally strong opinion as to the probability of the crop growing?—Well, the small tenants would require the crop growing as well as large tenants.

9422. Certainly they would, but then if it won't grow?—That is a thing a person could not tell.

9423. You say that you have no doubt whatever that small tenants would succeed there?—I do.

9424. But at the same time you say that the crop is very liable to failure?—According to the frost.

9425. The Chairman.—Suppose you were offered a croft, fairly rented at £30, up about Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean, would you undertake to carry it on?—I could not tell.

9426. Mr Burns.—You are not a tenant of Mrs Chisholm's?—No.

9427. You never were, I suppose?—No.

9428. You told the Commissioners that there were four farms at Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean; were they all in the possession of one farmer when you went there?—Yes.

9429. There were four names, but one farmer. Who was the farmer, do your remember?—Williamson.

9430. That is Williamson and Brown, tenants of Knockfin?—Yes.

9431. They were part of Knockfin when you went there, all these places?—Yes.

9432. Then the same with regard to Tombuie, Glaschorry, Dalrioch, Luibguish and Lubnandamh. They were all in one tenant's hands too, were they not?—Yes.

9433. Do you know what Luibnadamph means in Gaelic?—I could not be certain.

9434. Is it 'the stag's hollow'?—Either the stag or the ox.

9435. Was there a tenant in Muckrach when you went there, or was it Williamson and Brown too?—There was a tenant in Muckrach.

9436. Who was there?—Donald Robertson.

9437. What happened to him?—He came down to Eskadale.

9438. Did he give the place up?—I don't know.

9439. Who was in Carrie?—That was into Muckrach.

9440. You know a good deal about deer; do deer require wintering ground. They require low ground as well as sheep, I suppose?—Oh yes.

9441. You cannot have a good deer forest without wintering ground for the deer?—Certainly not.

9442. And if you take away the low ground, you will not do any good to the deer, I suppose?—It could not be expected.

9443. Now there was a story about mills. Were there any mills on the Chisholm estate except the Cannich one?—Yes.

9444. Where?—I saw a mill at Comar in Cannich, and a mill in Culligran.

9445. But that is on Lord Lovat's, up at the top end of the place?—There was one at Tomich again.

9446. And that is on Lord Tweedmouth's. If there were small tenants settled up in Glencannich, they would be the better of work to help them through—of other things besides their farms?—Yes.

9447. Can you suggest anything to the Commissioners, what they would work at if you put an end to the deer forests, except their own farms and the smuggling?—Is there anything else you think they could get to work at.

9448. The Chairman.—Is there any work available to crofters or small tenants up there?—Not up there.

9449. Did you know Muckrach when these lands were turned into forests. Was it for want of low ground, or simply to extend the forest?—I think it was to extend the forest.

9450. There was no want of low ground for the subsisting forest at the time when these additions were made?—Not that I am aware of.

DUNCAN CHISHOLM, Waterloo Place, Inverness (about 70)—examined.

9451. The Chairman.—Do you know about Glencannich?—I know about Glen Strathfarrar and Glencannich.

9452. We will take your evidence just now with regard to Glencannich. What is your age?—So far as I know—there was no record or register kept—but I believe I run about 70.

9453. You live in Inverness now?—Yes.

9454. When did you leave Glencannich?—In 1838.

9455. Had you been there during all your youth, in Glencannich?—Yes, previous to 1838.

9456. What part of Glencannich did you reside in?—In Leitrie.

9457. That is on the north side of the river?—Yes.

9458. Are you a brother of the first witness, Colin Chisholm?—Yes.

9459. And you have heard the evidence given about Glencannich to-day?—Yes.

9460. Does your experience enable you to say that you agree?—Not with the whole of it—with all that I heard from the witnesses.

9461. You agree?—No, not with the whole of the witnesses.

9462. Where do you differ mainly?—In the extent of arable.

9463. Can you give us the extent of arable in these different farms. Suppose you begin with Craskie?—Well, I never measured it.

9464. Then is it that you don't know the extent of arable?—I have a good idea. I ploughed Leitrie, sowed it, and harrowed it.

9465. What was the extent of arable there?—Well, I should say there are from 50 to 60 acres. I will be safe in saying 50, but it has come under heather now.

9466. But you have ploughed as much as that?—Yes.

9467. With a pair of horses?—A pair of horses, with my father's ploughs.

9468. Do you know the arable in any other part of Glencannich—the extent of arable that was in your time?—I have seen it ploughed, sown, and reaped.

9469. Where?—Well, I have seen Carrie, Shalavanach and Muckrach.

9470. What was the extent of arable in Carrie?—There is a good piece of land there, and very fertile and first-rate grazing besides.

9471. But you can't give us the area?—No, I did not pay the least attention to the number of crofts.

9472. How would the area compare in extent with Leitrie; was it less or more?—I don't think it was much short of Leitrie, if not more.

9473. Take Shalavanach: can you tell us the area of arable there?—No, but I have seen beautiful crops on it, and beautiful meal coming from the mill home to Shalavanach. I have seen three loads coming there by my uncle from the Cannich mill.

9474. Now, take Mullardoch: can you give us any information as to the extent of the arable there?—No, but I have seen two or three tenants there.

9475. Small tenants?—Small tenants.

9476. Paying what rent?—I do not remember.

9477. But rents under £30?—I do not think so; about that.

9478. Do you know arable land anywhere else in that district?—Well, I should.

9479. Take Coire-nan-cuilean?—There is not much arable in Coire-nan-cuilean, but the grazing is very superior. It could be mowed from the lake side to the top of the hill, and that is no small distance.

9480. Now Luibnadamh: do you remember it?—Fine that.

9481. Was there arable there?—Very little in my time, but I believe there is a good garden in it. I have seen a fine crop of berries there before now. Beauly. Duncan Chisholm.

9482. Did you know a place Tombuie?—Fine that.

9483. Was there arable there?—Yes, plenty.

9484. How much?—Oh, for the size of the place, well, I should think about 25 or 30 acres.

9485. Do you remember Dalrioch?—I do.

9486. Was there arable there?—There was.

9487. And can you give us the extent of it?—I am not fit. I should think there were several acres, but it is all under heather, heath, and so forth, wood and brackens.

9488. Do you remember whether there was arable in Luibguish?—Yes, there is; it is not very much; that is on the south side of the river Cannich.

9489. Are these places which would be suitable for crofters' settlements now?—I had seen them in, before now.

9490. You intend us to infer that you think they might be there again?—Oh, I don't see why not.

9491. There is both arable land and grazing land, is there?—Yes, but it is not so very fine grazing as what it is on the north side of the water Cannich.

9492. I suppose you are not able to tell us the stock which these places carry?—I forget in the meantime, but I know there were plenty sheep, cattle, horses, and goats.

9493. And all that land, to your knowledge, has been turned into forest?—Every inch, with the exception of one small place when you go into the glen.

9494. Have you been there recently?—No.

9495. How long is it since you were there?—There are a good few years since.

9496. You don't know anything of it during the last fifteen or twenty years?—I think I was there since. I have been into Kintail, and I took that road.

9497. Passing through?—Yes.

9498. What is your occupation?—General agent.

9499. In Inverness?—Yes.

9500. But you were brought up to hold the plough?—I was, and that very young too. I had ploughed Leitrie myself personally, and sowed it, and in another part of the country, which is now a deer forest I am sorry to say—I refer to Port-Clair. I ploughed 47 years ago, on the then farm of Port-Clair, now the forest of Port-Clair on the Lovat Estates, between Invermoriston and Fort-Augustus.

9501. Where is that?—Parish of Boleskine and Abertarff.

9502. Mr Sutherland.—I take it, Mr Chisholm, that, in the comparison you are making, you are talking of the land that was previously under cultivation only?—Oh yes, and the beautiful grazing as well.

9503. But when you said arable land, you are thinking of the land that was before under cultivation?—Oh, before.

9504. Now is it your opinion that all the land that could be cultivated has been cultivated in times past?—Surely not.

9505. You think there is a great deal more that could be cultivated just as well as what was cultivated in olden times?—Yes.

9506. And in that way the arable could be very greatly increased?—There is not the least doubt about it, but the grazing is very superior, and since the Lovat forest was extended to such an extent in Glen Strathfarrar, they were very heavy on The Chisholm's tenantry.

9507. Are you acquainted with the land that crofters over the Highlands generally have been making into arable?—Well, I think I have seen a good deal of it done.

9508. Was that better land or worse than the land now lying waste in Glencannich?—I was a tenant of Lord Lovat's for twenty years in the parish of Kirkhill, and I can safely say there is as good land in Glencannich as what I was paying £2 per imperial acre for; and also in Glen Strathfarrar.

9509. Mr Forsyth.—I think you said that you left Glencannich in 1838?—I did.

Beauly. Duncan Chisholm.

9510. Have you been there since that?—Oh yes.

9511. Have you been there recently at all?—No.

9512. Have you been there within twenty-five years?—Yes.

9513. Because I find there is so much difference between your estimate of the arable at Leitrie and Mr Cameron's. His was 20 and yours was 60?—I am not surprised at that.

9514. I should like to know how this discrepancy in the evidence comes?—Look at what is under heather of it since. He would not see the difference. You might trace out furrows in some of these places, covered with heather.

9515. Then you hold that there are 60 acres there?—I will be safe in saying 50.

9516. You hold that there are 60 acres there that have been regularly under crop?—Oh yes, in a rotational manner.

9517. In this place, I mean?—Yes.

9518. And you think there is a great deal more there that could be cultivated?—I am certain of it.

9519. You have heard what has been said as to the difficulty of getting any crop and the frosting of potatoes in that district. Does your experience go to bear that out?—No.

9520. Then you think there is no frosting of potatoes there?—Not in my time there.

9521. And can crops be easily got in there in harvest time?—Quite easy.

9522. There is no trouble from the weather?—I am not aware of it. I have seen plenty of it secured.

9523. The harvests are always good there?—The same as they are in the generality of the country.

9524. There are troubles from harvests occasionally?—Oh yes, there are, I have no doubt, and I have seen the same elsewhere.

9525. But do you think it is as easy to get in corn there as it is in what are supposed to be the more favoured districts of Scotland?—Well, it is a place that the corn is very easily seasoned in, more so than Glen Strathfarrar.

9526. So that you would not allow that there is any difficulty in securing corn?—Not more than the lower ground.

9527. Then you are of opinion that we need not consider that as a difficulty at all?—No difficulty.

9528. And is the land so superior that the crops are good?—Some of it is very superior.

9529. And do you think that it would continue to grow good corn, even with the heavy rainfall there is there washing the land?—Oh yes, it used to grow good corn and good meal also. I have seen corn going to the mill and coming back from it.

9530. And you are satisfied that this is a place above the average in every way?—Yes, in such a district as that.

9531. It is very high-lying you know?—It is about 470 feet above the level of the sea, the arable land. I am not speaking about the hills.

9532. The Chairman.—But the loch was 705 feet, and of course the land must be above the loch?—Is that Leitrie?

9533. Mr Forsyth.—We find the elevation is a great deal more than you think. It is probably between 700 and 800 feet?—Leitrie?

9534. Yes; does that alter your opinion?—Oh, I might err in taking off the Ordnance Survey.

9535. But still you think it is eminently adapted to arable culture?—It was and it is.

9536. And it would be again?—Certainly.

9537. The Chairman.—You ploughed land at Leitrie yourself?—I did so, personally.

9538. And the extent which you ploughed yourself personally was not less than 50 acres?—Well, it might be less than 50, because we were keeping a kind of rotation.

9539. What would it be?—I suppose it would be about 15 acres, what I ploughed that season.

9540. And what was the total area under rotation?—I consider the whole would be from 50 to 60.

9541. And the whole of that land you ploughed from time to time yourself?—Yes, and in other deer forests as well.

9542. Mr Munro.—It is fifty-five years, I think you told us, since you left Glencannich?—Something like that.

9543. And during that time have you been entirely engaged in business pursuits?—As a rule.

9544. Have you been so engaged in Beauly?—Several times.

9545. And I also know that you were in business in Inverness?—Yes.

9546. Now have you ever had any opportunities of observing the difference it made to traders in these towns through the depopulation of these straths and glens in the matter of trade?—Oh, there is no mistake about that, because these sportsmen have taken all their supplies (from their wine to the feeding of the dogs), from their army and co-operative stores in London.

9547. Have you ever observed yourself, many years ago, a large number of farmers' carts going to town with their produce, selling their produce, and bringing back from these towns what the merchants there sold?—To be sure. From Rose Street, till past the Railway Station now at Inverness, would be full of dairy produce of the best description from the surrounding countries. No margarine then, or anything else of that kind.

9548. So you consider that the towns have suffered a serious loss by the depopulation of these straths and glens?—Very much.

9549. When you lived at Glencannich, were you familiar with the farmers living there and their habits of life?—Yes, and buy what we required.

9550. Were they generally in comfortable circumstances?—Oh, to be sure they were.

9551. Now taking into account the altered conditions of living which prevail to-day, do you think that, if men could be got and replaced upon the land there, they could live in as favourable circumstances as they did in former times—as comfortably?—Oh, I should think so: what is to prevent them. Of course the houses are down, and thrown down, because in many places when anybody would die on the property the house was knocked down or pulled down, in many instances.

9552. Now we have been over the whole of Skye, and while there we found a large extent of land which could be profitably occupied, said by witnesses to be profitably occupied by them, but the people are there already to take possession of the lands, but where are the people here to be found?—They are evicted: they are out of the place: they are away to all quarters of the globe.

9553. Then can you give us any suggestion as to where the people would come from to re-people these straths and glens?—Give them the chance; let them have the work, and you would be surprised where they would come from.

9554. You are familiar with Glen Strathfarrar?—Yes, I am thoroughly acquainted with it.

9555. You have told us nothing to-day about that?—No, but I shall if my lord wants.

9556. Were you familiar with many people in Glen Strathfarrar?—I was.

9557. Do you remember it being occupied by a thriving class of tenantry?—I do.

9558. And they throve upon their agricultural pursuits there?—Ah, to be sure; so they might.

9559. Did they require any outside work, in the shape of help, to enable them to live?—No, they had plenty of work of their own. It is about 200 feet lower than Glencannich, I mean from sea-level.

9560. Now would you be apprehensive yourself, if you had a farm there, that the crops generally could be grown without fear of frost?—None whatever.

9561. Have you ever known oats to ripen there well?—I have seen several crops there, and very, very heavy crops.

9562. Now, as a test of your knowledge in that point, can you tell us if there were many meal mills kept going in former times there?—The nearest was down at the foot of the glen.

9563. But how many altogether —They used to send to Comar mills besides the one that was at the foot of Glen Strathfarrar, and down to Kilmorack when the Glen Strathfarrar mill was out of order.

Beauly. Duncan Chisholm.

9564. Are there not mills there?—No, but there is a splendid mill at Comar on Mrs Chisholm's property.

9565. What others did you see?—Comar or Cannich.

9566. Does that mill get much employment now?—Oh, I should think so; it gets all the employment of the district.

9567. But there are not many other mills there?—No, there is a gentleman at Inverness who drove oats from Muille to Comar mills before now, himself and his servant man, with 3 horses, 3 loads, and it weighed 46 lbs. per bushel by the miller there (John Murray, who had the mills of Comar).

9568. That seems an extraordinary weight?—The land was fresh and good.

9569. Where was that ground?—Glen Strathfarrar and in Ard-chuilc.

9570. And you are quite satisfied?—Satisfied, but the man told me he was not able to come to the Commission.

9571. You are perfectly satisfied that in that strath abundance of corn could be grown to-day?—Yes, on both sides of the river; I have seen very, very heavy crops there.

9572. Mr Macleod.—You heard what the previous witness had to say—the last witness?—Mr Macrae; oh, he is a gamekeeper.

9573. You heard what he had to say about the crops?—Yes, I did, and I was quite astonished.

9574. You had been working land there, and that was not your experience?—No, no.

9575. You said you differed from some of the other witnesses?—Certainly.

9576. Then, on the other point that you differed, as to the extents of old arable land that are in those old townships?—Yes.

9577. Are there any other points that you differ from them upon?—Well, they would not see the old arable land because they would be covered with brackens.

9578. You think the explanation with regard to the old arable land is that you remember it, of course, when it was under tenants and under crop, and they only saw it when it had been under sheep for a good many years?—Yes.

9579. Now you said also that you could give us some information about Glen Strathfarrar as well as Glencannich?—Yes, I volunteered to do it; I have no payment to it, and I just tell the truth the same as a mariner who was on at the high seas—direct.

9580. Give us the names of the townships in Glen Strathfarrar?—Some of them are nearly as high up as Monar.

9581. Beginning at Monar, take the glen down?—That is Mr Stirling's property now.

9582. That is Monar. Give us the next place?—Inchvuilt.

9583. And the next?—Braulin.

9584. Yes?—On the south side, Tomantoul.

9585. And the next?—The next place on the low part of Glen Strathfarrar is Ardhuilc, then Inchinlair, Muille, where Lord Lovat built a lodge in an island. The next is Muille; there is one on the south side and one on the north side.

9586. Any more?—Camusore, Deanie,—there are two Deanies, one east and one west. There is another place down in the middle of the wood there. I am forgetting it now,—Fasag-cannich.

9587. The Chairman.—Was it a place called Coillegharbh?—That is on the south side of the water. That is the first deer forest that Lord Lovat had.

9588. Mr Macleod.—Are there any more?—Oh, plenty. Tomnaglass, down to Struy; and on the north side there are some places that I am almost forgetting.

9589. That is all, so far as you recollect?—And Culligran. Milton, where the nearest mill they used was, the people of Glen Strathfarrar.

9590. Any more that you can think of?—Struy Bridge is the next, if I recollect well. It is possible there may be more, but that is all I remember.

Beauly. Duncan Chisholm.

9591. That is, beginning at the top of the glen and coming down, you have given us altogether seventeen townships?—Very well.

9592. Then would there be more than one tenant in each of those places?—Yes, in Culligran there were several tenants.

9593. Just tell us how many you think there were on the average—say two on the average—in those places?—There were three in Culligran.

9594. That was the largest place in the glen?—Well, yes.

9595. Was there more than one in the majority of the others?—Oh, yes, at one time; but what I have seen myself I am speaking of. I don't want to go by hearsay.

9596. I don't presume for a moment that you do?—I just tell what I have seen myself personally.

9597. Then you think, in the majority of the places in the time you remember, there would be only one tenant?—There may be some of them with two tenants.

9598. And others with one, and so on?—Yes.

9599. And Culligran had three?—Yes, his two sons and the old man.

9600. Is there anything else you can tell us about Glen Strathfarrar?—As I said, Glen Strathfarrar Forest was a terror to the tenantry, because the march between the two glens on the top was never fenced, and you know at the making of a deer forest how the sheep and cattle will run where the grass is sweet.

9601. They were continually going over into the deer forest?—Yes, they were, and they were used as they should not be there. Whose order it was, I know not.

9602. Now, of course, you quite understand that we are not so much here to inquire into the matter of these grievances as to inquire what available land there may be; and what I would like you now to tell me is with regard to the stock that was on these places when you remember them. Were there many cattle?—Well, there were a good few cattle.

9603. Was it on the cattle or on the sheep that they were dependent mostly?—Sheep and cattle both.

9604. I think I heard you say something about goats?—There were not so many goats in Glen Strathfarrar in my time, with the exception of the very far west. They pretended that the goats were alarming the deer, and they were driving them out of the place, although very useful.

9605. Then about the area of arable land that would be in these townships. I don't want to tie you down,—I know perfectly well that you can't possibly give it except in a rough way. Did they grow as much meal in Glen Strathfarrar as sufficed for their families?—The most of them did, and potatoes.

9606. In the majority of instances?—Yes, in the majority of instances.

9607. So that there was a sufficient extent of arable for that purpose?—Yes, and for meadows also, to support the cattle in winter. There are some beautiful meadows in it.

9608. Then as to the growth of the crop there, I think you said that it grew fully better than in Glencannich?—Oh, well, it is fully as good in Glen Strathfarrar. It is lower by about 200 feet than Leitrie.

9609. And the crop, if anything, would be a surer crop there?—Yes.

9610. Then do you think, coming to the practical question, supposing that land in Glen Strathfarrar were available for small holdings, would you increase the number of tenants from the number that you remember being there, or would you decrease them?—It is quite capable of increasing them, and there are splendid slated houses there since the last tenants were in it.

9611. How do you mean?—There are splendid houses there since the former farmers were in the place.

Beauly. — Duncan Chisholm

9612. But I thought there are no tenants there at all?—No; but the houses are there.

9613. Oh! there are houses?—They were kept in repair under gamekeepers, gillies, and so forth.

9614. And you think they could now be made available for small tenants?—Yes, they could.

9615. You have some knowledge of the trade round about—the business that can be done round about. Do you think that a profitable market could be found for any dairy produce that would be made in those places?—There are no people there to consume it.

9616. Is there land about those glens?—There is not as many men as would consume it.

9617. But supposing that there were small tenants in these glens, could they bring their dairy produce easily to market?—Amongst themselves they might, but to bring it here would be another pair of shoes: too far off the market.

9618. Anything they did in that way they would have to consume themselves?—Yes, with the exception of butter and cheese, and curds and so forth.

9619. Well, I presume that is dairy produce?—Plenty of that.

9620. The Chairman.—I would like to ask—Do you know about Glen Affaric?—Well, I never passed through it.

9621. I thought you said, when you were beginning your evidence, that you were able to tell us?—I have seen part of it, but very little.

9622. Then you are not able to speak of it?—I used to see it from the hills.

9623. You never lived in it?—No, never.

9624. And you don't know anything of its history?—I often heard about its history, but I did not see about it personally.

9625. Do you know about Struy?—Fine that.

9626. Where is Struy?—It is at the junction of the Farrar and the Glass.

9627. Is there land there that would be suitable for settling crofters?—Yes, and beyond it Dumnaglass.

9628. It is near the hotel?—Yes, where the hotel was.

9629. Is there good land there?—Oh yes, in Struy.

9630. Is that land that is under forest now?—Well, all the grazing is, with very little exception.

9631. How far is it from Erchless Castle?—A mile or a mile and a half.

9632. And there is a good deal of wood there?—At one time there was, but it is all cut down; it is quite bare now.

9633. But there is a good deal of wood round it?—Well, I don't remember much of old wood standing there.

9634. Struy and Culligran: is not there a good deal of wood there?—There is a lot of growing wood in Erchless; it is very well wooded indeed. It is quite a treat to pass it.

9635. What extent of ground is there, where the trees have all been cut down, which would be available for settlement, in your judgment?—When I used to pass there it would be past the sky line from the road, the top of the hill. There was a sawmill or two there for years till it was manufactured.

9636. I think you said it is now occupied as forest?—I think so, with very little exception. There may be a little added to the farm of Struy at present, but not much.

9637. Is there a farm of Struy there now?—Yes.

9638. Do you know the extent of it?—I do not.

9639. Who is the tenant?—Mr Rattray, I believe.

9640. Now, going back again to some of those old townships you mentioned in answer to a question from Mr Macleod: are you aware that some of these townships you mentioned are now under wood. Culligran, for instance?—Was that plantation?

9641. Yes.—Well, it is since I used to go there.

9642. And Dumnaglass, are you aware it is under wood?—Well, there must be very little.

9643. I am going by the map before me?—The grandfather of the present nobleman planted a lot at the west end of Glen-Strathfarrar, in the neighbourhood of Monar, but it is all dwarfs together; the deer spoiled it.

Beauly.

9644. Mr Gordon.—You stated to us that, as far as you know, you are about 70 years of age?—Yes. Duncan Chisholm.

9645. You have given us some very good and very substantial information about Glencannich, which you left in 1838?—Yes.

9646. Then you would be 15 years of age at that time?—Perhaps fully that. I told you that there was no record or register kept in the place.

9647. But, according to yourself, that would be your age when you left it?—It would be all that.

9648. Were you the only man your father had to plough and sow the land?—No, but the only one that stopped at home.

9649. But the only one at home?—At the time.

9650. And did you cut 15 acres of a good crop when you were 15?—I did not; the shearers did.

9651. But you ploughed the land?—I ploughed it, sowed it, and harrowed it.

9652. Have you been much back in the glen since 1838?—No, I had no occasion to go.

9653. Have you ever seen any part of it ploughed, or sown, or cut since then?—I believe I did at Glen Strathfarrar.

9654. But at Cannich?—Yes, I did, I am sure.

9655. What year would that be in?—I could not tell you.

9656. Have you seen it more than once?—I used to go out to Kintail on business.

9657. Have you been more than once in Cannich since you left it?—I am sure I was. I was going through there to Kintail or Kyleakin.

9658. You gave us very strong evidence as regards the crops, and you say you were only 15 years of age when you left it, and you are not sure how often you have been back since you left it?—I have not my notes with respect to that.

9659. Well, we had evidence from the previous witness, who was twenty-three years on the very same ground you refer to—from 1859 to 1881—and he said emphatically that out of every second year, or at most every third year, the crop was a very bad one from bad weather?—I would not heed that. My lord, would you excuse me to hand this to you (hands up a paper to the Chairman).

9660. In the face of that evidence I would like to know whether you still stick to that statement?—I will try, and to the truth.

9661. But when you were only 15 years of age when you left it, how could you be so good a judge as the man who—— Recollect we had both farms. We had the low farm in the parish of Kirkhill and also in Glencannich for a time: Leitrie and Phopachy.

9662. How did the climate of the two countries correspond from your recollection in 1838?—They were very favourable indeed.

9663. Will you excuse me for putting one question. 1838 was a year famous for bad weather and a bad crop. I remember it quite well. Now you told me that you had a good crop on the farm of Leitrie in 1838?—Yes, without a doubt; there might be a little bother.

9664. That was one of the worst years, I suppose, in the present century, and we have had a good many bad ones?—Very likely.

9665. But, at any rate, you have not had any experience of the cultivation of that country since you left it in 1838?—I had no occasion.

9666. And you were 15 years of age then?—Fully.

9667. Well, I am taking your own word?—Yes.

9668. Mr Burns.—You left fifty-five years ago. Was not Colin at home then? He says he left forty-one years ago?—He is my senior brother, of course, and I don't remember these odds and ends so much.

9669. He said he left forty-one years ago.

9670. Mr Shaw Stewart.—He said he was away forty-one years.

9671. Mr Burns.—Oh, it does not matter. Did you say how many tenants were in Mullardoch?—I had seen three there.

9672. Over £30 a year each?—I will be plain with you: I don't remember the exact amount.

9673. Who were they?—William Chisholm, Archibald Chisholm, and John Chisholm.

9674. Where did they live?—On Mullardoch, but this was previous to the Williamsons going there.

9675. Was it in the summer only they lived there?—No, no; winter and summer.

9676. They had a house there?—Indeed they had several houses.

9677. Was there not a tacksman over them, because we do not find them in the rental?—No.

9678. You said that the land—ploughed land—had gone back to heather? Do you say it was good land?—It was better than now, because there were plenty cattle and people to keep it.

9679. Does good land that has been long cultivated, in your experience, go back to heather instead of grass?—Yes; it is a pity it is not ploughed.

9680. But it goes back to heather and not to grass?—And fog.

9681. You said heather?—I said both. I am not as well acquainted with it as Mr Burns.

9682. I know nothing about it. I am only asking you the question. How many mills were there on The Chisholm's estate up about Glencannich when you first remember; was there just the one at Cannich?—Yes.

9683. And it is there yet?—There yet.

9684. There has been no diminishing of the number of mills in that country?—No, I don't think so. The mill is there yet, and in very good order for the tenants.

9685. You said that the depopulation of the glens had hurt trade in the towns. What towns were you thinking about? Was it Inverness?—There is a few in Inverness.

9686. But what towns have been injured by the depopulation of Cannich?—Did I mention depopulation, Mr Burns?

9687. I think so?—Well, they used to manufacture timber in my time, and float it down to Beauly.

9688. But how did it hurt the towns; what towns do you mean?—I mean Inverness, for one.

9689. Do you know that the trade of Inverness has increased at least sixfold in the last forty years?—I know the rates are increasing, for one thing.

9690. But do you know, though, that the trade has increased—I believe it is more than tenfold, but I am quite safe in saying sixfold—in the last forty years, during the depopulating period?—Well, where could they go; they had no shelter but to run there.

9691. But you cannot dispute that the trade of Inverness during this depopulated period has increased at least sixfold?—Not for the last thirty years.

9692. I think you said the people in your time in the district did not require to buy meal?—Very little.

9693. We have information that some years they had to buy a tremendous quantity; do you know anything about it?—Some are more extravagant in meal than others, and they would have fishing and other things.

9694. You said there were townships in Glen Strathfarrar; what date do you refer to?—Well, I believe the first parties that had been evicted there on a large scale—the first eviction was during the life of the late Archibald Fraser, the youngest brother of General Simon, son of the Lord Lovat beheaded on Tower Hill. General Simon went to Glen Strathfarrar and got 200, as I am told, of volunteers to fight the enemy on the Heights of Abram, near Quebec.

9695. That is 1753; but I want to know at what date these townships existed that you know about—that you have been telling us of?—The last evictions?

9696. No, the townships. You said there were townships in Glen Strathfarrar. I want to know what date you say there were townships in Glen Strathfarrar?—It would be about the year 1800.

9697. That is before your time?—That is before my time.

9698. You are speaking from tradition?—I don't want to speak about hearsay. I prefer, and I thought I stated, that I would keep to that.

9699. But you don't remember seeing the townships in Glen Strathfarrar?—I have seen several tenants in it and their men.

9700. But it has been townships I have been asking you about all this time?—The townships are there yet.

9701. But I mean actual tenants living together in a small hamlet or village. Have you seen that?—I have seen plenty of that in Culligran.

9702. That is down at the bottom of the glen?—Yes.

9703. Is not there one tenant in it all your time?—Not all my time.

9704. Did you ever see a time when there was more than one tenant in it?—Yes.

9705. Tell me who?—I have seen the father and sons. They had a home apiece and a farm apiece.

9706. Do you know that the sons or tenants were only staying or living with their father?

9707. The Chairman.—I think his answer to Mr Macleod was very much his answer to you. There were three people; it may have been a general tenancy, but there were three tenants.

9708. Mr Burns.—You said there was a meal mill in Glen Strathfarrar. Where was it?—Milton, down below Culligran.

9709. That is not in the glen, I am told?—What is the difference; it is on the same water, and under the same landlord.

9710. Were you ever a tenant on Glen Strathfarrar?—No, but my aunt was.

9711. Where?—At Inchlair.

9712. How long is it since you were there?—It is a long time now. They had been evicted out of it.

9713. What was your aunt's name?—She was married to Valentine Macrae.

9714. She was the widow of Valentine Macrae?—She was not a widow then.

9715. Your uncle, Valentine Macrae, was the tenant?—Yes.

9716. Mr Sutherland.—Do you believe that the increase in the trade of Inverness was due to the depopulation of the glens?—Not likely.

9717. Then as to your memory of what happened when you were 15 years of age?—I have a perfect good memory—firm as ever.

9718. And of many things that happened before you were 15 years of age?—Yes; but I don't wish to speak of it here. I merely confine myself to what I had seen.

9719. But you think that Glen Strathfarrar and Glencannich are exactly where they were when you were 15 years of age?—Oh yes. I see, of course, it is getting wasted. Deer is not like cattle and sheep or human beings.

9720. But what you stated was spoken from your own memory and experience?—Yes.

9721. Mr Munro.—Returning to this question of the increased trade of Inverness, I presume you don't attribute any increase of the trade to the deer forests?—Quite the reverse.

9722. That Inverness has prospered, not because of the deer forests, but in spite of them, to a large extent?—Yes. I am a trader by sea and land since 1848.

9723. You remember the opening up of the railways to Inverness?—Long before it.

9724. And I suppose you are prepared to allow that the increase in the prosperity of Inverness is mainly, if not entirely, owing to the Highland Railway Company?—Well, it made its own share.

9725. And if these straths and glens had been occupied by farmers instead of by deer forests, the trade of Inverness would still further, in all probability, have increased?—Not a doubt. They would be there from one end of the year to another with their families, which is quite different to these gentlemen coming, in the meantime, as sportsmen, as they call themselves.

9726. Mr Alexander Mackenzie, Inverness.—I would like to ask, through your lordship, whether Mr Chisholm has not been a practical farmer for some twenty years on the low ground.

9727. The Chairman.—Have you been a practical farmer?—I thought I convinced you of that. My credentials, I think, are sufficient.

Beauly. Duncan Chisholm.

9728. Mr Alexander Mackenzie.—Did you farm the farm of Phoppachy?—Yes, for twenty years.

9729. That is in Kirkhill?—Yes.

9730. I want to point out that our friend is not merely a commission agent. Is he quite sure that he was only 15 years of age in 1838. He told us that registers were not kept in those days, and he was not quite sure. Is it not the fact that you are considerably over 70 now?—Well, it is very possible. I don't want to make myself older, and I mean to live as long as I can and as well as I can.

9731. The Chairman.—How many years do you consider yourself younger than your brother?—Several years. I cannot state the exact figure.

9732. Not 10?—I suspect I am. He is older than me by far.

9733. Mr Alexander Mackenzie.—Now, sir, there appears to have been considerable discrepancy about the land which has once been arable about Glencannich. I would like your lordship to ask Mr Chisholm if there has not been a large amount of arable land in his early recollection which has gone back, not only into heather and fog, but which is now practically under wood—natural wood. There is some wood, but it is not very thriving.

9734. The Chairman.—The question is: Is some of the old arable land now growing wood?—Brackens, in particular.

9735. But wood—timber?—Well, I don't doubt but there are; heather and brackens, anyhow.

9736. Do you know, as a matter of fact, whether land formerly arable is now under wood?—It is inclined to go that way.

9737. Mr Alexander Mackenzie.—If this were so, would this account for the discrepancy with the evidence of a man who saw land with the appearance of being arable twenty years after he left.

9738. The Chairman.—Yes, it might, but he does not say he knows of such land.

9739. Mr Alexander Mackenzie.—I should like to know whether this unripened corn, of which we heard so much, is not very valuable, if not almost as valuable, in the rearing of cattle during the winter as if the corn ripened; used for fodder, is it not just as good as ripe grain used for human food?

9740. The Chairman.—What is your knowledge as to that?—It is a very good substitute for feeding or rearing. I used it in the Highlands and in the province of Connaught for years.

9741. Mr Alexander Mackenzie.—Was there not a large number of people who had gone from Strathglass to Glen-Strathfarrar in 1841, and occupied that until cleared out by the grandfather of the present Lord Lovat in 1845?—Certainly.

9742. How many families were there in 1843—say from 1840 to 1845—which you remember?—Seven or eight.

9743. So that there was more than the one to whom Mr Burns has referred to? There were at least seven or eight, according to your recollection, as late as 1845. Is it not a fact that some fifteen to twenty families went from Strathglass and were settled there by Mr Grieve, a large sheep farmer, by the consideration of Thomas Alexander, Lord Lovat, who provided land in that glen, and ultimately evicted them in 1845?—I believe it is.

Farquhar Macrae.

FARQUHAR MACRAE, Rebeg, Kirkhill (about 57)—examined.

9744. The Chairman.—Do you wish to give your evidence in Gaelic?—Yes.

9745. Are you a crofter?—No, I was a shepherd.

9746. And what are you now?—I am a crofter or a small farmer.

9747. Near Beauly?—Ay, in Kirkhill.

9748. What estate are you on?—Mr Fraser, Reelick.

9749. Can you tell us the size of your holding?—39 acres.

9750. How much is arable?—It is all arable. I daresay there are about 2 acres of pasture. Beauly. Farquhar Macrae.

9751. And what is your rent?—£32.

9752. You don't hold under lease?—Yes.

9753. A written lease?—Yes.

9754. For how long?—Fifteen years; well, there are eleven years to run.

9755. You know about Glen-Affaric?—Yes.

9756. How many years were you there?—I was for twenty-three years there.

9757. In what capacity?—As shepherd all the time.

9758. To whom did you act as shepherd?—For twenty years to Mr Williamson, Knockfin, and for three years to Mr Winans.

9759. Do you belong to Glen-Affaric?—I was born and bred in Strathglass.

9760. What part of Glen-Affaric were you located in?—For the first four years in the place they call Caimbaan, and the rest of the time in Ath-nam-Muileach, on the south side of the water.

9761. Do you remember the extent of the farm upon which you were shepherd?—Well, I have a rough idea of the length of it and the breadth of it.

9762. What was the length and what the breadth?—It would be about 21 miles in length.

9763. And how broad?—I would say from 3 to 2 miles broad in parts of it.

9764. Was all that land put under deer?—Not at first.

9765. But is it under deer now?—Yes.

9766. When was that process gone through?—It went under deer about eight years ago.

9767. Was it added to Mr Winans' forest?—It is Mr Winans that has it yet.

9768. Is it now called Wester Knockfin?—Wester and Easter Knockfin.

9769. How many sheep did it carry?—I can hardly tell. I would say it would carry between 3000 and 4000 in summer.

9770. Were the sheep wintered upon the land or were they sent away?—Some of them, the hoggs, were sent away.

9771. Where?—Down to the low country here. Some dinmonts were also sent away.

9772. Is that land, in your opinion, suitable for crofter settlements now?—Well, it is suitable for little tenants.

9773. Small holdings?—Ay.

9774. And could they live there without further assistance?—Well, I would think so, whatever.

9775. What is the nature of the arable land in them?—Well, there is not much arable land in it.

9776. It is generally pretty high, is it not?—Ay, pretty high.

9777. Running up to?—Running up to Cnoc-na-h-ullaidh.

9778. Can you tell me what is the height of the lowest level?—I think the head of Loch Affaric is about 980 feet, I believe. Both ends are much about the same.

9779. Mr Sutherland.—It is marked 744 feet?—Very well.

9780. The Chairman.—The loch itself is 744 feet. The land at the head of the loch is 800?—I think the house where I was stopping was about 1000 feet. That was Ath-nam-Muileach.

9781. Had you arable land there?—No; except a wee patch of potatoes.

9782. Did potatoes grow well?—Yes; pretty fair sometimes.

9783. There was nobody else living near you?—There was a man on the opposite side of the water.

9784. At Culevain?—Yes.

9785. That was another shepherd?—Yes.

9786. But excepting you and him, there was nobody else near at hand?—Yes; there were houses up the glen further on.

9787. Where?—At a place they call Colan, 2 miles or 2½ west of us, and a house at Caimbaan; and there were two shepherds there and three at Ath-nam-Muileach.

9788. And at Alltbeath?—That does not belong to the same farm.

9789. How many shepherds were on that farm altogether?—There were six shepherds on our farm in the glen, and one on each Knockfin.

9790. Are the crops late there always?—We did not use to sow crop at all in the glen, except potatoes.

9791. How did you do—had you corn in winter?—No.

9792. And no turnip?—No.

9793. What stock did you keep yourself?—Well, I had three cows and a few followers, and a horse.

9794. And some sheep?—No sheep. It is wages I had for sheep and service.

9795. Can you tell me what extent of land has been turned into deer forest in that quarter, in your recollection?—Oh well, I don't know. The whole glen is turned into deer forest in my recollection, from Fasnakyle and from Knockfin, on both sides of the water, up to the march of Kintail. It will be 22 miles in length.

9796. And do you know how broad?—Well, I would say from 5 to 6 miles on both sides of the water.

9797. All turned from sheep farm into deer forest?—Yes.

9798. What was the name of the farm next to yours?—The farm of Kerrow.

9799. How many shepherds were on it?—Four in the glen and two in the strath.

9800. And were these the only farms there—Knockfin farm and the Kerrow farm?—No, there was another little farm that Mr Fraser, Mauld, had called Benevean and Achagiat, and part of Fasnakyle farm.

9801. Two small farms which Mr Fraser had?—One farm he had.

9802. Both these small farms?—Ay, it is the one farm.

9803. When was that?—I am not very sure. I cannot recollect very well. There was a good few years since that.

9804. How long was it before Mr Winans' time?—No; it was Mr Winans that got it.

9805. Before Mr Winans came it had been a sheep farm?—Yes.

9806. And it was turned into forest, and made part of his forest?—Yes.

9807. Just try and remember how many years ago that was. Is it within the last ten years?—More than that.

9808. Are there any other farms you can mention besides Wester Knockfin, Kerrow, and Mam that have been turned into forest?—No; there was no more land in the glen but that.

9809. That is the whole land in the glen?—Yes.

9810. Would you say that these farms, taking them generally, are suitable for occupation and residence by crofters, or is the land too high?—Well, it is pretty high; but I think crofters would live pretty comfortably on it if they would get it at a fair rent.

9811. Is there enough of arable for them?—No, there is not much arable; there is a bit at Achagiat.

9812. But is there not arable land elsewhere than at Achagiat?—Well, there is land that could be cultivated, but I don't think the corn would ripen in it.

9813. Where is that land?—There is a good skelp at Ath-nam-Muileach.

9814. Nine or ten acres there?—Ay, I am sure there is all that.

9815. What did you say about the corn there?—It would not ripen; it is too high.

9816. That was where you lived?—Yes.

9817. Mr Shaw Stewart.—Then you think the only use that could be made of this ground, if it was not in forest, would be to be used as sheep farms?—Aye, sheep and cattle. We can rear any amount of cattle in the summer.

9818. What about the winter?—Sell them off at winter, the most of them, whatever, except a few you would keep for your own use.

9819. You would have no winter cattle at all?—Not over many. I could winter, I dare say, five or six cows there with natural grass.

9820. Do you know that in a great many parts sheep-farming does not pay?—I don't know how they pay to-day, but they were paying once. Beauly. — Farquhar Macrae.

9821. That may be, but do you not know that they don't pay now in a great many places?—Well, in some places they do pay yet.

9822. In some places they may, but in other places they don't?—No, if it is too high rented.

9823. But even at moderate rent. But still you would recommend this land being turned into sheep farms, although in some parts of the Highlands sheep-farming does not pay?—I can't say; but I know these glens would pay well if they were let at a reasonable rent, because there is good grazing in them.

9824. Mr Sutherland.—How far is Caimbaan from Beauly by road?—It will be about 41 miles, I believe.

9825. And the land will be rising all the way?—All the way.

9826. And you think that along that line of road there is plenty land that could be occupied by small holders?—Oh, not very small.

9827. What is your idea of the size of holding that ought to be put there where you were?—Well, I would like, if I was going back there, to get between 500 and 600 acres pasture before I could live on it. Just a comfortable living.

9828. And I have no doubt you could manage more to advantage if you got it?—Well, if I had the means.

9829. That is your opinion of it?—Yes.

9830. You stated that you were for twenty-three years in Glen Affaric, and you were afterwards three years a shepherd to Mr Winans?—I was twenty years with Mr Williamson and three years with Mr Winans.

9831. Was Mr Winans a sheep farmer then?—Yes, for three years.

9832. And then he cleared away the sheep?—Yes.

9833. Did he take over the stock from the previous tenant?—Well, the previous tenant delivered the stock to The Chisholm of Chisholm.

9834. And it was transferred then to Mr Winans?—Aye.

9835. And so it was Mr Winans, then, that afterwards—what did he do with the stock after the three years?—He sold it off at Inverness at the sales.

9836. Did you know anything about the circumstances. Did he lose or gain?—I cannot say, indeed; he was not caring much whether he did or not.

9837. Then you said that a certain amount of that territory along the course of this river was changed from sheep farm into deer forest?—Yes, the whole of it.

9838. Can you tell us how many shepherds were superseded by that operation?—Yes.

9839. How many shepherds were turned out by this afforestment?—Fourteen, and one in Fasnakyle makes fifteen.

9840. And do you know how many keepers were substituted for them?—Yes; at the time there were only two keepers in the one glen at that time. Of course there are more to-day, but there were only two then.

9841. So your experience, Mr Macrae, is of a double fashion. You have had experience as a shepherd and experience as an agriculturist?—A little.

9842. How long have you been a farmer?—Four years.

9843. And twenty-three as a shepherd?—Aye.

9844. Now would you be willing yourself, provided such holdings as you indicate were to be got, do you think you would like to take one yourself?—Yes, if I would be able for it.

9845. How do you mean? In capital?—Yes, in capital.

9846. But if you had the necessary capital you would not be afraid, notwithstanding your experience where you are now, to take one of these holdings?—No, at a fair rent.

9847. Just so: I always suppose it would be a fair rent, fixed by neither landlord nor tenant, but by a tribunal. You would have no hesitation in taking such a holding?—No.

Beauly. Farquhar Macrae.

9848. Mr Forsyth.—What size of holding would you take, and how many sheep would you like to have?—I would not like to take less than 500 or 600 acres of that pasture before I could keep myself.

9849. How many sheep would you carry up there?—It would be enough to carry a sheep for every acre.

9850. Would it carry a sheep to an acre?—In the summer.

9851. You would have to winter your hoggs out?—Yes.

9852. And the dinmonts?—Well, the weak ones.

9853. And you think you could make a moderate rent out of that?—Well, I would think so.

9854. And keep your family too?—Ay.

9855. That would require some capital?—Yes.

9856. What would you calculate that at, roughly, say for 500 sheep?—£1000 would be little enough.

9857. Would you winter the hoggs out altogether, or take wintering for them or let them out at wintering by the head?—Well, I don't know; according to circumstances.

9858. You know the expense of that, don't you?—Yes, I do.

9859. But you still think you could make that work?—I would think so.

9860. But you don't believe in cropping up there?—No, except a bit of potatoes for the house.

9861. How would you keep your cows?—By natural grass.

9862. You would not try oats much?—No.

9863. You would rather not, although you had a horse to plough?—Even although.

9864. Mr Gordon.—You stated that the length of this glen was about 22 miles by rather more than 2 in width?—Between both sides of it, it may be 4 or 5 miles in breadth.

9865. Is this piece of ground, which you refer to as keeping a sheep to the acre, better than the average of the glen?—Yes, all those up at the head of Affaric.

9866. That is quite green, but it is pretty stormy there in winter?—Of course it is.

9867. Is there much winter?—No, not much winter.

9868. How would you do in a big storm coming?—The best way we could.

9869. You gave us the size of your glen, 22 miles in breadth by 2 in width: you would have 28,000 acres. If you make it 4 you would have 56,000 acres. How did you have such a small stock as 500? You are supposing that in your 500 acres you would just keep actually as much sheep as are on the ground?—There is about 16 or 17 miles of that ground where 10 acres would not keep a sheep.

9870. Where is that?—Away from Fasnakyle by the water side till the head of Loch Affaric.

9871. That is very good ground from Loch Beneveian to Fasnakyle?—Ay, on the north side, not on the south side.

9872. It is black ground, and wilder, but it is good ground for wintering another part of it?—It is no good for wintering or for summering.

9873. At any rate I am afraid you would hardly manage to keep the sheep to the acre that you were talking about. You would require a little more space?—It would keep that all the summer anyhow.

9874. You think you would be safer to speak about the sheep than about the acres—that is to say, you would need 400 or 500 sheep before you could make a living?—Aye.

9875. And the extent of the ground would depend upon its quality?—Yes.

9876. But it is the number of sheep you are looking to, and not the acres, when you say you want so much to keep a man; 500 or 600 acres at the foot of the glen you would not consider sufficient to keep a man?—No.

9877. Therefore it is the number of sheep you want. You want to have at least 400 or 500 sheep before?—Aye.

9877*a*. You would have enough to keep a man and his family; is that so?—Yes.

9878. You had about 4000 sheep there?—Yes, I am sure there were all that.

9879. You would only have, then, dividing that by four or five, you would only have eight or ten tenants on the whole glen?—Yes, on the south side of it.

9880. Now could you give us any idea of what rent you would have to pay for those 500 sheep?—Well, I don't know.

9881. What is the old rent of it?—I am not very sure.

9882. What was the rent Mr Winans was paying, or Mr Williamson?—I think he was paying about £1000 for it.

9883. Suppose you have ten, that would be £100 each. That would come to 4s. a sheep. Would that not be rather much?—Yes, but 4s. a sheep would be cheaper in those days than 2s. in the meantime.

9884. Was there ever a sheep worth 4s.?—Well, I can't say; it was rather dear, and no mistake.

9885. Mr Macleod.—I want to know exactly the number of shepherds that were on this farm that you are on at Knockfin?—Eight.

9886. Mr Burns.—After the sheep were cleared, do you know how many watchers Mr Winans employed in the glen, beginning with Macdonald at Knockfin up to Caimban?—Well, I have just a good idea of it. There was another one with Macdonald at Knockfin, and there were two or three at the bridge, and there were other two at the other bridge west, and there were another at Wester Knockfin, and another at Luib, and another at Dalgrar, another at Ath-nam-Muileach, and one at Caimban, and one at Allt-beath, and one at Polan [Affaric Lodge], and one at Achagiat. That is all.

9887. Was there not a number of men staying with Maclaren at Affaric?—Ay, sometimes.

9888. There were nine there when I was living there?—I daresay there were.

9889. Are you counting them?—No.

9890. Nine and fifteen would be twenty-four, would it not?—Yes, but the nine would only be for a week or two.

9891. I suppose you do not know, but it is in the valuation roll, that Mr Winans pays £2000 a year for the grazing or deer forest. I am told he pays £3400 for the place, shooting and grazing. Do you think you could get crofters and small tenants who could go there and pay more than half that rent?—No.

9892. They could not live, paying more than £1000?—Not even that.

9893. Do you know that Williamson and Brown lost money by it, and had to give it up?—Yes, fine.

9894. I suppose you don't know that Mr Winans also lost a lot of money on it keeping the sheep?—I believe he did lose a lot through the sheep.

9895. Williamson and Brown's rent was £1200; you said £1000. Did you know they had to give it up?—Yes.

9896. There is no method of making a third of the Winans' rent out of crofters and small tenants, so that they could live?—I believe not.

9897. You know the history of this place. It is called on the map Glen Affaric Forest. Was it an ancient forest?—It was never a forest till Lord Tweedmouth got the north side of it and Mr Winans the south side.

9898. You mean that sheep were never cleared off it?—No.

9899. But had it the name of forest long ago?—Yes.

9900. The Glen was a forest?—Aye.

9901. And it goes up to Caimban?—Yes.

9902. But was not all that known as the forest?—Well, there were plenty trees, and no mistake, but I don't call it a forest now, unless it was cleared of sheep.

9903. But long ago it was different, was it not?—I don't know, I am sure.

9904. Is there any public road past the place till past Knockfin?—There is a public road to Affaric Lodge.

9905. Do you know the public road ends at what they call the Brocairs's house at Wester Knockfin?—Yes.

Beauly.

Farquhar Macrae.

9906. But beyond that, I am told (I may be wrong) that the public road goes to Beneveian?—Ay, on the north side.

9907. And beyond that there is a road, not a very good road, made by Mrs Chisholm to Affaric Lodge?—Aye.

9908. But that is a private road?—It is public enough. It was made by Colonel Inge.

9909. How far is it from Affaric Lodge, where the road ends, to Caimbaan: 10 miles at any rate?—Ten miles.

9910. Is it the fact that this ground is composed mainly of mountains? You have got Scuir-na-Lapaich. Do you know the height of it?—No.

9911. 3773 feet; you go up to Mamsoul 3862 feet I think, Carn Eige 3877, Ben Attow [Beinn-Fhada] 3383. Well, it is mountain land on that west part of it?—Yes.

9912. Nobody would ever think, except planting a few potatoes, of agricultural pursuits there, I don't suppose?—Oh no.

9913. It will only do for sheep or deer?—Sheep or cattle—black cattle.

9914. But you don't know where they work cattle and sheep together, except with their shepherds, do you?—Oh yes, in some places.

9915. Where?—In Lochalsh and Kintail and Glenmoriston.

9916. Are these very small tenants?—Mr Mitchell has a few sheep among the cattle.

9917. That is very unusual, is not it?—Mr Macdonald keeps a lot of sheep among his cattle.

9918. You know about the price of wintering, being a shepherd?—I have a good idea.

9919. Has it gone up or gone down within the last thirty years?—Well, I don't know; I heard the late minister saying that he was paying one year for his wintering 10s. 9d. for each.

9920. That is one particular year, but on the average has it not gone up?—Well, I am sure it is almost going down.

John Brown Grant.

John Brown Grant, Factor, Chisholm Estates, Erchless (38)—examined.

9921. The Chairman.—You are factor on The Chisholm estate?—Yes.

9922. How long have you been factor?—For eight years.

9923. Where were you previously?—I was in Sutherlandshire, as factor for Mr Sutherland of Skibo.

9924. Is the statement which you have prepared by yourself?—By myself.

9925. Do you wish to read it to us?—With your permission I would like to read it.

Beauly.

John Brown Grant.

The Report of Lord Napier's Commission, 1883, states (p. 85):—'It is said that much of the land now 'cleared for deer might be made available for profitable 'occupation by crofters. The evidence on this head is, 'as might be supposed, very conflicting. Those who 'pressed the theory most closely, brought forward in 'its support cases where undoubtedly land now under 'forest had been formerly occupied by crofters, and 'where crofters might again be located. It may, however, be fairly stated that by far the larger portion of 'land devoted to deer is to be found at such altitudes, 'and consists so much of rock, heather, and moor, as to 'be unsuitable for crofters, except as shielings or summer 'grazings for cattle and sheep. It is, of course, true 'that there are few deer forests where an occasional 'spot of hard green land might not be found which 'would be available for a crofter's residence and cultivation; but, looking to the small proportion of arable 'to pasture land in such places, it may fairly be assumed that almost insuperable difficulties would be 'offered to the settlement of crofters in these deer 'forests, as they would find it impossible to defray the 'expense of purchasing the large sheep stock which the 'ground is competent to carry, even though they would 'not in this case be obliged to take over the stock on 'the ground at a valuation.' Nothing has occurred, since Lord Napier's Commission issued their Report, to make it less impracticable to cultivate deer forest land with profit to crofters or anybody else. In the case of the land devoted to deer forests on The Chisholm estates, there are 80,000 acres of forest land in the occupation of three tenants, the whole being let on an average nett rent of 1s. 6d. per acre. In this area not more than 150 acres of land show signs of having once been cultivated. I produce Ordnance Survey Plan with the deer forest area referred to coloured. The forests are Erchless, Glencannich, and Glen-Affaric. Eighty acres of the old arable land mentioned are at Knockfin, and have not been in the occupation of small tenants since the beginning of this century. They formed the only piece of low, wintering ground of the extensive sheep farm of Knockfin. Eighteen acres are at Muckerach in Glencannich, 14 acres at Leitrie, 9 acres at Shalavanach, 5 acres at Carrie, 4 acres at Luibguish, 4 acres at Tombuie, all in Glencannich. The rent rolls of the estate since 1787 show that the lands referred to were sometimes in the hands of a few large tenants, while at other times an attempt seems to have been made to divide a part into club farms with from two to four tenants in each. A rent roll of 1687 shows the whole estate of Chisholm of that day to be let in fifteen separate holdings. The rent roll of 1787 shows fifteen separate holdings with eighteen individual tenants resident on and occupying the present deer forest land. By far the largest area of the land at that time was let simply as shielings for summer grazing, and principally to men who resided in Kintail. In 1800 there were eleven separate tenants. In 1810 there appear to have been only six, including the large sheep farmers; in 1820, six; in 1830, five; in 1840, ten; in 1850, eight; in 1860, six. In 1787 the whole Chisholm estate was let in forty-five separate holdings to about 100 tenants. In 1850 seventy individual tenants occupied the whole estate. At the present time it is let in ninety-nine separate holdings to eighty-six different tenants. After 1801 sheep-farming was introduced, there being few or no sheep in the country before that period, and south countrymen with the necessary skill and capital appeared. The reasons for their introduction, as stated by Macculloch in his Letters written between 1811 and 1821, are seen in the following extract (vol. 4, p. 111):—'In those 'mountainous and boggy tracts, black cattle cannot 'consume all the pasture. Sheep can, and consequently there is a saving on this head alone by the 'exchange. Sheep cannot be cultivated to a profit, 'unless in large flocks and by a well-regulated system, 'the details of which are too minute for me to give here. 'Small capitalists cannot thence manage them; and 'thus arises the necessity of large sheep farms. Lastly,

Beauly.
John Brown Grant.

'the necessity of a proportion of winter food renders 'it compulsory to take from petty agriculture the 'smaller interspersed tracts which are adapted to this 'purpose. Now those small spots were occupied by 'a race of starving and miserable tenants, who thus 'impeded the application of what they could not use, 'producing nothing themselves and obstructing 'production.' About 1830 shooting began to have some value. Sir Joseph Radcliffe was tenant of Erchless Castle at that date, at a rental of £100. Fasnakyle was let in 1840 to Mr George Wood for £450. Between 1850 and 1860 the small tenant who had adopted the sheep-farming business, and who had been in difficulties all along, gave place to the deer forest tenant, who bought him out. Muckerach, Carrie, Sliosgarbh, Leitrie, Shalavanach and Craskie are examples of this. The Chisholm, James Sutherland, who succeeded to the estates in 1860, made a laudable attempt to place tenants back on these holdings. He assisted them with money, and let the land at rents almost of their own fixing.

9926. Mr Sutherland.—How many?—Four or five.

9927. And what was the size of their holdings?—They ran from about £100 to £120 of rent.

9928. Mr Gordon.—Are you sure your date is correct?—Between 1850 and 1860.

9929. It was in 1859, the gamekeepers said, that they began to disperse the tenants?—That would be covered by the date I give. I can put in the documents I refer to. The attempt failed, the borrowed money was never repaid and the tenants left again, with one exception, and it is only by repeated concessions that he, too, can be induced to remain. Between 1870 and 1883, sheep-farming, even on a large scale and with every command of capital and skill, became unprofitable, and one by one the large sheep farms were cleared. Kerrow, Knockfin, Comar, Mauld, and Mullardoch are cases in point. But it does not follow that, although the use to which the land was put changed, there was any great decrease in the number of the people resident on the estate, since 1801 at least. The census of 1798 shows a population in the whole parish of Kilmorack of 2318.

9930. Mr Sutherland.—How many of these were on The Chisholm estate?—I am not sure; I think perhaps I can make that a little clearer presently. The Rev. James Robertson, Minister of Callander, writing for the Board of Agriculture in 1808, mentions that (p. 322):—"The only districts in the county of Inverness where 'population, during the last twenty or thirty years, has 'increased, are Urquhart, Strathglass, the vicinity of Fort 'George, the estate of Grant and a part of the Aird." In 1831 the population of the parish of Kilmorack had increased to 2709, of which the village of Beauly then contained 508, leaving a country population of 2201. According to last census, the present population of the parish, in which nine-tenths of the deer forest lands referred to are situated, amounts to 2294, and the proportion of decrease in the rural part of the parish, for the past thirty years, is less than for the other parts of the county of Inverness. There can be no doubt whatever that, since the beginning of this century, the standard of comfort has been greatly raised in this district. Wages for labourers were then from a shilling to 1s. 6d. a day without food, while for the crop of 1800 the fiar's price for a boll of oatmeal was £2. The small tenants on the estate, during at least the first twenty years of the century, appeared to be in great difficulties. The Report by Mr Alexander Anderson, on the estate of Chisholm, in the year 1817, states as follows:—"The severity and the effects of the 'winter and spring of 1815–16 upon all Highland stock, 'as well as the low prices and almost total stagnation of 'that year, added to the failure of the corn crops of '1816–17, in all elevated situations, are too well 'known and will long be remembered by proprietors and 'tenants. The tenants who depend wholly, or in a great 'measure, upon grazing, have not suffered so deeply, 'though their loss of stock in the spring of 1816 was 'very great, and the low prices of that year added much 'to their distress. I, however, apprehend that several 'of this description on the estate of Chisholm will not 'hold out. Some appear never to have possessed skill 'or capital for their undertakings, and the small capital 'they did possess is nearly, if not wholly, exhausted. A 'few may be overrented, and in too many cases a 'determined perseverance in illicit distillation has 'increased the misfortunes of the seasons."

Beauly.
John Brown Grant.

9931. Mr Shaw Stewart.—What is the name of the writer?—Mr Alexander Anderson, who was a banker in Inverness, and, I believe, for some time factor on The Chisholm estates.

9932. Mr Gordon.—Will that Report be put in?—Yes. From the foregoing it can be seen that agriculture, or even grazing, has never been a prosperous industry in Strathglass, and when the character of the greater part of the land is examined, the reasons become at once apparent. There is nowhere in Scotland a wilder or more rugged tract of country than that extending from the head of Strathglass, to the sea at Kintail. The highest hills run up to nearly 4000 feet, and on the whole area of deer forests referred to there are not fewer than nineteen peaks over 3000 feet in height. Skene says ("Celtic Scotland," vol. 1, p. 12):—'Within is a wild 'and mountainous region, full of the most picturesque 'beauty, which the ever varied combination of mountain, 'rock and stream, can afford, but adapted only for 'pasture and hunting, and for the occupation of a people 'still in the early stage of pastoral and war-like life.' The two glens of Affaric and Cannich have a bottom elevation of from 500 to 800 feet. They are narrow, and shaded by the mountains.

9933. The Chairman.—What is the breadth; you say very narrow?—They are narrow at the bottom.

9934. And widening out?—They widen out to the ridge.

9935. What is the average breadth?—At the bottom the average breadth would not be more than half a mile.

9936. Mr Gordon.—I don't think it is half that?—Well, at the widest part of the lake, which is the bottom breadth, it might be half a mile. In Glen Affaric no small tenants ever cultivated land or lived; in Glencannich there are four detached places which tenants did occupy. Of the largest of these places not more than 18 acres show traces of cultivation. Spring rainstorms and autumn frosts prevent the ripening of corn, whilst snow lies long and deep. Winter can scarcely be said to be over till well on into May, and autumn is ended with October. There is no accurate record of the rainfall.

9937. Mr Sutherland.—Are you referring to Glen Affaric alone just now?—Both glens, but Longart, at the head of Glencannich, is said to be one of the wettest places in Scotland. The heavy rain-laden clouds drifting in from the Atlantic, with the prevailing westerly winds, meeting the barrier of the mountain range running north and south (the ancient Drumalban), are compelled to rise into a colder strata of air, and discharge their contents on the eastern side. Floods occur, sometimes even in summer. The rapid melting of accumulated snow is the most frequent cause. In the spring of 1892, the greatest flood known for a long time took place. From the sources of the river Glass to the sea, every bridge, with two exceptions, was swept away.

9938. The Chairman.—That was entirely exceptional?—Yes, that in 1892. For many months afterwards the country was all but impassible. In the seven years before this occurrence I have seen no fewer than four great floods, and every bridge in Glencannich, without exception, washed away.

9939. Mr Macleod.—Every year for seven years?—I have seen four, and I have seen every bridge washed away.

9940. Not on one occasion?—Between one occasion and another.

9941. The Chairman.—You have seen floods on four occasions, and between these four occasions all the bridges were washed away?—Yes, in fact we have twice built all the bridges in Glencannich within that period. Landslips, too, are frequent in that glen, blocking the road for hundreds of yards at a time.

Beauly. John Brown Grant.

9942. Have you seen that?—Yes. The small patches of land, therefore, that once were cultivated, could never have been suited for this purpose. A tenant who still farms near the lower end of Glencannich has, for a number of years past, given up growing corn or turnips. Those green patches of ground, amid so much mountain land, were of great value, however, to the sheep farmer. They eked out the wintering ground which he found necessary for his sheep, and enabled him to keep sheep at home during the winter time which he would otherwise have had to send away. They are equally valuable, I may say absolutely indispensable, to the deer forester. He cannot send his stock to low-ground wintering, and unless there is a certain proportion of this class of land in a deer forest, deer cannot be kept at all. No living thing can inhabit the high ground during the storms of winter. The Commissioners will find, on examining the ground, that the old patches of land are the places on which the deer foresters reside, being in nearly every case the only spots where the houses can be built and occupied. These men, if any attempt were made to plant crofters in their vicinity, would find their occupation entirely gone. It appears strange to the people of this district that such an attempt should even be thought of. The great majority are bound up, one way or another, with the prosperity of the present system. These deer foresters are in receipt of regular wages, varying from 18s. to 35s. per week. I have the honour to represent a division of the county in the Inverness-shire County Council, and in my district there are no fewer than twenty-five of them upon the Electorate. A more active, intelligent, and capable body of men it would be difficult to meet with, and I feel assured that, although the land was offered to them for cultivation, they would refuse to change their present condition. There are two of those men employed in place of every shepherd who had occupation formerly. Besides the wages of the men employed looking after the deer, there is a very great expenditure in the forests in making roads and paths, erecting bridges, new buildings, repairing old buildings, painting, embanking, fencing and carting, Mr Winans, at the present moment, spending no less than £300 per month on labour alone. Mrs Chisholm of Chisholm, the owner of the property, whose agricultural rental, from causes which are obvious to everyone who has thought for one moment of the present depression of this industry, has shrank from £5000 per annum in 1860 to £1500 at the present time.

9943. Mr Macleod.—That is because the agricultural land has been added to the deer forest?—Partly, and partly on account of the depression of agriculture and the low rents—we have reduced the rents from time to time.

9944. You must see that it is obvious, if these figures are to be of any value, you ought to differentiate between the two?—I can give you the figures and you can differentiate for yourself. It is partly the one cause and partly the other.

9945. The Chairman.—You include losses of rent from absorption into the forest?—Partly.

9946. But unless you can make the distinction, where is the value of your statistics?—I can put in the books and documents themselves. Mrs Chisholm spends no less than £80 a month in wages. On her gross rental of £11,500, she paid last year £1740 in rates, taxes and parochial burdens. In work mostly done by contract and not included in the wages bill, such as building, planting, draining, fencing, embanking of rivers, making of roads, erection of bridges, Mrs Chisholm spent last year over £1970. This large sum, solely derived from the rental of deer forests, went mostly to the improvement of the agricultural parts of the estate, and the agricultural tenants are the first to recognise that no rents which they could pay would enable any proprietor to expend such large sums for their benefit. I need scarcely say that the above amounts do not nearly represent the total sum that is spent in the district on the shooting industry. During the season, which lasts from the 1st of August to the middle of October, numbers of extra men are employed at 4s. to 4s. 6d. per man per day, a man and horse earning not less than 7s. This labour is drawn from the small tenants of the surrounding district. The demand for labour, created by the deer forest industry, has had the effect of raising the rate of wages about 50 per cent. within the past thirty years. It happens not unfrequently that the crofter with a pony, during the shooting season, is able to earn six times the rent he pays for his croft. It is not easy for anyone intimately connected with the system of sport at present pursued in the Highlands to understand the agitation which has arisen against it. It is perfectly obvious, however, that this agitation arises amongst people at a great distance from the scene of the sporting industry,—people who understand nothing whatever of the conditions under which it is carried on, or of the localities devoted to it. They assume, for the purposes of their own argument, that the deer forests occupy a fertile tract which capital and labour would convert into one smiling field of golden grain. They carefully stop their ears when one attempts to tell them that this region never has been, and never will be, one in which an agricultural industry can succeed. When to a barren soil and a rigorous climate comes to be added the unprofitable return for any possible production of the land, a reasonable man will see that agriculture, which at present is bearing such trials in the most favoured localities, has become utterly impossible in the Highland wilds. The native Highlander takes quite kindly to the changed condition of things. There was a time, and that not very long ago, when hunting was his sole pursuit and means of livelihood. He lived on the produce of his bow and spear. Our earliest records in the Highlands — the sculptured stones—whilst bearing no traces of a ploughshare or even of a sheep-shears, except as a symbol of woman's art, exhibit many scenes from hunting life. The poems of Ossian are full of allusions to the chase. In the district in which I live, the songs of the common people reflect the same feeling. There is a story told in song of a nurse to one of the chiefs of Chisholm, who was, for some cause or another, condemned to banishment to the Laigh of Moray, and was granted any request she might like to make before leaving. Her request was to have a house erected on the scene of her banishment, in which she might live, the house to be made of timber from Strathglass. This request was complied with; but she had not been long there when she bewailed her sad lot in words to the effect that, although living in this house of Strathglass wood and beside a field of waving barley, larger than the people of Strathglass ever dreamt of, she could never be happy till she returned to the sight of the dun deer and the brown in the woods of Comar. The district is full of Gaelic place-names referring to hunting. The Glen of the Hinds, the "Stag's Hollow," and "Beinn-Fhionnlaidh" (Finlay's Hill).

9947. Mr Sutherland.—How do you translate these names?—I am not an authority on Gaelic.

9948. It means the Ox's Hollow, I may tell you?—I believe there is a conflict of opinion on that point. "Beinn-Fhionnlaidh"is an example, Finlay being a noted hunter in his day, of whom a story is told in the Notes to the "Lays of the Deer Forests," by Sobieski Stuart. The Highlander is not naturally an agriculturist. There is, in fact, plenty of evidence to show that he rather despised agriculture: he would not indulge in any kind of manual labour. Sir Walter Scott tells the story (printed along with the 1876 edition of Burt) of a Highland chief named Donald the Hammerer, who was so enraged at finding his son engaged in farming and directing farm labourers, that he pursued him with his sword. The son took refuge in his house and crept for safety under a bed. Donald followed, and, in the uncertain light, 'thinking his degenerate son had 'concealed himself in the bed clothes, made a deadly 'stab at his supposed son, but instead of killing him, his 'sword went through the heart of his old nurse, who was 'then near 80 years of age. After the unfortunate 'accident Donald became very religious.' With this natural taste for sport, the native Highlander in the hunting districts is only too pleased to find a congenial occupation and one for which his services are handsomely rewarded. After the pastoral industry fails, after the agricultural industry fails, he goes kindly back to hunting. Besides the wealth which sportsmen have brought into the Highlands, and which has built schools, endowed churches, made roads and bridges, introduced medical aid, improved dwellings and raised wages, the contact with men of wealth and education, from all parts of the world, has helped to widen the native's range of thought and gives him the self-reliance of the man who has measured himself with his superiors and is not ashamed of the place he takes beside them. No true sportsman would ever come to this country if he thought that the indulgence in his taste took bread from the mouth of a single individual. I am acquainted with a gentleman who, for the last thirty years, has taken a grouse moor or deer forest, year by year, in the Highlands of Scotland. We discussed this very matter, and he assured me that these were the sentiments of himself and his friends, who are also shooting tenants on a large scale. Wealthy men, as he remarked, could betake themselves anywhere, and not for all he possessed would he allow his sport interfere with a man's means of livelihood. On the other hand, no true sportsman would take a deer forest in which crofters were planted, knowing with the utmost certainty that a conflict as to their respective rights was bound to ensue. Whatever dispute might arise, the sportsman would get the worst of it, and the ground would ultimately be left to the crofter. His fate might then be described in the words of Macculloch (vol. 4. p. 116):—"The unconditional 'surrender of the lands to the tenantry would not enable 'them to enlarge their lots, nor prevent the further sub-'division; and a very few years would find them exactly 'in that state of which the improvement had been 'vainly attempted. And while the surrender would 'involve the ruin of the proprietor and of all those who 'live by his expenditure, it would be replaced by the 'gain of a few additional families, starving and propagat-'ing starvation, consuming without reproducing; objects 'of pity, incapable of improvement, without hope, and 'useless to the political community.'

Beauly. John Brown Grant.

14*th June* 1893.

9949. The Chairman.—Can you tell me what is the total area of land under forest on The Chisholm estate at present?—80,000 acres; that is an approximate estimate.

9950. That is quite sufficient for my purpose. How much is occupied otherwise of that estate?—There are 113,000 in the estate altogether.

9951. Of which 80,000 acres are under forest?—Yes.

9952. That leaves 33,000 acres: how is that occupied?—As sheep farms and by ordinary agricultural subjects; mixed sheep farms and agriculture.

9953. The Chisholm estate has a number of crofters?—Yes.

9954. How many?—Under £30 of rent, do you mean?

9955. Yes, I mean under £30 of rent?—Thirty or thirty-five.

9956. What is the average size of their holdings?—As regards rent, do you mean?

9957. No, as regards area, taking it roughly on the average, arable and grazing?—The principal number of crofters are just within a mile of this village. The whole estate has 900 acres; there are 400 acres of wood upon that place, and the rest of it, 500 acres, is devoted to that class of people.

9958. 500 acres divided among how many?—About forty tenants. They are not all crofters; the largest tenant pays £100 of rent, and it goes down to 2s. 6d.

9959. What I want you to tell me, if you can is, what is the average size of the crofter's holding?—I would say 5 or 6 acres of arable land, and in most cases a little bit of outrun of some kind or other.

9960. How many small farmers have you, paying a rent of about £100 or under?

Beauly. John Brown Grant.

9961. Mr Gordon.—You have not got a rental?—No, but the Valuation Roll is here. Roughly speaking, I would say 18 or 20.

9962. The Chairman.—I take your figures as approximate?—Yes, it must be so.

9963. How many large farms have you on the estate paying over £100?—Only two.

9964. What are their names?—One is Kerrow, occupied by Lord Tweedmouth.

9965. And the other?—The other is the farm of Comar, a grazing farm.

9966. Can you tell us the stocks on these farms?—Kerrow has 300 acres of arable land and 3000 acres of hill ground, and the sheep stock will be over 700.

9967. Then for Comar, what is your answer?—The part of Comar that I referred to is entirely grazing, and there is a stock of nearly 8000 sheep.

9968. How much arable?—There is not much arable at all on the bit I speak of; the arable part and the farm are now detached from the grazing part.

9969. What is become of it?—It is let to the former tenant of the hill.

9970. What is the extent of it?—54 acres.

9971. Who has it?—Mr Robertson.

9972. Is that land under rotation, or is it old arable?—It is under rotation.

9973. Is the arable land to which you referred on Kerrow under rotation, or is it old arable?—It is under rotation. Lord Tweedmouth is the tenant.

9974. Now you say the average rent of the 80,000 acres is 1s. 6d. an acre?—That is so.

9975. Is that taking together sporting rent and farm rent?—Yes, the whole thing.

9976. What is the average rent of the farms per acre?—The grazing rent?

9977. Well, take the grazing rent?—It differs in different farms a little, but the average would run from sixpence to a shilling.

9978. What is the average rent of the crofter?—For his arable ground the crofter would not pay more than 15s. an acre.

9979. And for his grazing?—I suppose it is in a way thrown in; it depends on circumstances.

9980. What is the average rent of the forest?—The average rent of the forest is about 1s. 6d. an acre.

9981. Is not there a sporting rent for the farm?—Yes, besides.

9982. What is the sporting rent per acre?—Well, take Kerrow for instance; the sporting rent of Kerrow is £150. You may take that as a typical case.

9983. That sporting rent is derived from grouse moor and deer?—It is occupied by sheep, of course; we would call it a grouse shooting.

9984. Then the rent of Comar?—The rent of the part occupied by sheep,—I should say that Mr Winans pays for that, while occupied by sheep, nearly a shilling an acre, for the shooting.

9985. For grouse?—For deer.

9986. Is there a grouse rent upon it?—No, there are no grouse.

9987. Mr Gordon.—There are twenty-five separate tenants or tenancies in the parish of Kilmorack, and forty-one in the parish of Kiltarlity?—That will perhaps work out pretty nearly to what I said.

9988. Yes, I think it bears you out.

9989. The Chairman.—Could you give us the grazing rent plus the sporting rent on the sheep farms, per acre?—I said already that the sporting rent that Mr Winans paid on this sheep farm was about a shilling an acre on the farm of Comar, and the grazing rent I would put at sixpence.

9990. Making together 1s. 6d.?—Yes, 1s. 6d. That is the figure I gave already.

9991. Then the rent of the forest is 1s. 6d?—Yes.

9992. So they are equal?—Yes.

9993. You have said there are 80,000 acres of forest and I would like you to give your attention to the following particulars, namely, the state of the forest in 1883. What was the number of acres then in Erchless Forest?—Between 7000 and 8000 acres.

9994. Well, I will give you the figures, as I don't know that I can ask you for them right off; the figure is 12,670 in Lord Napier's Report?—That includes more ground than the forest ground. It includes the whole estate of Erchless.

Beauly.

John Brown Grant.

9995. Lord Napier's Report gives the total forest land in 1883 as 57,800 acres?—Yes.

9996. May I take that as approximately correct?—At the time.

9997. Yes, in 1883?—I have no doubt it may be so; I was not connected with the estate at that time.

9998. Accepting these figures as approximately correct, may we take it that the forest land has been increased by something like 20,000 acres?—I have no doubt that is so.

9999. Can you give me the dates of the different additions?—Well, I think that very year Knockfin was cleared, that is 20,000 acres. It was after 1883, at any rate.

10,000. Was there any other place added?—It was about that time that Mullardoch and Coire-nan-cuilean were added.

10,001. What is the extent of these?—5000 or 6000 acres.

10,002. Any other addition?—There was Mauld,—the upper part of Mauld with perhaps 3000 acres.

10,003. Any others?—I think that is all.

10,004. That makes a total addition of 28,000 acres, and if you add 60,000 to 28,000 you get 88,000?—57,000 I think you said to begin with.

10,005. Yes, 57,800?—Well, you see, they included a part of Erchless that is not forest at all, so that it would probably come back to my figures.

10,006. That may account for it. At that time, 1883, all these sheep farms, I suppose, were being successfully carried on as such; the bad times had not come?—Well, I don't know if they were carried on successfully; I scarcely think they would be at that time.

10,007. Were these additions made simply to extend the forest or in order to make what was forest properly available?—The farm of Knockfin was advertised, and failed to find a tenant. Lord Tweedmouth was the shooting tenant at the time; Mr Winans desired to become the shooting tenant, and he began by taking the grazings like an ordinary sheep grazier. No other man could be found to take it.

10,008. So the history of it is this, that from the difficulty of letting these lands they gradually became absorbed into forests?—That is so, exactly.

10,009. You said that most of the green patches had in former days been shielings?—Most of the upper ground.

10,010. Can you give us a notion of the extent of these shielings, or can you tell me first of all how many of them there were?—I could; I will put in the rent-rolls at different periods.

10,011. If you please, and the extent of these shielings?—Yes.

10,012. These shielings were for a length of time during the summer occupied by animals and those taking charge of them?—I have no doubt that is so.

10,013. Did the persons there not sometimes stay altogether?—Well, of course I cannot say, but, judging from the place where you find the remains of the shielings I would say that they could not occupy them during the winter season.

10,014. Are some of them at a low level and some at a high level?—No, they are all mostly high.

10,015. You say that on The Chisholm estate an experiment was made of planting tenants?—Taking tenants back who had previously left.

10,016. At a rent of from £100 to £120?—I think so, but I would require to refer to the documents.

10,017. That is what you say in the statement?—I have not said it in the statement exactly; I said it in reply to a question.

10,018. But at any rate the rent was above £30?—Oh yes, in every case.

10,019. To what cause in particular do you attribute the failure of that experiment?—I think there was a complication of causes.

10,020. The date is long before our present period; it is thirty years ago?—Yes, that is so.

10,021. And we may take it that times were fairly good, perhaps. To what cause do you attribute the failure?—I don't know, I am sure; agriculture has been going down ever since.

10,022. There was no particular depression in 1860?—Well, no; in fact things rose I think up to 1872, which was the beginning of the depression.

10,023. Why should that experiment have failed, do you think?—It must certainly be owing to the land. To begin with, they had not capital.

10,024. That is not the fault of the climate or of the soil; it is the fault of the people?—Quite so.

10,025. May we take it that that experiment does not afford any guide to us either one way or the other?—Well, you must judge according to your own opinion; it is not a matter on which I am offering any opinion.

10,026. It is either a fact from which we may get a valuable inference, or it is not. Up to this point you have not furnished us with the means of using it as an inference?—I have said, of course, that the people did not possess capital to begin with; they may not have possessed the necessary skill, and the subject was perhaps unsuitable for experiment.

10,027. Or perhaps not. Don't you think, when the experiment was made, every endeavour would be used to put them on ground where they would have a good chance?—Well, it was the best chance they could have got for the purpose.

10,028. Quite so. But your information, either historical or experimental, does not enable you to say whether the causes of their failure were such as should prevent the experiment from being again made?—Oh yes, I say that. I say the causes of their failure are such, in my mind, as to deter anyone from making the experiment again.

10,029. Don't you think that, so far as your information goes, that experiment does not afford a guide either one way or the other?—Well, taking men in the same position, and putting them back there again, you would certainly have the same failure.

10,030. But suppose you had men with capital?—Well, of course you would vary the conditions.

10,031. Of course, if you had the very same causes, you would produce the same effect. But suppose the experiment made under somewhat more favourable circumstances?—If you have the circumstances more favourable, you alter the conditions altogether.

10,032. In other words, this example you have given us is not a valuable guide one way or another?—I may say that we supplied them with capital, which they never repaid in some instances.

10,033. You have no personal knowledge of the experiment?—I have personal knowledge to this extent, that in one case, at any rate, there was a pretty large capital supplied, and it was exhausted very quickly.

10,034. What was the capital?—£550 was supplied

10,035. Was some of it not repaid?—Not a penny.

10,036. Mr Sutherland.—What were the conditions?—No conditions at all, except that the money was lent and not repaid.

10,037. There were conditions of interest, were there not?—The money was lent in the form of the proprietor of the estate of Chisholm signing his name to a bill or cash credit with the bank, and very soon afterwards the money was paid up by him.

10,038. Were these persons holding under nineteen years' leases?—Yes.

10,039. You are only speaking at present of one individual case?—Yes.

10,040. Was there anything particular about that case?—Nothing whatever exceptional.

10,041. May I ask the name of the man you refer to?—Well, I would rather not give the name.

10,042. Oh, I don't press it. Is it the fact the land on which this experiment was made was about the worst on the estate?—It is about the best in Glencannich.

10,043. Where was the place?—At this point (indicating position on map).

Beauly.

John Brown Grant.

10,044. Can you give us the variations of population on The Chisholm estate during the last fifty years?—No, I have no data to go upon except the rent-rolls; I can show you the variations in the tenants from them.

10,045. But you cannot show the growth or decrease of the population?—No, except that I can tell you the number of holdings at different times, and the names of the tenants.

10,046. That impinges on the evidence in regard to the increase of population in the parish of Kilmorack?—Well, it does not alter it altogether.

10,047. Mr Gordon.—If you could give us the number of families, and take each family at five, you would come pretty near the population?—Well, I could do that from the rent-roll.

10,048. Mr Macleod.—What you have endeavoured to show is that there has been no decrease in the population on The Chisholm estate; and how you get at that is by giving us the whole population of Kilmorack. Now, it is hardly fair to give us that alone.—I have given you besides the number of tenancies; that is the only other information I have.

10,049. What object had you, might I ask, in mentioning the population of Kilmorack?—I apprehend that this Commission is generally interested in deer forests all round.

10,050. Your statement, as I understand, was for The Chisholm estate?—I am quite prepared to say there was an increase all round.

10,051. The Chairman.—I would like if you could give us figures confined to The Chisholm estate; but perhaps you are not able to do that?—I give you all the figures I could get.

10,052. Mr Gordon.—You could perhaps give us the number of resting tenants in 1850, 1860, and 1870, and the corresponding number in 1893, and if you deduct the one from the other, and multiply the difference by five, you will arrive very near the number?—I can do that very easily.

10,053. The Chairman.—You spoke of expenditure by Mr Winans—£300 per month on labour, and expenditure by The Chisholm estate management £80 per month on wages; is that expenditure going on just now?—Yes, at the present moment.

10,054. Of course that expenditure only effeirs to the benefit of a very limited number?—Well, I have told the wages per week.

10,055. What are the wages?—From 18s. to 35s.

10,056. Paid by Mr Winans?—Yes.

10,057. What are the wages paid by the estate?—They run from 15s. to 21s. per week.

10,058. Are those wages spent upon people whom we might call crofters or small tenants?—They are mostly spent upon regular labourers.

10,059. Servants?—I don't mean engaged by the year, but simply by the week in a great many cases; and the people who earn these wages are drawn, of course, from the crofting population.

10,060. Now you say that no true sportsman would take land where there are crofters?—Deer forests I referred to.

10,061. I mean deer forests. You are aware that there are a considerable number of forests within the crofting area where there are crofters?—I am not acquainted with them. I know there are such, but I have no acquaintance with them.

10,062. According to your opinion, the existence of a deer forest is incompatible with the neighbourhood of crofters?—Crofters within its area.

10,063. Or on its verge?—If they are fenced out, of course, they do no harm on the verge. If they are fenced out from the deer, and the deer from them, there is no harm done.

10,064. Unless they are fenced out it does not do to have crofters near a deer forest?—Quite so.

10,065. Now is it not your opinion that a considerable tract of this ground of which we have been speaking might be profitably occupied by small tenants?—No, that is not my opinion.

10,066. Do you extend that observation to the whole of the land now under consideration?—Taking it as a whole, I do.

10,067. As a whole you do?—Yes.

10,068. Is there no part of land in one of these glens that might be usefully occupied?—You might occupy a very small part, and destroy the value of the whole of the remainder.

10,069. Well, suppose you did occupy a very small part, how many crofters could you accommodate, taking the average size of The Chisholm holdings?—Well, you have, I think, about 54 acres of land in Glencannich that had been cultivated—that showed traces of cultivation. That land is in detached pieces, 18 acres here, 10 there, and so on; you could not plant more than one crofter in each place.

10,070. How many could you plant in all?—I don't think you could plant more than five at the very outside.

10,071. With holdings something like the small Chisholm holdings?—Exactly, that is in Glencannich.

10,072. Well, in any other glen?—At Knockfin you have 80 acres of land.

10,073. Old arable?—Old arable.

10,074. Presently under cultivation?—Part of it.

10,075. How much of it is old arable?—80 acres.

10,076. How many crofters could you plant there?—There is no great hill ground available there for them; it is wood altogether at the back. There is no outrun; you would require to give a man 20 acres of arable land.

10,077. Allowing for that, you could plant four or five there?—Yes, four or five.

10,078. Any other spot?—No, that exhausts the whole.

10,079. Now I pass from the forests to the farms. There are two farms you say?—Yes.

10,080. Did you mention the extent of them?—Kerrow has 300 acres of arable and 3000 acres of hill.

10,081. I suppose a considerable part of that land could be used for extension of crofters' grazing?—Oh yes, you might cut it up. There are no crofters near-hand it, of course.

10,082. There may not be: that is not the question before us. Is there some part of that hill capable of cultivation?—I am not aware of any part that is. It does not look like it, but I have not been through it.

10,083. Take the farm as a whole. Is there old arable on it?—It is all under rotation. About 80 acres were brought from moor into cultivation by Lord Tweedmouth.

10,084. When was that?—Under a lease which he entered upon, I think, at Whitsunday 1871.

10,085. The reclamation has been since then?—Yes. It is from twelve to twenty years ago.

10,086. The total extent of it was how much?—About 300 acres at present.

10,087. And that was commenced in 1870?—After that.

10,088. Under a lease?—Under a lease.

10,089. What has been the result of that?—The result is that the farm is now 300 acres.

10,090. Has the reclamation proved a success?—You must ask Lord Tweedmouth.

10,091. Don't you know?—I don't know.

10,092. Is it under rotation of crop at present?—It is.

10,093. The whole of it?—The whole of it.

10,094. And has been under rotation, to your knowledge, for a number of years past?—Yes.

10,095. As ordinary farm land?—Ordinary arable farm land. Whether it is a success or not is quite a different matter.

10,096. Now take the other farm: what is it?—The purely grazing farm of Comar—Upper Comar, at the head of the glen. There is no arable there at all.

10,097. But is there old arable?—No, there never was any cultivation there that a man can see. It is very high ground.

10,098. Some of it is high enough, certainly. There is land there that would do for grazing purposes?—Splendid grazing.

10,099. Is it exceptionally good grazing?—I believe it is considered to be exceptionally good.

Beauly. John Brown Grant.

10,100. The best on the estate?—Well, I would not say that; perhaps the head of Glen Affaric is the best.

10,101. But at all events it is exceedingly good?—It is very good.

10,102. You mentioned illicit distillation: is that going on at present?—No.

10,103. And has not been going on for some time?—No.

10,104. Mr Shaw Stewart.—You said just now, in reply to the Chairman, that there were certain parts of Glencannich and Knockfin where four or five crofters might be placed in each of these places?—Not in each.

10,105. You said four or five in Glencannich, and four or five in Knockfin?—That is Sheriff Brand's suggestion, roughly.

10,106. Have you taken into consideration whether they would be able to cultivate the land to profit?—They could not possibly cultivate the land to anything like the profit that it now yields. If they got the land for nothing, and were supplied with capital and everything, they might make a living out of it. It depends entirely on what the meaning of the word profit is.

10,107. Well, perhaps it is difficult to define, but in considering the word profit I don't exclude payment of rent, because I am not proposing that they should get the land for nothing?—If they have to pay the present rental, they certainly could not cultivate it to profit, or anything like it.

10,108. Taking the present rental roughly at 1s. 6d. an acre?—That is taking the whole 80,000 acres.

10,109. Put it in this way. Could they occupy the land to profit, including the stocking, payment of rent,—a moderate rent—and repayment of any loan that might be advanced to them?—They could not occupy the land to profit and pay any rent at all.

10,110. You mean that no one, however skilled and experienced, could cultivate any part of these lands except with an outlay of capital which they could not expect entirely to recover?—That is so; the interest of any capital would kill any rent. They could not possibly pay both rent and interest on capital.

10,111. I suppose the most promising arable lands are near the bottom of the valleys?—That is so.

10,112. And the ground rises very sharply from the valley?—Yes.

10,113. To a considerable height on either side?—Yes.

10,114. And therefore the rays of the sun do not reach the best part of the land except during a very short time of the day?—In summer.

10,115. You spoke of four floods happening during the seven years previous to the 1892 flood. Besides destroying the bridges, did the floods bring down much debris on to those low-lying lands?—Yes, they did.

10,116. And damaged them to some extent?—Yes, every time.

10,117. You said that where there was one shepherd before under the sheep farms there are now two foresters?—That is my opinion.

10,118. Is that roughly speaking?—That is roughly speaking.

10,119. Well then, with regard to the fall of rents that you have told us of, you gave us the dates of the fall from 1860 up to the present time?—Yes.

10,119*a*. Is it not the case that in 1860 sheep farming was very profitable?—Very likely it was; I don't know of my own knowledge.

10,120. And that probably a good deal of the increase is due to the decrease in the value of sheep?—Yes, a good deal may be due to that. I may mention, although of course it does not afford you any great comparison [I gave these particular figures for another purpose, and only referred to them incidentally], that the fall in the agricultural subjects, the purely agricultural subjects which are still agricultural would be about 35 per cent. during that period.

10,121. That is all over?—All over. The rents now are 35 per cent. less than in 1860. In 1860 I find an agricultural rent-roll of £5000, and in 1893 I find an agricultural rent-roll of £1500. Of course the difference is shooting rents.

10,122. The drift of your statement is that all the possible arable land in these forests is so strictly limited that if the forest industry were destroyed there would be no chance of any occupants of those lands getting wages from any kind of labour?—That is so.

10,123. Now I want to ask you a question with regard to the crofters that you already have. You gave us the size of their holdings as about 4 to 5 acres, with a little outrun?—Yes, in some cases; in other cases they have no outrun.

10,124. Would crofters thrive better there if they had a larger extent of ground?—I will put it in this way; if instead of those forty crofters with 4 or 5 acres of land, there were twenty with 8 or 10 acres apiece, would they do better?—In the present crofting district, do you mean?

10,125. Yes?—I daresay they would; they would be bigger men. But they make no complaint at present, and would be glad to take more land if they could get it.

10,126. But they applied to the Crofters Commission?—Yes, a number of them did, and we asked others to apply who are under lease.

10,127. Are many of them in arrear?—Not very many.

10,128. But have you any decided opinion whether in that particular district fewer crofters would do better than the number that are there now?—I have a difficulty there. The crofters are within a mile of this place where you are sitting. The nearest point of the deer forest district is 17 miles from here. We can scarcely compare what they are here with what they might be up there. They are doing very well here, and I think if you were to put them up there they would fail entirely.
